BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.

A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12tf.

ELLISON & APPLETON,

DEALERS IN

NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,

CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.

Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,

Wholesale and Retail.

MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.

Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.

Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,

KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES

AT WHOLESALE PRICES,

Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,

OF THE BEST QUALITY,

At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at

NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,

St. Louis, Mo.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

A. DAFT,

DEALER IN

NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.

159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

NICHOLSON'S

TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,

GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,

NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

J. G. SIMPSON. D. CAMERON.

GREAT SALE.

"AUCTION GOODS"

FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THE Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time submitted to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞ The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below Manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,

No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.

Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

NICHOLSON'S FRANKLIN

TEA AND COFFEE WAREHOUSE,

NO. 29 FRANKLIN AVENUE.

NEAR FOURTH STREET.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the public that they have now opened the above establishment, where may be found a large stock of fresh imported Teas of every variety of quality and price, selected in part, at the regular Eastern Tea sales, and from the stocks of the largest importing houses in the United States. We therefore feel confident that we can supply those favoring us with their patronage with Teas of undeniable excellence for strength and flavor, and at prices which cannot fail to give satisfaction.

Also an assortment of choice Coffees, Fresh Roasted, and Ground, by steam, on the premises. The arrangements for Roasting are such as to prevent the escape of that volatile oil with which the berry is impregnated, and to which it principally owes its tonic and other medicinal qualities.

We also keep constantly on hand a full assortment of Fresh Ground Spices, warranted. Our machinery is equal, if not superior, to any west of New York, and our knowledge practical; therefore, we pledge ourselves to suit in all cases, or the packages may be returned.

N. B. All packages marked from Franklin Tea and Coffee Warehouse are warranted pure. Chemists and others are challenged to analyze. NICHOLSON & CO.

Additional Sundries for Sale at the Franklin Tea Warehouse.

Pure Wines and Liquors, in bottles; pure old Brandies, very superior, various vintages; pure Old Port, Sandeman; pure Old Port, Victoria; fine old Sherry and Madeira Wines; Claret Wines, assorted qualities; pure French Cordials, assorted; Scotch Whisky, Scotch Ale and London Porter; Old Bourbon and Monongahela Whiskys, &c., &c.

Fruits—Raisins, Almonds, Oranges, Lemons, Currants, assorted Fresh Figs, &c. Chocolate, bitter and sweet; Broma, Cocoa; Preserves of all kinds; Jellies and Jams, Rice, Pearl Barley, Pearl Sago, Tapioca, Hecker's Farina, Saleratus, Arrow Root, Fancy Soaps, Bird Seed, &c.

Our Coffees may be found at the following places:

MR. JAS. H. FORBES, corner Eleventh and Market sts,

MR. JOHN NICHOLSON, Fifth street, South Market,

MR. D. NICHOLSON, corner of Fourth and Market.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

R. TORR,

151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,

ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.

WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.

Families Supplied at their Residences.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.

T. J. ALBRIGHT,

NO. 27 MAIN STREET,

St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,

27 Main Street, East Side,

Sign of the Gilt Gun.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!

A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of

MAN OR ANIMALS,

Requiring an External Application.

Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of

RHEUMATISM

than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.

G. W. WESTBROOK:—

Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,

J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—

Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,

JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:

Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.

I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.

I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.

Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.

I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Croton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.

GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS

have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:

Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweeney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.

The small size retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.

G. W. WESTBROOK,

(Successor to A. G. BRAGG & CO.,)

Originator and Sole Proprietor.

Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.

B. FORMON,

TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at

126 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House,

St. Louis, Missouri.

Jan. 13, 1855. [6 3m*

DR. WHITE,

HOMŒOPATHIST.

Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.

Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!

VAN, THE TEA MAN!

RETAIL DEALER,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.

Dec. 23. [5 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their Interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best styles and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.

Dec. 9, 2 2m FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:

50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 pockets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERE.

Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,

IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS

IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY

NO. 147 MAIN STREET,

Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,

ST. LOUIS.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,

WAGON MANUFACTURER,

Corner of Broadway and Labeaume Steert,

OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.

NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MC'LEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.

Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.

Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞ For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.

T. W. HOIT.

Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY

AND

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

Established A. D. 1840.

A. P. LADEW & CO.,

TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,

31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,

PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.

Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.

Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired;
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

Its fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,

☞ OF CORINTHIAN HALL, ☜

297 BROADWAY,

ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,

FOR THE SALE OF

FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,

FOR $4 EACH!

FOR A

LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR A

FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR A

FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,

GO TO CORINTIAN HALL!

FOR AN

INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

297 Broadway;

☞ BIG HAT. ☜

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,

Practical Dyers and Scourers,

No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,

Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOWS. MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.

COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 139 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.

Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,

LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,

No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set. Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tinners' Shears, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.

Nov. 18, '54.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, MARCH 10, 1855. VOLUME I—NUMBER XVI.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Mailed to Subscribers at $2 per annum.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.

Advertisements inserted on accommodating terms.

All Communications relating to the LUMINARY should addressed to the Editor, Post-paid.

From the Journal of Discourses.

SPIRITUAL COMMUNICATION.

BY ELDER P. P. PRATT.

Between these two dispensations, so distant from each other in point of time, they are left to linger without hope, and without God, in the spirit world; and similar has been the fate of the poor Jew, the miserable Lamanite, and many others in the flesh. Between the commission and ministry of the Former and Latter day Saints, and Apostles, there has been a long dreary night of darkness. Some fifteen to seventeen centuries have passed away, in which the generations of man have lived without the keys of the Gospel.

Whether in the flesh, or in the spirit world, is this not hell enough? Who can imagine a greater hell than that before our eyes, in the circumstances of the poor, miserable, degraded Indian and his ancestors, since the keys of the Gospel were taken from them, some fifteen hundred years ago? Those who had the Gospel in the former dispensations, and were made partakers of its spirit, its knowledge, and its powers, and then turned away, and became the enemies of God, and His Saints, the malicious and wilful opposers of that which they knew to be true, have no forgiveness in this world, neither in the spirit world, which is the world next to come.

Such apostates seek, in all dispensations, to bring destruction on the innocent, and to shed innocent blood, or consent thereto. For such, I again repeat, I know no forgiveness. Their children, who, by the conduct of such fathers, have been plunged into ignorance and misery for so many ages, and have lived without the privileges of the Gospel, will look down upon such a parentage with mingled feelings of horror, contempt, reproach, and pity, as the agents who plunged their posterity into the depths of misery and woe.

Think of those swept away by the flood in the days of Noah. Did they wait a long time in prison? Forty years! O what a time to be imprisoned! What do you say to a hundred, a thousand, three or four thousand years to wait? Without what? Without even a clear idea or hope of a resurrection from the dead, without the broken heart being bound up, the captive delivered, or the door of the prison being opened. Did not they wait? Yes, they did, until Christ was put to death in the flesh.

Now what would have been the result, if they had repented while in the flesh, at the preaching of Noah? Why, they would have died in a hope of a glorious resurrection, and would have enjoyed the society of the redeemed, and lived in happiness in the spirit world, till the resurrection of the Son of God. Then they would have received their bodies and would have ascended with Him, amid thrones, principalities, and powers in heavenly places.

I will suppose, in the spirit world, a grade of spirits of the lowest order, composed of murderers, robbers, thieves, adulterers, drunkards, and persons ignorant, uncultivated, &c., who are in prison, or in hell, without hope, without God, and unworthy as yet of Gospel instruction. Such spirits, if they could communicate, would not tell you of the resurrection, or of any of the Gospel truths, for they know nothing about them. They would not tell you about heaven, or Priesthood, for in all their meanderings in the world of spirits, they was never privileged with the ministry of a holy Priest. If they should tell all the truth they possess, they could not tell much.

Take another class of spirits—pious, well-disposed men; for instance the honest Quaker, Presbyterian, or other sectarian, who, although honest, and well-disposed, had not, while in the flesh, the privilege of the Priesthood and Gospel. They believe in Jesus Christ, but died in ignorance of his ordinaces, and had not clear conceptions of his doctrine, and of the resurrection. They expected to go to that place called heaven, as soon as they were dead, and that their doom would then and there be fixed, without any further alteration or preparation. Suppose they should come back, with liberty to tell all they know? How much light could we get from them? They could only tell you about the nature of things in the world in which they live. And even that world you could not comprehend, by their description thereof, any more than you can describe colors to a man born blind, or sounds to those who have never heard.

What then, could you get fron them? Why, common chit chat, in which there would be a mixture of truth, and of error and mistakes, in mingled confusion; all their communications would betray the same want of clear and logical conceptions, and sound sense and philosophy, as would characterise the same class of spirits in the flesh.

Who then is prepared, among the spirits in the spirit world, to communicate the truth on the subject of salvation, to guide the people, to give advice, to confer consolation, to heal the sick, to administer joy, and gladness, and hope of immortality and eternal life, founded on manifest truth?

All that have been raised from the dead, and clothed with immortality, all that have ascended to yonder heavens, and been crowned as Kings and Priests, all such are our fellow servants, and of our brethren the Prophets, who have the testimony of Jesus; all such are waiting for the work of God among their posterity on the earth.

They could declare glad tidings if we were preparred to commune with them. What else? Peter, James, Joseph, Hyrum, Father Smith, any, or all of those ancient or modern Saints, who have departed this life, who are clothed upon with the powers of the eternal Apostleship, or Priesthood, who have gone to the world of spirits, not to sorrow, but as joyful messengers, bearing glad tidings of eternal truth to the spirits in prison—could not these teach us good things? Yes, if they were permitted so to do.

But suppose all spirits were honest, and aimed at truth, yet each one could only converse of the things he is privileged to know, or comprehend, or which have been revealed to his understanding, or brought within the range of his intellect.

If this be the case, what do we wish, in communicating with the eternal world, by visions, angels, or ministering spirits? Why, if a person is sick they would like to be visited, comforted, or healed by angel or spirit! If a man is in prison, he would like an angel or spirit to visit him, and comfort and deliver him. A man shipwrecked would like to be instructed in the way of escape to himself and fellows from a watery grave. In case of extreme hunger, a loaf of bread brought by an angel would not be unacceptable.

If a man were journeying and murderers were lying in wait for him in a certain road, an angel would be of use to him in telling him of the circumstance, and to take another road.

If a man were journeying to preach the Gospel, an angel would be useful to tell the neighbors of his high and holy calling, as in case of Peter and Cornelius. Or would you not like to have angels all around you, to guard, guide, and advise you in every emergency?

The Saints would like to enter a holy temple, and have their President and his assistants administer for their dead. They love their fathers, although they had once almost forgotten them. Our fathers have forgotten to hand down to us their genealogy. They have not felt sufficient interest to transmit to us their names, and time and place of birth, and in many instances they have not taught us when and where ourselves were born, or who were our grandparents, and their ancestry. Why is all this? It is because of that veil of blindness which is cast over the earth, because there has been no true Church, Priesthood, or Patrinrchal order, no holy place for the deposit or preservation of the sacred archives of antiquity, no knowledge of the eternal kindred ties, relationship, or mutual interests of eternity. The hearts of the children had become estranged from the fathers, and the hearts of the fathers from the children, until one came in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the keys of these things, to open communication between worlds, and to kindle in our bosoms that glow of eternal affection which lay dormant.

Suppose our temple was ready, and we should enter there to act for the dead, we could only act for those whose names are known to us. And these are few with most of us Americans. And why is this? We have never had time to look to the heavens, or to the past or future, so busy have we been with the things of the earth. We have hardly had time to think of ourselves, to say nothing of our fathers.

It is time that all this stupidity and indifference should come to an end, and that our hearts were opened, and our charities extended, and that our bosoms expanded, to reach forth after whom? Those whom we consider dead! God has condescended so far to our capacity, as to speak of our fathers as if they were dead, although they are living spirits, and will live forever. We have no dead! Only think of it! Our fathers are all living, thinking, active agents, we have only been taught that they are dead!

Shall I speak my feelings, that I had on yesterday while we were laying those corner stones of the temple? Yes, I will utter them, if I can.

It was not with my eyes, not with the power of actual vision, but by my intellect, by the natural faculties inherent in man, by the exercise of my reason, upon known principles, or by the power of the Spirit, that it appeared to me that Joseph Smith and his associate spirits, the Latter-day Saints, hovered about us on the brink of that foundation, and with them all the angels and spirits from the other world, that might be permitted, or that were not too busy elsewhere.

Why should I think so? In the first place, what else on this earth have they to be interested about? Where would their eyes be turned, in the wide earth if not centred here? Where would their hearts and affections be, if they cast a look or a thought towards the dark speck in the heavens which we inhabit, unless to the people of these valleys and mountains? Are there others who have the keys for the redemption of the dead? Is any one else preparing a sanctuary for the holy conversation and ministrations pertaining to their exaltation? No, verily. No other people have opened their hearts to conceive ideas so grand. No other people have their sympathies drawn out to such an extent towards the fathers.

No. If you go from this people, to hear the doctrines of others, you will hear the doleful sayings—"As the tree falls, so it lyeth. As death leaves you so judgment will find you. There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge in the grave, &c., &c. There is no change after death, but you are fixed, irretrievably fixed, for all eternity. The moment the breath leaves the body, you must go to an extreme of heaven or hell, there to rejoice with Peter on thrones of power in the presence of Jesus Christ in the third heavens, or on the other hand, to roll in the flames of hell with murderers and devils." Such are the doctrines of our sectarian brethren, who profess to believe in Christ, but who know not the mysteries of godliness, and the boundless resources of eternal charity, and of that mercy which endureth forever.

It is here, that the spirit world would look with an intense interest, it is here that the nations of the dead, if I may so call them, would concentrate their hopes of ministration on the earth in their behalf. It is here that the countless millions of the spirit world would look for the ordinances of redemption, so far as they have been enlightened by the preaching of the Gospel, since the keys of the former dispensation were taken away from the earth.

Why? If they looked upon the earth at all, it would be upon those corner stones which we laid yesterday; if they listened at all, it would be to hear the sounds of voices and instruments, and the blending of sacred and martial music in honor of the commencement of a temple for the redemption of the dead. With what intensity of interest did they listen to the songs of Zion, and witness the feelings of their friends. They were glad to behold the glittering bayonets of the guards around the temple ground, and they longed for the day when there would be a thousand where there is now but one. They wish to see a strong people, gathered and united, in sufficient power to maintain a spot on earth where a baptismal font might be erected for the baptism for the dead.

It was here that all their expectations were centered. What cared they for all the golden palaces, marble pavements, or gilded halls of state on earth? What cared they for all the splendor, equipage, titles, and empty sounds of the self-styled great of this world, which all pass away as the dew of the morning before the rising sun? What cared they for the struggles, the battles, the victories, and numerous other worldly interests that vibrate the bosoms of men on either side? None of these things would interest them. Their interests were centered here, and thence extended to the work of God among the nations of the earth.

Did Joseph, in the spirit world, think of anything else, yesterday, but the doings of his brethren on the earth? He might have been necessarily employed, and so busy as to be obliged to think of other things. But if I were to judge from the acquaintance I had with him in his life, and from my knowledge of the spirit of Priesthood, I would suppose him to be so hurried as to have little or no time to cast an eye, or a thought after his friends on the earth. He was always busy while here and so are we. The spirit of our holy ordination and anointing will not let us rest. The spirit of his calling will never suffer him to rest., while satan, sin, death, or darkness, posseses a foot of ground on this earth.—While the spirit world contains the spirit of one of his friends, or the grave holds captive one of their bodies, he will never rest, or slacken his labors.

You might as well talk of Saul, king of Israel, resting while Israel was oppressed by the Canaanites or Philistines, after Samuel had anointed him to be king. At first he was like another man, but when occasion called into action the energies of a king, the spirit of his anointing came upon him. He slew an ox, divided it into twelve parts, and sent a part to each of the tribes of Israel, with this proclamation; "So shall it be done to the ox of the man who will not come up to the help of the Lord of hosts."

Ye Elders of Israel! you will find that there is a spirit upon you which will urge you to continued exertion, and will never suffer you to feel at ease in Zion while a work remains unfinished in the great plan of redemption of our race. It will inspire the Saints to build, plant, improve, cultivate, make the desert fruitful, in short, to use the elements, send missions abroad, build up states and kingdoms and temples at home, and send abroad the light of a never-ending day to every people and nation of the globe.

You have been baptised, you have had the laying on of hands, and some have been ordained, and some anointed with a holy ointment. A spirit has been given you. And you will find, if you undertake to rest, it will be the hardest work you ever performed. I came home here from a foreign mission—I presented myself to our President, and inquired what I should do next? "Rest," said he.

If I had been set to turn the world over, to dig down a mountain, to go to the ends of the earth, or travers the deserts of Arabia, it would have been easier than to have undertaken to rest, while the Priesthood was upon me. I have received the holy anointing, and I can never rest till the last enemy is conquered, death destroyed, and truth reigns triumphant.

May God bless you all. Amen.

FAT IN THE FIRE.—Prentice, of the Louisville Journal, is the author of the following:

"The editor of the New Hampshire Patriot says that he expects to grow fat as long as he lives. Ah, yes; but when he dies, will not the fat be in the fire?"

Should that be the case, Prentice will certainly see "the smoke of the burning."

A PARTY of wealthy gentleman have arrived at Jerusalem, with the purpose of commencing a colony at Jericho.

THE NEW DOCTRINE.

Judge DUER, one of the most eminent jurists of New York, in speaking of the doctrine of "no more Slave States," says:

"The Whigs of New York have been advised—I might use a stronger term—by a convention recently held at Saratoga, to adopt as a principle that no more Slave States shall be admitted into the Union. Now it is, I believe, generally admitted that each State may establish or prohibit slavery at its pleasure, and that the General Government has no power whatever over slavery within the several States. But it may be said that Congress has a discretionary power to admit or refuse admission to a new State, and that, consequently, having power to reject altogether, it may impose terms as a condition of admission. This argument assumes the right to refuse admission to new States in all cases; and it is, therefore, important to inquire whether Congress possesses such power. Mr. John Quincy Adams was of opinion that it did not. Upon the question of the admission of Arkansas into the Union, he said: 'I cannot, consistently with my sense of my obligations as a citizen of the United States, and bound by oath to support their constitution—I cannot object to the admission of Arkansas into the Union as a Slave State; I cannot propose or agree to make it a condition of her admission that a convention of her people shall expunge this article from the constitution. She is entitled to admission as a Slave State, as Louisiana and Mississippi, and Alabama and Missouri, have been admitted, by virtue of that article in the treaty for the acquisition of Louisiana which secures to the inhabitants of the ceded Territories all the rights, privileges and immunities of the original citizens of the United States, and stipulates for their admission conformably to that principle into the Union.' Now, the treaty with Mexico, by which California and New Mexico are acquired, contains a clause in the very words of that to which Mr. Adams refers in the treaty for the acquisition of Louisiana. There is a similar stipulation, but in language still more explicit, in the joint resolution annexing Texas. Now—without arguing or even expressing an opinion on this question—I submit whether it be worth while to adopt a principle which would exclude Mr. Adams, if alive, from the Whig party, upon the ground of his not being sufficiently anti-slavery.

Arrival and Departure of Indian Chiefs.

An Indian brave, called Pah-go-way-ghezhik, or Hole in-the-day, the most daring war chieftain of the entire Chippewa Nation, arrived in the city on Tuesday, en route for Washington, he having been detained at Cleveland by sickness. His companions, Crossing-Sky, Bad-Boy, Swift-Sailor, Crow-Feather, and Dying-Echo, arrived the same day. This is Hole-in-the-day's first visit to the Pale Face regions, and he sees much that is wonderful in his eyes. He is finely dressed and is a splendid specimen of his race. His long black hair is plaited in two braids and his head is bare, as if to invite the scalping knife of any Sioux who may venture to apply it. Hole-in-the-day is said to be a very intelligent man, but he possesses all the haughtiness, taciturnity and revengefulness of his race. He crossed over alone in the Sioux country a year and a half ago, and lay upon the trail of a party of his enemies until he had secured a scalp, and then returned in triumph. Several feats of this kind prove Hole-in-the-day to be a smart Indian. He is the son of a distinguished chief of the same name, who died about eight years ago. His age is about twenty-nine years—his height five feet ten inches, weight about one hundred and sixty pounds. When he arrived at St. Paul, Min., on his present journey, he stopped at one of the hotels and a number of the Sioux braves (his mortal and sworn enemies) armed, congregated in front of the hotel; he sent out to have inquiry made what they desired in thus congregating. The answer was that they wished to look upon the renowned chief of the Chippewas. He said if that were all they should be gratified, and accordingly he went to the balcony, when his savage enemies gazed long and earnestly upon him. He then sent word that if there were any chiefs who wished to see him, he should be happy to receive them in his room. Five came forward, left their arms in the hall of the hotel, and paid a visit to him. Though they could not converse, they smoked the pipe of peace, and after a brief visit, they took their departure. The whole party left this city on Wednesday for the Metropolis of the Nation, where they intend to have a talk with their great Father, President Pierce.—[Baltimore Clipper.

LAST HOURS OF A SINGLE GENTLEMAN.

This morning, Nov. 11, at 11 1-2 o'clock precisely, an unfortunate young man, Mr. Edward Pinckney, underwent the extreme penalty of infatuation, by expiating his attachment to Mary Ann Gale, in front of the altar railings of St. Mary's Church, Islington.

It will be in the recollection of all those friends of the party who were at Jones' at Brixton, two years ago, that Mr. Pinckney was there and then first introduced to Miss Gale, to whom he instantly began to direct particular attentions—dancing with her no less than six sets that evening, and handing her things at supper in the most devoted manner. From that period commenced the intimacy between them, which terminated in this morning's catastrophe.

Poor Pinckney had barely attained his 28th year; but there is no belief, that but for reasons of a pecuniary nature, his single life would have come to an untimely end. A change for the better, however, having occurred in his circumstances, the young lady's friends were induced to sanction his addresses, and thus became accessories to the course for which he has just suffered.

The unhappy young man passed the last night of his bachelor existence in his solitary chamber. From half-past eight to ten he was engaged in writing letters. Shortly after, his younger brother, Henry, knocked at the door, when the doomed youth told him to come in. On being asked when he meant to go to bed, he replied, "Not yet." The question was then put to him how he thought he would sleep? To which he answered, "I don't know." He then expressed his desire for a cigar and a glass of grog. His brother, who partook the like refreshments, now demanded if he would take anything more that night. He said, "Nothing," in a firm voice. His affectionate brother then rose to take his leave, when the devoted one considerately advised him to take care of himself.

Precisely at a quarter of a minute to seven the next morning, the victim of Cupid having been called according to his desire, he arose and promptly dressed himself. He had the self-control to shave himself, without the slightest injury, for not even a scratch upon his chin appeared after the operation. It would seem he devoted a longer time than usual at his toilet.

The wretched man was attired in a light blue dress coat, with frosted buttons, a white vest and nankeen trousers, with patent boots. He wore around his neck a variegated satin scarf which partly concealed the Carrazzo of the bosom. In front of the scarf was inserted a breastpin of conspicuous dimensions.

Having descended the staircase with a quick step, he entered the apartment where his brother and sister, and a few friends, awaited him. He then shook hands cordially with all present, and on being asked how he slept, answered "Very well." And to the further demand as to the state of his mind, he said that he "felt happy." One of the party hereupon suggested that it would be as well to take something before the melancholy ceremony was gone through; he exclaimed with some emphasis, "Decidedly." Breakfast was accordingly served, when he ate a French roll, a large round of toast, two sausages, and drank three great breakfast cups of tea. In reply to an expression of astonishment on the part of a person present, he declared he had never felt happier in his life.

Having inquired the time, and ascertained that it was ten minutes of eleven, he remarked that it would soon be over. His brother inquired if he could do anything for him, when he said he would take a glass of ale. Having drank this he appeared to be satisfied.

The fatal moment now approaching, he devoted the remaining portion of his time to distribute those little articles he would no longer want. To one he gave his cigar case, to another his tobacco stopper, and charged his brother Henry with his latch-key, with instructions to deliver it, after all was over, with due solemnity to the landlady. The clock at length struck eleven, and at the same moment he was informed that a cab was at the door. He merely said, "I am ready," and allowed himself to be conducted to the vehicle, into which he got with his brother, his other friends following on behind, in others.

Arriving at the tragical spot, a short but anxious delay of some moments took place, after which they were joined by the lady with her friends. Little was said on either side; but Miss Gale, with customary decorum, shed tears. Pinckney endeavored to preserve decorum, but a slight twitching in his mouth and eyebrows proclaimed his inward agitation. All the necessary preliminaries having now been settled, and the prescribed necessary formalities gone through, the usual question was put—"Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wife?" "I will."

He then put the fatal ring on Miss Gale's finger, the hymenial noose was adjusted, and the poor fellow was launched into——matrimony! [London Punch.

A NATIVE and an adopted citizen were disputing the other day about their respective patriotism. Said the adopted citizen:

"I love America as well as you do!"

"Granted," said the native.

"I love liberty with a fervor you cannot excel."

"I vote conscientiously, pay my taxes before they are due, foster education both private and public, cherish the Constitution and laws."

"Well, and what else?" asked the native pointedly.

"What would you have more?" demanded the adopted citizen.

"Share our national prejudices! and then I will call you an American."

VICTIMS OF SPIRITUALISM.—There have been three victims of spiritualism brought to the Hamilton County Lunatic Asylum, within the past three weeks. The physician of the Asylum, Dr. J. S. Quinn, has been astonished at some of the revelations made from the world of spirits. One of the three patients alluded to, says he has had instructions from some of the spirits to engage in the Herculean labor of preparing three works on Theology, Demonology and Sorcery.—[Cincinnati Com.

ALL the leading hotel and coffee house keepers in Cincinnati have signed an agreement, pledging themselves not to violate the Ohio prohibitory law by the sale of liquor, save only native wine and ale, those drinks being excepted by statute.

CROWS are never the whiter for washing themselves.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, MARCH 10, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

New Orleans, James Mcgaw.
Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison County, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Pittsburgh, Pa., B. F. Winchester.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Bardino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Scott, Traveling Agent through the West.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE MORMON.

Those who gave their names and money to the Luminary office or our carriers, will receive their papers from us; but those who paid Elder Taylor or other agents, will we presume, receive them through the postoffice. All persons out of St. Louis wishing the 'Mormon,' should write for it to John Taylor, No. 102 Nassau street, New York.

Proscribed and persecuted Nobles, who ought to have Governed the world.

It has been the common lot of the servants of God, in all ages of the world, to be understood and appreciated by comparatatively few of their fellow mortals with whom they daily associated, or with whom they sojourned, or unto whom they were sent. They might heal the sick, cast out devils, raise the dead, and spend all their strenght in striving to bless their fellow men and save them from destruction; yet all their labors, sacrifices, and good works be falsified, misconstrued and denounced as imposture and delusion.

The oft repeated declaration, 'you shall be hated of all men for my sake,' is neither delusive, flattering, nor consoling; that may be the reason so few in any age have offered themselves as candidates for the service of God, for no sooner is a man endowed with the spirit of prophecy and revelation, and the power and wisdom by the Holy Ghost to reprove the world of sin and unrighteousness, and to preach the everlasting gospel, than he becomes a marked man; a aeritable target at which devils carnate and incarnate shoot their arrows, or hurl their thunderbolts.

This fact has been demonstrated in the history and experience of every Prophet, Apostle, and prominent messenger from God to man, from the days of righteous Abel to the Prophet Joseph.

Ambassadors may be sent from Russia to America, from Austria to England, and from all the Kingdoms, Republics and Governments of the Earth, and be received, respected and honored, as representatives and messengers of a neighboring Prince, Potentate, Governor, or President; but if a man should be sent by the Governor of the universe, as His representative to the Legislative Halls, Council Chambers or Senate Houses, and announce himself a messenger from the High Council of heaven, although he might present credentials as genuine and indisputable as any possessed by ambassadors from the eternal world in any age, (Moses or Jesus not excepted,) the best reception he would meet, would be scorn and ridicule, and perhaps a mobbing.

The same feeling and spirit has existed and prevailed among the children of men, in all ages of the world. Very rarely has the Lord had an ambassador in any nation, and when He has condescended to send His messengers, even though it were his Son, persecution has followed them to their death. We don't know whether Noah, Abraham, John the Baptist, Jesus, or Peter ever offered themselves as candidates for vacant seats in any of the government councils of the nations, but certain it is that they were never admitted to such posts of honor. The refined and polished statesman and politician, would doubtless have considered them a disgrace to the legislative fraternity, for they held no rank, position, or standing in society. There is poor old Noah, a boat builder, poor deluded fanatic, and as for his boat, it will never be worth one cent, it is so large and unwieldy, and built too on dry land. Admit him into their councils of government, as soon think of admitting his boat there.

As for Abraham, he was too much of a Mormon! he had too many wives to be considered respectable, (perhaps that is why he had not so much as an acre of land to call his own,) admit him into their councils? No, he was altogether too fanatical, he believed in visions and revelations, and in angel's visits too, and being moreover but a poor emigrant, and a polygamist at that, he was certainly disqualified by the law of disabilities for any office of trust.

And as for John the Baptist, he was too rough, rude, and wild in his habits and manners, and not only that, he was too austere, insulting and meddlesome to please the rulers and authorities of his nation, he thought too loud and spoke too boldly, and as a natural consequence, one fine day when he arose he found his head cut off, (like the Assyrians, who when they arose, found themselves all dead corpses,) so he was of course disqualified.

Jesus was considered of too mean, obscure, and questionable birth and parentage, to be admitted into genteel and respectable society, and his associates were considered some of the lowest dregs of humanity; therefore, who would think of receiving him as a messenger from God? who would think of receiving his credentials, and believing him to be an ambassador from heaven, with the right to legislate for all the nations of the earth? But so it was, yet persecution and death was his portion, and he passed from the earth comparativly unknown, uncared for, and unappreciated.

With this feeling and spirit, some have said: 'If we let him alone all men will believe on Him! and they will come and take away our kingdom and government! If we don't kill off these Mormon Prophets, all the world will believe on them, and then,' Oh, dear! 'what shall we do, who have all the time fought against them?'

Princes, Governors, Presidents, Priests and Rulers of all grades, have quailed and trembled at the sound of their voice, for 'their voice is as the voice of thunder, their nerves are like steel, their face as brass, and their feet like iron, and none with them can be compared.' Then who ought to govern the world? Let 'the Mormon' answer.

THE MAIL NUISANCE.

The Postal arrangements between this city, New Orleans, and Texas, cry aloud for an effective reformation. It is very necessary that some measures be adopted to prevent the inconveniance and annoyance constantly occasioned by the slow and uncertain transit of our mails. Whilst a letter is sent to Texas, and an answer received at this city, a man might almost travel around the world. The letter we received this day from New Orleans announcing that the James Nesmith was telegraphed below New Orleans at the mouth of the river, was written on the 22d of last month—16 days coming from New Orleans—the Oceana bringing the company that was on board the James Nesmith, arriving in this city some days before the receipt of the letter.

We propose a subscription, for the purchase of a wooden medal, to be presented to the Postmaster General of this department, with a donkey, and slow coach engraved thereon.

ARRIVAL OF THE DANISH SAINTS.

We are happy to announce to our readers that Peter O. Hanson and three hundred and seventy-five of his company of Danish Saints arrived here Wednesday, March the 7th, by the Oceana, Cap. Miller. Fifty of Br. Hanson's company are still on the river on board the Moses Greenwood, in charge of Elder Peterson. The company has been greatly blessed and favored, having had but few deaths and those mostly children. For particulars, see Elder Hanson's letter.

We learn by correspondence with which we are favored from F. D. Richards, that the ship Siddons was to sail on or about the 20th of Feb., with about four hundred Saints on board, bound for Philadelphia, under the Presidency of Elder John S. Fulmer. Elders Isaac Alred, O. M. Deuel, James Pace, William Smith, and George Simpson all ex-Presidents of Conferences were to accompany him.

Elder Fulmer is intrusted with the special charge of the P. E. Fund passengers. Nearly all on board the Siddons we are informed are of that class.—Aged fathers and mothers about three score and ten, are announced as emigrants this season for the valley, by the P. E. Fund. It is thought the emigration will be rather late this year, in consequence of scarcity of ships to Philadelphia. We learn by a letter received this day from N. Orleans dated Feb., 22d, that the Neva was telegraphed from the mouth of the river, having thirteen Saints on board. They will probably come up the river on the Moses Greenwood.

Since writing the above the Moses Greenwood has arrived. With the balance of the Danish company; also the passengers of the Neva, all enjoying good health and spirits.

The Proposed New Railroad to the Pacific.

We are indebted to our Washington Correspondent for the following extract from a Washington paper, upon the Pacific Railroad Bill. We have not yet learned whether it has passed the House; Should this scheme be executed, it will be one of the most gigantic enterprises of the age. The Washingtonians, Californians, and Jeffersonians have manifested an extraordinary interest in the intercommunication of the Mountain Territory with the neighboring States, which cannot fail to produce the best possible results to all who are interested in our national intercourse; when this is accomplished we shall expect to hear from our friends in Utah more often. We should like to hear from them once in three months, and we hail the present movement as a sign of better things for the future:

"The Senate yesterday passed a bill (which is yet to be considered in the House of Representatives) authorizing the construction of three railroads to the Pacific through the Territories of the United States. Being unable to reconcile conflicting interests as to the location of the road, this bill proposes to construct a Northern, a Southern, and a Central Railroad, and to erect upon each a line of Magnetic Telegraph.

"One road and telegraph to commence on the western border of the State of Texas, and to pursue the most eligible route to the navigable waters of the Pacific, in the State of California; which line shall be known as the Southern Pacific Railroad.

"One road and telegraph to commence on the western border of the States of Missouri or Iowa, and to pursue the most eligible route to the bay of San Francisco; which line shall be known as the Central Pacific Railroad.

"And one road and telegraph to commence on the western border of the State of Wisconsin, in the Territory of Minnesota, and pursue the most eligible route to the navigable waters of the Pacific in Oregon or Washington Territories; which line shall be known as the Northern Pacific Railroad.

Success to the undertaking.

Hard Times in Canada—Wives in Utah—Will the Mormons Rebel?

We ask pardon in advance, for the liberty we take in making public property of the following extracts of a letter from an outsider, down East, who by the way is an honorable man of the world, and an old friend with whom we used to associate in our boyish days. The freedom, and humor of his communication emboldens us to this liberty:

"STANSTEAD, C. E., Feb. 12, 1855."

* * * * * * * * *

"Times are very hard here, money scarce, and provisions higher than they were ever before known in this country.

"Hay, $22.50 per ton; Corn, $1.75 per bushel; Wheat, $2.50; Oats, 60 cts.; Flour, $12.00 per bl., and so on.

"It will cost me $40.00 to winter a Cow; and this a farming country.

"What will become of us in cold Canada? Shall we go to Salt Lake? Would not our energies be taxed to their utermost, to meet the tithing, and support five or six wives and their children? Allowing six children for each wife—thirty-six in all—which with self and wives, would make a family of forty-three!! I would not know how to take care of such a host. Could you do it?

[We would suggest to our friend, that it was seven women instead of six, which the Prophet Isaiah said should take hold of one man, desiring to bear his name, but they also promise, saying "We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel." Should he be thus fortunate, the latter clause might relieve him somewhat of the evil anticipated.—ED.]

"I see by some of the U. S. newspapers, that they are trying to make the Mormons rebel; or, refuse to be governed by Col. Steptoe and other officers lately sent out to Utah. Do you anticipate any difficulty, or think any will arise from a change of officers?

[No! unless they make it themselves, and then they'll have the worst of it.—ED.]

"Perhaps the people of the States are afraid the Mormons won't rebel; It looks like it to me. I cannot see as there is any great chance for difficulty, as long as the people make the laws, and the Governor and people enforce them; why, of course that's enough! It is not likely the Governor of Utah, will attempt to enforce the laws of any other country, than those of Utah. Where the d—l is the trouble then? I cannot see.

"I have received the 'Luminary' and like it very well. I enclose in this letter, pay for the same. How many subsribers have you? Do we all pay up, or rather down?

[Will our slow subscribers answer this question? Don't all speak at once.—ED.]

"'No credit,' is the only safe motto for a newspaper. Cash down is good—accounts all over the country are GOOD FOR NOTHING.

"Write me soon, and tell me everything about Utah, which you think I should like to know.

"I remain yours, &c., * * *

NEWS FROM UTAH.

The New York Herald of the 5th inst., contains news from Utah up to the 4th of January, taken from the Deseret News by a California Journal which is very acceptable after so long a silence.

We extract the following interesting items. Our readers may expect a more detailed account in our next issue:

The Deseret Theatre was opened on the 2d December, with "All is not Gold that Glitters." Governor Young, the Quorum of the Twelve, the heads of Department, &c., being present.

The Messrs. Huntington reached Salt Lake City on the 27th November, from Carson Valley, and report that they had cut off 150 miles from the Beckwith route. They made the trip in twenty-four days.

The Legislative Assembly of Utah met at Salt Lake City on the 11th December. Heber C. Kimball was elected President. Gov. Young's message, which was delivered at the opening of the session, is an interesting document. He calls on the people to "improve the present time of peace and prosperity to complete their defences, as they know not what hour their enjoyment of quiet may be broken."

The State House at Fillmore City, the new capital of Utah, was progressing to completion.

Professor Orson Pratt advertises to open a high school as soon as twenty scholars could be obtained.

On Monday, January 1st, the Governor and Legislative Assembly of Utah Territory gave a New Year's festival, in the Social Hall, in compliment to Judge Kinney, his associates, other United States officers of the Territory, and Lieut. Col. Steptoe, of the United States Army, with the officers in his command.

Later from our Washington Correspondent.

Our Washington Correspondence has arrived too late for this issue, but we extract the following interesting items:

The General Appropriation Bill has passed the House; it contains several clauses making appropriations in favor of Utah Territory. Some thirty-five thousand dollars for the current expenses of the Territorial Government. Twelve thousand dollars for finishing the Penitentiary. And thirty-six thousand dollars to Mr. McGraw for carrying the Independence and Salt Lake Mails. And Mr. McGraw is in fine spirits, he seems to be a man of energy, and determined to do his duty. He says if the bill passes the House in that form, as no doubt it will, he will engage that the Utah folks shall have their mails. We shall see.

This morning's news gives an interesting synopsis of a discourse delivered by Elder Milo Andrus in the neighborhood of Brunswick; which, with several interesting letters from Elders traveling in the States are unavoidably crowded out.

LETTERS FROM MADRID, Spain, dated the 18th of January, state that the city is in a state of great agitation, and we hardly know from hour to hour, how soon we may have an insurrection. The Government attributes the excitement to political causes, but the true cause is known to be the want of food, exaggerated as it is, by the inclemency of the season. The partisans of the Government say that the authorities are in possession of proofs that the working people are encouraged by persons behind, who urge them on to demand with threats either food or occupation from the municipality. The police agents assert that they recognise some among the most clamorous who have returned to the charge—a fact which may be true, without supposing that the movement is political, seeing that no work or food has been given. They also allege that they have found 13 or 14 Napoleons in the pockets of the very men who were loudest in crying out 'hunger and famine.'—This is, however, not generally believed, and there is enough of distress in the state of the capital to account for the agitation, without our attaching implicit belief to the assertion of the police, that it is a coupe monte.—[Ex.

SHARP.—Some ingenious Yankee "down east" has invented a kind of "Love Letter Ink," which is an effectual safeguard against actions for breach of promise, as it fades entirely from the paper in two months. Another Yankee purchased a hundred boxes of the ink, for which he gave his note, payable in ninety days. The note attested the excellency of the ink, as at the end of the three months it was found to be only a piece of blank paper.

Correspondence.

For the Luminary.

More Baptisms—A Prophecy—Emigration from Texas—Law of Tithing—Southern Energy.

PORT SULIVAN, Texas, Feb. 19, 1855,

Dear Br. Snow—I wrote you a few days since, in haste, and do the same at this time. When I came to this country, and particularly to this place, seven months ago, and commenced preaching the gospel, I met with true friends, as the world calls men, whose interests makes the face bland, or actions blythe, and also came the spirit of opposition, and with it, all the persecution that men dare, or the Lord would permit, against me.

I remember a prophecy; that before I left I would break up the town. I have, by the blessing of God, built up a branch in this place, of fifty members, more or less, rather more I think, when all is told. By petition, &c., the name of this place has been changed to Brackenville, and when the Mormons leave, the place will feel the effects of the above prophecy. I have baptised two others, since last I wrote, and hope to add others ere I leave, as I think there are others yet, who will obey the gospel, in this land.

I purpose starting out all the Saints from here, in my company; those that I have baptised, and several others. The more wealthy and able, are helping the poor, and I hope and pray that I may be enabled to accomplish a completion of the work that the Lord has called me to do; but I assure you, I often feel grieved, and my soul is wrung to the full extent that it will bear, and not always by the world, for of all the trials that I have to bear, the one of ungratitude, evil surmises, and the damning spirit of jealousy is the worst. If it was not that the Lord calls me to preach, and save the people, they might roll on their apple-cart, for there are few worth the trouble (seemingly) they cost; but I will try and hold on—pray for me. I feel determined in every principle of Mormonism. I cannot bear a grunt, or a whine from any.

I have no news from home, since October. I send you a few more subscribers for the Luminary.

When I get my company off, I shall lay before them the 'Tithing Law,' with all the power, might, and mind I can possess, and bring you every dollar I can raise, but the people have not much money, it is very scarce, and hard to get. Their negro property is on the wane for cash, and land is poor sale.

The weather is clear and fine, like unto our April in Utah, and the grass is begining to spring up finely. The brethren are preparing for a start, with Southern energy, and we will start as early in the month of March as possible. The Rivers are very low, and the winter has been unusualy warm and dry. The health of the people is quite good. I have received to-day, the Luminary of Jan'y 27—ever acceptable to me, and to see its clever editor would do me fully as much good. Give my love to Uncle Milo, and all my old friends, and accept the love and good wishes, and fervent prayers of your devoted friend and brother in the New Covenant.

S. M. BLAIR.

OVERLAND EXPRESS MAIL.

Through the detention of the Eastern Mails, the following from our Washington Correspondent, has been unavoidably delayed until this issue. As it did not arrive in time for our last, we hope it will not be the less interesting to our readers on that account. We are firm believers in the old adage—better late than never:

"WASHINGTON, Feb. 20, 1855.

"An avalanche of mails from every quarter, have come tumbling in upon us since the thaw, and all the railroads, and rivers are now open. The excitement in and around the Capitol, increases every day as the session draws to a close. The President's veto of the French Spoliation bill, has created a great deal of excitement, and yesterday an attempt was made in the House, to incorporate it with the general appropriation, but was ruled out of order by the Chair. A bill yesterday passed the Senate, providing for the railroad to the Pacific, a synopsis of which I send you. It is not expected much business will be done in Congress before the close of the session, more than pass the general appropriation bills.

Some days ago an unsuccessful attempt was made in the House, to bring in a bill to establish a daily Express Mail from St. Louis to San Francisco. There are now, two bills before the Senate, upon the same subject, one introduced by Senator Gwin, of California, and the other by Mr. Weller. These bills are dissimilar, a synopsis of Mr. Weller's I sent you in my last. It is proposed to take an entirely new route, as I stated, leaving Salt Lake a long way to the right, and thereby excluding the most of the inhabitants of Utah, almost entirely from the advantages of the Express Mail. This plan is proposed because it is thought less snow will be encountered on this route, than the old South Pass route, as it lies much further to the south. Now, this to a person unacquainted with the country, might seem very probable; but any mountaineer, or any one else at all acqnainted with the country, knows that the reverse is true, and it is easily accounted for. The cause is apparent to any one by a glance at the map, it will be seen that a number of great rivers head right in the region of country through which the proposed route will pass, showing a very great elevation of country; for instance, the Arkansas rises here, and flows east; Rio Del Norte, south; the Grand river, one of the main tributaries of the Colorado of the west, south-west; the North Fork of the Platte, north-west, and the Medicine Bow, Laramie Fork, and South Fork nearly a north course, all showing a much higher altitude than the country any where in the region of the South Pass, or Box Elder Pass, and any one knows the effect of elevation upon climate, it always brings the same as latitude north.

It was on this route, in 1849, that Col. Fremont lost all his mules, and nearly all his men in the snow. I am aware that since that, the winter before last he passed through, but not without intolerable suffering, and had he not made Parawan when he did, his party again must have been buried up; and I, myself, in returning home to Utah, from Texas, in the fall and winter of 1853, suffered immensly, and like to have lost all my party in passing through this country, a little north of the proposed route. I fell in with the December Salt Lake mail, going in, at Weber river. The carrier informed me that the deepest snow from there to Fort Laramie, was not more than one foot, when we had been in snow from two to four feet deep, for three or four hundred miles. By way of the South Pass, or Box Elder, or Bridger's Pass, without doubt, will be found to be the most practicable, any where north of El Passo.

A trip across the plains in winter, sounds horible to those who have never crossed; let there be a station every twenty miles, and a daily line of stages which would keep the snow troden down smooth, and then there would be nothing very difficult in crossing in winter. The cold is never so severe as it is in the New England states, neither does the snow generally fall so deep. The great difficulty now, under the present system of carrying the mails, arises from not having grain on the road, with which to feed animals, and the trips only being monthly, every time, a new road through the snow has to be broken, which wears out the mules, and delays the mails.

Let some man of energy get the contract, and be paid the price the present bills propose, five hnndred thousand dollars per annum, and one hundred and fifty thousand dollars to be expended on the road, and the privilege of making stations every twenty miles, with a pre-emption to the land, and my word for it, we should seldom have a failure of the mails.

SALT LAKE.

ST. LOUIS, March 8, 1855.

To the Editor of the Luminary:

DEAR SIR—It is with great pleasure that I seat myself to write a brief sketch of our journeyings from Scandinavia this far, and I hope soon to be able to give you a more particular history of the same.

We sailed from Liverpool on the 10th of January, on board the ship 'James Nesmith,' Capt. Mills, who is a very fine man. We numbered then 449 souls, all happy and strong in the faith, and I don't know of any one turning away from it yet. We anchored at the mouth of the Miss., on the 18th of February. Up to that date we had only 13 deaths; from that time till we reached this place, yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock, we have had 7 deaths.

We experienced no severe sickness from being on the river, having a spacious boat, the Oceana, Capt. Miller. We had cool weather and no change of diet. The Captain was a very kind man, as also the officers. Upon the whole, I think we have been much blessed, and I, for my part, feel exceedingly thankful to my heavenly Father for His manifold, tender mercies toward his people. Intending to do better when I write again, I subscribe myself yours in the New Covenant. P. O. HANSON.

From the Millennial Star.

Practical Mormonism—Governor Young—Prosperity of the Saints.

Great Salt Lake City, Oct. 31, 1854.

My Dear Brother Stenhouse—While perusing the Deseret News, a few days since, I found that you were to be succeeded by Elder Daniel Tyler in the Presidency of the Swiss Mission, and it immediately occurred to my mind, that while in the Office at Liverpool, arranging for my departure from England for the Valley in 1853, brother Samuel W. Richards handed me a number of letters, among which was one from brother Stenhouse; and that if I now wrote by this next mail, there would be a similar favor from brother Eddington to Elder Stenhouse, awating him in the Office on his arrival from the Swiss Mission.

In the first place I have to state, that the contents of your letter cheered me much. The blessings you sought in my behalf, the confidence reposed in my stability and firmness in the cause of truth, together with the improbability of my yielding to an apostate spirit while journeying Zionwards, all inspired my soul with renewed energy to cleave to the light of the Gospel, and relax not my hold, however trying and varied the circumstances might be, through which I should have to pass, nor displace that confidence you had in me.

And now, after crossing the Atlantic, witnessing all the results of Saints being brought into domestic contact with each other, traversing rivers in floating hells, residing for a number of weeks in St. Louis, conversing with some of the greatest apostates (even with the now almost celebrated Gladden Bishop), seeing our once apparently faithful brethren turn out of their course, because of the offences of others, and difficulties by the way, having to contend with sickness and death in my own wagon, till within a short distance of the Valley, my cattle dying (four head out of six), and having now wintered and summered at the home of the Saints, heard instructions from the Lord's anointed and chosen ones, conversed freely with the Prophet in my own house on several occasions, all in connexion with a thousand other channels by which I have gained invaluable experience, my testimony to you is—"All is right." God hath indeed spoken from the heavens, made known the laws and means by which man can regain the Father's presence, and continue in a sphere of never-ending progression of eternal and celestial existence.

True "Mormonism" is the greatest light that shines upon the face of the whole earth. I know it, and it seems to form a part or portion of the very essence of my nature, but the career of some men in this kingdom is curious and amusing, worthy the observance of a reflecting mind, for it affords great lessons, and enables us to dip a little deeper into the variety and character (although of one flesh and blood) of the human species, expanding our ideas and judgment, till we begin to learn the all-important principles that insure true happiness.

Men and women are drawn into the net, perform many evolutions, cut a few capers, play their part, and exit. What useful experience for the faithful. And while on your way to the retreat of the Saints, keep the mind's eye pearling, and see how many pretty boys and girls have been and are still dropping by the way, and such as have played their part well too.

These mountain regions present a beautiful aspect, but the greatest beauty consists in the fact, that they are the appointed portion of the earth, where our God has designed many of His great purposes relating to the latter-day-work should have their fulfilment; hence the Saints go to cheerfully, and effectually build up the kingdom, making adobies, selling timber in the kanyon, erecting good and convenient houses, sowing and planting the fields with grain, conducting pure streams of water in all directions, for the comfort of the inhabitants. It is not, as some of our foolish brethren supposed before their arrival here, that the cities were already manufactured, and sent down from the skies for their immediate possession. But lo! and behold, the clay for adobies is still in the earth, till dug out by hard work, the timber for building and shade trees still in the kanyons, the stone in the quarry, save and except that which has already been obtained by their industry for the comfort and advantage of each individual, &c., requiring a compound of patience and perseverance, in order to reduce these rude materials of nature to the requirements and convenience of man.

O! that brethren would be wise and reflect, making use of the reasoning faculties with which they have been endowed, how much vexation and disappointment could be saved, and how much more effectually could they prepare themselves to enter all the varied circumstances through which a Saint is bound to pass, ere he can inherit all things according to promise. And I would here ask a question—Can a man, strictly speaking, inherit any one thing pertaining to this earth, before he has learned to govern that one thing; and can he rightly govern it before he learns the laws by which it is governed? Verily no. Then how necessary the daily experience we get; how important to begin at the beginning, working with shovel, pick, crow-bar, axe, spade, hoe, saws, &c., that we may learn, by practical experience, the cause that produces the beautiful variety we see in all material and living nature. Certainly the Gods ascended the scale of intelligence by this ladder.

Brother Stenhouse, I presume you will take this friendly hint, and provide yourself with all the above-named "Mormon" implements of industry, for you may be called upon to assist the Mayor (Jedediah Grant) in clearing out a mud hole, or to repair a ditch, and if you should be minus of the tools necessary, how awkward you will feel. You will pardon me, I know, for calling your attentions to these few items before entering upon your season of rest in the Valley—yes, it will be rest from your former labors, and your energies will be called into action, in quite another sphere, and it's first-rate "Mormonism" all the time.

Do try to undeceive the Saints in some of these matters, that their minds may be prepared to meet things as they really exist in the Valley—that they cannot possess houses till they build them, crops before they till the earth and work for them. All they enjoy must be the fruit of their own labor, but there are a thousand advantages which I could name the Saints have over every other people and place, that turn to their account in all their operations.

You have unquestionably gathered much experience in your late mission, but a new field of trials and scenes will open up before you while on your way to this place. Yet inasmuch as your mind is made up to abide all the providences of Jehovah's movements with this people, as well as the nations, nothing will move you, and the same power that has been by you in the past, will continue and make manifest to your understanding the cause that produces every effect, and all will be right.

Every man learns more of himself, his neighbor, and friend, while on his way to these mountains, than he has, or could have, learned in all his life before.

I could communicate many more particulars bearing upon the leading features of the travel to Zion, but I am afraid the mail will close before I get this scribble in; and probably it is as well I cannot, for your many engagements before leaving England would cause the reading of so long a letter to be a tax on your time.

Suffice to say, I have the same confidence in your stability in the practice of every good and righteous principle under every and all circumstances, that you had in your humble servant, and I have faith that you will find the atmosphere of no place congenial to your spirit till you have a view of a portion of the Valley from the mountain top.

It is true, gathering places are selected in various parts of the States, but, unless you have direct counsel to the contrary, make good your way, nor allow of any stopping place between Liverpool and the city of the Great Salt Lake.

Let me say a word or two in relation to Governor Young. I believe it impossible for the Saints abroad to fully appreciate the worth and true character of this chosen one of God—his kind, fatherly care over the flock, in watching their interests by day and by night, merits the confidence, faith, and love of all who know him. He is certainly the only man (qualified of course by the power of God for the office) that could lead and control a people collected together from all nations, tongues, and tribes, and such varied and peculiar circumstances. He seems daily to increase in all the attributes of the God-head, his countenance constantly bespeaking a soul inspired by the Spirit and power of God; and my prayer is, that you and I, with all the faithful, may be found treading in his footsteps.

Inclosed, I forward you a programme of our juvenile demonstration on the 24th of July last. The whole affair was one of great interest, and far surpassed its outline in the programme. The multitude of children collected on the occasion was such as to give strong presumptive evidence that the command given to our first parents—"Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth," &c., was having a literal fulfilment in the valleys of the mountains. The children were beautifully attired, the order and decorum were admirable, and notwithstanding I had witnessed large assemblies of children in various parts of England on many occasions, yet I never saw an equal to this; it spoke volumes for the spirit of obedience that seemed to reign in the bosoms of the offspring of the Saints in these mountains. Yes, although they have had to wander with their parents from place to place, in consequence of sore persecution, and are now growing up as the hardy sons and daughters of this mountain region, I guess they will prove themselves tough chips by and bye!

The crops throughout all the settlements would have been very great this year, had not the destructive grasshopper interfered. However, there is enough and to spare for the stranger, and probably the Lord knows we could not take care of much more yet.

The increase of every department of the Church in this region is great, and bids fair at the present ratio of progress with other nations to outstrip them all.

The spirit of emigration, or rather to emigrate the Saints from all parts of the earth, seems to occupy a large portion of the authorities' attention, and the principle theme of discussion during three days of the last Conference was this subject. Will not this cause the hearts of the righteous poor to swell with joy and gratitude to Him who has the power to control all things for the good of His people?

We unitedly desire to be remembered to sister Stenhouse. Bid her be of good cheer, and continue as she has hitherto done, striving to bear all things with fortitude and patience, for great blessings await her.

A few lines on your arrival in the States will confer a favor, as they will come to hand months before you have the pleasure of passing through the last kanyon.

My desire for the watch-care of heaven to be over you and yours during your entire journeyings to Zion, shall be before the Lord. Love to all Saints.

Yours in the Covenant of Peace,

WILLIAM EDDINGTON.

Elder T. B. H. Stenhouse.

DEATH.

In this city, February 26, 1855, of dysentery, Margaret Cameron, wife of John Cameron, from Edinburgh, Scotland.

Mormon please copy.

CONGRESSIONAL.

WASHINGTON, March, 7.—Secretary Marcy's letter to Mr. Soule, in relation to the Ostend conference and its connection with our Spanish affairs, commences by alluding to the anxious desire to preserve the peace and restore the cordial feeling between this country and Spain; his apprehensions of future danger arrising from Cuba remaining a dependency on Spain without the character of her dominion over it being changed, and his conviction that the peace rendered so precarious, cannot long be unbroken.

Considering that nothing but the cession of Cuba to the United States upon honorable terms can place the relation of the two countries upon the basis of permanent friendship, Mr. Soule is instructed by the President to keep that important object of his mission constantly in view, and enter into negotiations in relation to it whenever a favorable opportunity occurs. The Secretary says, 'It is no longer, I believe, a secret that the United States wish to obtain the cession and that you have authority to treat on the subject. The knowledge of these facts will be likely to elicit opinions in regard to that measure not only from the Minister of her Catholic Majesty's Government, but from other influential individuals of the nation. The Cortez will assemble, and that subject will undoubtedly be discussed by the members of that body in the social circle.'

CLOSING SCENES OF THE 33D CONGRESS.

HOUSE.—Immediately after reading the veto message, Mr. Hunt (La.) said, 'Veto follows veto in rapid march.'

Much excitement and confusion, with cries of 'order, order, hear him.'

Mr. Hunt, (warmly,) I am in order. I shall feel unworthy to occupy a place on this floor, if I did not give utterance to the feeligns of my heart.

Veto follows veto in rapid march of tyranny over the liberties of our country. This abominable veto just brought into the House, is the very heighth of tyranny and usurpation, unknown to our ancestors, and without precedent. I desire gentlemen to remember that they are representatives of an independent people—the Parliament sent here to their minds—men met for grave purposes, and not for slaves.

When our forefathers put an end to Monarchy they thought they had established a free country, but Franklin Pierce, by accident President, can dictate to a free people what they shall do in making laws. Some gentlemen over the way are smiling complacently. They should rather feel overwhelmed with grief and sorrow at a tyrant striking at the will of the people.

Mr. Keitt (S. C.) moved the previous question amid excitement.

Mr. Chamberlain (Ind.) loudly, and excitedly proclaimed: 'This is the revolution.' The remainder of the sentence was drowned in cries of 'order, order.'

Mr. Wheeler (N. Y.] moved that the House adjourn.

Mr. Walsh (N. Y.)—If we adjourn now, when shall we meet again?

Cries of 'never, never.'

The Speaker—It is not for the Chair to determine.

Mr. Ashe—If we adjourn now, we can't meet to-morrow.

Cries of 'order, order,' in startliing tones.

The House refused to adjourn.

8.30, A. M., (Sunday.)—No quorum. Another call of the House. It was suggested that the Sergeant-at-Arms be sent to compel the attendance of members.

Mr. Pratt wanted to know whether it would be in order to direct the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring breakfast.

Mr. Walsh asked if whisky punches could be introduced? [Laughter, and cries of 'good, good.']

A voice—Send Pratt a biscuit.

Mr. Pratt—I am hungry.

Many voices—So am I.

The Sergeant-at-Arms was dispatched in search of members, while those present amused themselves by kind of conversational debate, all in fine humor, though half asleep.

At 9 o'clock, the Sergeant appeared and reported his success. In hunting up members, excuses were made by some that they had retired to refresh themselves. All further proceedings on call were disposed of.

During a calling of yeas and nays the Clerk called the name of Mr. Benton. That gentleman appeared at the door of the main aisle, and protested with violent gesticulations against calling his name. He was an ex-member and the session of to-day was a libel on the Sabbath, sir. [Confusion.]

Mr. Orr, (Speaker pro tem)—The gentleman is out of order.

Mr. Benton—I am not a member, sir.

Speaker—Then if the gentleman is not a member the door-keeper will put him out. [Laughter, and exclamations of 'pretty good,' 'that's the talk,' &c.]

11.30 A. M.—Mr. Lane, of Oregon, said that being about to part with gentlemen here, he could not seperate without apologizing for his conduct in the heat of debate, some time since, toward Mr Farley of Maine, toward whom he cherished the kindliest feelings.

Mr. Farley reciprocated the feelings expressed, and was satisfied.

Miscellaneous.

THE MORMON.

This is the title of a weekly journal, just started in this city, to advocate the religion of the "Latter-day Saints," to correct the false reports with which the "secular" press is teeming—and, more especially, to watch over the interests of the European Emigration, which Brigham Young has ordered to come by way of Boston, Philadelphia, and New York, instead of New Orleans, as heretofore. The paper has a flaming pictorial vignette, with this inscription "Mormon Creed"—"Mind your own business"—to which portion of their belief we subscribe a hearty Amen. It is edited with decided ability by John Taylor, "one of the Twelve," who has edited a Mormon Journal in Nauvoo, in Paris, France, and in Hamburg, Germany.

The paper is filled with matter of interest to outsiders as well as "Saints;" from Utah, California, Europe, East Indies, Australia, Pacific Islands, and elsewhere, at all of which points the Mormon elders are laboring "without scrip or purse" and sending thousands, annually, to their fertile vallies in Deseret. The editor takes Polygamy by the horns, admits it as a part of his faith, and defends it with much ingenuity, quoting the bible for authority, and David, Solomon, and others, for example. He asks the question—"did people ever think that there might be something socially, morally, religiously, and politically wrong, which leads to the amount of corruption that now exists?"

We quote a little in answer:

"To check this, legal enactments have been made—sometimes, as in England, licensing brothel houses; at other times, putting up before such places a lantern at the door, with 'burning shame' written on it; sometimes, by the most stringent laws, with various penal enactments appended. Various legislative enactments have been made in Prussia, Austria, France, and other continental nations. But what has it all resulted in? Nothing. Go to England now, and you see thousands of poor, miserable, homeless outcasts, wandering about the streets, and seeking to drag out the remnants of a miserable existence by bartering their—was I going to say virtue? Oh! name it not! It is too humiliating, loathsome and degrading. In some of the leading cities of France these poor outcasts have their own beats on the side-walk allotted to them; and in the sale of their dishonor (who are the purchasers in all these cases?) will show their tickets like cabmen, or porters. In some of the cities in Germany—take Hamburg, for instance, they are prohibited from going abroad professionally, by law; but are located in certain districts of the city; and there they swarm by hundreds. Whole streets full may be seen, bedecked and bedizened, at windows, inviting passers by, and offering themselves for market.

"Need I mention the boarding houses and hotel accomodations here in our own land, and trace matters of this kind from our splendid saloons and parlors—through the streets—down to the Five Points? Are not these all known? I might here ask, whose are those unfortunate children that our ladies have been seeking out, and feeding and clothing lately with such laudable benevolence? And further, where do our mulattoes come from?

"But we must stop; we have gone far enough; the picture would be too dark. It was necessary to lift the curtain a little; but prudence, propriety, and decency say, let it fall. We would just remark that philosophy, morality, law, and Christianity, as now taught, have signally failed to stop this monstrous social rnd moral evil. The present state of the world proves their incompetency. The Lord's way, as practiced by ancient men of God. The 'Restitution"—as lately revealed—we think will stop it among us.

The paper has a long letter from the lynx-eyed Mormon delegate in Congress, Dr. Bernhisel, complaining, very justly, of the refusal of Congress to grant public lands to actual settlers, and of the deposition of Gov. Young, whom he declares to be loyal to the Government, quoting in proof of this fact Capt. Stansbury, Gen. John Wilson, and other high and disinterested authorities. As polygamy is a "local institution" we do not see how Southerners and Union-savers can consistently interfere with it. For the rest, if Bro. John Taylor values the testimony of a "Gentile," he can have ours, that Brigham Young is a perfect gentleman, kind and courteous to emigrants, even when dressed, as we were, in fustian, and calling upon him, as we did, an entire stranger, without introduction from Mormon or Gentile. During a three weeks sojourn at the city of the Great Salt Lake, we saw more order, industry and decorum than we ever observed elsewhere in the world, and the writer of this has seen a little of the spheroid.—We venture the assertion, and challenge contradiction, that a more peaceful, orderly, industrious and law-abiding community than the dwellers in Deseret cannot be found, and we wish it distinctly understood that we know not a soul among them, and have not a particle of sympathy with their religion or polygamic Institution.—[New York Mirror.

The following extract of a letter written by a lady from Utah now visiting in the States, is copied from the Mormon, and will be read with interest by all who are interested in the peculiar institutions of the Mountain State.

MY DEAR MRS.——

"I am now safe in this great city, where I have often wandered before. I have visited some of the theatres, and other places of amusement. They all seem quite natural, and so do my friends, to a certain extent. But to be candid, as I told you I would, I am afraid my valley residence has spoiled me for the enjoyment of society here. There is so much stiffness and empty formality, and so little of that genuine frankness and open straightforwardness to which we have been accustomed, that I often feel very much out of sorts. There is a great deal of glitter and show, but little sincere friendship. The dollar! the dollar!! the dollar!!! is everything here. If you want respectability, it is measured by the dollar. Honor and position are bought and sold like your negroes—by the dollar. Friends are sacrificed, and the holiest ties of brotherhood and fraternity bartered for the dollar. And need I say, that in thousands of instances beauty and virtue are bought and sold for the accursed dollar. I find that our social position is very little understood, and a strong prejudice exists in the minds of many in relation to these things, through the misrepresentation of the press. They judge of us by themselves; and as they are generally corrupt, they can form no idea of the purity associated with our family relations. If they could draw aside the curtain, and see the nature design, and practical results of this, the most objectionable (to them) of our institutions, they would arrive at very different conclusions. They think we must have lost the feeling of women—the natural dignity and self-respect of our sex. How little they understand it! They, of course, are Christians, enlightened, and we "poor, benighted Mormons." They profess to believe in Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David, Solomon, &c. They are held up as examples of faith, virtue, wisdom, and "men after God's own heart," and yet these pious Christians and ministers turn up their eyes in holy horror at polygamy—but what was Solomon, David, Abrahan, &c.? Polygamists. They of course do not understand the matter, and would not, upon reflection, want a place with Lazarus in Abraham's bosom. Well, I suppose they must have their own way, and we ours. I certainly am not envious of their religious morality, conjugal felicity, (?) or happiness, but could join heartily in the Church of England prayer—"From such evils, corruptions, covetousness, and broils, good Lord, deliver us." With all their exclamations about the valley, you might take a winnowing machine, and you would have to labor hard and long before you could sift from these dense masses of corruption the amount of virtue, purity, integrity, truthfulness, and social happiness, that we have in the Valley. But apropos to this. Now, my dear Mrs.——, let me ask you to be as faithful with me about your country as I have been about mine—although (do not mistake me) there is much good here mixed with the evil; but the evil greatly predominates. Now, how is it with you? Are your Southern people better than our Northern? The editor of the Charleston Courier, and others of your southern gentry, have passed some rather severe strictures upon us. Are they so much better than our Eastern friends, or is it popular to say one thing and practice another? Are the characters in "Uncle Tom" faithfully delineated? Is it true that your colored demoiselles have to share the affections of their white Lords? If so, they are worse than our Northern gents, for they do confine themselves to their white establishments. By the bye, where do your mulattoes, creoles, quadroons, &c., come from? Is it a freak of nature, or nature's law? Do men, after breaking their marriage vows, and dishonoring their wives, acknowledge their posterity? or have they the meanness to try to cover their infamy by selling their posterity? Or further, do they keep their own children for their slaves? You will say I am very curious. Why, I may turn authoress one of these times, and may need an answer to these from a Southern lady, as so many statistics.

* * * * * * * *

Please write on the receipt of this, and let me know how you fare; for I need not here state that anything pertaining to your welfare and happiness will always be acceptable to your friend.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

NOTICE.

I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware, and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at

ST. LOUIS PRICES.

mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

TO EMIGRANTS.

J D HARPER. T J HARPER.

AT the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especialy of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we willl sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.

mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

UTAH TERRITORY.

Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,

DEALERS IN

GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L K & Co.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by

ALFRED PERSEY,

St. Louis, Mo.

The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

BLACKSMITHING.

T. S. ABURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommmendation.

Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb. 1855. [mar 3, 15 3m.

D. G. TUTT. J. F. BAKER.

TUTT & BAKER,

WHOLESALE GROCERS,

FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.

WESTON, MO.

Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.

March 3, 1855. 15 3m

J. B. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.

EVANS & MITCHELL,

MERCHANTS,

At Weston, Missouri,

HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.

STORAGE AND OUTFITS.

LEWIS N. REES,

Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,

IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pirtols, Buoy-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.

Groceries and Provisions.

Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.

He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Heningcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 15 3m

G. M. & A. FISHER,

Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,

ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, A Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as And-Irons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.

They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 15 3m

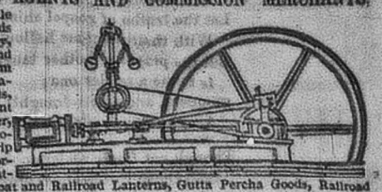
PHIL. ROCHILD & CO.,

HAVE constantly on hand in Kansas, Mo., a full supply of Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Groceries, Gutta Percha Goods, Provisions, Tinware, &c., which they will sell on as liberal terms as they can be bought for in Upper Missouri. [mar 3, 15 3m.

M. C. MOIES & CO.,

NO. 16 MAIN STREET,

GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.



FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.

N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.

Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,

Residence, No. 328 South Side Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets:

Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,

MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also, Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice.

All the above articles are warranted of the best American Iron.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!

O. H. COGSWELL,

At his Old Stand in Independence, Mo.,

WILL have on hand at the commencement of the out-fitting season, a large and well selected stock of outfitting goods for the Plains to Great Salt Lake City, and will furnish them on reasonable terms. He will keep constantly on hand, Flour, Bacon, Sugar, Coffee, Rice, Dried Beef, Hard Bread, and in a word, every article necessary for crossing the Plains. He flatters himself from his knowledge in that department of his business, having been a trader for the last four years in Great Salt Lake City, and his frequent passing over the Plains, that he will be well prepared to give general satisfaction.

And to the Salt Lake emigration he would respectfully say that Independence possesses advantages in point of location for out fet directly, and for procuring Wagons, Stock, Provisions, &c., that no other place above St. Louis possesses. O. H. COGSWELL.

REFFERENCES.

ERASTUS SNOW, St. Louis, ORSON SPENCER, Cincinnati, O.,
MILO ANDRUS, St. Louis, EL. JOHN TAYLOR, New York,
CHAS. BASSETT, Springfield, O., JOHN HOW, St. Louis,
Feb. 24] WOODS, CHRISTY & CO., St. Louis. [14 3m.

BOOTS AND SHOES of every variety can be had at O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

LEATHER of all descriptions, for Saddlery, Harness, and Shoemaking purposes to be had at O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

OUT-FITTING FOR THE PLAINS.

THOSE crossing the Plains this Spring, will find it to their interest to call on the undersigned, where they will find a general assortment of every thing necessary in out-fitting for such expeditions.

Goods received and stored upon liberal terms.

Feb. 24, 14 3m A. G. BOONE, Weston, Mo.

OUT-FITTING.

R. CHARLES takes this method of informing the emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand a full supply of Groceries, Builder's Hardware, Cutlery, Boots and Shoes, and all grades of staple Dry Goods, which he will sell at wholesale and retail. Thankful for former patronage, he solicits a further trial on the levee Kansas, Mo.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

BLACKSMITHING AND GRAZING.

THE Subscriber has a Blacksmith Shop, lots on the prairie, and has Cattle for sale two miles from Westport, on the State line. His former business transactions with the Latter-day Saints and other Emigration having given general satisfaction, he solicits a trial in future.

Feb. 24, 14 3m* J. W. MARRION, Kansas, Mo.

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.

THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo.

Feb. 24, 14 3m* JAMES W. ELLIS.

BENJ. CROWTHER,

DEALER in Hardware, Table and Pocket Cutlery, Mechanics' Tools of every description, consisting in part of Axes of all kinds, Augers do., Awls, patent, with bitts, Bench Screws, Chisels of every description, Auger and Chisel Handles. Also, Blacksmith's Tools of every description, together with a large stock of Miscellaneous articles, such as Brushes, Paints, Japanned Tin Ware, Spoons, Rifles, Guns, Pistols, and other articles too numerous to mention, in fact, everything used by Mechanics, Housekeepers and the public in general, all of which will be sold low for cash. A liberal discount made to mechanics buying by the quantity. Call and see. Store situated south side of the Court House.

BENJAMIN CROWTHER,

Feb. 24, 14 3m. Independence, Jackson Co., Mo.

OUT-FITTING!

M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Groceries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

EMIGRANTS.

THE Subscribers would say to the Emigration for the West, that they are engaged in buying and selling stock of all kinds. Orders for Horses, Mules or Cattle will meet with prompt attention. Persons wishing to purchase would do well to call on me before purchasing elsewhere.

WM. LIGGIT,
WM. IRWIN,
Independence, Mo.

Refer to J. HOCKIDAY, O. H. COGSWELL. [Feb. 24, 14, 1m*

ISAAC HOCKADAY,

DEALER in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps and Ready Made Clothing, together with a large and general assortment of out-fitting goods of every description, suitable for California, Salt Lake, and New Mexico outfits.

Store north side of Public Square, Independence, Mo.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

FLOUR AND MEAL.

THE Subscriber takes this method of saying to the Emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand large quantities of Flour and Meal, which he will sell at as reasonable rates as such articles can be bought for in the up country, at his mill, known as the Jackson Mills, near Independence. He will also have a large supply in Independence, Mo.

THOMAS PITCHER.

REFERENCES: WILSON & PARKER; JESSE H. NOWLAND.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

CATTLE.

THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all of which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. B. & J. H. FLEMING,

Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.

REFERENCE.

ISAAC HOCKADAY, Independence, O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HUDDS & MULLEN, Wayne City.

N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon, and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood of Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WAGONS AND YOKES.

YOUNG & SMITH are prepared to fill orders for Wagons and Ox Yokes to the Western Emigration. They have on hand a large lot the best Wagons made in the Western Country, and can supply any number of Yokes that may be desired. They will deliver their Yokes or Wagons in lots at any point on the river from Independence to Leavenworth City.

Independence, Mo., 1855. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WM. & JOHN McCOY,

Independence, Mo.,

DEALERS in Staple and Fancy Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Camp Equippage and Outfitting Goods of every description.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

S. P. KELLER,

DEALER IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,

HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE, Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,

Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot

No. 27 Commercial Street,

WESTPORT, MO.

Feb. 24, 14 3m*

C. E. KEARNEY. W. B. BERNARD.

KEARNEY & BERNARD,

METROPOLITAN STORE,

WESTPORT, MO.,

DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,

Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

JOEL WALKER. W. H. CHICK.

WALKER & CHICK,

Receiving, Forwarding, and Commission Merchants,

KANSAS, MO.

Feb. 24, 1855. [14 3m.

RIDDLESBARGER & CO.,

WHOLESALE GROCERS,

Commission and Forwarding Merchants,

AT KANSAS, MO.,

HAVING done a heavy business in our line for the emigration of 1854, we would respectfully solicit further patronage. [Feb 24, 14 3m

PROVISIONS AND OUTFITTING.

H. M. HUDSON & CO., Corner of Main and Water streets, under the printing office, Kansas Mo., have constantly on hand a large supply of Provisions and Outfitting Goods, and having done business in their line at this place for some years with the Western Emigration, they earnestly solicit a share of their patronage this season. [Feb 24, 14 3m.

H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.

NORTHRUP & CHICK,

KANSAS, MISSOURI,

WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.

We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.

Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

Poetical Department.

"THY WILL BE DONE."

Let the scholar and divine
  Tell us how to pray aright;
Let the truths of gospel shine
  With their precious hallowed light
But the prayer a mother taught,
  Is to me a nobler one;
Eloquent, and spirit-fraught
  Are the words "Thy will be done."

Though not fairly understood,
  Still those words at evening hour
Imply some being great and good,
  Of mercy, magesty, and power.
Bending low an infant knee,
  And gazing on the setting sun,
I thought that orb his home must be,
  To whom I said "Thy will be done."

I have searched the sacred page,
  I have heard the godly speak;
But the lore of Saint or Sage—
  Nothing holier can teach.
Pain has wrung my spirit sore,
  But my soul the triumph won;
When the anguish that I bore,
  Only breathed "Thy will be done."

They have served in pressing need,
  Have nerved my heart in every task,
And howsoere my heart may bleed,
  No other balm of prayer I ask.
When my whitened lips declare
  Life's last sands have almost run;
May the dying breath they bare,
  Murmer forth "Thy will be done."

UTAH—Its Geography, Climate, Soil, Productions, Aboriginal Tribes, &c.

We find in the Galveston (Texas) Journal, a series of letters from the Hon. S. M. Blair, who is now laboring in that State, containing discriptions of Utah—its climate, soil, productions, geography and aboriginal tribes.

Believing that our readers feel an interest in every thing relating to that new and flourishing Territory, which is by many of them regarded as their future home, we present in this weeks issue the first of this series of letters, and shall probably continue them in succeeding numbers:

"Messrs. Editors:—At your request I will give you a short but impartial description of the Territory of Utah, alias Deseret, and familiarly as well as properly called the 'Mountain State,' (although in embryo) in which I will notice the soil and its agricultural properties together with the peculiarities of its inhabitants called, familiarly, 'Mormons,' properly Latter-day Saints, together with its Indian population, and especially the tribe called Utahs, and of their principal chief, Walker, and the wars with the Indians and Mormons.

"The Territory of Utah lies emphatically on the tops of the mountains, and includes what is called the Great Basin, so named from the fact that her waters do not run out from her borders neither into the Pacific or Atlantic Oceans—her seas or gulfs. That particular portion of this Territory which invites or calls the attention of the world at present, which I shall first notice, is Great Salt Lake City, situated in the northeast part of the Territory, in latitude 40° 45' and longitude 111° 26', altitude 4,000 feet, and distance from the nearest point of navigation on the Missouri river, Council Bluff city, 1,000 miles. A great portion of this distance is an arid plain only differing from the desert of California in that it is abundantly supplied with water. The route which the road passes over, lies up the great Platte river for a distance of some 680 miles, at which point it crosses the north fork of Platt and above Laramie fork, upon which Fort Laramie is situated, some 180 miles from which crossing it assumes a more westerly course until it strikes the Sweet-water, along the banks of which it meanders until the great Rocky Mountains are passed; leaving them in your rear with all ranges of the Wind-river chain on your north or the Medicine Bow on the south, at the South Pass, from which point you leave the Atlantic waters and cross in a westerly direction the upper waters of the Colorado of the west, being Green river and other streams, until you reach Fort Bridger or Fort Saply, a Mormon settlement at the east base of the Warsatch range, and within 113 miles of the Great Salt Lake City, through and over which range of mountains you must pass, following the canons, or deep gorges and defiles of the mountains, or the beds of the small streams until you enter the valley of the Great Salt Lake, when all at once arises to the traveller's vision a beautiful valley, and in the distance may be seen the bosom of the blue and briny waters of Great Salt Lake, to the west at a distance of some twenty-five miles, but after descending the table lands for a short distance which border the valley, (upon which graze thousands of cattle, horses, sheep and goats, tended by shepherd boys as of old,) may be seen the beautiful city of the Saints, which is situated on the table land at the western base of a range of the Warsatch mountains and directly on city Creek, and more definitely known in the range as under 'Ensign Peak' and mount 'Brigham and Heber,' whose tops have been covered with perpetual snow for centuries past, and on whose bare bosom the Lamanite (or Indian) has not rested his weary limbs since his fore-fathers slept who talked with the 'Great Spirit.' The city is laid out on a square with streets running at right angles eight rods in width dividing the mean area or plat into 10 acre lots which are subdivided into 1 1-4 acre lots. the whole plat being traversed at right lines by aqueducts, through which flows City Creek water, which is fed by springs and the continual melting of the snow on the high peaks and mountain range.—Thus every family is supplied with an abundance of the purest and coolest running water in the world, from which they not only supply their domestic wants; but also, they take it to irregate their gardens, fields, &c. Upon approaching the city the traveler will be struck with surprise to find a high wall and deep ditch surround the place, over which he cannot pass, neither can he enter the city only through the 'gates;' otherwise he might be caught and accused of being a thief or robber.' On entering the city, the first thing that will possibly attract the particular attention of the stranger, is the great regularity observed in buildings, not in point of architecture but of order. The city at present is the temporary capitol of the Territory and the Legislature holds its sessions in the Old State House of 'Deseret'—a building that would do credit to any Western State, and which is the principal public edifice in the city for State purposes. There is, besides the 'Social Hall,' (a fine building) many other buildings for public service and amusements, recreation, &c., of various kinds all of which are aside from the splendid 'Tabernacle' of the Lord, reared for and dedicated to hold public worship in, which is situated within the walls of the Temple lot, which is walled in with stone and adobies and when completed will be 24 feet in height, 17 feet of which I presume is now complete, and within the walls of which the foundation is excavated and the corner stones laid of another Temple to be built unto the name of the Lord God of Abrahaun, Isaac and Jacob; which, when completed, will be the third that the 'cap stone' has been placed upon by the Latter-day Saints in the last few years.—Near to, and adjoining the Temple lot, is the large public buildings, consisting of the Lord's Store House, from which the poor are fed, and with the public work shops, cover a large area of ground.

"The city contains between 10 and 15,000 inhabitants, mostly natives of the Middle and Western States, as well as quite a respectable number from the East and South, as well as from Canada, England, and indeed all Europe is fairly represented, and the 'balance of mankind.' The manners and customs of the people (except in immorality,) is the same as you will find in the States from whence they came, except, as I observed, in morality; for I assure you that you might dwell in that city for a year, and never see a man drunk, or hear the name of God taken in vain; or a loafer or idler seen strolling through the streets or in mischievous groups about the corners or stores—there being no grog-shops or dram-sellers allowed in the city (only for medical purposes) there is no place of resort, if perchance an idler on his way to the 'Golden Region' should feel disposed to break the rules of the hive. The city contains nineteen wards, over which, as in days of old, Bishops are called to preside, and in each of which wards, there is a school-house.—The buildings are partially finished, the wings being the first part finished, which are 25 by 30 feet; the center or main building being 44 by 50 feet deep, with a basement and two upper stories; and with the wings and breadth of the main building, presents a front of 100 feet, from which you may perceive, large foundations are laid for the education of the rising generation. These schools are free to all, and in them are taught all the usual branches of English education, from whence they may and can graduate to higher schools, as we have a University endowed and officered by professors of every branch known to the present age; and I will here observe that this pattern and rule of building houses for education extends throughout the whole Territory, as far as settled, (400 miles,) as well as in South California. From the altitude of the 'inclined plain' of Table Land, on which the city of Great Salt Lake is situated, it gives the traveler an expansive view of the valley that lies south of the Great Salt Lake, between the range of mountains, whose peaks are draped in snow and veiled in the clouds, glisten high above the flourishing city at their base. These are heights which man's unholy foot has not polluted; their fair bosoms have never been stained with blood, and God has yet in our native land, Columbia, free and equal, a mount like Sinai of old, where he can descend and speak through his prophets to the children of men. This range is the eastern wall or boundary of the valley, at the south end of which it forms a concave, uniting with the most western range of the Nevada, which latter extends north to the south end of the Great Salt Lake, forming abrupt and precipitous ledges of rocks of several hundred feet in height. Directly in front is a large rock known to the inhabitants as the 'black rock,' distant from the city 21 miles. This spot is frequented by thousands annually for bathing, amusement, and recreations of a general character. The area of the valley we have now described is about 30 miles square (being as I will hereafter inform you only a portion of Great Salt Lake Valley,) and through which runs the beautiful river of Jordan (so named by the Pioneers.)

"Of the soil, its quality, products, grass, tribes, mode of agriculture, health and climate, &c., I will speak of in my next.

SCENE IN A DRY GOODS STORE.

A correspondent of the Chicago Press describes an incident witnessed by him in a dry goods store in that city, which it will do nobody any harm to copy. He says:

Several ladies came in and were greeted with much attention and deference, as from their appearance it might readily be inferred that they had money in their purse. One girl, poorly clad, shrinking and diffident in her manners, and whose appearance told as plainly as spoken words that she had but little money to spend and that it must be made to go as far as possible, came in and approached the counter. The articles desired were called for, and the poor girl seemed hesitating as to whether she should purchase or not—most probably calculating in her mind how far her scanty means would allow her to go, when she was accosted by the creature acting in the capacity of clerk, (who was a stout, French-appearing tailors' and jewellers' walking sign,) with the following very gentlemanly language: "Well, do you want to buy this? Guess you don't want anything. How much money have you got? Don't believe you've got any money.—Guess you don't trade this time," continued the chuckle-headed, unprincipled scoundrel. I watched the girl, who still remained and made her purchases, although she had been most grossly insulted. The selections showed that the saving of means was her aim, and that she got only what could not be dispensed with. If the proprietors of that store had done their duty, they would have opened their door and shoved that clerk into the street, and each step should have been hastened by the close proximity of a boot-toe to the latest portion of the retreating puppy. How long will merchants continue to keep such apes behind their counters, to insult the daughters of toil, who are far more worthy of respect, and more noble in their position, than he who is willing to confine his intellect and shape his capacities to the length and breadth of a piece of tape, rather than live by noble, honest toil?

GAMBLING HELLS IN NEW YORK.

A writer in the N. Y. Tribune says:

I notice in your columns that among the gamblers arrested during the past few days "were Patrick Hearn and a man named Hall, and ten keepers of houses of prostitution." Who would have thought that these huge and impudent gambling establishments were ever going to be assailed, after the long impunity they have enjoyed at the hands of our police? The chief of them are situated in Broadway, directly in the face of public travel; they are furnished in the most luxurious and seductive manner; they are each maintained at a cost which would speedily ruin any honest citizen; they are fed and fattened and pampered on the tears of broken-hearted fathers and mothers, on the anguish of wives, on the sighs of kindred, on the desolation of all the virtues and pleasant charities that sweeten home, on the blight of useful innocence, on the corruption of manhood, on the dishonor of old age. Hell has no more infallible vestibules on earth than the identical dens which yawn in Broadway, between Houston and Prince streets, and Prince and Spring. The buildings run back to Mercer street, so that the timidest adventurer need not risk observation, in going in or coming out.

Merchants from Pearle street, brokers from Wall street, men whose equipages may be daily seen bearing their unsuspecting wives and children past the doors, where shame and sorrow are lying in wait to devour them; professional men, men that you would never suspect of secret iniquity, men who go to church on Sunday, who give liberally to benevolent enterprises, who are affable and courteous and kind to all the world; these are the sort of people you see in these haunts, mixed up with plausible knaves of every complexion, but all alike intent upon the surest means of wringing from them their very last farthing. Here you see broken down gentlemen, men who have been formerly fleeced and cleaned out by the keeper of the house, and who do not disdain now to purchase a bare and base subsistence from him by attracting others to his den. Here you see, in short, human nature in every stage of degeneration, from the thoughtless boy just come into the possession of property, and who is willing to bleed profusely if only he may thereby purchase the prestige of a man of the world, down to the confirmed and cruel blackleg, beside whose heart that of your mere miser glows warm with heavenly truth and pity.

A Pill for the Russians.—A further trial of the sea service mortar, weighing more than five tons, throwing a 13-inch shell of 200lbs. weight, with a charge of 20lbs. of powder, fitted on the principle proposed by Captain Julius Roberts, of the Royal Marine Artillery, has taken place at Shoeburyness, in the presence of several scientific officers connected with the service. This trial has fully established the use of this mortar (fitted as it is) for batteries, trenches, or any land fortifications, as well as afloat. Twenty rounds were fired most successfully, and in every respect satisfactorily; the former inefficiency of the muzzle lashing-straps having been effectually remedied, 40 seconds only being required to load and fire each shell. It was found, after 20 rounds, that the body of the mortar was not in the least heated by quick firing.—[Loud. Weekly Dispatch.

A Devil Incarnate.—An individual was arrested in Pittsburgh, one day last week, for attempting to pierce the body of his mother with a red-hot poker. He richly merits the roasting that he is sure to receive hereafter.

The more we serve God, the better we serve ourselves

A Wholesome Thought.

"Bring hither the poor, the maimed, the halt, and the blind," if you would have them healed of their many infirmities. We boldly and fearlessly assert that the Mustang Liniment will positively cure Rheumatism. Let any who are afflicted with that most painful complaint try it thoroughly according to the directions, and if they are not cured, we will give them their money back. What more can we say? It will also cure the Piles. Thousands have tried it—and all were cured. Bruises, Sprains, Sores, or Eruptions, fade away as if touched by the magician's wand. Its application to a Burn or Scald acts like "oil upon the troubled waters." The tempest of pain and agony is soon spilled, and the patient is hushed to quiet and peaceful slumbers. "There is a balm for every wound," and that balm is the Mustang Liniment. Everybody that sells medicines keeps it for sale. "Hold your Horses," and if they are crippled, galled, or sprained, use the Mustang Liniment.

See advertisement in another column. [8 2m.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.

J. M'GREGOR,

WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,

75 MARKET STREET.

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may favor him with their patronage.

N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

75 Market Street,

(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)

Feb. 17, 13 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

J. PARSON,

163 Morgan Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.

A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12t.

ELLISON & APPLETON,

DEALERS IN

NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,

CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.

Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,

Wholesale and Retail.

MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.

Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.

Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,

KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES

AT WHOLESALE PRICES,

Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,

OF THE BEST QUALITY,

At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at

NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAMS their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,

St. Louis, Mo.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

A. DAFT,

DEALER IN

NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.

159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.

Feb. 10, 1855. [12 6m*

NICHOLSON'S

TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,

GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,

NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

J. G. SIMPSON. D. CAMERON.

GREAT SALE.

"AUCTION GOODS"

FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THE Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time submitted to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞ The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below Manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,

No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.

Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

NICHOLSON'S FRANKLIN

TEA AND COFFEE WAREHOUSE.

NO. 29 FRANKLIN AVENUE.

NEAR FOURTH STREET.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the public that they have now opened the above establishment, where may be found a large stock of fresh imported Teas of every variety of quality and price, selected in part, at the regular Eastern Tea sales, and from the stocks of the largest importing houses in the United States. We therefore feel confident that we can supply those favoring us with their patronage with Teas of unfeinable excellence for strength and flavor, and at prices which cannot fail to give satisfaction.

Also an assortment of choice Coffees, Fresh Roasted, and Ground, by steam, on the premises. The arrangements for Roasting are such as to prevent the escape of that volatile oil with which the berry is impregnated, and to which it principally owes its tonic and other medicinal qualities.

We also keep constantly on hand a full assortment of Fresh Ground Spices, warranted. Our machinery is equal, if not superior, to any west of New York, and our knowledge practical; therefore, we pledge ourselves to suit in all cases, or the packages may be returned.

N. B. All packages marked from Franklin Tea and Coffee Warehouse are warranted pure. Chemists and others are challenged to analyze. NICHOLSON & CO.

Additional Sundries for Sale at the Franklin Tea Warehouse.

Pure Wines and Liquors, in bottles; pure old Brandies, very superior, various vintages; pure Old Port, Sandeman; pure Old Port, Victoria; fine old Sherry and Madeira Wines; Claret Wines, assorted qualities; pure French Cordials, assorted; Scotch Whisky, Scotch Ale and London Porter; Old Bourbon and Monongahela Whiskys, &c., &c.

Fruits—Raisins, Almonds, Oranges, Lemons, Currants, assorted Fresh Figs, &c. Chocolate, bitter and sweet; Broma, Cocoa; Preserves of all kinds; Jellies and Jams, Rice, Pearl Barley, Pearl Sago, Tapioca, Becker's Farina, Saleratus, Arrow Root, Fancy Soaps, Bird Seed, &c.

Our Coffees may be found at the following places:

MR. JAS. H. FORBES, corner Eleventh and Market sts,
MR. JOHN NICHOLSON, Fifth street, South Market,
MR. D. NICHOLSON, corner of Fourth and Market.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

R. TORR,

151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,

ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.

WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.

Families Supplied at their Residences.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.

T. J. ALBRIGHT,

NO. 27 MAIN STREET,

St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,

27 Main Street, East Side,

Sign of the Gilt Gun.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!

A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of

MAN OR ANIMALS,

Requiring an External Application.

Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of

RHEUMATISM

than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.

G. W. WESTBROOK:—

Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,

J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—

Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,

JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:

Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.

I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out. I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.

Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New Yook.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first shipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.

I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Croton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.

GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS

have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:

Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.

The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.

G. W. WESTBROOK,

(Successor to A. G. BRAGG & CO.,)

Originator and Sole Proprietor.

Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.

B. FORMON,

TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at

126 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House,

St. Louis, Missouri.

Jan. 13, 1855. [8 3m*

DR. WHITE,

HOMŒOPATHIST.

Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.

Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!

VAN, THE TEA MAN!

RETAIL DEALER,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.

Dec. 23. [6 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERRE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past years, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.

Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERRE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:

50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 pockets old government Java;
180 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERRE.

Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,

IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS

IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY

NO. 147 MAIN STREET,

Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,

ST. LOUIS.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,

WAGON MANUFACTURER,

Corner of Broadway and Lubeaume Steert,

OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.

NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

M'CLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonder ful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. McLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.

Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.

Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞ For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.

T. W. HOIT.

Nov. 22, '54. [12m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY

AND

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

Established A. D. 1840.

A. P. LADEW & CO.,

TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,

31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,

PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.

Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.

Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
  The passing crowd admired;
A whispering maiden said—
  See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
  How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
  With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
  As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
  On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
  With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
  Than yonder lustrous jet!"

Its fame by all was raised;
  His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
  He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
  And win an equal fame,
Your Hats at Broadway buy;
  There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,

OF CORINTHIAN HALL,

297 BROADWAY,

ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,

FOR THE SALE OF

FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,

FOR $3 EACH!

FOR A

LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR A

FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR A

FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR AN

INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

297 Broadway;

☞ BIG HAT.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,

Practical Dyers and Scourers,

No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Pine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st, between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,

Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.

COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 133 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.

Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,

LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,

No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set, Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tinners' Shears, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.

Nov. 18, '54.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, MARCH 17, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XVII.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Mailed to Subscribers at $2 per annum.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.

Advertisements inserted on accommodating terms.

All Communications relating to the LUMINARY should addressed to the Editor, Post-paid.

From the Deseret News.

Discourse by Elder Orson Hyde, Tabernacle, Sept. 24th, 1854.

Being called upon this morning to occupy a portion of the time, I gladly arise to do so.

I am not in the habit of making many apologies, for I intend to give you the best I have on hand, and also such as may be given me, during the remarks I may make.

While I attempt to edify you upon some of the principles of salvation and eternal life, I desire an interest in your prayers, that I may speak, not according to the wisdom that man deviseth, but according to that which cometh down from above.

As a foundation for some remarks that I will make, I will read a portion of the Epistle of Jude, 3d verse:—"Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints."

Were I capable this morning of addressing you upon subjects that were not understood by you, that you do not comprehend, there would remain a doubt in your minds with regard to the truthfulness of what I say; but if I address you upon subjects with which you are familiar, impressing them upon your minds perhaps more forcibly than they have been for some time past—if I refresh your minds with familiar things, you will then know and understand.

The old book, the Bible, which I have read so many times, does not lose its interest by once or twice perusing, but I take it up and read it over, and over again, and my mind is refreshed; which is a matter of satisfaction and comfort to me. So it is with the principles of our religion; though we have often heard them, yet we desire to hear them still, and they are of that peculiar nature that they do not lose their interest to those who are seeking for eternal life.

Jude speaks of a common salvation; that it was not only necessary to write unto them of the common salvation, but while he was doing so, that he should exhort them to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. Now I know it is too often the case, when we speak of salvation, we speak of a state of glory to be attained in the eternal world; that the matters and affairs of this world are of but little consequence, of little importance, but we are looking yonder in the heavens for our reward, for our everlasting inheritance.

I look at it in this light. The husbandman may plant seed in the earth, but if he all the time looks to the golden harvest and pays no attention to the cultivation of the young plants on their progress to perfection, he will not reap the reward he anticipated. Then it becomes necessary for him, and it is to his interest to attend to the cultivation of the plant in its progressive stages, and encourage its growth.

Just so it is with us. It is for us to attend to the things that are present; the things that are past we are to forget, particularly those things that are of an unpleasant character; and the things that are in future are not in our hands, and subject to our control, but they are in the hands of the Almighty, and with him they are secured. It is the present then, with which we have to do—with the things that are immediately before us; that is, I believe, the common salvation. I do not pretend to say what the Apostle had his eye particularly fixed upon, but I shall pursue this subject as it appears unto me.

Another thing I will suggest in the outset. It is often the case that we hear men and women talk about temporal things and about spiritual things. What are temporal things, and what are spiritual things? Can you tell me what spiritual things are? Says one, "it is a joyful feeling, that buoys us above the cares, and anxieties of this world. Spiritual things are our hope of a glorious inheritance in the Kingdom of God in the future. Temperal things are the things we eat, drink, wear and use in divers ways to shelter and sustain this mortal body while it remains a tabernacle for our spirits."

I look at temporal and spiritual things in the same point of light; they are to me all spiritual; I know no difference. The hand that has prepared a place in the celestial kingdom for them that are worthy of it, has also formed the earth and caused it to produce food for every living thing. We behold in the starry firmament; the worlds that are revolving continually around us, are made by the same Omnipotent hand, and they are all his, and they are all spiritual, because they are as eternal as God himself, for there can be no annihilation of matter; consequently they are eternal; and nothing we may conceive or imagine of more refined substances can do more than continue forever.

Everything God has created and made, even the hairs of our heads that fall to the ground do not escape his notice. The Almighty has not organized matter as a mere plaything, of a temporary existence, and then plunge it into the regions of utter annihilation; but everything he has done is like himself, eternal, and everything eternally witnesses the goodness of the Supreme Ruler, for all his works shall praise him. If his works are to perish, where is the monument of his labor? There will be none. What he does is eternal, and remains an eternal witness of what he has done, and so his works eternally praise him.

But we want to come to this common salvation. It is said somewhere, whether in the Bible or some other place, I do not pretend to say; but if it is not in the Bible it is none the less true; that "self preservation is the first law of nature." I have reflected this morning a short time upon our condition. I contemplate the circumstances under which the Pioneers came to this valley—the circumstances that attended the early settlements, and exertions made here to procure the necessaries of life.

I was not one among the honored company that first led the way to this distant region—that first plowed up the sterile soil of this valley, but I was engaged in some other country. Indeed while Pioneers were on their way to this land—while they were engaged in that arduous enterprise, I was perhaps upon the banks of the Danube, or might possibly be in England, or in Asia, I do not now recollect where I was; but I was in those eastern regions, bearing my testimony, perhaps among the Austrians, Russians or Turks, among their consuls, and agents, bearing my testimony to them of the things to come. Perhaps some in those nations may now remember that an humble servant of God at a certain time bore his testimony among the people in that country, which is the most beautiful of God's creation, spreading out in valley or plain, and which perhaps, is now laid desolate, and drenched in human blood.

I was elsewhere when this valley was settled.—How was it? Behold when they arrived here, all they had to subsist upon, until they raised it from the soil, was in their wagons. There were no crops to come to; there was nothing provided to cheer them at the end of their long and toilsome journey; and the skeletons of cattle might be seen walking to and fro without anything provided to feed them upon through a long winter. And then when they had plowed up the soil, and sowed seed in the earth, and the fields began to show an evidence of a future supply, the crickets came in millions from the mountains, and had nearly devoured all that grew; everything that germinated in the shape of food for man was eaten by the insects.

But before they had completed their work of destruction, the hand of Providence prepared agents, and sent them to destroy the destroyer. A circumstance that was rare, one that was never known to exist before, and never since to any extent; behold the gulls came in swarms, and as clouds, and eat up the crickets, and checked them in their destructive career; and there was just enough saved to feed the hungry with a scanty morsel.

There are many before me this morning who can no doubt remember well when their meal bags were perfectly empty, with only a distant prospect of their being replenished; and when a cow was slaughtered, rare as it was, they eat everything; even the hide was boiled, dressed, and eaten, and everything else external and internal, that possibly could be eaten was eaten; there was nothing lost.

One man said to me, "I labored hard under the pangs of hunger to put up a little adobie cabin and prepare to live, and at the same time my wife and children, pale with want, were ranging the hills and benches to find thistles and roots to eat, which we boiled in the milk of the remaining cows the wolves had not eaten."

Those who have come here since the valleys have become a little fattened, think it hard if they cannot get what they want, and immediately enjoy a fulness with those who have borne the burden and heat of the day. They think it hard if they have to pass through a close place, and have to struggle a little to obtain the comforts of life. But look back to the early settlements of this place, when nothing but destruction stared its inhabitants in the face, what surety had they from the savage that was in their doors and in their tents? Here was the hostile and blood-thirsty savage, prowling around, and the early settlers knew not what hour he might pounce upon them; they were out of doors; they had not a house to live in, or to form a defence, much less a fort to protect them, until they were able to throw up something of a temporary character to shield them from the attacks of the wild man of the mountains.

This is a little of the early history of this settlement. We have prospered; we have had accessions to our numbers; to be sure we have had trouble, and difficulty with the savages in various ways; but in the midst of it all we have arisen from the germ; and the tree has grown up, and begins to shoot forth its branches.

It is not the inhabitants of the little settlement in Salt Lake valley alone that are now embraced within the walls of this Tabernacle; but three hundred miles to the south, and two hundred miles to the north, large settlements have sprung up. In the midst of these circumstances, the hand of God has been with us as a people, and prospered our labors abundantly; and I feel proud to meet you this morning in such comfortable circumstances; you all appear comfortably clad, and the bloom of health and the smile of contentment sits triumphantly upon your countenances. The hand of the Almighty is with you, to cheer, and gladden you in the midst of all difficulties, and the praise is due unto him; for he has blessed our labors, and enabled us to acquire these comforts we enjoy; and let me say, they are the staff, and bulwark of our common salvation, for it is our lives we wish to prolong on the earth.

Why do we wish to do so in this toilsome and troublesome world? Why not close our mortal career, and our spirits go home to God who gave them? Because we have not done our work. It is said the wicked shall not live half their days; if they did they would only multiply their race until the principles of wickedness would become universally diffused. The Lord will give to the righteous the long end of the cord, for they shall live out their days. Then I say to the Saints, be just and true to each other, and to your God, and you will live out your days, and complete the work assigned you.

I will represent it in another point of light. Suppose a man is sent to England, or to the Continent, to Asia, Egypt, to any part of Africa, to the western islands, or to the islands of the Pacific to fulfil a mission, and he returns before he has completed it; who is ready to greet him?—who ready to welcome him, that understands his true position? He has not done his duty; he has not fulfilled his mission, and accomplished the work he was sent to do; and he returns, how? Filled with the Spirit of God? No, but with the spirit of darkness; and his testimony is powerless; he feels he has not done his duty like a faithful servant.

Then how important it is that every missionary that bears a portion of the Holy Priesthood, and this gospel to the islands of the sea, should magnify it in the eyes of the people, and before his God, and return clean in spirit and in heart; and with a Spirit to bear witness with our spirits that God is with him, and has been all the day long. He is then hailed with a joyful welcome by the servants of God in Zion.

We are all on a mission to this world. We came from yonder bright sphere, and each of us have our lots assigned us; and now if we can accomplish our mission, when we return to the bosom of our Father and God, would you not suppose we shall be hailed with one universal welcome? Yes. "Ah!" says one, "I was an hungered and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me. Verily I say unto you that inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." This is the welcome.

Then it is for us to act well our part, and perform our mission faithfully. with fidelity to God and to one another while we are permitted to dwell upon the earth. If we should not act well our part, and go home to the world of spirits, who will be ready to receive us, to extend to us the welcome hand? Every mouth is silent; no songs of praise greet the ear, or shouts of gladness to bless the heart, that a valiant soldier who has retained his laurels would receive. The unfaithful one has lost his glory, and is shorn of his laurels. What will be said to him? "Inasmuch as you knew your master's will, and did not do it, you shall be beaten with many stripes." He has gone to another society; he is not permitted to mingle with the righteous, but he must seek an asylum in another quarter.

Then remember we are missionaries sent to this lower world to accomplish a work. What is the work we are sent to accomplish? In the beginning it was said to our first parents, go forth, and multiply and replenish the earth. I have been looking about, and have seen how anxious many of our farmers are to improve their stock of cattle; to make them of better blood, and thus all the time be improving; but I very seldom have heard of man seeking to improve his own species. I wish you to think of that for a moment. I have seldom heard that subject agitated, when indeed it is the most important one that was ever investigated.

Let us go a little into the philosophy of this, and see if it can be done, as much so, as we can improve any other portion of the animal creation. It is said we bear the image of God, and now shall we dwindle down to the physical and mental degeneracy of the monkey? Shall we suffer our race to dry up like a parched reed? Let us look at this matter. The question is before you to investigate and understand.

Look around upon all the ranks of mankind, and you see different races, some of an high order of intellect, and some low and grovelling, among all the different grades and classes of the human family. Do you suppose it is so in the spirit world? These earthly tabernacles are merely temporary houses for them to dwell in—moving tabernacles; and there are thousands, and tens of thousand in the spirit world that have yet to come and take bodies here; and there are different grades of men. Some are of a high order of intellect, and others are low; some are more noble and generous, and some are less so; they all wish to take tabernacles in this world.

I will illustrate how it is possible to improve our own race. Suppose there comes into the community a noted thief and villain; where will he find a home? He will seek for a man possessing a kindred spirit; with that man he takes up his abode, for he does not find the son of peace there, but the son of villainy.

(Continued.)

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.—The Elmira (N. Y.) Republican says, a marriage took place at Horseheads last week, the parties to which were respectively about eighty-five and seventy-eight years of age, making an aggregate age of one hundred and sixty-three years.

Position and Influence of the Jews.

The existence of the Jews is the living miracle of the world. They are scattered and downtrodden, and yet according to the most accurate statistics, are as numerous as they were when they left the land of Egypt; the returns made to Bonaparte giving about three millions. Expatriated, they become citizens of the world; and wherever tolerated, they commence traffic and become thrifty. Everywhere they are at home. They may be banished, but can not be expelled; be trodden down, yet can not be crushed. Only in the United States, France, Holland, and Prussia, are they fully citizens; but in spite of British statutes, the Russian ukase, and Turkish curse, they prosper still. The great nations of antiquity, the Egyptians and Assyrians, the Romans and Saracens, as well as the modern Turks and Christians, have attempted to destroy them, but in vain; while penal laws and cruel tortures have only served to increase their number and reinforce their obstinacy.

But the Jews exist not only as a monument and a miracle; Jewish mind has exerted a powerful influence on the world. Favored by Napoleon, the Hebrew race at once developed power which had never been suspected. Soult, Ney, and Massena, (who thus altered his name from Mannassah, to escape the odium of being an Israelite,) were all Marshals of France under the eye of the greatest warrior of his age. In politics, the Jews have Metternich in Austria, D'Israeli in England, a convert to the Christian faith, while the Autocrat of Russia has had a Jew for his confidential counsellor, and Spain a Prime Minister of the same race, and Russia her Minister of Finance. In the United States, Jews begin to figure in our national councils; Mr. Yulee late member of the House, and Mr. Soule, recently Senator from Louisiana, being of the Hebrew stock. Mr. Cremieux, one of the most eminent lawyers of France, was what we should call the Attorney General upon the flight of Louis Phillippe.

In money power, the Jews hold in their hands the destiny of kingdoms and empires, whose governments become bankrupt, and their sovereigns turn beggars, at a Hebrew's nod. Half a dozen Jews can do more to preserve the peace of Europe, by sitting behind their desks, and persistently saying No! to the royal applicants for money, than all the Peace Congresses and Conventions in Christendom. The Rothchilds, the Barings, and Sir John Montefiere, are all Jews, and with their banking establishments scattered over Europe and Asia, wield a sceptre more powerful than monarchs can hold.

Coming to the literary profession, and inquiring into the lineage of many of the most distinguished scholars and men of science, we find the Jews prominent here as well as in active life. The most renowned in Astronomy have been the Jews, as the Herschels in England, and Arago in France, the Astronomer under Louis Phillippe, and who has filled the world with his fame. Those German works which are deluging the world, are for the most part the production of Christianized Jews, as those of Hengstenberg, Tholuck, Schleirmacher, Gesenius, Neander, Niebuhr, and others, whose learned treatises, Biblical criticisms, didactic theology, and general sacred literature, are found in the library of every Theological Seminary, and in the hands of every Theological student. Spinoza the famous infidel, was a Jew, and so are Ronge and Czerski, who took the lead of a new religious reformation in Germany in our day.

Such have been and are the Jews. Mysterious nation! Inexplicable enigma! A living, perpetually omnipresent miracle! A race so indomitable, so imperishable, must have been raised up and preserved for some grand purpose.

Is Louis Napoleon gone to Sebastopol?

PARIS, Thursday Evening.—The rumor which has taken everybody by surprise, which has discontented most of those who have heard it, and which has produced so great a fall in the public securities, is still persisted in. I allude to the departure of the Emperor for the Crimea. It continues to be the topic of conversation, and though there are few who still believe it, yet several who were yesterday and the day before among the most incredulous, now begin to give way. They call to mind that the Emperor is a sort of fatalist, that he is firmly persuaded that he has a mission to fulfil, that no dangers, no difficulties, are great enough to prevent that fulfilment, that he is destined to restore the glory of his name and the nation he rules over, and that the capture of Sebastopol under his own eye, and perhaps under his command, would give his reign a prestige far beyond that of Algiers, and nearly equal to that of his great uncle.

Those who reason thus, take it for granted that the Emperor is convinced that his presence at the camp would inspire his army with a confidence, a courage, and an enthusiasm which neither Russian legions nor Russian fortress could withstand. They think, moreover, that the Emperor would be proud of an occasion to prove to Europe that after having crushed unruly factions, silenced daring or insidious opposition, brought the turbulent to order, defied the dagger and pistol of the assassin—after having restored peace, re-established order, and made France prosperous at home, and respected and powerful abroad, and won to her alliance those who mistrusted or hated him—it would be no small triumph to prove that, while thousands of miles away, the machine his powerful hand has put together can go on of itself, and that while he is in his hut on the heights of the Crimea, Paris would go on quite as methodically as if he was dictating laws in the Palace of the Tuileries. On the other hand we are told by a very few that the rumor is unfounded, and that none but the most credulous swallow such a story. They admit that a journey may soon be undertaken, but they deny that its for the Crimea.

TIPPLING LADIES.

A ludicrous, but somewhat painful affair, took place a few evenings since, we understand, says the New York Day Book, in a select Female Academy up town, compromising somewhat the mistress of the establishment. Several of the pupils' mothers had dropped in, and remained to take a dish of tea, and, being short of milk, an Irish girl was sent to a neighboring grocery to get some. The tea was handed round, and some surprise was felt that the milk did not color it, but nothing was said. The pecuhar flavor, too, was remarked, but no one liked to speak; at length one lady ventured a hint, and the exclamations became general. The mistress of the academy colored very deeply, but, of course, could not account for it, and summonsed the girl.

"Bridget," said the lady, "what was that you obtained at the grocery?"

"Shure, it was milk, ma'am," the girl replied.

"Milk!" exclaimed the lady, "why smell it," handing her the jug at the same time.

"It's gin, it is, or my nose desaves me," said the girl, "but shure it's milk I asked for, and don't I go there for the same kind of milk for you, ma'am?".

It is needless to say that the indignant parents quitted the house after a very formal leave-taking, and that several young ladies were hastily summonsed home.

WONDERS OF THE TELEGRAPH.

The express train ran off the track recently, near Montgomery, Alabama, making a clean wreck of everything but the passenger cars. It was necessary to send a dispatch down the road for an extra train. The mode of telegraphic communication was somewhat curious. An operator who was on the train, cut the wires, and by manipulations from the end, contrived to send a dispatch to the office in that city. The replies he received by applying the end to his tongue. In this way several messages were accurately sent and received.—[St. Louis Intelligencer.

Astonishing as it may appear, it is most veritable that an expert operator may receive and send dispatches as described above. In the telegraphic alphabet there are but two characters, a dot and a line; the combination of these are all that is required.—When the connection is made and suddenly broken there is a dot—when the connection is for a time sustained, there is a line. But these simple facts are well understood. It is, however, a fact, not so well understood, that an experienced operator can tell by the sound of the instrument what intelligence it is conveying; in short, that he can tell what it says. He hears the raps occasioned by the formation and breaking of the circuit, and by the length of them, and the time between them, (by the clusters of raps,) can interpret the meaning. After a while he becomes so expert as actually to be able to tell, as far as he can hear the clicking of the instrument, exactly what it is talking about, provided communications are not being sent in cypher, which is a private arrangement that persons who have agreed upon it only can understand. Any set of persons may get up a cypher of their own. So perfect does the capacity of operators to understand the instrument become, that in many offices, at one time, they discarded the use of slips of paper to receive makes, and were guided by sound alone—and the slips of paper are now only tolerated in order to keep a record of the despatches right. An operator standing on the opposite side of a street from a telegraphic office, may hear and understand the news which may be flying between Halifax and New Orleans.

An operator at any time and place by breaking the wire, and taking in his mouth the end of the wire, along which despatches are passing, and letting go the other end, may catch the intelligence—i. e., he may actually understand by the sour taste in his mouth whenever the connection is formed, and the duration of that taste and its repetition, what is being transmitted, just as well as if he were seated by an instrument. The body of a man being a conductor, when the wire is placed in his mouth and his feet are on the ground, the circuit is completed as perfectly as if the wire ran directly into the ground.

Imagine the end of the broken wire in an operator's mouth, and at a station, no matter how distant, another operator with a battery and instrument. The moment the operator at the battery forms a connection, the other individual feels a sharp sting on the end of his tongue, if he touches that to the wire, which is the best way, and every time the connection is formed he experiences the same sensation. Then a sudden short sting at the tip of the tongue would pass in telegraphic alphabet as a dot, a prolonged sting count as a line. And if the operator is tired of tasting and absorbing the news that may be flying at lightning speed round the globe, he may take both ends of the broken wire in his hand and by knocking them together send whatever he wishes both ways at once, and the operators at all the offices on the line will understand what he is knocking about. If our readers do not believe this, and we expect some of them to be incredulous, let them brush up their scientific knowledge and consult with a scientific friend, or with a telegraphic operator who may be more practical than scientific, and then, being convinced of the truth of these marvellous things look upon the mysteries of the world from a new stand-point, loftier than the old.—[Cin. Commercial, 22d.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, MARCH 17, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

New Orleans, James Mcgaw.
Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Pittsburgh, Pa., B. F. Winchester.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St
New York, John Taylor.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.

American Indians---Book of Mormon---Indian Traditions and Customs---The Ten Tribes---Restoration of the House of Israel.

There has been a great deal of speculation concerning the origin of the aborigines of this country. It was thought by antiquarians, historians, and philosiphers, not long since, that they were barbarians and savages, and all their progenitors who had never attained to any degree of civilization; and when the Prophet Joseph published the first edition of the Book of Mormon, which describes the ancestors of the present race of Lamanites or American Indians, as an intelligent, well-informed, scientific and powerful nation, and that they were of the seed of Abraham. These statements were treated by the soi disant philosiphers with the greatest contempt; but time has wrought its changes upon this subject, as upon all other controverted subjects contained in that sacred Book. Facts are stubborn things and crush them as you may, they will arise again and display their potency, and when the struggle is over and the victory achieved, all the world are then willing to acknowledge it; but the battle must first be fought inch by inch, until error is destroyed and truth proclaimed the conqueror.

It was so with Christopher Columbus, whom the Lord chose and inspired to navigate the ocean, and search out this vast continent. Statesmen, philosophers, historians, in fact all the world considered him little better than a madman, and his heaven inspired convictions and statements concerning this continent, were considered little better than the wild and extravagant ravings of enthusiasm, and although he was treated with insult; but subject to bonds and imprisonment, the continent he dreamd, speculated, and philosophised upon, sustained unmoved its important position in creation, and now stands forth as mistress of the world.

Stevens, Catherwood, Humboldt and other scientific travelers have fully confirmed and demonstrated the truth of the Book of Mormon in its description of this land---its aborigines and their progenitors, and their origin. Some have supposed them to be the ten lost tribes of Israel.

We find the following upon the subject, in the True Shepherd of the Valley, a few week ago:

"The late Mr. Noah, of New York, himself a Jew, was of opinion that the 'lost ten tribes' of Israel built the cities whose ruins and grandeur strew portions of South America. The following are the chief grounds on which he founds the judgement that the American Indians are the descendants of Israel:

1. Their belief in one God.
2. In their computation of time by their ceremonies of the new moon.
3. In their division of the year into four seasons.
4. In their erection of a temple, having an ark of the covenant, and also in their erection of altars.
5. By their laws of sacrifices, ablutions, marriages, ceremonies in war and peace, prohibitions of eating certain things, by traditions, history, character, appearance, affinity of their language to the Hebrew, and finally by that everlasting covenant of heirship, exhibited in a perpetual transmission of its seal in their flesh, a custom of late relinquishment.

"This subject embodies one of the world's greatest mysteries, and it is probable that the Major was as near right as any body else ever was or ever will be.

"Wm. Penn said, in reference to the Indians---'I found them with like countenances to the Hebrew race. I consider these people under a dark night yet they believe in God and immortality without the aid of metaphysics.---They reckon by moons---they offer their first ripe fruits---they have a kind of feast of tabernacles---they are said to lay their altars with twelve stones---they mourn a year, and obey the Mosaic law with regard to separation.'

"To the above five reasons of Mr. Noah for supposing that the Indians are the decendants of the ten lost tribes, may be added a sixth, viz: that when a man has committed a murder, the brother, or those nearest of kin to the murdered man, are the avengers of his death. By the laws of Israel, under the Old Testament dispensation, those who were most nearly allied to the murdered man, were to be the avengers of his blood. And this is the law which is still observed among the aboriginal tribes of America.

No prophecies could be more litterally fulfilled than those contained in the Bible, concerning the ancient records of the tribe of Ephraim, the circumstances attending their restoration, and the results following their publication.

No document ever published to the world has been more ridiculed, despised and anathematized than this book, not because its despisers have any reasonable objections to it, for we will venture to say, nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand of those who denounce it, are totally ignorant of its contents, but their minds are warped and prejudiced by false rumors and traditions. Ask them why they do not like it, and they cannot tell. Crafty priests and wicked editors, taking advantage of the ignorant prejudices of the people, have maliciously called it blasphemious doctrine! new gospel! Mormon Bible! and it is not until its doctrines and principles become known, that the ill-founded prejudices of the people are destroyed.

The Prophet David said, truth shall spring out of the earth. Isaiah with his mind intently fixed upon the land shadowing with wings, (America,) distinctly saw and described the time, when the early inhabitants of this land, were brought low and destroyed, and when their voice or history should speak from the dust, even out of the earth, and when the words of the book should be delivered to the learned, with a request that he read. See Isaiah chapter xxix. Professor Anthon of New York, received a transcript of the words of the book, presenthim by Martin Harris; but the learned Professor virtually answered: "I cannot read it for it is sealed." The book though sealed to the learned professors of the age, as foreseen by the Prophet Isaiah, was opened to the vision and understanding of the unlearned youth---Joseph---who by the gift and power of God, translated the ancient record into his own simple and unadorned language, disclosing the history of many generations, and unfolding the principles of the everlasting gospel. Not the gospel taught by modern Christians, but that gospel that was taught by Moses, Jesus, Peter, and all the Apostles and Prophets, who have ever had a mission to preach salvation to mankind, whose uniform testimony has been, that the deaf hear, the dumb speak, the lame walk, that the sick are healed, devils cast out, and that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation, and if any man or angel preach another gospel let him be accursed.

We can endorse the foregoing, and bear testimony, that the same power and blessings attend the gospel of Jesus Christ now, as formerly, and we say moreover, the Book of Mormon is a true record of a portion of the house of Israel; and through the revelations of Jesus Christ, Israel---scattered Israel---is beginning to gather home from the nations of the earth, and is rearing temples and cities to the Most High. Judah is preparing to gather to the land of his inheritance. The ten tribes will yet be discovered, and will return with their records, and dwell with their brethren, and one King shall be King to them all. The wicked, corrupt and rebelous nations of the earth, are convulsed with revolution and destruction, and are languishing and wasting away; whilst Zion is increasing in strength, wealth, power and influence, her waste and desolate places are smiling with verdure, and blossoming as the rose, the heavens rejoice over her, wicked men and devils tremble because of her, and the pure in heart shout, Hosannah to God and the Lamb.

SAINT LOUIS CONFERENCE.

Our semi-annual Conference will be held in this city on the 6th day of April 1855, and we respectfully invite all our brethren who are interested therein to favor us with their presence on that occasion.

SALT LAKE MAIL.

We may expect the Salt Lake Mail in a few days---the following has been received from Independence, dated March 14th:

"The party which went ont with the Salt Lake Mail, in January, returned yesterday. They report that Capt. Steptoe, who was appointed Governor of Utah, has neither accepted nor declined that station yet. Brigham Young was still Governor de facto.

"They left Salt Lake City on the 8th ult. Snow very deep on the mountains, and difficult traveling. They met the party which went out in February at Scott's Bluff, getting on prosperously. They met with no disturbance from the Indians. They report that several tribes are disaffected, and threaten hostilities, but as yet no depredations have been commited. They passed through an encampment of about one hundred and fifty lodges of Sioux, without molestaaion.

"The mail party was conducted by Mr. Jesse Jones.---Col. Bridges came with the mail from Fort Laramie, and also Mr. and Mrs. Barrada, of St. Joseph.

A Steamboat on Salt Lake.

The Intelligencer of the 9th inst. contains the following upon a Steamboat on Salt Lake:

"The Mormons are about to build a Steamboat for the Salt Lake---think of that---a steamboat ploughing about, away in the bosom of the great Mountains, some thousands of feet higher than the head of our highest spires."

OFFICE REMOVED.

In the hurry of last week the following paragraph from President Richards' letter was omitted:

"Hereafter please address us at 36 Islington, Liverpool, to which place we have already partly removed. The passengers for the Siddons are being ticketed in our new office. It is a very pleasant place, in an eligible location, containing, as heretofore, our residence and office in the same building, within our present postal delivery, and about half way between our present address and St. George's Hall. It is for many reasons a very desirable situation for our business, which has become so much enlarged as to render these premises too strait for us. Perhaps you will be as kind as to notice in the Luminary, that henceforth the General Publishing and Emigration Office of the Latter-day Saints in Europe is 36 Islington, Liverpool. Yours, faithfully, F. D. RICHARDS."

SUMMARY OF NEWS FROM OUR ELDERS.

Our semi-annual conference will be held in this city on the 6th of April, when we hope to see many of our elders face to face, and to hear from their lips an account of their labors and success in traveling through the States, and in preaching the everlasting gospel to this nation, which, to use a borrowed figure, is like the gleaning of grapes after the vintage is over. En attendant we give a brief summary from their correspondence.

Elder Thos. Colbourn writes from Lyons, under date March 4th. He had visited Tom's river; found the Saints in good spirits. Fifteen members had been added to the church since his last visit, and nearly all had renewed their covenants by baptism. The branch numbers between seventy and eighty members, with good prospects of adding to the number. His health was good, and his prospects were brightening, and hopes to return home this season.

Elder William Martindale writes from Grand Bluffs, Texas, dated Feb. 7th. He had baptised an active and promising young man. The prospects in his field of labor were improving, his health was better, and he was rejoicing in the spirit of his mission.

Elder James Case writes under date of Sullivan, Ill., March 9th. Has met with considerable opposition, has baptised several, and hopes shortly to baptise more; has a firm and bold champion in his brother, G. Case, who wishes to sell out, receive the priesthood, and accompany his brother on a mission.

Elder Benjamin S. Clapp, when we last heard from him was at Troy, Freestone Co., Texas. His health was good---prospects not particularly bright, but he expected to take a company through to the valley this season, composed chiefly of his relations.

Anderson J. Gregg writes from Toms Creek, N. C. under date of Feb. 17th---had heard nothing from the church since Elder Orson Pratt left the city of Washington---had baptised four persons lately ---sends for the Deseret News, Hymn Books, Doc. and Cov.---thinks to leave with his branch for the valley in one or two years.

We have been favored by Elder Orson Spencer with a letter written by Elders Elisha Edwards and Edwin Whiting, who write from Ohio under date of March 4th. They complain of apathy and carelessness concerning religion as the prevailing spirit of the people. We give the following in their own language:

"There is almost a famine here---many of the poor are suffering for the necessaries of life---the rich are so afraid that they shall starve, that they horde up their money and food---cattle are dying by hundreds for want of food. It is now the 4th of March and the snow is 18 inches deep. Spiritualism is the order of the day here; it takes with the people like fire among the stubble."

We have received an interesting letter from Elder Orson Spencer; it came to hand too late for this number---we shall publish it in our next issue.

THE DANISH EMIGRATION.

One hundred and fifty Danish Saints were reshipped on board the "Polar Star," for Weston, Mo., and left St. Louis, March 10th, under the Presidency of Elder Ileitson, with the intention of remaining somewhere in that section of the country, until they obtain means to go through to the valley.

One hundred and seventy-five, in charge of P. O. Hanson, were shipped on the "Clara," and left this city on Monday, 12th of March, with instructions to land at Atchison. This company is bound for Salt Lake this season---all enjoyed excellent health and spirits.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We recommend our subscribers to pay the postage of their papers in advance---a saving of about 75 per cent. may thereby be made on the postage of one paper for a year. The postage of one paper per year, prepaid, is 26 cents---6 1-2 cents per quarter---the postal quarter commences the first day of April---the postage must be paid on or before the first of said month or 2 cents will be charged for each paper until the following quarter.

NEWS FROM UTAH.

The news from Utah, contained in our last, was received in California by Adams & Co's Express. The California Times and Transcript furnishes the following summary from the Deseret News of the 4th of January:

We notice that the operations of Adams & Co's Express are extended to Utah. The Deseret News congratulates the people of the Territory on the new channel of communication between them and all the world and the "rest of mankind" thus opened.

The Legislature was organized on the 11th of December, Heber C. Kimball was elected President of the Council, and Jedediah M. Grant Speaker of the House. The message of the Governor is well written and commendably brief. A considerable portion of the message is devoted to Indian affairs, and the policy of pacific means towards them is strongly advocated. He says: "I have uniformly pursued a friendly course towards them, feeling convinced that, independent of the question of exercising humanity towards so degraded and ignorant a race of people, it was manifestly more economical and less expensive to feed and clothe them than to fight them."

Speaking of the United States officers, he says: "A corps of the United States troops, under the command of Colonel Steptoe, on their way to California, are also sojourning with us during the winter. From the courteous and gentlemanly bearing of the officers, and the control which they appear to exercise over their men, I feel gratified in the belief that if their services were wanting in protecting the settlements from Indian aggression, or otherwise, it would be cheerfully extended.

"The full complement of federal officers of this territory, except an Indian agent, are now residing with us; and so far as I am informed, a good degree of cordiality and reciprocal kindness exist between them and the people of the territory."

Lieut. Col. Steptoe has advertised for proposals for the construction of a military road through to the eastern boundary of California, in the direction of the Cajon pass.

The Christmas holidays were kept up with great spirit. Balls, parties and festivity of every kind was the order of the day.

Kinney, Greene & Co. gave a complimentary party to Col. Steptoe, his officers, and citizens of Great Salt Lake city, at the Union hotel, Tuesday evening, December 26th. In addition to a full attendance of the complimented guests, His Excellency Gov. Young, Presidents Kimball and Grant, those of the quorum of the Twelve now in this city, the United States Civil officers, and a large number of prominent citizens were in attendance.

Elder Parley P. Pratt writes to Brigham Young from Santa Clara:

I think there are many souls here in California, who will one day be in the kingdom of God, but so great a revolution in the mind is not the work of a moment. They see and realize that Mormonism is everything, if it is anything at all. We are so glad of your invitation to the Saints, indeed, to come up to Utah. After searching dilligently for a place for a city of holiness in this country, I have not found it as yet, but have, since receiving your letter, told the Saints that we would rendezvous in Santa Clara, and start for the Mountain of the Lord's House from this point on the first of May next. The news is hailed with a thrill of joy, and I think there will be a host of us---I feel it in my bones---at any rate enough for a guard.

About eight o'clock, A. M., of the 1st January, a violent wind commenced blowing from the South, and continued all day, at times with great force, causing some damage to a few house roofs and unfinished walls of buildings in Salt Lake city, Utah, and prostrating portions of fences. Two loads of hay were blown over while passing on the smooth level road near the Hot Spring South, and when last heard from the teamsters were awaiting the abatement of the wind to enable them to reload. Near Black Rock, the two horses attached to the mail carriage en route for Tooele, were blown down, and the carriage was broken; another carriage was much injured, the horses got loose and ran off, and a lady was somewhat hurt. The salt works were also torn up, and the boilers hoisted into the lake, and Mr. White had to chain his cabin to prevent its accompanying the boilers. About seven P. M., the wind lulled, and sleet began to fall steadily and rapidly, but soon gave place to snow, which in its turn occupied the time diligently all through the night, and until a quarter past three P. M. of the 2d, when it was over a foot deep, notwithstanding much had melted as it fell. Three, P. M., of the 3d, cloudy, and thawing a little.

For the Luminary.

FEARFUL ADVENTURE.

We were camped in a deep rocky kanyon, between towering mountains, whose snow-covered summits seemed to prop the blue sky above. It was not yet dark, and the weather being pleasant, I walked out in search of mountain sheep, that abound in this region. I followed down the kanyon perhaps a half mile, and then turned into a narrow, gloomy defile that wound around the base of the mountain to the right. The path was steep and rocky, and followed up a deep, dark ravine, worn in the side of the mountain by the rushing torrents of water, flowing from the melting snows and heavy falling rains. The progress was difficult and tedious, but by catching hold of projecting rocks and overhanging shrubs, I succeeded in ascending this rough and tortuous avenue, until I reached a sort of open glen or mountain valley. I was much fatigued, and sat down on a flat moss covered rock to recover my exhausted strength. The bright king of day was still visible through an opening to the west, and his lazy, lingering rays were beautifully coloring a thin misty cloud that hung in waves of crimson and gold around the rugged brow of the distant mountain. The scene was a delightful one, and I gazed upon it with intense admiration, till my attention was drawn away by the sudden appearance of a mountain sheep that jumped from a high, jutting rock, and ran swiftly across the little valley, his huge corrugated horns hanging back over his woolly shoulders. I sprang quickly to my feet, but before I could bring my rifle to an aim he had disappeared behind a clump of dwarf cedars. A minute after I saw him high upon the mountain's side, standing at ease, and apparently conscious of his perfect safety, beyond the reach of my rifle shot.

Not liking to return to camp without some kind of game, I commenced climbing up a less steep side of the mountain, in hopes of finding another sheep, or perhaps an antelope or mountain hare. I had not proceeded far, however, when I was startled by the low murmering sound of distant thunder, and looking upward, I was surprised to see the entire sky overspread with dark and threatening clouds. I turned about and hurriedly retraced my steps, but before I could reach the little glen the clouds opened, and the rain fell in overwhelming torrents, sweeping madly through the mountain gorges and deluging the plains below. A sudden gloomy darkness gathered around, and mountain and valley were soon wrapped in the sable curtains of night. I could no longer see my way, and fearful apprehensions involuntarily crept over me. The deep-toned voice of the thunder king echoed from mountain to mountain, and reverberated through the valleys. The vivid lightning leaped from peak to peak, and swept over the distant hills in a continuous blaze of fearful fire. I hastened down the rugged declivity. The elements continued to war over my head. Forked thunderbolts came darting down the mountain's side, and the falling fragments of rocks that were rent from their everlasting beds threatened to crush me into the earth. Impending masses of snow, softened by the falling rain, rolled in destructive avalanches from their lofty beds, filling up the mountain gorges and daming the rushing streams. I gained the glen, and hurried to the head of the ravine, from which I had emerged an hour before. It was now filled with wildly foaming waters, that madly dashed against the rocks, with a continuous deafening roar. There was no chance for escape at this point. I rushed along the brink of the precipice in hopes of finding some other place of descent. I stumbled and fell sideways. I caught hold of the branches of a small tree. My weight bent it to the ground. The earth crumbled under my feet, and I slipped over the precipice, still hanging to the tree. I uttered a cry of horror. I was suspended by a tender shrub that every moment threatened to give way, and to precipitate me into the deep abyss that darkly yawned below. I clung to the yielding branches with a grasp of convulsive tenacity. I cried for help. I wildly raved and madly shrieked. But I was only answered by the terrific shriek of the storm fiend, as he swept furiously by on his howling car. I felt my straining muscles gradually relax. Death seemed inevitable; and I tried to resign myself to my fearful fate. Cold, quivering drops of perspiration stood on my rigid face, and hot blood burst from my nose and mouth; a convulsive tremor agitated my frame. Another moment, and my nerveless fingers would have slipped from their hold, and my body dashed to pieces in the yawning chasm below. I felt something like the strong arm of a man encircling my waist, and raising me gently up. A ray of hope dashed through my soul. I was being rescued from the jaws of death; by whom, I knew not. A sudden flash of lightning gleamed through the chasm, and lit up the surrounding darkness. Oh, horror! my preserver was---a hideous serpent. He was coiled around the trunk of the tree above my head, and reaching down he was drawing me up into his tightening folds---closer, and closer still, binding my arms and legs as in a vice. Another fold around my breast and neck, almost depriving me of my respiration. I now felt his cold slimy head full in my face, and scalding drops of green frothy poison fell from his forked tongue upon my face and neck; another crushing fold, and I felt my life departing. I muttered a brief prayer commending my spirit to heaven. I heard an indistinct murmering sound, like the mellow whisper of an angel, welcoming me home. Again---hark! "Charlie, come get up!" It was Amanda's gentle voice calling me to breakfast.

CHARLIE.

SPRINGFIELD, O., March 4, '55.

PAT'S PARADISE.---The greatest fun
That's under the sun,
Is to sit by the fire till the praties are done.
O'KEEFE.

EXCELLENT for the hard times is the name of a St. Louis firm; Grinn & Barrett!

WM. RICHARDS, one of the Mormon saints, lately deceased, in Utah, leaves forty-nine widows.---[Evening Mirror.

A dispatch from Vara, dated Feb. 14, says that 30,000 Ottoman troops had landed at Eupatoria.---Others were on march for Varna.

Correspondence.

Letter from Elder Andrus---Preaching at Brunswick---Polygamy---Mrs. Abraham, No. 1, 2, 3, &c.---A Prayer---Arrival at Atchison---Its advantages as an Out-fitting Post.

ATCHISON, KA. TER'Y, March, 4, 1855.

ELDER E. SNOW:

Dear Brother---My last communication to you, from Brunswick, of February 25, gave you to understand that I would leave there the following day which was not the case; we did not get started until the 28th. On the 26th, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, I received an invitation by the leading citizens, to deliver a lecture in the Town Hall at 7 o'clock P. M., which I complied with. The Hall being well lighted and warmed, and well filled with an attentive congregation, I gave them a short discourse on the first principles of the Gospel, after which I gave them our views on slavery, then came that all-exciteing topic---our domestic institutions---which I had been previously requested to give some of our leading views upon. I have not time nor space to communicate to you all that was said, but will content myself by saying a few words.

I introduced the subject by thanking the congregation for their candid attention to what I had said, and asked them to continue to do so, whilst I gave our views on this subject also. I then commenced by saying, 'The people say we have many wives!' Well, suppose we have, Ladies and Gentlemen; Whose business is that? [Cries of hear, hear, from different parts of the house.] You argue, and your conscience bears you out in it, that you have a right to keep slaves; we argue, and our conscience supports me and my brethren in having a plurality of wives. Now, I wish to speak so that I may not offend the ear that is the most delicate, and the conscience the most refined. There are some so formed that they cannot openly acknowledge polygamy, yet many of those persons may practice it in the dark. For the benefit of my christian friends, I will say further, that when Lazerus died he was carried by angels to Abraham's bosom. I will now suppose that some of my pious christian friends should die to-night, and are taken by angels to good old father Abraham's bosom, and the venerable old Patrinrch says: 'How do you do Mr. so and so? I am happy to see you, and welcome you to this heavenly clime; but stop a bit,' says father Abraham, 'before you leave I will introduce you to sister Abraham, No. 1; this is sister Abrahan, No. 2; this is sister Abraham, No. 3,' and so on. Would not your christianity, and your manufactured conscience in the one wife system, be alltogether outraged?

At this, there was such a clapping of hands, stamping of feet and cheering, that it altogether drowned my voice, and I was obliged to stop and indulge in a smile with them, after which I called them to order, and they were as attentive and ready to hear, as any congregation of Saints you ever saw. I have not time to say anything further on the subject of the meeting, only that all things ended in peace and quietude. The next day, if I went to a store and there was five men sitting in their chairs, they would all arise and invite me to take their seats.

We started from Brunswick on the 28th---I left the company on the 29th between Carrolton and Richmond, and when I came to that ever memorable spot, near the old church, on the bank of Fishing river, I dismounted from my horse and went unto the identical spot where our tent was pitched, and offered up with an uplifted hand, the following prayer: Oh, Lord, in as much as thy servant Milo was on this identical spot, near twenty-one years ago, then in company with thy servants Joseph and Hyram, and thy servant Orson Hyde, who is now President of the quorum of the twelve; and, also, thy servants Brigham and Heber, who are now the leaders of thy people---on this sacred spot thou didst reveal unto us, that this little camp were the first Elders of thy church in this dispensation, since which time wicked men have shed the blood of Joseph and Hyram and others of our brethren, whose remains are mouldering in the martyr's grave, while their spirits have joined those under the altar crying for vengence on the sheders of innocent blood. Now, Oh Lord, I thank thee for thy servants Brigham, Heber, and Jedediah, also, for thy servant Orson Hyde and the quorum of the twelve Apostles; Now, Oh Lord, inasmuch as thou didst say unto thy servant Joseph, that those of thy servants that remained, and were pure in heart, should return to the land of their inheritance, both they and their children, singing songs of everlasting joy; Now, Oh Lord, may thy servant Milo, and many of thy servants that were on this spot together, live to point out to our children the place and circumstances through which we have passed to build up thy kingdom, when the oppressor is not known in the land, I ask in the name of Jesus, Amen.

I must close my reflections upon these matters, and say to you that I arrived in Atchison on the morning of the 4th, (to-day,) where I met with Br. Siler who reached out the warm and friendly hand to help me out of the mud as I stepped on Kansas shore. We went off together and soon made arrangements for a short exploring expedition back in the country. We secured the services of Mr. Thomasson as a guide, a gentleman well acquainted with the country; we traveled directly west about four miles, to the head of Deer creek, where we found an excellent camping place, with plenty of hickory wood, water, and an excellent range for stock; also, an excellent chance to locate claims for farming, which I think I shall make arrangements to do, whether they are wanted or not.

I will say, that the landing with a little improvement, I believe to be a good one, and that the best natural road (which has been traveled enough to make a very plain track) out to the main Military road that I have ever seen coming back from the Mississippi river, it intersects with the Military road some six miles from this place, and from thirty to forty from Fort Leavenworth---plenty of good water and advantages for camping places, and an abundant range for stock without any miry places, are some of the advantages of this point, as a point of outfit.

The spirit of the people seems to be liberal and in a measure free from prejudice---you will consider what effect their interests may have in this matter. I have seen the most of the proprietors of this town; some in Platt City; some in Weston, and some in this place; they have all assured me that if we pass here we shall be treated well, and if we leave any of our emigration at this point, their rights shall be respected the same as other men. There is no warehouse built here, as yet, but I believe there will be in time for us, if we should want it—I am not able to say at this time, definitely, that we will start from this point; I want to look and inquire further up the river, but you are aware from the amount of business and the shortness of the time, that I cannot explore very much of Kansas or Nebraska, but will do the best that I can, taking into consideration the nature of the circumstances. I shall have to let them know at Atchison in the course of a week, in order that they may make the necessary improvements for our reception.

I will now say a few words to you in regard to cattle. As far as I can ascertain, the great majority of the cattle will be in poor condition, owing to the scarcity of grain, but I shall bear in mind the conversation between you and me, and try and buy the best I can find.

I must now conclude by saying that my health is tolerably good, although my face has been frost-bitten, and by riding constantly in the wind is very sore and peeling.

My kind regards to you and those in the office, and through you to the Saints in general. Br. Siler joins in love to all. I am as ever, your fellow laborer in the kingdom. Amen.

MILO ANDRUS.

Letter from Thomas B. Pierce—Departure from St. Louis—Kind reception by friends and strangers—Exciting Disclosures—Mormonism—Organization of a Branch—Baptisms—A Friendly Visit—Threatened Violence—Happy Deliverance. &c., &c.

CEDAR GROVE, Franklin Co., Ind.,
February 27th, 1855.

DEAR BRO. SNOW:—I take this opportunity of communicating a few lines, thinking that a little intelligence from this quarter will not be altogether uninteresting. I will give you a brief account of my labors in connection with the rest of my brethren in Fairfield. By way of commencement it may not be amiss to make you acquainted with the cause of our coming to this place.

We lived a long time in St. Louis, and didn't seem to be making any progress in regard to getting an outfit for the valley, and having some relations in Indiana who had written and invited us many times to come and live among them. Being somewhat discouraged in St. Louis, we finally went and laid the matter before the President of that branch, who told us if our motive was for an outfit, and we could get it quicker in this country than where we were, to go in the name of the Lord and prosper; we likewise asked his counsel relative to our holding meetwhen we arrived here, and he gave us authority to organise ourselves into a branch as soon as convenient after we got settled, if we felt so disposed.

Having made all necessary arrangements for our departure, four families of us altogether, consisting of 11 persons, all Mormons but one. (and that one was converted to the faith after we got here,) united as one family, (for we were all relatives, as well as Saints,) and made up our minds to leave the busy scenes of life in a vastly populated city, where we had enjoyed ourselves so much in the society and fellowship of the Saints, and recieved the teachings and instructions of the servants of God Sabbath after Sabbath, to retire for a little season to a more secluded spot among some relatives in the back settlements of Indiana; but I can assure you, when we were on board, and the boat was gliding down the majestic Mississippi and leaving St. Louis in the distance, we were tempted, like Lot's wife, to look back with a degree of sorrow; not after the riches and splendor of this world, but it was for leaving the society of the Saints and being deprived of associating with the people of God, although only for a season, for our determination was and still is for a scant outfit, and then for the valleys of the mountains—the strong-hold of the Saints.

Having now made you acquainted with the cause of our leaving St. Louis, let me tell of our success at the place of destination.

We arrived here and were kindly received with heart and hand by friends and strangers, and welcomed to their little town, and invited to their homes until arrangements were made for homes of our own; but very few thought we were Mormons at that time, and those that did, thought we had denied the faith and bid farewell to the cause, and had come to end our days with them. So everybody was for us and nobody against us, and we soon got settled in homes of our own—set to work at our business, and everybody seemed anxious to help us along. So we commenced in right good earnest to carry out our design. We would meet together often and have a prayer meeting and counsel among ouselves what was best to be done. We saw we could very soon make an outfit if we would say nothing about our doctrine and let Mormonism alone, and then we thoguht again if we did so, we might perhaps become negligent and loose the spirit of God, and fall into darkness. So we finally made a covenant together before God that we would organise ourselves in good order and dischargd our duties, and let all Indiana know that we were not ashamed to acknowledge ourselves Mormons, believers in the everlasting gospel. We did so, and how changed became the scene; our best friends became our worst enemies, those who eagerly sought our society and friendship soon manifested their aversion to Mormonism by shunning our presence altogether; but what was to be done? we had made the attack, had given the first blow, and we did not feel like denying the faith to make them our friends again for all they possessed, or for all the United States put together; so preach we must and preach we did, in defiance of the opposition of men and the powers of the lower regions. No sooner had we done so, than we were published from pulpit to press, and press to pulpit from one county to another In one paper it was stated that a few families of Mormons had arrived in Fairfield from St. Louis, and had commenced holding meetings which were opened by a fiddler and by singing merry songs. This tickled our fancy a little, for there is a fiddler among us, and our singing was by no means solemn; a great many confessed they never heard such good singing before, and I question very much whether they will again after we leave them. Suffice it to say however, that in a little while there were calls for preaching on every hand, and we were kept busy, on the right and left and all around, our meetings were at all times well attended—the school houses were too small to hold one-half that would come. Consequently we took the woods and groves for the occasion, which are much the best in the summer season. Many persons that attended our meetings feel and acknowledge that Mormonism is true, and have stated time and again that if the bible is true, our doctrine is true also, for, say they, we preach plainer and more scriptural than any other people, but with it all not more than two or three have yet embraced it, but there is yet hopes of a greater increase in this county, and we intend giving a few more lessons the coming senson by the aid and assistance of the spirit of the Lord and the united faith and prayer of the brethren, for Satan has a strong hold in this part of the country, and a great deal of influence over the minds of men; but for all this, I still believe there are some honest souls here, but unfortunately the mistified errors and superstitions of the dark ages are rivited so fast to their pious fancies, that it is hard for them to believe anything that comes in contact with their systems. In consequence of that, they need a great deal more preaching to than if they had never been professors of religion at all. I will here remark that soon after our organisation took place and we had rightly started to preaching, we were visited by brother James Brown who had been to the West Indies on a mission and was on his return home to the valley, and I can assure you, it made us feel quite cheerful and happy, and we felt as though he was sent in a time of need, for he helped us along with our meetings considerably, and while he was with us we thought it would not injure us any to renew our covenants and we did so, and two others were added to our little band at the same time, and one has been added since.

We continued our preaching all last summer in the considerable opposition, the devil went about raging like a hungry lion watching every opportunity to leap upon its prey—he also had his agents very busy mixing themselves with the congregation, with their pockets filled with lying pamphlets written against the Saints, showing what wicked, presumptious wretches we were, and that people should be very careful not to believe anything we said, for we were well calculated to deceive, &c. It caused quite a division to take place among the people, so that on one or two occasions one portion of them was for knocking me off the stand and whipping me and the rest of the brethren, and mobbing us, while another portion said they should not do it, for we preached the truth and beat all the rest of the religions all to pieces, and we should preach as often as we chose, and if any person offered to touch us they would repent of it. We kept perfectly calm, and I told them there was no need of fighting for we had not come there for that purpose, and that we did not profess to be fighters, but preachers and Saints of God, although, I must confess, it looked as though we would all have to try our hands for once, for the tumult rose to a pretty high pitch, and we did not know but some of us would be knocked over, if we had, we felt something similar to the sons of Jacob down in Egypt We should have made a scattering if the attack had been made, for there were some pretty stout men among us, I tell you, but after all nothing serious occurred. Father Wickle got up and spoke a while and make some of them look as though they wished they had said nothing, and would like to get away, for I never saw the spirit of the Lord rest upon man more powerful than on this occasion. Brother John Wickle, our President, also talked to them upon the spirit they had manifested, and warned them to repent and be baptised for the remission of sins, or they would be condemned and cast from the presence of God. These and other very appropriate remarks were made and the meeting dismissed without the first blow. Having said so much, I am afraid your patience will be wearied—I will conclude, praying God, the Eternal Father to bless and prosper his people—swell their numbers—gather them to Zion to prepare for His coming.

I subscribe myself yours in the Covenant of Peace,
THOS. B. PIERCE.

For the Luminary.

SELECTED POETRY.

How sweet when the morning of Sabbath doth come,
With joy to arise and depart from my home,
And haste to the school where instructions are given,
To teach me the way to the kingdom of heaven.

Now taught from the scriptures of wisdom and truth,
I cry unto God 'be the guide of my youth,'
Encouraged to seek him, assured I shall find—
For such is the promise, so gracious and kind.

When the gospel is heard with its life-giving sound,
In the solemn assembly O let me be found;
For Jesus is there on the throne of his grace,
And brighter than gold are the smiles of his face.

DEAR BROTHER SNOW:—I beg you will grant me the privilledge of placing a few lines in your BRIGHT LUMINARY which I have selected, adapted to my present situation in life—a school-boy, aged 10 years—and may the light of the Luminary continue to shine brighter and brighter, until the nations of the earth shall discern its rays, and profit by the same, and may your untiring zeal be crowned with success, is the desire of your humble brother in the New Covenant.

EDWIN KEMPIN.

Miscellaneous.

ARRIVAL OF THE PACIFIC.

TEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, March 14.—The Pacific has arrived with dates to the 27th, being ten days later. Mr. Gladstone, Sidney Herbert and Sir George Graham, have resigned. The Ministry has been reconstituted.

The Cabinet is remodelled, without any important change, except Lord John Russell being Colonial Secretary.

Joseph Hume is dead.

The Vinena Conference will be opened in a few days, All parties profess an anxiety for peace.

It is officially announced by the Allies that Gen. Leprandi, on the 7th, with 40,000 Russians and 70 guns, attacked the Turks at Eupatoria. Omar Pacha commanded. The battle lasted four hours. The Russians retreated with the loss of 600.

Affairs before Sebastopol remain unchanged.

Lord Raglan is reported to have resigned. Lucan is recalled.

There was much distress in England from the severe winter. Great riots had occurred at Liverpool and London. But the weather had changed, and shipping was now arriving.

A battle was fought at Eupatoria on the 17th. Genefal Leprandi's force was about equal to or perhaps a few thousand superior to the Turks. He attacked them, and after four hours fighting, retired beyond the range of shells from the English ships. The Turks did not pursue them.

A convention between Great Britain and the Porte, for the enlistment of Turkish contingents, has been signed. An interesting debate arose upon the question of going into committee of army estimates. Lord Palmerston contended that the sufferings of the army in the Crimea, arose from physical causes, in the power of no man to control. The sufferings were not confined to the British army. The number of Russians sick and wounded, was 35,000.

Lord Palmerston announced that Lord Lucan was recalled in consequence of his differences with Lord Raglan. Lord Palmerston said that compulsory measures must unquestionably be resorted to, to fill the ranks and service.

The right of search is urged as necessary in order to prevent the introduction of Russian goods into England. It was deemed not advisable to lay before the House the correspondence between Great Britain and the United States, on the international arrangement during the time of war.

The weather was moderate at Sebastopol. The snow had almost disappeared. The health of the army was better, and the siege operations were progressing with vigor.

Orders had been received at Constantinople to prepare hospitals and beds for 5,000 men, from which it is to be inferred that the assault is to be made upon Sebastopol.

The Baltic fleet is to consist of fifty-five steamers, carrying 1,066 guns, 5 floating batteries of 80 guns, 8 mortar ships, 28 steam gun boats of 16 guns—total, 100 ships and 1,278 guns.

Whether the Emperor will go to the Crimea is still a matter of question. It is said he has drawn up a plan of vast military strategy, which he wished to superintend. England and Austria think he had better leave it to his generals.

The Americans in Paris had given a grand ball to commemorate Washington's birth-day. Nearly all the diplomatic corps, as well as the members of the French Government, were present.

The French papers mention that the city of Catana, in Italy, was almost destroyed by an earthquake.

ENGLISH ARISTOCRACY.

The London Times of February 14th, has a leading article with a caption that is somewhat curious. It is headed "Decline of the Aristocracy." An extract or two will show its character:

The experience of the last few months has awakened the people of England from their dream of wealth and prosperity, from their traditional self-gratulations over the naval and military exploits of the late war, and from the supposition that men invested with high rank and clothed with great office are possessed of faculties equal to the direction of our affairs whenever there is more than an ordinary strain on the vessel of the State. Our eyes are open, and we behold that we are naked. We ask for talent sufficient to conduct great affairs to successful conclusions, and instead of talent we are offered titles and pedigrees. We ask for merit, and we are offered in exchange high connections, or, at best, seniority. The cold shade of aristocracy is over us all, and nothing can grow beneath it except the offshoots of the tree itself. Up to the middle of November this country believed itself to have armies, generals, statesmen, departments, all equal to their several duties, all of the very best the world could afford; and now, in the middle of February, in three short months, all is changed, or rather all is reversed. We have awoke from our dream of hope, prosperity, and success, to disaster and dismay.—Our generals have turned out worse than useless, our Ministers something more than incapable; every public department has been crushed into hopeless imbecility by the weight of unbending routine and worthless formalities, and on no one occasion, that we are aware of, has the right man been selected to fill the right place. Everything has been mismanaged to a degree which, if predicted, would have been deemed incredible; yet, so far as the public are aware, no single official has yet been recalled, and, after a week's interregnum, Government has been reconstituted and strengthened only by the omission of three of its leading members, and the promotion of one who is at least as guilty as any of those omitted.

* * * * * * * * *

The decline of aristocracy in England is no cause of regret, but rather of congratulation. This is no age of shows and shams. The people cry for substance. The call is loud for men who have the clear eye, the steady nerve, and the generous heart; and it matters not a whit whether they have in their veins "the noble blood of all the Howards," or rejoice in the less euphonious patronymic of Dobbs. If plain Mr. Dobbs is earnest and honest, acting so that men love him and do well to follow him, he needs no title,—his patent of nobility has been granted by the King of Heaven. If Lord Ninnyhammer is a coward or a rascal or a fool, his title will not help him in this age, though confirmed by parchments and ribbons and garters innumerable. The time is coming when a man will be esteemed above his fellows only because he is wiser and better than they.

It may be that the imbecility displayed by the aristocracy of England in the cabinet and the field during the past few months, will aid materially in hastening on this period.—[Republican.

MORMON PROSPERITY.—Brigham Young is building two large and beautiful houses adjoining that which he occupies now in Salt Lake city, to accommodate his increasing family. He now rejoices in between fifty and sixty wives, and from forty to fifty children. Elder Kimball, one of the Mormon apostles, has between sixty and seventy consorts.—[Evening Mirror.

MORMONS.

A Mormon Elder by the name of Milo Andrus, favored our citizens, on Monday evening, with a discourse upon the tenets of Mormonism. He came up to this place on the Golden State—is a Mormon missionary, and is accompanied by a company of new made converts, from England. They are on their way to Salt Lake.

In his discourse, he said the Mormons believed in polygamy. It was optional with a man whether he would marry at all, or take as many wives as he could support. He said the Mormons had been charged with having a bible of their own manufacture. This he denied. They acknowledge the same bible that the Protestants and Catholics do.—He said, if a slaveholder should move to Salt Lake with his slaves, he would not be interfered with.—There are now negro slaves in that country; their owners are perfectly secure in their property.

In a private conversation, he informed us that the population of Utah Territory is forty thousand; the population of Salt Lake city is twelve thousand.—The settlements extend over a tract of country more than three hundred and fifty miles in extent.

The soil is very productive—much resembling, in appearance, that in this vicinity. The cereal crops, with the exception of corn, flourish finely. Wheat produces sixty bushels to the acre. All vegetables and fruits contain much more of the saccharine matter than in the States. The cultivation of cotton has been attempted, but the summer season is too short for the balls to open. Hemp has been raised successfully.

It is a fine sheep country. The flocks are rapidly increasing, and sufficient wool is now raised for home consumption. There are two woolen manufactories in the Territory—the machinery for the third will be carried out this spring. The present company—which will be the first train this season—will carry out the engine and fixtures for a steamboat, to be placed upon Salt Lake. The boat has already been built, and only awaits the machinery, to be put into operation.

It is said the Mormons have a community of goods—own all their property in common. Mr. Andrus says, this is a mistake. Each one labors for himself, and is perfectly secure in his individual possessions. This idea arose from the fact that each person is required to pay tithes to the church, amounting to one-tenth of his gains. In addition to this they have to pay a territorial and county tax to the government.

He stated that they had a great many missionaries in different countries. The church appropriates nothing towards a missionary fund. The missionaries are designated by the council of the church. As soon as they are appointed they are expected to proceed to the country pointed out. They receive no pecuniary aid whatever. There is no direct compulsion compelling a man to go on a mission; but should a person, receiving an appointment, fail to go, he would be shunned both in a social and business point of view, by the entire community.—[Brunswicker.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

WANTED.

A RESPECTABLE WIDOW wishes to obtain a situation as Housekeeper. She will undertake Sewing, the education of Children, and otherwise render herself useful. Address F. BROWN, Postoffice.

NOTICE.

I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware, and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at ST. LOUIS PRICES.

mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

TO EMIGRANTS.

J D HARPER. T J HARPER.

At the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especialy of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we will sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.

mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

UTAH TERRITORY.

Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,

DEALERS IN

GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L K & Co.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by

ALFRED PERSEY,
St. Louis, Mo.

The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

BLACKSMITHING.

T. S. ABURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommmendation.

Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb. 1855. [mar 3, 15 3m.

D. G. TUTT. J. N. BAKER.

TUTT & BAKER,

WHOLESALE GROCERS,

FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.

WESTON, MO.,

Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.

March 3, 1855. 15 3m

J. S. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.

EVANS & MITCHELL,

MERCHANTS,

At Weston, Missouri,

HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.

STORAGE AND OUTFITS.

LEWIS N. REES,

Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,

IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pistols, Bowie-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.

Groceries and Provisions.

Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.

He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Heningcamp, Glipin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 15 3m

G. M. & A. FISHER,

Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,

ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as 2nd-Irons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensward and all sorts of Grockery Ware.

They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 15 3m

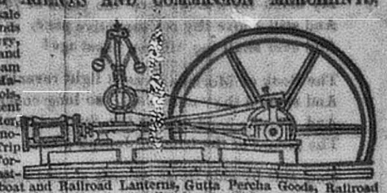
PHIL. ROCHOLD & CO.,

HAVE constantly on hand in Kansas, Mo., a full supply of Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Groceries, Gutta Percha Goods, Provisions, Tinware, &c., which they will sell on as liberal terms as they can be bought for in Upper Missouri. [mar 3, 15 3m.

M. C. MOORS & CO.,

NO. 16 M'IN STREET,

GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.



FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron axles and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.

N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices. Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,

Residence, No. 328 South Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets:

Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,

MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice. All the above articles are warranted of the best American Iron. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!

O. H. COGSWELL,

At his Old Stand in Independence, Mo.,

WILL have on hand at the commencement of the out-fitting season, a large and well selected stock of outfitting goods for the Plains to Great Salt Lake City, and will furnish them on reasonable terms. He will keep constantly on hand, Flour, Bacon, Sugar, Coffee, Rice, Dried Beef, Hard Bread, and in a word, every article necessary for crossing the Plains. He flatters himself from his knowledge in that department of his business, having been a trader for the last four years in Great Salt Lake City, and his frequent passing over the Plains, that he will be well prepared to give general satisfaction.

And to the Salt Lake emigration he would respectfully say that Independence possesses advantages in point of location for out let directly, and for procuring Wagons, Stock, Provisions, &c., that no other place above St. Louis possesses. O. H. COGSWELL.

REFERENCES.

BRASTUS SNOW, St. Louis, ORSON SPENCER, Cincinnati, O.,
MILO ANDRUS, St. Louis, JAS. JOHN TAYLOR, New York,
CHAS. BASSETT, Springfield, O., JOHN HOW, St. Louis,
Feb. 24] WOODS, CHRISTY & CO., St. Louis. [14 3m.

BOOTS AND SHOES of every variety can be had at O. H. COGSWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

LEATHER of all descriptions, for Saddlery, Harness, and Shoemaking purposes to be had at O. H. COGSWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

OUT-FITTING FOR THE PLAINS.

THOSE crossing the Plains this Spring, will find it to their interest to call on the undersigned, where they will find a general assortment of every thing necessary in out-fitting for such expeditions. Goods received and stored upon liberal terms.

Feb. 24, 14 3m A. G. BOONE, Weston, Mo.

OUT-FITTING.

R. CHARLES takes this method of informing the emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand a full supply of Groceries, Builder's Hardware, Cutlery, Boots and Shoes, and all grades of staple Dry Goods, which he will sell at wholesale and retail. Thankful for former patronage, he solicits a further trial on the levee Kansas, Mo.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

BLACKSMITHING AND GRAZING.

THE Subscriber has a Blacksmith Shop, lots on the prairie, and has Cattle for sale two miles from Westport, on the State line. His former business transactions with the Latter-day Saints and other Emigration having given general satisfaction, he solicits a trial in future.

Feb. 24, 14 3m* J. W. MARRION, Kansas, Mo.

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.

THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo.

Feb. 24, 14 3m* JAMES W. ELLIS.

BENJ. CROWTHER,

DEALER in Hardware, Table and Pocket Cutlery, Mechanics' Tools of every description, consisting in part of Axes of all kinds, Augers do., Awls, patent, with bits, Bench Screws, Chisels of every description, Auger and Chisel Handles. Also, Blacksmith's Tools of every description, together with a large stock of Miscellaneous articles, such as Brushes, Paints, Japanned Tin Ware, Spoons, Bitts, Guns, Pistols, and other articles too numerous to mention, in fact, everything used by Mechanics, Housekeepers and the public in general, all of which will be sold low for cash. A liberal discount made to mechanics buying by the quantity. Call and see. Store situated south side of the Court House.

BENJAMIN CROWTHER,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Independence, Jackson Co., Mo.

OUT-FITTING!

M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Groceries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

EMIGRANTS.

THE Subscribers would say to the Emigration for the West, that they are engaged in buying and selling stock of all kinds. Orders for Horses, Mules or Cattle will meet with prompt attention. Persons wishing to purchase would do well to call on me before purchasing elsewhere.

WM. LIGGIT,
WM. IRWIN,
Independence, Mo.

Refer to J. HOCKADAY,
O. H. COGSWELL. [Feb. 24, 14, 1m*

ISAAC HOCKADAY,

DEALER in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps and Ready Made Clothing, together with a large and general assortment of out-fitting goods of every description, suitable for California, Salt Lake, and New Mexico outits.

Store north side of Public Square, Independence, Mo.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

FLOUR AND MEAL.

THE Subscriber takes this method of saying to the Emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand large quantities of Flour and Meal, which he will sell at as reasonable rates as such articles can be bought for in the up country, at his mill, known as the Jackson Mills, near Independence. He will also have a large supply in Independence, Mo.

THOMAS PITCHER.

REFERENCES: WILSON & PARKER; JESSE H. NOWLAND.

Feb, 24, 14 3m.

CATTLE.

THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all of which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. B. & J. H. FLEMING,

Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.

REFERENCE.

ISACC HOCKADAY, Independence, O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HADUS & MULLEN, Wayne City.

N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon, and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood of Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WAGONS AND YOKES.

YOUNG & SMITH are prepared to fill orders for Wagons and Ox Yokes to the Western Emigration. They have on hand a large lot the best Wagons made in the Western Country, and can supply any number of Yokes that may be desired. They will deliver their Yokes or Wagons in lots at any point on the river from Independence to Leavenworth City.

Independence, Mo., 1855. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WM. & JOHN McCOY,

Independence, Mo.,

DEALERS in Staple and Fancy Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Camp Equippage and Outfitting Goods of every description.

Feb. 24, 1855m.

S. P. KELLER,

DEALER IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,

HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE,

Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,

Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot

No. 27 Commercial Street,

WESTPORT, MO.

Feb. 24, 14 3m*

C. E. KEARNEY. W. R. BERNARD.

KEARNEY & BERNARD,

METROPOLITAN STORE,

WESTPORT, MO.,

DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,

Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

JOEL WALKER. W. H. CHICK.

WALKER & CHICK,

Receiving, Forwarding, and Commission Merchants,

KANSAS, MO.

Feb. 24, 1855. [14 3m.

RIDDLESBARGER & CO.,

WHOLESALE GROCERS,

Commission and Forwarding Merchants,

AT KANSAS, MO.,

HAVING done a heavy business in our line for the emigration of 1854, we would respectfully solicit further patronage. [Feb 24, 14 3m

PROVISIONS AND OUTFITTING.

H. M. HUDSON & CO., Corner of Main and Water streets, under the printing office, Kansas Mo., have constantly on hand a large supply of Provisions and Outfitting Goods, and having done business in theirline at this place for some years with the Western Emigration, they earnestly solicit a share of their patronage this season. [Feb 24, 14 3m.

H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.

NORTHRUP & CHICK,

KANSAS, MISSOURI,

WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.

We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.

Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

Poetical Department.

THE TWO BOOKS.

Hail Holy Bible! test of sacred truth!
My much-lov'd study thro' the years of youth;
And still I love thy retrospective page,
And ever shall too, till my latest age!

The Book of Mormon, present light revealed,
And shew'd the 'other fold,' so long conceal'd,
And Angel's hand assists the Seer to trace
The record of the tribe of Joseph's race.

Now side by side those records should recline
As tomes of Truth that show us light divine;
'The stick of Judah' shall my heart enfold,
'The stick of Ephraim' shall my right hand hold.

Great God! Great Father! and Eternal King!
To the my soul's best energies I bring;
Unite these staffs as one within my hand,
And let them guide me to the promised land.

Cambridge. H. K.

IMAGINARY EVILS.

BY CHRLES SWAIN.

Let to-morrow take care of to-morrow!
Leave things of the future to fate;
What's the use to anticipate sorrow?
Life's troubles come never too late!
If to hope over much be an error,
'Tis one that the wise have preferred;
And how often have hearts been in terror
Of evils that never occurred!

Have faith—and thy faith shall sustain thee—
Permit no suspicion and care
With visible bonds to enchain thee;
But bear what God gives you to bear.
By his spirit supported and gladdened,
But ne'er by 'forebodings' deterred,
But think how oft hearts have been saddened
By fear—of what never occurred!

Let to-morrow take care of to-morrow!
Short and dark as our lives may appear,
We may make it still darker by sorrow—
Still shorter by folly and fear!
Half our troubles are half our invention;
And often by blessings conferred,
Have we sunk in the wild apprehension
Of evils that never occurred!

From the Galveston (Texas) Journal.

SALT LAKE AND SALT LAKE CITY.

Messrs. Editors:—In my last I promised you something on soil, its production, manner of culture, grass, timber, water climate, health, &c.

The soil is alluvial, having been deposited by the rushing waters from the kanyons and gorges of the mountains, as well as the wash from the stupendous heights, for centuries past, forming near the river Jordon and along the banks of the creeks, a deep black and on the table lands a light sandy loam, which lands are adapted to raising cereals and vegetables, and yield to the husbandman a rich reward for his toil in seed time and harvest; from twenty to twenty-five bushels of wheat being an average yield to the acre throughout the whole Territory, while many reap from twenty-four to sixty bushels per acre. Corn may be considered about the same average, while other kinds of grain will yield the same proportion. Flax, hemp, and tobacco can be raised (and flax and hemp have been) successfully. Irrigating is the only mode by which the farmer can water his crop—and he has an abundance of water for that purpose in the streams which flow from the mountains, fed by the snows on the tops, which never fail and if properly applied in due season to the most fertile portions of those lands formed of disintegrated feldspathic rock with the debris and decomposed limestone, he will never fail reaping forty or fifty bushels per acre.

The usual mode of culture is the same as in the Western States—the additional labor that is required being the preparations to irrigate, which are only a few furrows run through the fields from the grand reservoir, which costs both time and labor to construct, to lead the water out from the beds of the creeks,

Of grass—the pasturage is perennial, the bunch or mountain grass being found on the hill sides or mountains, and being much similar in quality to the muskeet of Texas, seeding in summer and germinating under the snow in winter, presenting in the spring a beautiful pasturage for the herds, as the snow is driven back from the base and sides of the monntains by the return of the melting heat of the sun to the equinox.

Timber is scarce and a poor quality near the city and difficult of access; pine, cedar, oak, maple and cotton wood, being the principle species found, and all of an inferior quality, are only found in kanyons and on the mountains.

Water—probably no part of the world can excel, if equal the mountain streams of Great Salt Lake valley, which bursts forth from the mountains at every few miles along their base with the velocity of a mill-tail, whose limpid streams are as pure as crystal and icy cold, teaming with the finy tribe, among which may be seen the finest mountain trout that the fickle taste of the epicure could imagine. On these streams, which vary in size, can be the finest water powers obtained that mechanism could desire to command. The principle stream that passes through this valley, and the only one from south to north is the Jordon, which is the outlet of Utah Lake in Utah valley, a lake of fresh water, some sixty miles in length and eight or ten in breadth, of which I may speak hereafter. The stream breaks through a ridge of mountains and descends about fifty or more feet in a mile for some two or three miles, when the descent grows more gentle until it reaches Great Salt Lake into which its waters are emptied, and the principal streams on either side empty their waters into its bed.

Of Climate—on the mountains it is excessively cold; the snow falling in the winter to many feet deep in many places, filling up small gorges or mountain passes; but in the valleys the snow seldom lies for more than a few days. A winter will not average lower than zero, while the summer is about 75 ° Fahrenheit—the nights cool and vigorating, caused by the refreshing breeze from off the Great Lake of Salt in solution. Our winters commence about the 1st or 15th of November, and hold until March. Our seed time is from April until the 10th of June. Harvesting commences about the middle of July. Health is by far better than any country I am acquainted with—only two or three physicians being in the whole land.

Of Manufactories—great attention is given to manufacturing. There is already in Salt Lake valley, several establishments, among others of most importance is the Sugar Beet, from which we most fondly anticipate ere long our sugar for home consumption. Next in present importance, is our Woolen factories, Carding machinery, Mills, &c., not surpassed in the United States; and last but not least, I will notice (for fear I shall fail to give in minute detail a description of any other valley in Utah, as the similarity is so great I deem it not necessary) the Iron works in Iron county, some two hundred and seventy miles south of Great Salt Lake city, and within fifty or sixty miles of our most southern settlement in Utah; these works are located truly in Iron county, the neighborhood which presents to the eye a most striking similarity of Iron castings and smeltings on the whole face of the mountain and hill sides, the ore of which is worked and is pronounced to be very excellent. The castings which I have seen, are of a superior quality, and to add to the interest of the Foundry, there is an abundance of the finest quality of Stone Coal immediately and adjoining the works.

Great Salt Lake, 'Briny Shallow,' or 'Dead Sea,' will call our attention for a moment. This Lake is situated, as I have observed, west of Great Salt city—the nearest point being fourteen miles—it is in length about seventy miles, lying north and south—in breadth it is some twenty miles. The water is so perfectly impregnated with salt, that in the fall season, (being low tide,) the citizens repair to the Lake shore and gather up their supplies for the coming year, from the crystaline deposits. So dense is its waters with salt that persons will float on its waves, or can stand suspended with ease, head and shoulders above the surface. There are several islands in the Lake—two of considerable magnitude—rising, I should think, some two thousand or two thousand and five hundred feet above the level of the water. On these islands there is beautiful pasturage and some fine springs of fresh water. At the base of the mountains around the Lake are numerous warm and hot springs that make agreeable temperature for aquatic fowls during winter months. The water of these springs differ in quality as well as in temperature, although they may be in close proximity, being hot, sulphur, tepid, salt, cold, chalybeate and gupsun, gass-emetting fountains, &c., some of which are near the city, and have been properly turned to a public luxury, if not beneficial to health—which property is claimed by the analyser.

The next thing of interest that will call our attention is a short history of day and dates of our exodus into the wilderness, and our civil organization, acquaintance with the natives, war with Walker, &c.

S. M. B.

Russian Recruiting among the Jews.

The Czar must be hard up for troops, to induce him to practice such severities as these, described in a letter from the Cracow:

"The recruiting amongst the Jews, and the carrying off for the military schools of Jewish children aged from eight to ten, causes amongst that class of inhabitants in Poland indescribable terror and desolation. In all the towns and villages near Kielce nothing but weeping and lamentation are to be heard. Mothers tear their hair and beat their heads against the walls, and fathers sacrifice their last penny to buy off their sons. Recently an unfortunate man, whose eldest son, though just about to be married, had been carried off, went to the chief town of the province to beg that a younger son, who accompanied him, might be taken instead of his brother, but the second son was likewise taken, and the elder was not given up. This gave such a shock to the father that he was taken ill, and died in three days. The manner in which unfortunate recruits are treated is really cruel. Thus, for example, those assembled at Kielce were, not long since, in spite of the cold, placed quite naked, in rows in the streets, to undergo medical inspection!"

A RUSSIAN PIG IN A POKE.

The German Universal Gazette has the following amusing anecdote stated to have occured before Sebastopol. The French having remarked an unusual activity among the garrison of the Quarantine Fort, were anxious to know the cause of it and for that purpose determined to get hold of some Russian sentry at the outposts. But that was no easy matter, the sentinels being usually on the alert, and taking good care to keep out of danger. At last a Zouave offered to furnish the article in question. That very night a watchful Muscovite heard a rustling among the bushes. He cried, "who goes there?" but the only answer he received was a grunt. Thinks he to himself, "This is some fat pig that has deserted from the enemy. Bless me, if I could only get hold of it and smuggle it into the front, so that our officers may not lay hold of it!"

With this view he returns the grunt, the conversation becomes interesting to both parties, and at last the worthy Russian sees the object of his desire approach. He lays down his musket to seize it, but oh! horror, the treacherous beast turns the tables on him, throws him down, and gags him in no time then with a low whistle he calls five Zouaves to his aid, who carry off his victim to the French camp in triumph.

THE DOCTOR AND THE PATIENT.

"Doctor, jewel, I'm in a bad way intirely."

"What ails you, Dan?"—"Troth, an' it's more than I can tell your honour."

"Are you in pain?"—"The houle time."

"Do you sleep any?"—"Divil a wink, barrin' an hour or two, when nature, poor craythur, is exhausted intirely."

"Good appetite?"—"Not a petatee's worth."

"Night sweats?"—"You could wring the sheets."

"Well, you are in a bad way, that's a fact, but if you're prudent we can build up your constitution."

"Arrah, docthor, dear, couldn't you get me a new consthitushun altogether. I would sell the old one at half price! You could take it out, you know, while I'd be tipsy with the chloroform!"

There is a shop kept by an old maid in New York, in the windows of which appear these words: "No reasonable offer refused."

SELECT SENTENCES FROM VENN.

A Saint feels the graces which he cannot express; a hypocrite expresses the grace which he does not feel.

Though we prize our friends much, we should praise them little, and to their faces not at all.

We seek mercies aright, when we seek them more to please God, than to please ourselves with them. A man may do the things which please God, and yet not please God in doing these things.

Anger can hardly be silent; but that anger is admirable which speaks and sins not; be angry, but sin not.

We are then truly afflicted for sin when it is more for displeasing God than for the displeasure of God; more, that he is displeased by us, than that he is displeased with us.

An Irish Know-Nothing.—One of our citizens was on the train last Friday, a few miles east of Dunkirk, when a serious smash-up occurred. An Irishman was found among the rubbish of a broken car, knocked into insensibility, and taken to a neighboring house, where he soon after returned to conciousness. The first words he uttered were 'By the powers! an' wasn't it a Know-Nothing I was for a few moments, gentlemen?' The ludicrous remark dissipated for the time being the gloom occasioned by the sad disaster.—[Lafayette (Ia.) Courier.

Some young ladies feeling aggravated by the severity with which their gay plumes, necklaces, rings, &c., were regarded, went to their pastor to learn his opinion. 'Do you think' said they 'there is any impropriety in wearing these things?' 'By no means,' was the prompt reply, 'when the heart is full of ridiculous notions, it is well enough to hang out a sign.'

The Emperor of Russia receives the London papers on the fourth day after their publication, and the first newspaper of the pile placed before him in the morning, that receives his attention, is the London Times. He reads and speaks the English language with facility.

Almost a Bull.—An Irish girl, the other day, complained to her mistress that the cow wouldn't eat her 'mess.' She 'scalded the male, and she salted it—but the divil a bit would the ould cow touch it.' On examination it was found that Biddy's 'male' was nothing but saw dust.

The cow was evidently not used to such fine board. [—Dayton Journal.

Boarding out West.—Traveler—Hallo landlord, can I get lodgings here to-night?

Landlord—No, Sir; every room in the house is engaged.

T.—Can't you even give me a blanket and a bunch of shavings for a pillow in your bar-room?

L.—No, Sir; there's not a square foot of space unoccupied any where in the house.

T.—Then I'll thank you to shove a pole out of your second story window, and I'll roost on that.

A Delightful Prescription.—The Louisville Journal says:

A friend of ours tell us that one of the most distinguished physicians of Paris, writes to a young friend in this vicinity, who is in delicate health, 'Take to yourself a young, healthy, virtuous and amiable wife; it will do you more good in one winter, than all the mineral water in America for twenty years.'

The best throw upon the dice is to throw them away.

The Evidences Accumulate in proof of what we have long since asserted, viz: that the Mustang Liniment is the 'sine qua non' of all external remedies ever before offered to the afflicted.

We would call especial attention to the advertisement of this Liniment in our columns, and will take this occasion to say that this appears to be one of the few popular medicines that really possess all the virtues ascribed to them. In effectually curing the worst cases of Rheumatism, no matter how long standing, in an incredibly short time, and for sprains, bruises, sores, burns, or pains of any kind, it has no equal. We have heard of many cures that have been performed that really appear incredible, were they not vouched for by persons of responsibility and influence. It is said to be an infallible remedy for musquito bites.

See advertisement in another column. [17 2m

ADVERTISEMENTS.

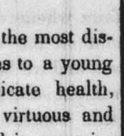
CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.

J. M'GREGOR,

WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,

75 MARKET STREET,

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.



N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

75 Market Street,

(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)

Feb. 17, 13 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

J. PARSON,

163 Morgan Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.

A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12t.

ELLISON & APPLETON,

DEALERS IN

NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,

CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.

Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,

Wholesale and Retail.

MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.

Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.

Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,

KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES

AT WHOLESALE PRICES,

Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,

OF THE BEST QUALITY,

At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at

NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret, All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,

St. Louis, Mo.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

A. DAFT,

DEALER IN

NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.

159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

NICHOLSON'S

TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,

GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,

NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

J. G. SIMPSON. D. CAMERON.

GREAT SALE.

"AUCTION GOODS"

FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THIS Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time submitted to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞ The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,

No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.

Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

NICHOLSON'S FRANKLIN

TEA AND COFFEE WAREHOUSE,

NO. 29 FRANKLIN AVENUE.

NEAR FOURTH STREET.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the public that they have now opened the above establishment, where may be found a large stock of fresh imported Teas of every variety of quality and price, selected in part, at the regular Eastern Tea sales, and from the stocks of the largest importing houses in the United States. We therefore feel confident that we can supply those favoring us with their patronage with Teas of undeniable excellence for strength and flavor, and at prices which cannot fail to give satisfaction.

Also an assortment of choice Coffees, Fresh Roasted, and Ground, by steam, on the premises. The arrangements for Roasting are such as to prevent the escape of that volatile oil with which the berry is impregnated, and to which it principally owes its tonic and other medicinal qualities.

We also keep constantly on hand a full assortment of Fresh Ground Spices, warranted. Our machinery is equal, if not superior, to any west of New York, and our knowledge practical; therefore, we pledge ourselves to suit in all cases, or the packages may be returned.

N. B. All packages marked from Franklin Tea and Coffee Warehouse are warranted pure. Chemists and others are challenged to analyze. NICHOLSON & CO.

Additional Sundries for Sale at the Franklin Tea Warehouse.

Pure Wines and Liquors, in bottles; pure old Brandies, very superior, various vintages; pure Old Port, Sandeman; pure Old Port, Victoria; fine old Sherry and Madeira Wines; Claret Wines, assorted qualities; pure French Cordials, assorted; Scotch Whisky, Scotch Ale and London Porter; Old Bourbon and Monongahela Whiskys, &c., &c.

Fruits—Raisins, Almonds, Oranges, Lemons, Currants, assorted Fresh Figs, &c. Chocolate, bitter and sweet; Broma, Cocoa; Preserves of all kinds; Jellies and Jams, Rice, Pearl Barley, Pearl Sago, Tapioca, Hecker's Farina, Saleratus, Arrow Root, Fancy Soaps, Bird Seed, &c.

Our Coffees may be found at the following places:

MR. JAS. H. FORBES, corner Eleventh and Market sts,
MR. JOHN NICHOLSON, Fifth street, South Market,
MR. D. NICHOLSON, corner of Fourth and Market.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

R. TORR,

151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,

ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.

WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.

Families Supplied at their Residences.

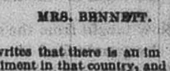
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.

T. J. ALBRIGHT,

NO. 27 MAIN STREET,

St. Louis, Mo.,



OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,

27 Main Street, East Side,

Sign of the Gilt Gun.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!

A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of

MAN OR ANIMALS,

Requiring an External Application.

Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of

RHEUMATISM

than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.

G. W. WESTBROOK:—

Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,

J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—

Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,

JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:

Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.

I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out. I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.

Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.

I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Groton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.

GEORGE BACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS

have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:

Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.

The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.

G. W. WESTBROOK,

(Successor to A. G. BRAGG & CO.,)

Originator and Sole Proprietor.

Principal Office, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.

B. FORMON,

TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at

196 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House,

St. Louis, Missouri.

Jan. 13, 1855. [8 3m*

DR. WHITE,

HOMŒOPATHIST.

Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.

Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!

VAN, THE TEA MAN!

RETAIL DEALER,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.

Dec. 23. [5 3m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.

Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:

50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 25 bags Laguyra;
50 packets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERE.

Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,

IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS

IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY

NO. 147 MAIN STREET,

Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,

ST. LOUIS.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,

WAGON MANUFACTURER,

Corner of Broadway and Labeaume Steert,

OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.

NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MCLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.

Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLRED.

Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞ For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.

T. W. HOIT.

Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY

AND

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

Established A. D. 1840.

A. P. LADEW & CO.,

TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,

31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,

PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.

Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.

Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired;
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

Its fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,

OF CORINTHIAN HALL,

297 BROADWAY,

ESTABLISHED 8TH MARCH, 1849,

FOR THE SALE OF

FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,

FOR $4 EACH!

FOR A

LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR A

FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR A

FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR AN

INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

297 Broadway;

☞ BIG HAT.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,

Practical Dyers and Scourers,

No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,

Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.

COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 138 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.

Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,

LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,

No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set, Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tinners' Shears, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.

Nov. 18, '54.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, MARCH 24, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XVIII.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Mailed to Subscribers at $2 per annum.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.

Advertisements inserted on accommodating terms.

All Communications relating to the LUMINARY should addressed to the Editor, Post-paid.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

To the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah Delivered December 11, A. D. 1854.

Gentlemen of the Council and House of Representatives:

Under the benign influence of high Heaven's protecting care, we are again assembled in the capacity of a Legislative Assembly, to ordain and establish such laws as shall best subserve the public good.

The toil of the husbandman has been rewarded by a plentiful harvest, and peace, prosperity, and success, have eminently attended all our efforts.

We have been delivered from the overflowing scourge which desolates the nations, the wayward destroyer, and the devouring flame. With thanksgiving and praise, let our aspirations ascend from warm and willing hearts, unto our Father and our God, who has extended unto us his rich blessings, and caused the earth to bring forth in her strength for our sustenance.

Although a large immigration have found homes in these peaceful vales during the past season, yet, it is believed there is an abundant supply of food for all, until another harvest.

Through the untiring exertions of our worthy delegate in Congress, Hon. John M. Bernhisel, appropriations have been obtained for making a "Road through our Southern Settlements, and extending to the boundary of California; for holding treaties with the Indians; and to defray the expense incurred in suppressing Indian hostilities in the years 1851 and 1852." These are the first appropriations of the kind which have been made for this territory. This action of Congress, though tardy, is none the less acceptable, evincing, as it does, a favorable disposition to place Utah upon an equal footing with other territories. We hail it as a good omen, and trust that in future her interests may not be neglected, nor her claims unregarded. There seems to be a difficulty in obtaining appropriations when made by Congress; month after month, and even a year sometimes intervenes, before they are received at the point of disbursement. Where the distance is so great, and the means of communication are so limited, it is desirable that the action of the department should be prompt in such matters.

The present prospect is, that none of the appropriations made at the last session will be received before another year; such delays operate very onerously and unjustly upon the territory, as well as upon the citizens, who have so long been anxiously looking for the liquidation of their just claims.

The appropriations for the State House and Penitentiary are each expended; and in order to complete either of those works, an additional appropriation will be required either by the legislature or Congress.

The works at Fillmore have rapidly progressed the past season, and it is anticipated that the State House will be ready for the accommodation of the legislature at its next annual session.

Peace with the Indians has been preserved during the year, although detached parties of the Utahs have been found unfriendly, which in one instance resulted in their killing two of our citizens. The perpetrators of this crime were brought in by other Indians, and delivered up to the United States authorities, before whom they had a fair trial, were found guilty of murder, and executed according to law, the Indians themselves giving testimony against them.

It has required the greatest forbearance and patience, as well as large amounts of presents on the part of our citizens, to maintain amicable relations with them. In some few instances they have presumed upon the forbearance shown them, and conducted themselves very improperly and abusively to the people. The pacific policy which has, from the beginning, been exercised towards them, has no doubt avoided many collisions which might have resulted in open war.

Although large quantities of beef, flour, clothing, guns, ammunition, &c., have been given them, to conciliate and make them friendly, yet the savage propensities of their natures, their improvident and vile gambling habits of life are such that no present supply, no matter how generous, remains long with them; and their indolence precludes any idea of their replenishing from their own resources.

The Shoshones are rather superior to the Utahs, and provide better for their own living, although a large party of them have quartered upon the settlements north during the past summer. Much has been done by the inhabitants, since their residence among the Indians of the mountains, to ameliorate their condition. They were found to exist in the lowest state of degradation—poor, ignorant, indolent, and savage. In their anger, nothing restrained them, but fear, from the greatest excess of crime.—They would sell and gamble away their own children, and steal from and rob other Indians of theirs, either to sell, gamble away, or kill, as their humor seemed to suit them. A horse or gun was deemed an equivalent for killing a man; and every shade of difficulty became a matter of barter for pecuniary consideration. The settlers have invariably given them provisions and clothing, furnished them with guns and ammunition to kill game, and in various ways administered to their relief. In many places grain has been raised for them, and houses built for their chiefs and principal men.

This policy has had a tendency to correct their vile habits and propensities, and sometimes induce them to labor for their own support.

This course of liberality towards them, in addition to constant loss of property caused by their depredations, is a severe tax and burden upon the people, especially in the more isolated and thinly settled locations, where their visits are more frequent and more numerously attended. It is, therefore, with a sense of relief that we look forward to the disbursement of the present appropriation made for holding treaties with the Indians, in the expectation that the people will be secured against their depredations, and partially relieved from their constant support.

The territory will also be partially re-imbursed for advances which she has made from time to time for the suppression of Indian hostilities. It is undeniable that those expenses have been much less in this, than other territories similarly situated, and should be met with a spirit of liberality on the part of the General Government. But whatever the Government may be able to accomplish in her intercourse with the Indians, it is scarcely expected that Utah will be relieved of their presence—consequently not freed from their depredations. The inhabitants should therefore secure themselves and property as much as possible, and be prepared to defend themselves at any moment from their hostile incursions. Each settlement should complete its defences, and preserve an active and energetic military organization. In various ways the people have sought to secure their own safety, and protect their property from constant depredations, short of maintaining an open warfare against them. I have uniformly pursued a friendly course of policy towards them, feeling convinced, that independent of the question of exercising humanity towards so degraded and ignorant a race of people, it was manifestly more economical, and less expensive, to feed and clothe, than to fight them.

The policy adopted towards a small band, usually inhabiting Weber county by the inhabitants of that district in distributing them out among the citizens, making for the Indians, judicious selections, where they and their families may feel that they have a home, and know that they can depend upon having food, shelter, and kind treatment in exchange for their labor, seems feasible, and if, in the end, it should prove successful, will have a tendency, at least, to secure peace to the inhabitants, and civilization to the Indians. Doubtless, a vast deal of patience and forbearance would be required to carry out this policy, even if the Indians should consent to try it. If they were suitably employed, it is believed, they would become profitable laborers after a little experience. They should be paid honorably and fairly in such things as they need, day by day, according to their necessities, until they learn to be more provident of their means. Like all other works of great philanthropy, this probably would be gradual in its operation; but if it should be deemed worthy of adoption, it is believed, it can be carried into general effect in the Territory.

In many of the Southern Settlements, already the Indians have become useful in labor and business, and quite a number of Indian children are found living in families, who have taken them to bring up and educate. So far as my knowledge extends in relation to the subject, such children have had the benefit of Common Schools; this blessing is secured to them by the operation of law.

The subject of Education has probably received as much attention in this as in any other as newly settled State or Territory. In almost all the Wards and Districts, good School Houses have been erected, and Schools maintained a part of the year, but I fear that sufficient attention is not paid to the selection and examination of teachers, or the manner of conducting Schools. Although the Board of Regents, have doubtless by their influence aided much, and are still extending their influence and exertions in a general way to advance the cause of education, yet at this moment, there is not a Parent School for the instruction of Teachers—a Mathematical or High School where the higher branches are taught, in all the Territory; neither have they a single object of Public Improvement under their auspices in progress for educational purposes. This is partly owing to the want of means to operate with, and partly to the fact, that the Board, consisting of men engaged in such a multiplicity of business, have but little time to devote to these duties. Hitherto the cause of education has been entrusted with the Board, by the Legislature who probably conceived they had sufficiently discharged their duties, by having invested the Regents with full power and authority to act in relation to that subject. But it is a subject of vast importance, and involves trusts of too weighty consideration to be neglected for any reasons at present existing. It is a subject fraught with momentous interest to us, and our youth, who are soon to become our representatives upon the earth, and will, if neglected, recoil with bitterness upon our own heads, when too late to remedy.

As a Territory, we have peace, and extensive ability exists with the people, to establish, and sustain good Common Schools in every Ward, and District, not only three, or six months in a year, as appears at present most common; but ten, or eleven, wherein every child, no matter how poor, may find admittance. Schools for teachers, Mathematical Schools, and Schools wherein the higher branches are taught, should also be kept in successful operation, in all of the principal towns. It is moreover an opportune time to introduce the New Alphabet, in forming which, the Regency have performed a difficult and laborious task. I recommend that it be thoroughly and extensively taught in all the Schools, combining, as it eminently does, a basis of instruction for the attainment of the English language, far surpassing in simplicity and ease any known to exist. Although the more immediate duties pertaining to the subject of education, may devolve upon the Regency, still, it does not free the Legislature from responsibility, and I doubt not that whatever aid or influence you may find in your power to extend, will be cheerfully given.

I cannot refrain from again calling your attention to the subject of Home Manufactures. Large quantities of wool, flax, hides, furs, and almost every variety of the best material for the manufacture of Woolen cloth, Linen, Leather, Hats, Soap, Candles, Glue, Oil, Sugar, Pottery, and Castings, are found in abundance, and easily procured, and yet we find large quantities of such articles annually imported, and purchased by the people, which causes a large and constant drain of our circulating medium. If a few hundred thousand dollars, which are now annually expended, and carried away for imported goods, were instead thereof, invested in Machinery and articles for Domestic Manufactures, it would prove far more advantageous, and rapidly advance the prosperity of our thriving Territory.

It would appear, that the expense and trouble of transporting goods over a thousand miles of land carriage, would be sufficiently protective to encourage the capitalist to embark in domestic manufacturing. It is manifestly our interest as a people, to more generally produce from our own resources, articles for our own use. It is the spring of wealth to any community—of independence to any State. Much has been accomplished, but the very prices prove that the manufacture of all of the above mentioned articles, as well as many others, is a lucrative business, opening to the enterprize of many more of our citizens.

If our market could be abundantly supplied with articles of domestic industry, and economy, our object would be attained, the money retained in the country, and importers seek elsewhere a market for their goods.

The Kanyon Creek Sugar Works, designed for the extensive manufacture of Sugar from the Beet, are nearly ready for operation. The Works in Iron county, for the manufacture of Iron from the ore, are in operation, although not as successful as could be desired. The operators have had many unforeseen obstacles, more or less incident to all new locations, and untried metals, as well as many adverse circumstances, to contend with; but it is gratifying, and encouraging to know that they have so far been able to surmount them all; and have moreover acquired an experience which will greatly facilitate future operations. This branch of domestic manufacture has received considerable aid from the Public Treasury, and may, for a limited time, still need some assistance.

We recognize, in the general diffusion of true knowledge, and the universal practice of well directed industry and economy, the elements of unbounded prosperity, and independence; they form the bulwarks of our defence, and are the source of our freedom. The fostering care of Legislative authority, and aid, should be extended to all such objects as are so manifestly calculated to promote the general welfare. Considerable Public Improvements have been accomplished, although more through the voluntary contributions of the people in labor &c., than funds devoted for such purposes.—Bridges across the Jordan and Sevier rivers have been built; mills have been, and are being constantly erected; roads are made; kanyons and mountains explored, for material, and vast quantities of timber, lumber, stone, and other materials collected for the permanent improvement of our towns and cities; all betokening a spirit of energy, and enterprize on the part of our citizens, gratifying to all, who feel an interest in the improvement, and progress of these far distant vales.

The revenue derived from the assessment of the past year, has been merely nominal, amounting in all, to only - - - - - $6,386.31

And of this amount collected -	4,434.56
Which leaves a balance delinquent of	1,951.75

There has been collected however, from the delinquencies of former years, which has aided the Treasury to meet a great share of the public debt - - - - - $8,682.11

Auditor's warrants, redeemed at the treasury, during the year, amount to - $13,182.85

Leaving in circulation at date of report, October 31, 1854, which is less than half the amount outstanding at the close of the last fiscal year - - - - $3,352.36

There is still a delinquency in the hands of the Collectors, amounting to - $8,273.31

Which, if collected, would leave a balance in favor of the treasury of - $4,920.05

It is barely probable that sufficient may be realized from the present delinquency, to meet the existing indebtedness. You will therefore perceive, that whatever appropriations may be made, it will necessarily be based upon revenue arising from future assessments.

There exists an unwarrantable neglect on the part of a majority of the Collectors, in not collecting the taxes, and making their returns in proper season. The Revenue Law should embrace a penalty, and a provision, making it the duty of some person to prosecute such collectors as fail to comply with the requirements of the law; because a collector dislikes to enforce his collections, should cease to be an excuse. The people are abundantly able to pay their taxes; and if they fail or neglect to do so, the law should be enforced against them. In common courtesy, the people should be more prompt in these matters, and not devolve upon their officers the unpleasant task of compelling them.

If appropriations are made for Public Improvements, and other objects of interest and general utility, the rate per cent will necessarily have to be increased, but for the ordinary expenses of government, it is considered that the present will bring sufficient revenue.

We are still left in doubt, in regard to the construction of a railway across the continent, the time when, and the route it shall traverse. If it were thrown open to private enterprise, and men were secured the right of way, it is more than probable, that one, or more, would now be in process of construction, and soon in successful operation.

As the all-absorbing Nebraska-Kansas question seems now happily disposed of, it is sincerely hoped, that this matter will earnestly engage the attention of Congress at an early day. The Department have probably received the reports of the several railway routes surveyed by this time, and nothing should hinder their proceeding at once to the decision of its location, and taking measures for its speedy construction.

In the Military Department there is no material change from last Report; the usual musters have been held, but the new enrollments which it is anticipated will show a considerable increase in the numbers, have not yet been returned. Some of the Volunteer Companies, are providing themselves suitable uniform, which adds to their Military appearance and indicates that they feel an interest in the performance of this, as well as other duties. It would be a matter of gratification, if others would follow their example. 'Tis true, we prefer efficiency in organization, discipline, arms, ammunition, and all necessary accoutrements, to useless appendages, ornamental or otherwise; but the energy and commendable pride which stimulates an Officer or Soldier to uniform himself may generally be taken as an evidence that the more necessary part is not neglected. Service during the year, has been nominal; no expeditions have been called for, and the constant Guard Service so requisite during the prevalence of Indian Aggressions and hostilities, has been, in a measure, dispensed with.

Forts and City walls, remain in most of the Settlements in an unfinished condition. We again, urge it upon the People to improve the present time of peace and prosperity, to complete their defences as they know not what hour their enjoyment of quiet may be broken.

The aid of the Perpetual Emigrating Fund Company has been extended to thousands of poor, to assist them to emigrate from the United States, and other countries and find homes in the Valleys of the Mountains. The operation of the Company thus far, have been very successful, although comparatively little remuneration has as yet been received from those benefited. They will, however, as they get able, refund, and in many instances double by donation what they have received.

By the aid of this Fund, much good has already been accomplished; many thousands of persons have been taken from the depth of poverty and placed where they can, not only sustain themselves, but soon find a competence for themselves and families. Still thousands are anxiously awaiting for the time when the Company will be able to bring them, also, to a land, where labor finds its reward. The operations of the Company prove doubly remunerative; it not only places the poor in a situation to sustain themselves but adds to the sum of labor necessary to develop the resources of the Territory, and bring forth and combine from the elements, things necessary for the sustenance and convenience of human existence.

Our labor is our wealth; by it we bring to ourselves the luxuries of life, ornament the earth with beautiful dwellings and gardens, build cities, and bring forth the rich fruits of the earth from her prolific bosom. This, then, is a natural outlet to the overpopulated districts of the older states and countries, where every avenue seems closed against the poor who linger out a miserable existence in hunger and want, bequeathing their children the same fate—a homeless and thankless legacy. Here! in these favored climes, poverty can scarcely be said to exist, and no person, having the common ability to labor, need want for the common necessaries of life. This has been the labor of the Perpetual Emigrating Fund Company, to pick up the worthy poor from such places, and give them an inheritance with us. That they have been successful, let the hills, the vales, the kanyons, which echo with the hum of their industry, make answer! Let the granaries, groaning with the productions of the earth, the result of their labor, reply! From the beginning, their operations have gradually increased—the last year's immigration amounting to nearly four thousand souls. It is designed to operate more extensively hereafter, in immigrating from the United States.

The full compliment of the federal officers for this territory, except an Indian agent, are now resident with us; and so far as I am informed, a good degree of cordiality and reciprocal kindness exists between them and the people of the territory.

A corps of the U. S. Troops, under the command of Col. Steptoe, on their way to California, are also sojourning with us during the winter. From the courteous and gentlemanly bearing of the officers, and the control which they appear to exercise over their men, I feel gratified in the belief, that if their services were wanting in protecting the settlements from Indian aggression, or otherwise, it would be cheerfully extended.

While thus briefly reviewing the condition and situation of our territory—our own beloved mountain home, I am forcibly reminded of her rapid progress during the short period of her existence, also eliciting bright anticipations of her glorious future, when she shall emerge from territorial thraldom, and have her place among that mighty family of nations, whose progress and power, whose influence and destiny, the disclosing eye of Omnipotence can alone reveal.

May we aid, by our united energy and ability, in subserving the public good, that when we go hence, we may have the proud consciousness of having faithfully kept and fulfilled the important trusts reposed in us by the people, whose servants we are, and whom we have the honor to represent.

BRIGHAM YOUNG.

Executive Department, U. T., Great S. L. City, Dec. 11, '54.

CARRYING CONCEALED WEAPONS.

There is no practice which should call forth the unanimous and decided reprobation of the press more than the habit of carrying concealed weapons. From the very nature of the case the law cannot reach it—it can only apply an unsatisfactory remedy in the way of punishment when the deadly weapon has done its work of destruction. The evil can only be reached by public opinion, and by the steady condemnation of the press—the vehicle of public opinion. The class of persons among whom the practice most prevails, shows conclusively its nature. The honest, the peacable, the law-abiding, never, or very rarely, have to resort to the use of weapons for the defence of their persons. But it prevails among outlaws, gamblers, frequenters of our drinking saloons, groggeries, and other resorts of debauchery, men of abandoned lives and desperate habits. From the New York Herald we learn that the pugilists and short-boys of that city are resorting to the pistol and bowie-knife, no longer content with the fisticuff and the slung-shot. The practice is the cause of most of our riots, and next to our grog-shops, occasions more crime than any other cause that could be assigned. It familiarizes the mind with the idea of bloodshed, impairs the sanctity of human life, and brutalizes the whole temper of the mind. It is a great mistake to consider it an evidence of bravery, on the contrary, the really brave, the high-toned, disdain it as an evidence of cowardice.—[Mirror.

DANCING.

Dancing is the best of all in-door exercises. It is suitable to all classes, all ages, both sexes. It is one of the most ancient and one of the most salutary. I do not speak of it as a dissipation, but as a rational and valuable relaxation. It is extremely suitable for the sedantary, for invalids, and for consumptives. It is deplorable that dancing and amusements of all kinds should have fallen under the ban of the clergy, and should be preached against as sinful. It is more than doubtful whether the morals of mankind are benefitted by forbidding all amusements, and it is most certain that the health of thousands is sacrificed by it. Who are those who sink earliest into consumption among the ladies! Allow me to say it is those who take the least exercise and refrain from all amusements; who, at school, at church, at home, are marked as models; whose looks are demure, whose walk is slow, and whose conversation is always on serious subjects; who most apply themselves to severe studies and protracted application in acquiring knowledge. There is nothing better for the lungs than deep hearty laughter; and the laugh should never be suppressed, unless forbidden by circumstances. Luennec, a celebrated writer on consumption, relates a case that came under his observation in a convent of nuns, at Paris. He had witnessed all the inmates die three successive times, within a few years, except the gate keeper, the cook, and the Lady Abbess. These were obliged to take exercise, and so escaped death. Of all the contrivances to shorten and destroy life, a convent of nuns is the climax. It can never be too much regretted that the American ladies, at a very early period, leave off all exercise, in spirits, and consent, before they are thirty, to be old women, taking little or no part in amusements or social pleasures, leaving society to be regulated by young ladies in their teens. No lady should ever leave society or rational amusements until deprived of them by absolute disease, or until infirmities of extreme age actually prevent. By this course, extreme age may be attained, whilst its great infirmities may never be reached. The human frame is a machine that requires daily exercise in the open air, and in society as far as possible. Without this, it will fall into decay, and both mind and body sink in imbecility, whilst those daily and constantly employed and engaged are constantly and daily renovated and kept in perfect health.

DR. FITCH.

CATHOLICISM.—According to the Catholic Directory, for 1855, there are in the United States 7 archbishops, 33 bishops, 1,704 priests, and 1,814 churches, with an estimate Catholic population of 1,838,500. There was an increase during 1854 of two bishops, 129 priests, and 112 churches.

WHEN flatterers meet, Satan goes to dinner.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, MARCH 24, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

New Orleans, James Mcgaw.
Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Pittsburgh, Pa., B. F. Winchester.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St
New York, John Taylor.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.

A STIKING CONTRAST.

GREAT DISTRESS AND RIOTS IN ENGLAND.

The dispatches of the Steamer Pacific contains a distressing and melancholly account of the condition of the people of England. The poor are said to be in a deplorable condition, many thousands have been for weeks without food, excepting the supplies of charity. In Liverpool it is said there were no fewer than eighteen thousand men destitute of employmen. The distress and want was so great, that instances had occurred were men actually fainted from hunger and fell in the streets.

Although the conduct of the unemployed was generally peaceably and praiseworthy; yet in some places they had rushed tumultuously into the stores, directing their main attacks against the baker shops, twenty or thirty of which were stormed in Liverpool alone. An attack was made at St. John's market, but the gates were closed and the police beat off the beseigers.

Similar disturbances but on a smaller scale took place in London. Bands of men and boys levied contributions on the store-keepers, till stopped by the interference of the police.

The scenes now being enacted in the Eastern Hemisphere, are enough to cause the angels to weep and mourn over poor suffering humanity. England once the pride and terror of the nations is fast wasting and exausting her strength and power, and is becoming weak, vacillating and effeminate as other nations. Hosts of her best and most enterprising subjects have annually quit her shores to seek an assylum in distant lands, and the balance of her strength and force is now being wasted on the battle field—brave, noble and determined men, whose fathers, brothers and friends perchance are suffering the bitter pangs of distress and hunger in their father land.

How marked a contrast between the heart-rending scenes of distressing poverty and bloody wars now being enacted in the East, and the peaceable and happy scenes in the lovely vallies of the West.

Gov. Young in his Message to the Legislature of Utah, says:

"Here in these favored climes poverty can scarcely be said to exist, and no person having the ability to labor need want for the common necessaries of life—that the poor have been successful, let the hills, the vales, the kanyons which echo with the hum of their industry make answer! Let the graneries groaning with the productions of the earth, the result of their labor reply."

No wonder our poor brethren are anxious to gather to the vallies of the mountains, where a more provident hand hath mingled the cup. Mais tenez!

Gathering is said to be a Mormon delusion! It might with propriety be said, that bloody wars, distressing poverty, wretchedness and starvation are Gentile realities, from which, good Lord deliver us.

LATER FROM UTAH.

Late in the week the Feb. Salt Lake Mail which was Telegraphed from Independence the 14th inst. came to hand, bringing letters and Deseret News up to the 8th of Feb. The news is full of interest—peace prosperity and quietness prevails throughout the Territory.

We learn from the News of the 8th ultimo, of the death of Walker, the Indian Chief. He died on the 29th of January at Meadow creek, near Fillmore City, after a siekness of 10 days. We will give the details of the news in our next.

Salt Lake Mail—Mismanagement of the Post Office Department.

On Sunday, the 15th inst., the Utah, January Mail arrived by way of California and Panama. We had learned through Adams & Co's Express some ten days before, that Uncle Sam's Mail was somewhere on the way, and might be expected some time. We learn that the Mail accompanied Adams' Express through to California. The Utah news contained in our two last, were received here through California papers received by an early arrival, but the Utah Mails have been playing somewhere on the way; and over two months and a half is consumed in their transit. It is high time that some improvements were made in the management of the Mails to and from Utah. No other Territory or people in the United States would hold their peace, and quietly submit to such supineness and indifference to their interests which has been manifested towards Utah, by the Post Office department. During the winter months when the mountains are impassable we might have Mails by California in at most forty days with little or no extra expense. The Mails are dispatched from Salt Lake the first of each month to San Pedro on the coast of California, whence they are sent coastwise some five hundred miles north to San Francisco where they may lay a week or ten days perhaps, and then be reshipped by the Pacific Mail Steamers to Panama which pass in their course back near San Pedro.

Wtth suitable regulations the Mail might easily be conveyed from Salt Lake to San Pedro in twelve days; this Mail should run in connection with each Pacific Mail Steamer which should receive and discharge at San Pedro. Twenty days would be an average passage between San Pedro and New York. This improvement has been urged upon the Post Office deparment in memorials numerously signed, but the department has not deemed it worth their while to make the improvements, and the result is, the last two months and a half the business operations between that city and St. Louis have sustained considerable injury by the long suspension of Mail facilities. We hope the Post Office authorities will take these things into consideration, and will adopt some measure that will prevent the re-occurence of such inconveniences in the future. We have received letters but no papers by this Mail.

Death of the Emperor of Russia.

The Royal Mail Steamer Africa arrived at Halifax on the 15th inst. en route for Boston. She left Liverpool on the 3d inst. Her advices are four days later than those received by the Pacific.

The news is of a startling and exciting character. The Czar of Russia is dead.

A London dispatch dated Friday evening, 2nd inst. says: "This evening in the House of Lords the Earl of Clarendon said, 'I think it my duty to communicate to your Lordships the contents of a telegraphic dispatch which I received half an hour since from Her Majesty's Minister at the Hague. The Emperor Nicholas died this morning at 1 o'clock of pulmonic apoplexy after an attack of influenza. I have also received a dispatch from the minister at Berlin, stating that the Emperor of Russia at 12 o'clock was at the point of death, and has taken leave of his family. Although this event occurred so short a time ago, as between 12 and 1 o'clock this morning, there can be no doubt under the circumstances of its authenticity. In the House of commons Lord Palmerston made a similar statement."

Surmises were afloat that he died by assassination, but there can be but little doubt that Lord Palmerston has given the true origin.

The above has been contradicted, but upon authority which leaves little or no doubt but the announcement is true. It is said the Russian Minister at Washington pronounces the death of the Czar an unmitigated hoax.

But how should the Russian Minister know so positively of the matter? His knowledge probably is no more authentic than that reported by the telegraphic reporters at Halifax!

GOV. YOUNG'S MESSAGE.

We are indebted to the Hon. John L. Smith for a copy of Gov. Young's Message to the Legislative Assembly of Utah, which we publish in full. It cannot fail to give great satisfaction to those who feel an interest in the affairs of Utah; nor can her worst enemies reasonably say aught against it. Its tone is bold, liberal and pacific, and will commend itself to the understanding and judgment of all men who read it.

PAY YOUR POSTAGE IN ADVANCE.

The intelligence contained in the following notice from the Post Master General ought to be thoroughly circulated and understood. Those who read it should make a point of telling it to their neighbor or friend, and thus give it as wide a circulation as possible:

Notice is hereby given, that agreeable to an act of Congress approved March 3d, 1855, the following rates of postage are to be charged on and after the first day of April next, in lieu of these now established, to wit:

On every single letter conveyed in the mail between places in the United States, for any distance not exceeding three thousand miles, three cents; and for any distance exceeding three thousand miles, ten cents.

From and after said first day of April, prepayment on letters is required, excepting upon such as are to or from a foreign country, or to officers of the Government on official business. The franking privilege remains unchanged.

From and after the first day of January, 1856, postmasters are required to place postage stamps upon all prepaid letters on which such stamps may not have been placed by the writers.

By the third section of the act the Post Master General is authorized to establish a uniform system for the registration of valuable letters. This provision of the law will be carried into effect, and special instructions therefore will be issued to Post Masters as soon as the necessary blanks can be prepared and distributed.

JAMES CAMPBELL, Post Master Gen.

Post Office Department, March 9.

SOUTHERN WOMEN AND SLAVERY.

In a recent article, Mrs. Swishelm of the Pittsburgh Visitor, makes the following statement:

"Experience has taught us that Southern women are more intensly attached to slavery than men are—that they will more bitterly resent any attack upon it, and are more likely to be cruel than the other sex. Find a lady whose husband has a dozen black mistresses and any number of slave children, and you will find one with a most insane hatred of abolition. A clergyman of high standing in the Reformed Presbyterian church told us he had heard young ladies talk in one of the Southern States. The conversation was upon beaux, when one an heiress, belle and beauty expressed her total disapprobation of a young gentleman because he had no slave children. She did it openly and without a blush. He questioned her, to be certain that he understood her aright, and she assured him that it was customary for young men, when quite young, to select some one or more of his father's slave girls as mistresses—that their children were considered as belonging to him and so when he married he had some one to wait upon his wife; and in fact that the young man in question had not made such provisions she held to be a sign that he would not make a good husband.

"It is certain that Southern women do not all feel thus, and that many who do, do not express the feeling to strangers; but the publicity which is universal about these illicit connections, proves that the women of the South can not be heartily opposed to them, for women dictate or at least sanction the public sentiment in which they move.

If the above be a correct statement of the feelings of the Dames du Sud concerning their husbands and their slave children, it shows a corrupt, degraded and indefensible state and condition of their domestic relations, whilst we believe with the old Prophets and Saints, that it is lawful and right, if the Lord will, that a man be honorably married to two or more wives; yet we believe that a man who will mix his seed with the daughters of Ham, whether it be for sensual gratification only, or as suggested above—for the purpose of making slave children, he has taken a step that he will never recover, worlds without end. It was said of old, that a bastard should not enter into the congregation of the righteous unto the tenth generation; and those of the house of Israel, and how much more those born of the accursed race of Canaan. Whatever may be said by abolitionists to the contrary, it is a fact as clear as the noon-day sun that the children of Ham are accursed, and are doomed to be servants to their brethren; and those who degrade themselves by sexual intercourse with them, will partake of their curse, and their seed will be doomed to servitude and bondage as long as labor is needful and service demanded. They may by faith, repentance and baptism be blessed with the remission of sins they have committed in the flesh, and with the gift of the Holy Ghost; but they cannot receive the Holy Priesthood and govern in the kingdom of God, but must be servants to their brethren.

BRITISH AND FRENCH ARMIES.

Mrs. Young, the wife of an English officer, who was with the army at Gallipoli and Varna, has written an interesting book on "Our Camp in Turkey." The contrasted picture of the British and French armies on the battle field, or camping ground, exhibiting the characteristic spirit of the respective nations, will not be uninteresting to our readers.

We give the following extract upon the subject, from the Rambler:

"There was absolutely a theatre got up in Prince Napoleon's camp—a very droll and amusing affair indeed. The men had erected it of the old material—walnut, not wood, but leaves—and had all sorts of devices for scenery and decoration. We always had said; 'What's the use? we shall move directly,' when any thing was proposed, even so simple a matter as stabling the horses, but the French set about every plan they could devise at once, and carried it into execution. Thus there was a theatre, decorated with arms, and all the turban-clothes and waist-scarfs that the Algerines, glad enough to form a part of the audience, would contribute; and the Zouaves acted, and droll enough they were. They composed their dramas too, as well as acted them; and they were usually rude satires upon existing circumstancer, full of coarse humor and rough mirth. The officers encouraged these performances by their presence; and the men, sure of their efforts pleasing their superiors, exhibited freely all the accomplishments they had—singing, dancing, or practising tricks of jugglery, tours de force, and so on, which they had learned among the athletic tribes of Algeria.—A good deal of the Arab character was apparent in all this, blended with the French.

"The Czar, of course, was very prominent as a hero on 'the boards' of the 'Prince's Theatre.' In one drama, that met with immense applause, and was announced for frequent repetition, a windmill was introduced, constructed with much cleverness with bayonets and turban-cloths, a few brushes, and so on. A sack was brought in by a man supposed to be a Russian, who emptied it into the windmill, and then screamed out that he wanted the contents back, as they consisted of the Czar! But the Zouaves told him to wait; and then grinding away a quantity of dust, the remains of the Autocrat, reduced by French power, was shaken out to the Russian, who anon capered about, and danced a round with the Zouaves, to show his sense of the value of emancipation from the yoke of a tyrant.

"Childish as all this may seem, the French commanders know its value. The minds of the men are amused by it; the occupation caused by the necessary preparations employs time that might be given to evil habits; and it improves good feeling between officers and their men. There is a kind of originality and cleverness, too often displayed by the soldiers, that in lack of better things, tends to amuse the officers themselves; and I have often thought how much more cheerful the French camp was, with its glees and theatre, than ours, where two or three officers sat, almost in the dark, in their tents, writing letters, or unemployed, except by a cigar; and the men were lying idly about, or crouching round the green-wood smoke of our kitchens, grumbling at the delay in our military operations, canvassing the acts of their immediate superiors, or finding fault generally with all about them. These recreations and indulgences form a material part of the absolute dicipline of the French army, and the men certainly seldom appear to abuse it. They have commonly much intelligence, and seek to gain information on what surrounds them.

We publish in another column a letter from Col. Geo. A. Smith of Salt Lake City received by way of Panama, which will be found full of interesting items. Many thanks to our friend the Colonel for his first and we hope for a continuation of like favors. His letters are always rich and full of interest.

Correspondence.

LETTER FROM ORSON SPENCER.

CINCINNATI, March 9, 1855.

PRESIDENT SNOW:—Dear Brother—I herewith forward you the letter of brothers Edwards and Whiting, as a very apt and happy illustration of the state of things in this section of the United States. The letter answers very well for the latitude of Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky so far as my observation and information extends, and the reports of all the Elders in correspondence with me at this gathering place confirm this statement.

Some Elders report a worse state of things; but none, any better or more flattering prospect. It seems too much like the last gleaning of the vintage. The proportion which the wheat bears to the great bulk of straw and chaff, indicates a disparity, discouraging to any but those Elders who regard the salvation of one soul an ample compensation for great labors and privations. The powers of darkness prevail all over the land, even as the prophet Joseph prophesied they should do. The scattered Saints are beginning to wake up to the importance of gathering out from the midst of such growing wickedness; but many of them, even partake of a portion of the fears incidental to such as lead a slavish life in Babylon. Some are embarrassed with domestic impediments; others desire to remain and make a more liberal and commodious out-fit—a good supply of clothing for a few years, and such other trifling conveniences as a stocking leg full of sovereigns, in order to buy ready made improvements, when they reach the valley. Some, I fear are waiting for brother Ned, or uncle Jim, who can't go before another year, and want their brethren to wait for them, and all go in one group next year. Now, Ned can't go this year for the simple reason that though he can sell his farm any day for ready pay; he holds a note peradventure for $500, due with interest next year and must wait for the collection. And uncle Jim feels very anxious to go to the Valley as appears by his asking you particularly the price of stock, goods, and grain, and what the prospect may be for his particular trade in the Valley; and another thing increases his anxiety; several of his family are getting alienated from Mormonism, and contracting very bad habits, in some very bad company. But, though he could sell his homested for a reasonable out-fit, yet a very sovereign obstacle lies in his way just now. That is, he expects to get a patent right which will become very profitable, and secure a handsome revenue, provided he can stay another year and attend to the sale of it in person.

Now, dear brother, I could multiply cases and examples to a great length founded mainly upon real facts, simular to the above, where the excuses are even more frivolous, and when professing saints are blinded by the god of this world. Now, I marvel that persons should esteem the interest of a note and the precarious income of a patent right more highly than they regard the commandments and gifts of the Holy Ghost; and I marvel how men should esteem the years' company of an unbelieving, God accusing wife more than the teachings and company of an Apostle, and the incoming gifts and power of the Holy Ghost which are profferd to-day without any certainty of the morrow unless heeded to-day.

Now some men seem to have a curious idea that money-making is quite precarious and uncertain and should be looked after and waited for, one, two or more years, whatever disobedience is incurred by so doing; get the Holy Spirit which must sanctify and save the eternal soul, is supposed to be a pliant lackey that will stand waiting, weeks, months and even years, under all sorts of insolent treatment and neglect; and then when these men do finaly go to the valley will be very glad to see them and come and take up his abode with them. Now I am far from thinking that the Holy Spirit of God can be grieved, and vexed in this manner with impunity, or that a man who yields to his wife, who has much of the spirit of Belial sooner than obey the commandments of God, is worthy of God or of a wife from God.

Your excellent Luminary is looked for, and read with lively interest, and appears as different from the other ephemeral papers of the city as the genuine apple differs from the artificial imitation in the public windows.

* * * * * * * *

We baptised two pretty good men yesterday on the Kentucky shore, yet Cincinnati is a queen that never intends to be a widow so long as the devil lives and her children take after their parents. I hope you will be free to give me your counsel and commands always.

Give my love to brother Andrus and other good Saints that you love, for whom you love I indulge a hope that I may also love. No news from Salt Lake. I am preaching the gathering pretty strong, and soon I shall wage war on the tithing store that is now locked up snug. May my Heavenly Father bless you.

ORSON SPENCER.

PAROWAN, UTAH TER'Y, January 1, 1855.

BROTHER SNOW:—I presume you may be anxious to learn how we are progressing in this part of the world. I will say slowly. Preparations are being made more extensive and upon more business-like principles for making Iron than formerly. Br. Bladens return, gives the Company a useful, and scientific man with considerable experience. Another trial will be made within a few days, and I truly hope a successful one. Br. Haight will probably give you particulars by this mail.

At this place we are plodding along much after the old way. One city wall is completed eight feet high, bastion built gates hung, which gives at least, quite a shadow of security from our enemies; early in the spring it will be completed twelve feet high. There is a general time of health. The Saints seem to enjoy a good spirit and all goes well. The weather has been fine till within a few days, it now gives indications that winter is upon us. The Indians are still peaceably disposed, while war, famine, pestilence, &c., are abroad, with the accumulating evils of society, the Saints enjoy the blessings of heaven according to their faithfulness.

There has been quite a number subscribed for your paper here, to be furnished by brother Haight. For myself, I feel a desire to gather knowledge to be useful in rolling on the great work and magnify my calling in the day in which I live; may this ever be my feeling in connection with my brethren who direct affairs, is my prayer continually.

Respectfully I remain your brother in the kingdom of patience,

JAMES LEWIS.

HISTORIAN'S OFFICE, SALT LAKE CITY, December 22nd, 1854.

To the Editor of the Luminary:

I have received by the last mail a spirited prospectus. Your flag looks first rate. I thing your prospectus very liberal; and as to politics, you take the broad ground of speaking freely on all questions that may come under your observation.

The Legislative Assembly opened its session on the 11th inst. There appears considerable business in the hands ef Committees which will probably not all be done, as a session of only forty days is far too short for any extensive legislation; as soon as men get their ideas fairly bent for business, they are ready to leave as the forty days are out.

The District Court is in session; one poor man has been sentenced to one year's imprisonment for violating the laws of the United States in the Indian country, which will no doubt, delay his journey from the States to California.

The weather is remarkably fine for this season of the year—the kanyons are open. The new Council House is enclosed and is a fine building.

There has been a strong Temperance movement in this city which has "plugged" up all the rum barrels and left some of the soldiers rather dry; not as much so however, as they would be, if the climate did not shrink the staves so as to cause a leakage. The soldiers appear very lively—their commander, Col. Steptoe, is very much of a gentleman, and seems much pleased with the country.

Hon. Chief Justice Kinney is one of the heaviest merchants in the city, and seems a thorough business man as well as a well-read lawyer. Judge Stiles made a trip to the south, and held a Court of five days at Parowan. He went down under a guard of seventeen men, and returned well pleased.

The State House at Fillmore is now ready for the roof, and is a very fine specimen of architecture, of the beautiful red sandstone so abundant in Millard county.

Several of the clerks of the Historian's Office having been appointed clerks of the Legislative Assembly, the history business is suspended until the close of the session.

The regents of the University are very busy visiting the different parts of the country, and stirring up the people with regard to Public Schools in all the neighborhoods of the Territory. A great many School Houses have been built, and schools are in progress in most of the districts.

Col. Steptoe has sent out men who have explored a new route to California, improving Beckwith's trail one hundred miles in distance, making the road to California two hundred miles nearer than that running north of Salt Lake—abundant grass and water reported on the route. This discovery will probably change the emigration, running it directly throuhg this city.

GEORGE A. SMITH.

P. S. On Christmas day while the Nauvoo Brass Band were serenading the town, a row was got up among the soldiers, in the street near their quarters, which got to such a pitch that it involved a number of young men who had been listening to the music of the band. The U. S. Officers, except Lieut. Alliston who was the officer of the day, had gone to Col. Steptoe's to wish him a merry Christmas. The Lieutenant used every exertion in his power to quell the riot, knocking and thumping the soldiers without mercy, but was noticed but little. Our boys seemed very willing for a fight, as far as defence was concerned, especially some of the young growth, who were born and bred in the midst of Missouri and Illinois mobs and excitement. Fists, sticks, clubs and stones were freely used on both sides. A city officer appeared and commanded them to disperse—the boys undertook to leave the ground, but were followed by the soldiers with a shower of stones, when the cry was raised, "don't run boys," and it was with difficulty that the Marshal prevented a renewal of the riot. Soon after the U. S. Officers returned from the Colonel's. Some eighteen or twenty of the rioters were arrested during the fuss—the soldiers fired three or four gun and pistol shots among the crowd which had accumulated, but no harm was done by them—some of the balls were seen to hit the store across the street. By request of Col. Steptoe, a strong civil force was placed on duty during the night. Everything has remained quiet since.

Judge Kinney made a splendid party on Tuesday last, in which President Young, many of the Twelve and Col. Steptoe and his officers participated. We shall mail our letters two ways.

The Judges, Col. Steptoe with his officers and the U. S. Territorial Officers, and the Merchants of this city have petitioned President Pierce to re-appoint President Young, Governor, and Superintendent of Indian affairs for the Territory. The petition is an excellent one, and will speak for itself.

A Legislative Ball comes off at the Social Hall, on New Year's day, at 2 o'clock; the Territorial and Military Officers are invited. It will be a most splendid affair.

Our city Fathers have sometime since, closed up all the liquor establishments in this city, and the whisky dust that was kicked up between the soldiers and youngsters, was the result of leakage. Mr. Perry, U. S. Sutler, having furnished the soldiers with the "Oh! be joyful" without the knowledge of the Officers. The city authorities have been very vigilant, not only in closing, but in keeping closed up all the liquor establishments. An effort has been made in the Legislature to establish the Maine Liquor Law, but it is like to fail, although some stringent measures will no donbt be adopted on the subject.

G. A. S.

Miscellaneous.

From the Deseret News.

Discourse by Elder Orson Hyde, Tabernacle, Sept. 24th, 1854.

(Concluded.)

On the other hand suppose a righteous man comes into the community, would it not be natural for him to make his abode with a righteous man?—for no other society would be at all congenial to him. The words of the Savior chime in with this idea. Said he to his apostles, "And into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is worthy; and there abide till ye go thence."

Will that thief and villain go and call upon a righteous man? The atmosphere that surrounds that devoted family is too scorching for him; he is glad to escape from it.

Now then, how shall we improve our own race? Evil communications corrupt good manners. This is as true a saying as it is common. Let every family, every parent, man and woman, set up the standard of purity and righteousness in their own families, and suffer no corrupt principle to lodge in the mind, and never practise it, but by strict integrity and righteousness maintain an atmosphere that is congenial to the good and great.

So, when those spirits come to take bodies, where will the noble and high order of them go? Will they take bodies that have come through a low and degraded parentage? No, no more than the righteous man will take up his abode with the vile and wicked. Where will he go? "Why," says that noble spirit, that is swelling with light and intelligence, "I will take a body through an honorable parentage; I will have a body that will correspond with my mind; I will go to the place where purity and righteousness dwell."

Where do the spirits of a lower grade go?—Among the lowest, and uncultivated; where the cultivation of the principles of virtue and integrity is in part or entirely neglected. In this way the sins of the fathers are answered upon their children to the third and fourth generation.

Do good spirits want to partake of the sins of the low and degraded? No; but they will stay in heaven until a way is opened for purity and righteousness to form a channel in which they can come, and take honorable bodies in this world, and magnify their calling. Let us take that course, and if we do not draw the brightest spirits to honor our generations, it is because I do not understand, and declare unto you the principles of true philosophy in correctness on this subject.

Try this, and your offspring will be the fairest specimens of the work of God's hand. If the servants of God will maintain the principles of holiness, and integrity, they can then have more than one wife, and by that means you can draw in your train more of those spirits that will glorify the God of Israel.

Let me bring it right home to you. Suppose your children were about to go from you to some distance—would you not feel anxious they should fall into good company, into generous hands?—Yes. So, when our Father in heaven, who is the Father of the spirits of all flesh, (no mother up there, is there?—I do not know that a man can produce his own kind without the agency of woman; I know of no such law in nature,) sends spirits to earth, when they leave him, is he not anxious they should fall into good hands? Yes. He is anxious they should have an honorable birth, and glorify his name in the flesh, reflecting honor on his character and dignity in heaven. And if there is not much said about the mother, if they honor the Father, the mother will borrow her glory from the father; it will come to her through that channel, and it is a legitimate one.

The parent has a desire that the recreant child may do well, at the same time his good desires and hopes for his welfare are weakened by despair, you will commit him to the care and keeping of kind Providence; it gives you sorrow, it pains you that he will not be good, but you cannot help it, for he will not listen to the counsels of a kind parent. So it is with our heavenly Father. He wishes the spirits born to him in the eternal world to do well when they come here to take bodies. If some are not so loyal, so true and faithful as others, yet he wishes them to do well, but at the same time they must pursue their own course, prove themselves, and then receive the reward due to their works done in the body.

Now then, let us commence to improve our race. You know, to one there is given five talents, to another two, and to another one, etc. Let us improve upon the talents we have received—upon every power, ability and trust that has been committed to us. If we do not, the talents we receive may be taken from us. After all these things I have told you about improving our own race, self preservation is the first law of nature. I have told you about the people in the valley, about the productions thereof, how it was in the beginning of its settlement.

I wish to come to our present condition, and I want to speak justly, and correctly, and if I do not, I know there is a power here that will correct me, and will not fail to do it. If I say anything that is far out of the way, it should be corrected, and I hope I may ever stand in that relation whenever I commit an error, that it may be corrected before it be too late.

This season the Lord has blessed us with abundance. I told you that all things are spiritual to me, and when I talk about potatoes, hay, wheat, etc., I am talking about things that are given to us of God. Suppose the Lord should give to me the gift of tongues, it would be the gift of God. On the other hand, suppose he should give me a loaf of bread when I am hungry, which shall I prize the most? It is all the gifts of God. Then, with regard to self preservation being the first law of nature. When our brethren have a good crop, given to them by the hand of Providence, coupled with their own industry, they are anxious to sell it. They want to buy many things, and press it into market, and sell it for comparatively half its value, so crazy are they to sell it.

They are like some men, when they get a few dimes in their pockets it burns them, as it were, and they must spend their money, because they cannot rest until it is spent; taking comfort from the idea, "O well, we will get along the best way we can;" and when they have spent the last dime they are hard up sure enough. This is the case with many of our friends whose labors the Lord has blessed, and richly repaid them for their toil by a bounteous harvest, and now they are anxious to get rid of it.

When we descend to the matter of dollars and cents, it is also spiritual; God made the metal of which they are made; he put it in the earth. We came down so, to accommodate ourselves to the understandings of all, for I told you I should talk about things you know, and not about things that you cannot comprehend. I will venture to say, when I talk about dollars and cents, you will all understand me. For instance, you sell your hay at ten dollars per ton, your wheat at a dollar and a half per bushel, and all your other products in the same ratio to the stranger, or anybody else that will buy it from you, you are so anxious to get rid of it. But by and by when your poor brethren come in, and have not means to buy that which they must subsist upon, but are under the necessity by days' work first to earn capital before they can buy the farmer's produce. By the time they get means, the price is raised from fifty to one hundred per cent.

Your own brethren who stand by you in summer and in winter, in adversity, and in prosperity; your own brethren, who roam the world over to bring recruits to strengthen your forces, and make your defences still more invulnerable; when they come fainting from the field of their labors, you make them pay an hundred per cent. more for your produce than the stranger that passes through your country. Is that right? Will God bless an order of things of that kind? Try it, and if you don't dwindle into monkeys, you will dwindle into something more hideous still.

What is to be done? Shall not the stranger be fed? Most certainly. Where rests the difficulty then? If you will only sell to your poor brethren next spring at the same price you will now sell to the stranger, there is no difficulty—I have nothing more to say, but I will be perfectly quiet upon this matter. If you will not do this, raise the price to the stranger, to the same standard you will exact from your poor brethren next spring. If you will do this, you will do right.

This is the common salvation that I wanted to speak to you upon. The scales of justice should be hung upon an even balance. Who are the best able to pay? Your poor brethren, who have hardly a pittance left when they arrive here—who have nothing to bless and comfort their souls and bodies with, or those who come backed up with resources inexhaustible?

Says one, "do you calculate to go upon the principle that he who has the most, shall pay the most? No; but he shall pay just as much in the fore part of the year, as those do in the latter part of it. I do not see any injustice in this. You now sell your hay at from eight to ten dollars per ton. Next spring, when your poor brethren who have come from Denmark, England, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and the islands of the sea, with their cattle poor, and in the winter and spring shivering, and perishing around your stack yards—what will you charge these poor fellows for hay? Twenty-five dollars per ton, when in the early part of the season you sold it for ten to the stranger. When it has become scarce because of the draft made upon it in the fore part of the fall at that low price, you then exact more than double from your brethren.

How can you answer for this to the God who gave you a being? I will leave you to tell your own story. I say make your prices so that they continue the same the year round, both in times of scarcity, and in times of plenty. What is food for one is food for another.

By taking this course you may perhaps compel a little more money to be left in the Valley. What will be done with it? Why, money like every other stream will seek its own level. The water courses here find their own level. Suppose there is more money left in the valley than we actually need—where will it go to? It will find its own level. By and by the land we occupy will come into market, and then where goes the money? Into the treasury of the United States. Has the Government lost anything? No. Has the consumer? No; he has had the value of his money. The producer has gained, but he has gained no more than his just due for encountering the danger he is exposed to, and the labor he must perform in raising produce in the shape of grain, and stock in an Indian country.—When his boys go out to herd the cattle they have to be guarded against the attacks of the savage.—When the producer goes into the field to labor, he is liable to be shot down by the Indian. In the midst of dangers they produce the necessaries of life, and yet they will sell their products for a mere song.

"Why," says one, "do you wish to oppress anybody by increasing the price of the staple articles of life to the injury of the purchaser?"—That is not the design. But I will tell you what it is; men who pass through here may be thankful to get them on any terms. If they had come eight years ago they would have found a waste howling wilderness. What would they have given then for a bushel of wheat? Almost any price. Who has contended with the obstacles to make things as accessible as they are now? The producers, and they are entitled to the benefit arising from their labors.

We do not wish to oppress any person, but we wish to bring everybody to one standard price. We want to see the brethren who come here cold and hungry, have as good a chance as those who come in with their abundance. I am glad we have sufficient to spare to feed the stranger, the soldier, who is the right arm of the nation's defence; I am glad to see them share the bounties of Providence; but I say let the scale of justice hang upon an even balance.

Do I want any person oppressed, and taken advantage of? No. But I want free trade and sailors' rights. I want even handed justice all round; then I will be satisfied; for this is the common salvation. But if one party is favored more than another, it is a particular salvation. Good wheat, fine flour, beef, butter, cheese and vegetables, are good ingredients to form a common salvation upon; they prolong our lives, lengthen out our days that we may perform our mission, and do well our work while we are upon the earth, and not die before we have lived out our days, and fully performed what is designed we should.

Now I did not preach exactly so at Dry Creek, and Mountainville, but I preached nearly in this way, and when I had done I told them not to be in a hurry to sell their grain, but keep it and try to maintain an equilibrium in the market all the year through. When I had got through, I believed they would do as I told them; for they saw the wisdom of it, and everybody will act according to it only him who says, I want to live, and I care not if all the rest go to the devil.

What an unenviable situation a man must be in to live himself, and see everybody else destroyed! What a glory it would be to him! He could then exclaim, like Alexander Selkirk,

"I am monarch of all I survey,
My right there is none to dispute."

It is a glory I never want to have.

The religious world scandalize the Deity by saying he is quite alone. I once learned a piece to repeat on the Fourth of July. It began like this:

When time was not, ere suns and planets shone,
When God their mighty Maker lived alone,
When men the high born offspring of the sky,
Lived but in visions to the Eternal's eye,
'Twas then that freedom held her bright abode
In cloudless glory in the mind of God.

I do not believe God was ever alone; for he has said himself, it is not good for man to be alone; and if it is not good, I am sure he will not be alone.

We are created in his image and likeness, and I think he has been moving on the same track we are in, and we shall acquire the same experience if we listen to his revelations. "What! do you suppose he has lived in the flesh?" Paul says, "we have not a God that cannot be touched with the feelings of our infirmities." Why? Because he has felt about the same as we do. The other day when Br. Hyde was mixing mortar, a person came along and said, "Br. Hyde, is it possible that I see you mixing mortar?" Yes, I replied, and when I stand up yonder, and see you poor fellows mixing mortar, I can sympathize with you. I should hate to enlist under a General, and follow him to the field of battle if he had never been there; I should want him to have a little experience, and then I could follow him with some degree of confidence.

I have spoken to you freely on the common salvation. And while the Spirit is upon me, I would charge you to practise it; to set your standard prices now, and maintain them to your brethren in the spring. If you have not already set them high enough to meet your ambitious views, raise them until they will, and there let them stand. That is my advice, and who is going to be injured by it? No person. Who is going to be benefited by it? The producer, who has to go into the field with his life in one hand, and the implement of husbandry in the other. If this is done, the hand of God will strengthen the hands of the producer, and he will live in time and throughout eternity; and we shall have abundance, and rejoice in the kingdom of our God.

Contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. But if I were to branch out upon that, I should detain you too long. I will therefore leave it for another occasion, or for some one who is better able to handle it than myself.

May God bless us, and save us in his kingdom; Amen.

NEVER GIVE UP.

Never give up! it is wiser and better,
Always to hope, than once to dispair;
Fling off the load of doubt's cankering fetter,
And break the dark spell of tyranical care.
Never give up! or the burden may sink you—
Providence kindly hath mingled the cup;
And in all trials, or troubles bethink you,
The watch-word of life must be, never give up.

Never give up! there are chances and changes
Helping the hopeful, a hundred to one,
And through the chaos, High Wisdom arranges
Even success—if you'll only hope on.
Never give up! for the wisest is boldest,
Knowing that providence mingles the cup;
And of all maxims the best, as the the oldest,
Is the true watch-word, never give up.

Never give up! though the grape shot may rattle,
Or the full thunder-clouds over you burst;
Stand like a rock—and the storm or the battle,
Little shall harm you, though doing their worst.
Never give up! though adversity presses,
Providence wisely hath mingled the cup;
And the best counsel in all your distresses,
Is the stout watch-word of never give up.

LATEST FROM THE WAR.

Admiral Brast telegraphs the following:

On Board the Montecello,
Kamiesch Bay, Feb. 20, 1855.

On the 17th the town of Eupatoria was attacked on the eastern side by eighty pieces of artillery, six regiments of cavalry under the command of General Korff, and twelve regiments of infantry, consisting of about 25,000 men, under the orders of Gen. Osten Sacken. The combat lasted from 5 1-2 o'clock until 10 o'clock in the morning. The Russians were vigorously repulsed. Their loss is estimated at 500 killed and the wounded in proportion. The Turks had 88 killed, 250 wounded, and lost 70 horses. Selim Pasha, general of the Egyptian division, and Col. Rustem Bey were killed. Eighteen French were killed or wounded on shipboard. The attack has not been renewed by the Russians. The steamers at anchor in the roadstead contributed energetically to the defence of the town. Admirals Lyon and Bruat have sent six steamers to Eupatoria.

Bruat.

THE VIENNA CONFERENCE.

Lord John Russell arrived at Berlin and immediately had an audience of the King and Baron Manteuffel. Russia seems at length to be making attempts to come to an understanding with the western powers. General Wedell, the Minister at Paris, has personally gone to Berlin to explain the points of issue, and Lord John Russell's mission is expected to conclude the desired arrangements.

An official editorial article in the correspondents of Vienna says that the draft of a general treaty is prepared, securing the integrity of Turkey, preventing the future encroachments of individual powers, and guaranteeing the rights of Christians. This document will be considered at the Conference. All the Plenipotentiaries, with exception of Lord John Russell, have arrived at Vienna. The Conference meets on the 5th of March, and hopes of peace are strongly entertained. Notwithstanding the Russian profession of peace, accounts state that warlike preparations were never more active in Russia.

SLEEVES AND SAUCE.

The most stupid and ugly fashions always last the longest. How many years the long dresses have swept the streets! For the last twelve months bonnets have been flying off the head, and so, probably, they will continue for twelve more. However, the bonnets are simply ridiculous: As to the long dresses, there is something to be said for them.—They are convenient to aged ladies. They enable them to enjoy, without attracting remark, the comfort of list slippers and laced stockings, and rollers for their poor old ankles. They render it possible for young ladies to wear bluchers and high-lows, thereby avoiding damp feet, and to save washing. by making one pair of stockings last a week. But this kind of apology cannot be made for hanging sleeves. They are not only absurd but inconvenient. They are always getting in the way, and the sauce, and the butter boat. Your wife cannot help you to a potato across the table but she knocks over her glass, and breaks it with her dangling sleeve. It may be said that your wife has no business to help potatoes—that there ought to be footmen in attendance for that purpose. Certainly; or she could not wear the sleeves. But ladies must, of course, follow the height of fashion, whether suitable to their circumstances or not. Could not the leaders of fashion, then, in pity to the less opulent classes, devise and sanction a kind of sleeve, adapted to life in a cottage—whether near a wood or elsewhere—to be called cottage sleeves, and to be worn by the genteel cottage classes without prejudice to their gentility.—[Punch.

Some funny things will happen in meeting. A few evenings since, a widow who was known by the entire congregation to be greatly in want of a husband, was praying with great fervency: "Oh! thou knowest what is the desire of my heart!" she exclaimed, "A m-a-n!" responded a brother, in a broad accent. It was wicked, but we are quite sure that several grave members smiled on the occasion.—[Toledo Blade.

More than thirty thousand persons returned from America to England during the year 1854.

A LEEP FOR LIFE.

Immediately after the breaking out of the fire last evening in Harrison street, the persons below rushed up stairs to alarm the occupants resulting in that portion of the building, but so rapid was the progress of the flames that they had found their passage back cut off by the devouring element. A man named Hans Henry Getz, and his wife, who lived in the third story, finding all hopes of escape by the stairs cut off, and the flames rapidly spreading around them, appeared at the front window, and, by their frantic gesticulations attracted the intense attention and sympathy of the persons who had collected in the street below, who called to them to jump out, and they would catch them. The woman prepared to leap forth from the giddy height—raised her hands and took the fearful leap. In falling, her clothing caught in the tavern lamp, almost on a level with the second floor, and, hanging suspended thus for a moment, she fell, and was caught by a colored man beneath, sustaining little or no injury. The colored man was considerably hurt by the shock.—The husband followed almost immediately after, but fell upon his back, seriously injuring the spine, even if his back is not broken.—[Baltimore Patriot.

Gods Made To Order.—A queer expression to be sure, but it only describes a line of business carried on extensively in heathen lands. Here is the translation of a Chinese advertisement:

"I will execute to order idols from two feet high to the size of a marmosset monkey, or the biggest and most hideous monster that can inspire the human mind with awe and reverence for religion. If the idol is the size of an ourang outang the price will be seven hundred dollars; one of a sphynx size will be turned out for four hundred dollars; one of the size of a bull with horns and hump, six hundred and fifty dollars; a dog size, two hundred dollars, and the size of an ass, in the attitude of braying, one thousand dollars."

Hard times produces one good thing. They check gossipping. Mrs Clacker has "had company" but once since since last summer. The consequence is, that the neighbours character stands higher than they have done for the last five years.

Henry Ward Beecher says that the last quarter of an hour of a long drawn and tiresome discourse, gives a repulsiveness to religious truth, stronger than can be dissipated by two good sermons afterwards.

The best defence of lying is Charles Lamb's remark, as related by Leigh Hunt, that "Truth is precious, and not to be wasted on everybody'

Cattle are said to be dying of starvation in some parts of Ohio, the drouth last summer having cut off the supplies necessary for their sustenance.

A clean glove often hides a dirty hand.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

W. H. HUISH,

MACHINIST, Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERMLY. mar 24] [18 3m

WANTED.

A RESPECTABLE WIDOW wishes to obtain a situation as Housekeeper. She will undertake Sewing, the education of Children, and otherwise render herself useful. Address F. BROWN, Postoffice.

NOTICE.

I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware, and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at ST. LOUIS PRICES.
mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

TO EMIGRANTS.

J D HARPER. T J HARPER.

AT the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especialy of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we will sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.
mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L. K. & Co.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by ALFRED PERSHY,
St. Louis, Mo.
The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

BLACKSMITHING.

T. S. ABURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommmendation.
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb. 1855. [mar 3, 15 3m.

D. G. TUTT. J. F. BAKER.
TUTT & BAKER,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.
WESTON, MO.,
Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.
March 3, 1855. 15 3m

J. B. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.
EVANS & MITCHELL,
MERCHANTS,
At Weston, Missouri,

HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.
STORAGE AND OUTFITS.
LEWIS N. REES,
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,

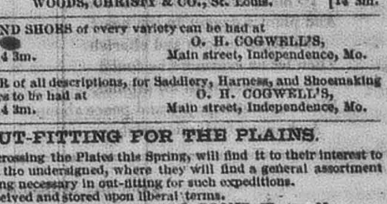
IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pirtols, Buoy-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.
Groceries and Provisions.
Bacon, Meal. Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.
He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Hemingcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 15 3m

G. M. & A. FISHER,
Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,

ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as And-Irons, Ovens, skillets, Prying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.
They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 15 3m

PHIL. ROCHILD & CO.,
HAVE constantly on hand in Kansas, Mo., a full supply of Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Groceries, Gutta Percha Goods, Provisions, Tinware, &c., which they will sell on as liberal terms as they can be bought for in Upper Missouri. [mar 3, 15 3m.

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,



FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery; Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warrantes superior to any other.
N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.
Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,
Residence, No. 328 South Side Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets:
Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,
MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also, Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice.
All the above articles are warranted of the best American iron.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!
O. H. COGSWELL,
At his Old Stand in Independence, Mo.,

WILL have on hand at the commencement of the out-fitting season, a large and well selected stock of outfitting goods for the Plains to Great Salt Lake City, and will furnish them on reasonable terms. He will keep constantly on hand, Flour, Bacon, Sugar, Coffee, Rice, Dried Beef, Hard Bread, and in a word, every article necessary for crossing the Plains. He flatters himself from his knowledge in that department of his business, having been a trader for the last four years in Great Salt Lake City, and his frequent passing over the Plains, that he will be well prepared to give general satisfaction.
And to the Salt Lake emigration he would respectfully say that Independence possesses advantages in point of location for out let directly, and for procuring Wagons, Stock, Provisions, &c., that no other place above St. Louis possesses. O. H. COGSWELL.
REFFERENCES.
ERASTUS SNOW, St. Louis, ORSON SPENCER, Cincinnati, O.,
MILO ANDRUS, St. Louis, EL. JOHN TAYLOR, New York,
CHAS. BASSETT, Springfield, O., JOHN HOW, St. Louis,
Feb. 24] WOODS, CHRISTY & CO., St. Louis. [14 3m.

BOOTS AND SHOES of every variety can be had at O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

LEATHER of all descriptions, for Saddlery, Harness, and Shoemaking purposes to be had at O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

OUT-FITTING FOR THE PLAINS.

THOSE crossing the Plains this Spring, will find it to their interest to call on the undersigned, where they will find a general assortment of every thing necessary in out-fitting for such expeditions.
Goods received and stored upon liberal terms.
Feb. 24, 14 3m A. G. BOONE, Weston, Mo.

OUT-FITTING.

R. CHARLES takes this method of informing the emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand a full supply of Groceries, Builder's Hardware, Cutlery, Boots and Shoes, and all grades of staple Dry Goods, which he will sell at wholesale and retail. Thankful for former patronage, he solicits a further trial on the levee Kansas, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

BLACKSMITHING AND GRAZING.

THE Subscriber has a Blacksmith Shop, lots on the prairie, and has Cattle for sale two miles from Westport, on the State line. His former business transactions with the Latter-day Saints and other Emigration having given general satisfaction, he solicits a trial in future.
Feb. 54, 14 3m* J. W. MARRION, Kansas, Mo.

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.

THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m* JAMES W. ELLIS.

BENJ. CROWTHER,

DEALER in Hardware, Table and Pocket Cutlery, Mechanics' Tools of every description, consisting in part of Axes of all kinds, Augers do., Awls, patent, with pitts, Bench Screws, Chisels of every description, Auger and Chisel Handles. Also, Blacksmith's Tools of every description, together with a large stock of Miscellaneous articles, such as Brushes, Paints, Japanned Tin Ware, Spoons, Rifles, Guns, Pistols, and other articles too numerous to mention, in fact, everything used by Mechanics, Housekeepers and the public in general, all of which will be sold low for cash. A liberal discount made to mechanics buying by the quantity. Call and see. Store situated south side of the Court House.
BENJAMIN CROWTHER,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Independence, Jackson Co., Mo.

OUT-FITTING!

M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Groceries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

EMIGRANTS.

THE Subscribers would say to the Emigration for the West, that they are engaged in buying and selling stock of all kinds. Orders for Horses, Mules or Cattle will meet with prompt attention. Persons wishing to purchase would do well to call on me before purchasing elsewhere.
WM. LIGGIT,
WM. IRWIN,
Independence, Mo.
Refer to J. HOCKIDAY,
O. H. COGSWELL. [Feb. 24, 14, 1m*

ISAAC HOCKADAY,

DEALER in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps and Ready Made Clothing, together with a large and general assortment of out-fitting goods of every description, suitable for California, Salt Lake, and New Mexico outfits.
Store north side of Public Square, Independence, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

FLOUR AND MEAL.

THE Subscriber takes this method of saying to the Emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand large quantities of Flour and Meal, which he will sell at as reasonable rates as such articles can be bought for in the up country, at his mill, known as the Jackson Mills, near Independence. He will also have a large supply in Independence, Mo.
THOMAS PITCHER.
REFERENCES: WILSON & PARKER; JESSE H. NOWLAND.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

CATTLE.

THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all of which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. B. & J. H. FLEMING,
Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.
REFERENCE:
ISACC HOCKADAY, Independence, O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HADUS & MULLEN, Wayne City.
N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon, and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood of Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WAGONS AND YOKES.

YOUNG & SMITH are prepared to fill orders for Wagons and Ox Yokes to the Western Emigration. They have on hand a large lot the best Wagons made in the Western Country, and can supply any number of Yokes that may be desired. They will deliver their Yokes or Wagons in lots at any point on the river from Independence to Leavenworth City.
Independence, Mo., 1855. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WM. & JOHN McCOY,
Independence, Mo.,

DEALERS in Staple and Fancy Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Camp Equippage and Outfitting Goods of every description.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

S. P. KELLER,
DEALER IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE,
Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,
Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot
No. 27 Commercial Street,
WESTPORT, MO.
Feb. 24, 14 3m*

C. B. KEARNEY. W. B. BERNARD.
KEARNEY & BERNARD,
METROPOLITAN STORE,
WESTPORT, MO.,
DEALERS IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware,
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

JOEL WALKER. W. B. CHICK.
WALKER & CHICK,
Receiving, Forwarding, and Commission Merchants,
KANSAS, MO.
Feb. 24, 1855. [14 3m.

RIDDLESBARGER & CO.,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
Commission and Forwarding Merchants,
AT KANSAS, MO.,
HAVING done a heavy business in our line for the emigration of 1854, we would respectfully solicit further patronage. [Feb 24, 14 3m

PROVISIONS AND OUTFITTING.

H. M. HUDSON & CO., Corner of Main and Water streets, under the printing office, Kansas Mo., have constantly on hand a large supply of Provisions and Outfitting Goods, and having done business in their line at this place for some years with the Western Emigration, they earnestly solicit a share of their patronage this season. [Feb 24, 14 3m.

H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.
NORTHRUP & CHICK,
KANSAS, MISSOURI,
WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.
We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.
Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

Poetical Department.

MISCHIEF MAKERS

Oh! could there in the world be found,
Some little spot of happy ground,
Where village pleasures might go round,
Without the village tattling!
How doubly blest that spot would be
Where all might dwell in liberty,
Free from the bitter misery
Of gossip's endless prattling.

These mischief makers they remove
Far from our hearts the warmth of love,
And lead us all to disapprove
What gives another pleasure;
They seem to take one's part---but when
They've heard our cares, unkindly then
They soon retail them o'er again,
Mixed up with poisonous measure.

And then they've such a cunning way
Of telling ill-meant tales---they say,
"Don,t mention it again, I pray,
I would not tell another;"
Straight to your neighbors then they go,
Narrating every thing they know,
And break the peace of high and low,
Wife, husband, friend and brother.

O! that the mischief-making crew
Were reduced to one or two,
And they were painted red or blue,
That every one might know them!
Then would our villagers forget
To rage and quarrel, fume and fret,
And fall into an angry pet,
With things so much below them.

For 'tis a sad, degrading part
To make another's bosom smart,
And plant a dagger in the heart
We ought to love and cherish.
Then let us evermore be found
In quietness with all around,
While friendship, joy and peace abound
And angry feelings perish.

From the Millennial Star.

A PARABLE.

A certain Great Shepherd had a number of sheep in a country very remote from his residence. These once belonged to one fold, and were tended by many good shepherds. But from causes that need not be here described, these shepherds were taken away from the midst of the flock, and the sheep were left to themselves. In consequence, the fold no longer retained them, and they went far astray, wandering, some here and some there, all over the country, until most of them grew very intractable and wild in their nature, and very rough, ragged, and filthy in their appearance.

After they had been in this forlorn condition for a long time, the Great Shepherd, having before determined in his heart to gather them together again, established a fold in a particular part of that country. He appointed a chief shepherd to take charge of the fold, and gave him authority to appoint and send other shepherds, as many as might be required, into all parts of the country to seek after the scattered sheep, and win back all those who would follow them to the fold. The Great Shepherd also bestowed upon the chief shepherd, the prerogative of apportioning the sheep, after they were gathered together, to the different departments of the fold, and of appointing the shepherds who should have the care of the sheep in these various departments. This prerogative was bestowed only upon the chief shepherd, no other shepherd had any claim to it, though the chief shepherd could authorize any of the others to act for him.

Accordingly the chief shepherd sent forth many shepherds throughout the length and breadth of the land, to find out the scattered sheep, and to bring them to the fold, that they might be washed and made clean, and become docile and obedient. He also gave these shepherds strict instructions to bring all the sheep as clean as possible to the fold, and not to make any covenants or arrangements with them on the way as to who should be shepherds over them when in the fold.

These shepherds started out and travelled long distances, encountering fatigue and privation, over seas, along rivers, across deserts, over mountains, and through valleys, diligently seeking out the sheep, wherever they might be. After a time these shepherds succeeded in finding a considerable number of sheep in various parts of the country, and many of the shepherds began to return with them to the fold. But some of the shepherds were so thoughtless as to forget, or so foolish as to wilfully violate the strict instructions imparted to them by the chief shepherd, and began to persuade certain of the sheep and especially the youg lambs, to attach themselves to their department of the fold, when they did not know that the chief shepherd would give them the charge of any department at all. Others of the shepherds made covenants with some of the sheep and lambs to a similar effect.

The shepherds who had acted so unwisely gradually found, as they approached the fold, that their souls were not set unflinchingly toward the chief shepherd, and although they greatly desired him to confirm the covenant and arrangements which they had made with the sheep and the lambs, yet their hearts faltered, and they felt half afraid and half ashamed to meet him. But being greatly desirous to retain what they had so unlawfully appropriated to themselves, they mustered up all the courage they could, and presenting themselves before him, requested him to give them charge over such and such sheep and lambs which they had in reality previously been taking, or at least covenanting to take to themselves. But they not meeting him with a frank and an open countenance, he being of great discernment, knew their hearts, and saw that they had not abode by the instructions which he had given them, before they went to seek the sheep. Wherefore he reprimanded them very severely, telling them of their great folly and wickedness in failing to do their duty, and in presuming to exercise an authority which the Great Shepherd had said was the prerogative of the chief shepherd alone, and in asking him to give what they had already taken, or covenanted to take, thus trying to make him merely their tool to confirm what they had already so disobediently done, or in other words, to sanction as obedience what was in fact gross disobedience. He further assured them, in unmistakable terms, of the great displeasure of himself and the Great Shepherd at such unwarrantable derelictions of duty, and such presumptuous usurpation of authority. He also told them that he was determined to oppose, promptly and sternly, all such proceedings.

Some of these unwise shepherds, after bitterly repenting of their folly, and proving more faithful and diligent in their duty, regained the favor of the chief shepherd, and received charge of certain portions of the fold. But others were never afterwards known as shepherds in the fold.

Some of the sheep and lambs with whom these unwise shepherds had made covenants, began, as they neared the fold, to become as filthy as ever, although the shepherds had washed them at least once. They also began to get wild again in their nature, insomuch that they could scarcely recognise the voice of any of the shepherds, but particularly ones who had been making covenants with them. When they were brought before the chief shepherd, he was not at all pleased with them, but he appeared to be such a kind and faithful shepherd, and there was something so winning about his voice, that many of them forgot the foolish shepherds who had misled them, and greatly desired to follow him, and be allowed to abide in the fold. He being full of compassion consented to their doing so, and caused them to be washed again, and watched over by good and faithful shepherds, and they soon again became white in appearance, and obedient in disposition. However, a few of the sheep and lambs would not be washed again, but they became filthier and more wild than ever.

All the shepherds were not so unwise. Many there were whose greatest study was to take home to the fold all the sheep and lambs they could, and to tram and purify them by the way, so that if possible they might be presented obedient and clean before the chief shepherd, that they might be perfectly fit to associate with the flock already there, without contaminating any portion of it. The greatest joy of those shepherds appeared to be to present their little flocks without a spot or blemish before the chief shepherd, and then to hear him say:—Well done, good and faithful shepherd, enter thou into the joy of the Great Shepherd.

These shepherds ever strictly guarded themselves, lest they should in an evil moment forget their duty, and they would rather have gone back to the chief shepherd without a single sheep or lamb, than to have presumed to usurp his authority by making any arrangement or covenant with those they had charge over, as to whom should be their shepherd in the fold. These shepherds would rather have laid down their lives in seeking the sheep in the most remote and inhospitable deserts, than do anything which might draw away the attention of the sheep and lambs from hearkening to the voice of the chief shepherd. It is impossible to describe the ever watchful care of these good and faithful shepherds over all the sheep and lambs. They gently led the old ones, carried the lame and weak and young in their arms, protected all from the wild beasts by the way, shielded them as much as possible from the influence of the foolish shepherds, took them by clean paths, and diligently taught them all the way to the fold, how to know and obey the voice of the chief shepherd.

When arrived at the fold, these shepherds appeared before the chief shepherd, with confidence and boldness, for perfect love casteth out fear. His countenance brightened upon them, and after asking of their welfare, and assuring them of his pleasure at once more beholding them, he desired to see their flocks, at the sight of which, when brought before him, he appeared filled with great satisfaction, and he commended them for following the voice of their shepherds so obediently, and told them that if they would so continue they should never more be scattered, nor want for a faithful shepherd to watch over them. At this the sheep seemed particularly happy, indeed they took a great liking to the chief shepherd and thought his voice the sweetest they ever heard, and they determined never to turn a deaf ear to it. This determination they kept, and they lived ever afterward in security, peace, and happiness.

But what shall be said of these faithful shepherds? Words cannot describe the pure and holy joy that pervaded their bosoms when the chief shepherd blessed them in the name of the Great Shepherd, and because of the unsullied integrity of their hearts and their diligence and faithfulness, gave them charge over important and extensive departments of the fold. They lived continually in the favor of the chief shepherd, and in the course of time the Great Shepherd came from his chief residence and dwelt among them, and they lived ever after in the light of his countenance.

STILL THEY COME.—The country back of Atchison is fast filling up with emigrants from Missouri, Virginia, Kentucky and other southern States. We do not know of any free-soiler in the neighborhood, and if there are any of that class of people, they are wise enough to keep very quiet. There are plenty of good claims within a few miles of this town, and all that is necessary to secure them is to bring over your family, and take up residence with us. We can show the Missouri and Kentucky farmer, some of the very best hemp land, while the emigrant from Virginia will be able to find as good a "patch" for tobacco, as can be scared up in the old dominion. Freesoilers are informed that in this neighborhood they will find neither room or sympathy.—[Squatter Sovereign.

MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR.

The following statement has reached us from so many reliable sources that we feel justifiable in laying it beford the public; there is much reason to fear that its foundation is based upon truth:

"A man named Moizan, residing in the suberb of Boisseauville, near the the Little River, is stated to have about ten days since been visited at night by two men wearing masks and armed with pistols and dirks, who demanded his assistance on a secret mission, and threatened instant death should he refuse to accompany them. A man known to possess little energy, he reluctantly submitted to blindfolding, and was led to a cariole, a short distance up the street, when he was driven at rapid rate for some distance over a level road, both going and returning, till arriving at a house which they entered through a short passage. When the bandage was removed from his eyes he found himself in a confined cellar with the same men, who ordered him to erect a strong wall, in which they subsequently deposited an iron coffin containing a woman seemingly in a state of trance. She was dressed in satin when put in the case, and her face was tightly bound over with linen, with the exception of the eyes which were visible through a glass plate in the lid of the coffin. During the entire two days which the construction of the tomb was supposed to occupy, there was no noise to indicate a habitation over head, and the mason was incessantly watched, attended by the same masked guard, who, on the completion of the work, (it being then dark out of doors,) paid him a reward of thirty pounds, and drove him, as before, to St. Paul's market, after having warned him to eternal silence as he valued his own life. Two men of the name of Moizan were brought to the police office on Saturday, and denied any knowledge of the story."—[Quebec Mercury.

A STRANGE MANIFESTATION.

The latest instance of Spiritual Manifestations that we have seen, is that recorbed of an incredulous young man Down East, whose father had promised before his death, to hold invisible communion with him:

The spirit of the gentleman (who, by the way, had been somewhat severe in matters of discipline) was called up, and held some coversation with the boy. But the messages were not at all convincing and the youth would not believe that his father had anything to do with them.

"Well," said the medium, what can your father do to remove your doubts?"

"If he will perform some act which is characteristic of him, and without any direction as to what it shall be, I shall believe in it."

"Very well," said the medium;" we wait some manifestations from the spirit land."

This was no sooner said than (as the story goes) a table walked up to the youth and, without ceremony, kicked him out of the room!

"Hold on! stop him!" cried the terrified young convert; that's the old man! I believe in the rappings!"

The hero has never since had a desire to "stir up the old gentleman!"

PITHY PROVERBS.—By suffering we may avoid sinning; but by sinning we cannot avoid suffering.

Honor, like the shadow, follows those who flee from it, but flies from those who pursue it.

He who will take no advice, but be always his own counsellor, shall be sure to have a fool for his client.

Correction does much, but encouragement does more. Encouragement after censure is as the sun after a shower.

Laws should be so framed, that the public would find it more to their interest to keep them than to disobey them

Implicit faith proves imbecility; yet improbable relations should be skeptically received, not positively denied.

Boasting seldom or never accompanies a sense of real power. When men feel that they can express themselves by deeds, they do not often care to do so by words.

Secret sorrow is like those destructive ingredients which we are forced to confine and seal up, but which corrode in the vessels in which they are contained.

GREAT RISE IN LAND.—Facts like the following illustrative of the growth of St Louis are plentiful. In 1774, forty arpents of ground fronting on Broadway, near Mullanphy street, sold for six hundred pounds of corn meal. The land is probably worth now four hundred thousand dollars.—[Herald.

The Evidences Accumulate in proof of what we have long since asserted, viz: that the Mustang Liniment is the 'sine qua non' of all external remedies ever before offered to the afflicted.

We would call especial attention to the advertisement of this Liniment in our columns, and will take this occasion to say that this appears to be one of the few popular medicines that really possess all the virtues ascribed to them. In effectually curing the worst cases of Rheumatism, no matter how long standing, in an incredibly short time, and for sprains, bruises, sores, burns, or pains of any kind, it has no equal. We have heard of many cures that have been performed that really appear incredible, were they not vouched for by persons of responsibility and influence. It is said to be an infallible remedy for musquito bites.

See advertisement in another column. [17 2m

ADVERTISEMENTS.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.

J. M'GREGOR,

WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,

75 MARKET STREET,

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.

N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

75 Market Street,

(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)

Feb. 17, 13 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

J. PARSON,

163 Morgan Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.

A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12tf.

ELLISON & APPLETON,

DEALERS IN

NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,

CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.

Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,

Wholesale and Retail.

MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.

Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.

Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,

KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES

AT WHOLESALE PRICES,

Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,

OF THE BEST QUALITY,

At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at

NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Desert,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,

St. Louis, Mo.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

A. DAFT,

DEALER IN

NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.

159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

NICHOLSON'S

TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,

GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,

NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

J. G. SIMPSON. C. B. CAMERON.

GREAT SALE.

"AUCTION GOODS"

FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THE Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time unbuilt to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞ The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,

No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.

Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

NICHOLSON'S FRANKLIN

TEA AND COFFEE WAREHOUSE,

NO. 29 FRANKLIN AVENUE,

NEAR FOURTH STREET.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the public that they have now opened the above establishment, where may be found a large stock of fresh imported Teas of every variety of quality and price, selected in part, at the regular Eastern Tea sales, and from the stocks of the largest importing houses in the United States. We therefore feel confident that we can supply those favoring us with their patronage with Teas of undeniable excellence for strength and flavor, and at prices which cannot fail to give satisfaction.

Also an assortment of choice Coffees, Fresh Roasted, and Ground, by steam, on the premises. The arrangements for Roasting are such as to prevent the escape of that volatile oil with which the berry is impregnated, and to which it principally owes its taste and other medicinal qualities.

We also keep constantly on hand a full assortment of Fresh Ground Spices, warranted. Our machinery is equal, if not superior, to any west of New York, and our knowledge practical; therefore, we pledge ourselves to suit in all cases, or the packages may be returned.

N. B. All packages marked from Franklin Tea and Coffee Ware-house are warranted pure. Chemists and others are challenged to analyze. NICHOLSON & CO.

Additional Sundries for Sale at the Franklin Tea Ware-house.

Pure Wines and Liquors, in bottles; pure old Brandies, very superior, various vintages; pure Old Port, Sandeman; pure Old Port, Victoria; fine old Sherry and Madeira Wines; Claret Wine, assorted qualities; pure French Cordials, assorted; Scotch Whisky, Scotch Ale and London Porter; Old Bourbon and Monongahela Whiskys, &c., &c.

Fruits—Raisins, Almonds, Oranges, Lemons, Currants, assorted Fresh Figs, &c. Chocolate, bitter and sweet; Broma, Cocoa; Preserves of all kinds; Jellies and Jams, Rice, Pearl Barley, Pearl Sago, Tapioca, Hecker's Farina, Saleratus, Arrow Root, Fancy Soaps, Bird Seed, &c.

Our Coffees may be found at the following places:

MR. JAS. H. FORBES, corner Eleventh and Market sts;
MR. JOHN NICHOLSON, Fifth street, South Market,
MR. D. NICHOLSON, corner of Fourth and Market.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

R. TORR,

151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,

ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.

WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.

Families Supplied at their Residences.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.

T. J. ALBRIGHT,

NO. 27 MAIN STREET,

St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others' Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,

27 Main Street, East Side,

Sign of the Gilt Gun.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!

A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of

MAN OR ANIMALS,

Requiring an External Application.

Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of

RHEUMATISM

than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.

G. W. WESTBROOK:—

Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours, J. R. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—

Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,

JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:

Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.

I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.

I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.

Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.

I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Croton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.

GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS

have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:

Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweeny, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.

The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.

G. W. WESTBROOK,

(Successor to A. G. BRAGG & CO.,)

Originator and Sole Proprietor.

Principal Office, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.

B. FORMON,

TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at

136 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House,

St. Louis, Missouri.

Jan. 13, 1855. [8 3m*

DR. WHITE,

HOMŒOPATHIST.

Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.

Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!

VAN, THE TEA MAN!

RETAIL DEALER,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.

Dec. 23. [5 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their Interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERR has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.

Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERR.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash;
50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 packets old government Java;
150 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Lanquedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins.

Dec. 9. FRANCIS LEPERR. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,

IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS

IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY

NO. 147 MAIN STREET,

Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,

ST. LOUIS.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,

WAGON MANUFACTURER,

Corner of Broadway and Lebeaume Steert,

OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.

NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MCLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is unconfestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.

Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLRED.

Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swelling, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞ For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.

T. W. HOIT.

Nov. 22, '54. [1 3m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY

AND

PARER WAREHOUSE,

Established A. D. 1840.

A. P. LADEW & CO.,

TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,

31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,

PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY.

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co. have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERHD, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.

Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.

MUSIC—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired;
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous hat!"

Its fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,

OF CORINTHIAN HALL,

297 BROADWAY,

ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,

FOR THE SALE OF

FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,

FOR $4 EACH!

FOR A

LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR A

FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR A

FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,

GO TO CORINTIAN HALL!

FOR AN

INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

297 Broadway;

☞ BIG HAT.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,

Practical Dyers and Scourers,

No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,

Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.

COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 128 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.

Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,

LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,

No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set. Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired. Tailors' and Tinners' Shears, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.

Nov. 18, '54.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, MARCH 31, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XIX.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Mailed to Subscribers at $2 per annum.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.

Advertisements inserted on accommodating terms.

All Communications relating to the LUMINARY should addressed to the Editor, Post-paid.

From the Deseret News.

Discourse by President Brigham Young, Tabernacle, Dec. 3, 1854.

There are two or three subjects that I wish to occupy a short time in speaking upon, and I will commence with observations upon spiritual gifts, applicable directly to "such as sit in darknesss, and in the shadow of death," according to the words of the Psalmist.

In the scripture written by Job (or said to be written by him) you can read, "There is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding;" and in the New Testament, "In him (Christ) was life; and the life was the light of men." "Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." That was the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

We could turn to many other passages of scripture, alluding to what I have in my mind with regard to the inhabitants of the earth. It is believed, or has been, for I have often heard it taught by the elders of Israel, that every person of accountable age, who did not believe in the gospel of the son of God, as it is written in the New Testament, and practice it in their lives, would be damned; or in other words, if a person does not become a Saint, or what we call a Saint, he must be damned. According to the old scriptures in one sense, I can agree with them with regard to the expression, and truly say that the inhabitants of the earth who have lived and died, and those who are now living, are all damned.

This idea brings to my mind so much not directly alluding to my subject, that I will break off, and say that we are now fighting the devils, in order to make a heaven of this earth.

Any person knowing and understanding the scriptures as they are, and understanding the mind and will of God, can understand at once that when he is shut out from the presence of the Lord; when he does not hear his voice; sees not his face; receives not the ministering of His angels, or ministering spirits; and has no messenger from the heavens to visit him, he must surely be in hell. Does the wrath of God rest upon all such? Yes, and we have plenty of it, just as much as we know what to do with.—Are you not aware that the Latter-day Saints are realizing this, and saying "that it seems as though the devils are let loose upon the Saints?" Do you not know that they are liable to temptation? to feel wrath, malice, strife, envy, hatred to God, dislike to righteousness, and an inclination to dethrone the Almighty, and usurp his authority? If this is not being in hell, and if this is not the wrath of God abiding, to a certain degree, upon the inhabitants of the earth, we will wait until we find out what it is; but I cannot tell it any better in so few words.

The Spirit of the Lord, the light of Christ, and the inspiration of the Almighty, are given to every man to profit withal. All who understand the gospel of salvation, in reflecting upon the condition of their progenitors, as far back as they can trace them, have this consolation; if they were honest, if they lived according to the best light and knowledge they had, if they served the Lord according to all they could obtain from the priest, and other sources, and lived according to that light, are they damned? Yes, precisely as you and I will be.

It is understood, and is so written, that when the inhabitants of the earth pass through what is called the valley of death, that which is in the tabernacle leaves it, and goes into the world of spirits which is called hades, or hell. The spirits that dwell in these tabernacles on this earth, when they leave them, go directly into the world of spirits. What, a congregated mass of inhabitants there in spirit, mingling with each other, as they do here? Yes, brethren, they are there together, and if they associate together, and collect together in clans, and in societies as they do here, it is their privilege. No doubt they yet, more or less, see, hear, converse, and have to do with each other, both good and bad. Jesus himself went to preach to the spirits in prison; now, as he went to preach to them, he certainly associated with them; there is no doubt of that. If the prophets went and preached to the spirits in prison, they associated with them; if the elders of Israel in these latter times go and preach to the spirits in prison, they associate with them, precisely as our elders associate with the wicked in the flesh, when they go to preach to them.

This is exactly what I wish to get before your minds, not but that many of you understand these principles, and again many of you have not had the privilege of hearing them. Brother Woodard, who spoke to you this morning, has been in Italy, and has never before had the privilege of gathering with the Saints. He first learned of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and the restoration of the gospel, from the elders who travelled where he was, and by the Spirit of the Lord he understood.

Brethren and sisters, and all who preach the gospel of salvation, and, in short, all who inhabit this earth, I wish you to understand that the Lord has pleased to organise tabernacles here, and put spirits into them, and they then become intelligent beings. By and by, sooner or later, the body, this that is tangible to you—that you can feel, see, handle, &c., returns to its mother dust. Is the spirit dead? No. You believe the spirit still exists, when this body has crumbled to the earth again, and the spirit that God puts into the tabernacle goes into the world of spirits. What is their situation? Is there any opportunity for them whatever? Yes, there is; although there is a great deal of scripture which the priests have been pleased to make, without revelation, that contradicts this idea; and the traditions of the fathers contradict it, not the traditions of the prophets, and apostles, but of our fathers, those who have lived in the dark ages of the world, and the great majority of those who live now; for I do not know of a darker period in the history of the world, than that of the nineteenth century, apart from the light of the new and everlasting covenant. It is the ignorance and superstition of the people that contradict future progression in the world of spirits, for the gospel does not. There is an opportunity for men who are in the spirit to receive the gospel.—Jesus, while his body lay in the grave two nights and one day, went to the world of spirits to show the brethren how they should build up the kingdom, and bring spirits to the knowledge of the truth in the spirit world; he went to set them the pattern there, as he had done on this earth. Hence you perceive that there, spirits have the privilege of embracing the truth.

You may ask if they are baptized there? No.—Can they have hands laid upon them for the gift of the Holy Ghost? No. None of the outward ordinances that pertain to the flesh are administered there, but the light, glory, and power of the Holy Ghost are enjoyed just as freely as upon this earth; and there are laws which govern and control the spirit world, and to which they are subject.

Can we do anything for them? Yes. What are we trying to build a Temple for? And we shall not only build a Temple here, if we are successful, and are blessed, and preserved, but we shall probably commence two or three more, and so on as fast as the work requires, for the express purpose of redeeming our dead. When I get a revelation that some of my progenitors lived and died without the blessings of the gospel, or even hearing it preached, but were as honest as I am, as upright as I am, or as any man or woman could be upon the earth, as righteous, so far as they knew how, as any apostle, or prophet that ever lived, I will go and be baptized, confirmed, washed, and anointed, and go through all the ordinances and endowments for them, that their way may be open to the celestial kingdom.

As I have frequently told you, that is the work of the millennium. It is the work that has to be performed by the seed of Abraham, the chosen seed, the royal seed, the blessed of the Lord, those the Lord made covenants with. They will step forth, and save every son and daughter of Adam who will receive salvation here on the earth; and all spirits in the spirit world will be preached to, conversed with, and the principles of salvation carried to them, that they may have the privilege of receiving the gospel; and they will have plenty of children here on the earth to officiate for them in those ordinances of the gospel that pertain to the flesh.

Many people believe that the spirit of the Lord has not been upon the earth when the gospel was not among men in its purity; they believe the Spirit of the Lord has been entirely taken from the earth since the apostacy of the church. I do not believe for one moment that there has been a man or woman upon the face of the earth, from the days of Adam to this day, who has not been enlightened, instructed, and taught by the revelations of Jesus Christ. "What! the ignorant heathen?" Yes, every human being who has possessed a sane mind. I am far from believing that the children of men have been deprived of the privilege of receiving the Spirit of the Lord to teach them right from wrong: No matter what the traditions of their fathers were, those who were honest before the Lord, and acted uprightly, according to the best knowledge they had, will have an opportunity to go into the kingdom of God. I believe this privilege belonged to the sons and daughters of Adam, and descended from him, and his children who were cotemporary with him, throughout all generations.

Men who are under the influence of their traditions, and former notions will desire to ask scores of questions upon this subject, but I think I can relieve your minds.

The Spirit of the Lord, in teaching the people, in opening their minds to the principles of truth, does not infringe upon the laws God has given to mankind for their government; consequently, when the Lord made man, he made him an agent accountable to his God, with liberty to act and to do as he pleases, to a certain extent, in order to prove himself. There is a law that governs man thus far; but the law of the celestial kingdom, as I have frequently told you, is, and always will be the same to all the children of Adam. When we talk of the celestial law which is revealed from heaven, that is, the priesthood, we are talking about the principle of salvation, a perfect system of government, of laws, and ordinances by which we can be prepared to pass from one gate to another, and from one sentinel to another, until we go into the presence of our Father and God. This law has not always been upon the earth; and in its absence, other laws have been given to the children of men for their improvement, for their education, for their government, and to prove what they would do when left to control themselves; and what we now call tradition has grown out of these circumstances.

There is so much of this, that I hardly dare to commence talking about it. It would require a lengthy discourse upon this particular point. Suffice it to say, the Lord has not established laws by which I am compelled to have my shoes made in a certain style. He has never given a law to determine whether I shall have a square-toed boot, or a peaked-toed boot; whether I shall have a coat with the waist just under my arms, and the skirts down to my heels; or whether I shall have a coat like the one I have on. Intelligence, to a certain extent, was bestowed both upon saint and sinner, to use independently, aside from whether they have the law of the priesthood or not, or whether they have ever heard of it or not. "I put into you intelligence," saith the Lord, "that you may know how to govern and control yourselves, and make yourselves comfortable and happy on the earth; and give unto you certain privileges to act upon as independently in your sphere, as I do in the government of heaven."

No matter whether we are Jew or Gentile, as the two classes of people are called; though Gentile signifies disobedient people; no matter whether we believe in the Koran as firmly as we now believe in the Bible; no matter whether we have been educated by the Jews, the Gentiles, or the Hottentots; whether we serve the true and the living God, or a lifeless image, if we are honest before the God we serve.

Brother George Q. Cannon brought me a god from the Sandwich Islands, made out of a piece of wood. If all the people bow down to such a god as that, so it is in accordance with their laws and ordinances, and their manner of deal among themselves, the Lord permits them to do as they please with regard to that matter, and this illustration will apply to all the nations upon the face of the earth. People who fall down beneath the wheels of Jugernaut, and are crushed to death; who sacrifice their children in the worship of idols; if they act according to the best of their knowledge, there is a chance for their salvation, as much as there is for the salvation of any other person.

"Do you suppose the Hindoos have the light of the spirit of Christ?" I know they have; and so have the Hottentots and so has every nation, and kingdom upon the face of the earth, even though some of them may be cannibals, indulging in a practice the most repugnent to our refined feelings or any we know of among any people. Yet, that is a practice which the religious, refined, and polished inhabitants of our lovely country shudder at. But let me place any member of this congregation, or the whole of them in such a state of suffering, from year to year, that they shall never see one day, or one hour's comfort, nor satisfaction of human life; when compared with a condition of that kind, the sin of killing, and eating a human being would not be as great as many sins committed by the so called christian nations.

Can I refer your minds to circumstances of this kind among the people of our lovely country? Yes, Brethren and Sisters, Ladies and Gentlemen, scores of them. When a man has power over his neighbor, over his fellow being, and puts him in torment which is like the flames of everlasting fire, so that he never dares to speak his mind, or walk across the street, or attend to any branch of business without a continual fear of his oppressor, and of the rod hanging over him for punishment, it is worse than to kill, and eat him. That is as the torment of hell, do you know it? Now do not be scared when you hear of the heathen engaging in loathsome practices, for I defy you to bring up a meaner, or more degraded set than now exists among the so called civilized nations of the earth.

When I heard Br. George Q. Cannon speak about the traditions of the people where he has been, I thought that some of their traditions were no worse than some of ours. They believe that no one is better capable of teaching the inhabitants of the earth than they; and I defy them to believe that, stronger than we believe it of ourselves. It is what we have been taught, and what we verily believe; they have been taught the same idea and believe it with all their hearts; then dont cast them down to hell for their honest belief.

But when the light of the knowledge of God comes to a man and he rejects it, that it is his condemnation. When I have told all I have been authorized to declare to him in the name of the Lord, if he does not have the visions of eternity, it is all nonsense to him. To know the truth of my testimony he must have the visions, and revelations of God for himself. And when he gets them, and turns aside, becoming a traitor to the cause of righteousness, the wrath of God will beat upon him, and the vengeance of the Almighty will be heavy upon him. This comes, not because their fathers lived in darkness before them, and the ancestors of their fathers before them; not because the nations have lived, and died in ignorance; but because the Lord pours the spirit of revelation upon them, and they reject it. Then they are prepared for the wrath of God, and they are banished to another part of the spirit world, where the devil has yower, and control over them.

(Continued.)

NATURE sometimes makes a fool; but a coxcomb is alwas of his own making.

NOBLE CONDUCT OF TWO SEAMEN.

The following characteristic sketch of two sons of Neptune ashore, is taken from the Boston Herald. We present it to our readers as an illustration of the cold mercenary spirit of the age. Salvation from which is a mere matter of accident as in the following case—how many hundreds are daily thrust upon the wide world without the kind and timely aid of such worthies as those here represented, eternity alone can reveal.

"The generous character of the sailor is proverbial; but seldom has it fallen to our lot to record an action more truly noble than the following, which took place a few days ago in our city. A poor woman who occupied two rooms in the lower part of Commercial street, since the death of her husband, about six months since, has been compelled to earn a living for herself and family of young children, by taking in washing; and with all her industry and economy, her quarterly rent bill became due before she could possibly scrape together sufficient to discharge it. Unfortunately for her, her landlord was one of Old Crumbs' school; cold and calculating; mercenary and unfeeling. His sole business was to collect his rents, and all his recreation seemed to be to distress the virtuous. She begged of him to grant her time. He gave two days. She asked for more, and he refused stating that unless her rent was paid before twelve o'clock on the following day, every stick of her furniture, and family should be put out of doors.

"The time arrived, when, agreeable to promise, his lackeys were sent down, and the threat was begun to be put in execution. The poor woman prayed the unfeeling landlord to desist in his purposes, but her prayers were in vain. At length, given up entirely to despair and wounded pride, she seated herself upon her forlorn bed with her little children crying around her. At this moment, two jolly American tars happened by, and espying the work going on, the door open, and the wretched woman and her children weeping, immediately stopped their course, and began to reconnoitre.

"'I say, ship-mate,' cried one, 'there is some foul play going on in these waters—let's overhaul the craft.'

"'Ay, ay, Jack,' replied the other, 'the young 'oman by the bed has hoisted signals of distress—her pumps are going in right earnest—let's give her a long hail.'

"The tars called the woman to them, and from her soon learned the whole of her story.

"'Well now, ship-mate, if that land pirate hadn't ought to be lathered with hot tar, scraped with a rusty hoop, and then keel hauled, for laying his grappling iron on the few loose spars that are scattered about the wreck. Never mind my good 'oman; keep your spirits up, and we'll set you in the right course with plenty of ballast and provisions. I say you land lubbers belay there upon them things—we'll be responsible for the damage.'

"'How much do you owe this land pirate?'

"The woman told the amount, when Jack took from his wallet the same in hard currency, and paid the bill, made the woman a present of a handful of silver, while his ship-mate, in the meantime, went to a butcher's shop near by, and brought back a large joint of meat, for the dinner of herself and children. They left, after receiving the poor woman's blessing, and wishes for their prosperity, and went whistling through the streets, as though nothing had happened.

MORE COPY.

Aye! our devil—that is, our evil genius—is after us; we put him off with fair promises, but alas, our quiet is transient. The same significant exclamation again rings in our ears ere we have adjusted a single idea. What shall we do? We have overhauled scores of exchanges, in the vain hope of finding something, but alas, we have failed. We have not an item left for a paragraph—not one; and we are unprepared to discuss any topic in an elaborate or satisfactory manner. Copy! yes a simple word, very easily spoken, but how full of dire meaning to the editor, sick and destitute of news of interest.—How UNFORTUNATE FOR US, that our city is so free from accidents, broils, murders and excitement—that our country is so free from want, confusion, disturbance and blood-shed; that every one has a plenty of business of his own, and attends so snugly to it. Copy, copy, shrieks our miniature shadow; nothing will quiet his imperative demand; a severe headache is no excuse; business with our patrons or visits from gentlemen, are no palliation for our delinquency, lack of news, or ability to write, are no faults of his; copy is his untiring, unceasing, unyielding demand. He lives, he feeds, he feasts, yes, he doats upon the music of that talismanic word. To him, 'tis the harmony of music itself; but to us, to-day, it is the embodyment of everything unpleasant in the vocabulary of our lean portefolio. Copy! yes, take it, and we will away to the prairies, to the hills, the leafless forests; to the brown vallies, to the sunny lawns, to the springs gushing from the hillsides, to the meandering streamlet, to the broad pictured book of nature, away from the eternal cry of "Copy," and there receive inspiration from loveliness and truth.—[Council Bluffs Bugle.

POLITENESS is a social passport all over the world, and good society is the best school in which it is to be learned. Neither talent, wit, nor genius, can conceal the positive deformity of impoliteness.

VICE is infamous, though in a prince, and virtue honorable, though in a peasant.

TYRE AND SIDON.

There is something in the very mention of their names, which seems to surround these cities with a peculiar and melancholy interest.

Tyre and Sidon are very frequently referred to in the sacred writings. They were among the oldest colonies or cities of antiquity. They were in Phœnicia, which formerly made part of Syria; and were situated on the eastern margin of the Mediterranean. Syria at one period included part of Palestine, and the country or district of Phœnicia also extended as far south as to comprehend a portion of the territory afterwards called Palestine. Or to be particular, Syria is on the north, Phœnicia south of it, and Palestine still more south. Soon after the dispersion of mankind in the second or third century from the deluge; or soon after Ninevah and Babylon were built; the decendants of Ham went South into Phœnicia and Palestine, into Arabia, Egypt and Abyssinia. Sidon was distinguished among other inventions and manufactures, for that of glass. Sadia is the present name of the place.

Tyre was built after Sidon, a colony from it, but soon became the most popular and enterprising.—Sidon is said by Moses to be the oldest son of Canaan, who was the son of Ham. When the Jews settled in Palestine, after their deliverance from Egypt under Moses, Sidon was a great city, and probably the most ancient in all Syria. This was about 1500 years before our era, and consequently upwards of 850 years after the deluge in the time of Noah.

The citizens of Tyre and Sidon early engaged in navigation and commerce. They sent out a colony to Carthage, on the northern coast of Africa; and in the interior of Asia Minor, and even on the shores of Europe. About the year 1000 or 800 before the Christian Era. Tyre became the largest and most enterprising of the two cities; and therefore is probably mentioned first by the inspired prophets and sacred historians.

It is evident they were places of great wealth in the times of some of the prophets; and that wealth engendered luxury, disipation and licentiousness; for all of which they were declared to be liable to the righteous judgment of God; and it was predicted that they should become diminished and desolate. The prophecy has been most wonderfully accomplished especially in Tyre. The city was originally built on the continent; but when besieged by the Assyrians, the inhabitants went to an Island in the vicinity; and several centuries after Alexander converted it into a peninsula.

GOOD ADVICE.

Many cases of illness, both in adults and children may be readily cured by abstinence from all food. Headaches, disordered stomach, and many other attacks are often caused by violating laws of health, and in consequence, some parts of the organs are clogged. Omitting one, two or three meals, as the chance may be, gives the system a chance to rest, and allows the clogged organs to dispose of their burdens. The practice of giving drugs to clear out the stomach, though it may afford the needed temporary relief, always weakens the system, while abstinence secures the good result without doing any injury.

Said a young gentleman to a medical practitioner, in Philadelphia, "Doctor, what do you do for yourself when you have a headache, or slight attack?"

"Go without my dinner," was the reply.

"And if that does not cure you, what do you then do?"

"Go without my supper."

"But if that does not cure you, what then?"

"Go without my breakfast. We physicians seldom take medicines ourselves, or use them in our families; for we know that abstinence is better, but we cannot make our patients believe it."

Many cases of sligh indisposition are cured by a change of diet. Thus, if a person suffers from constipation, has a headache, slight attack of fever or dyspepsia, the case may often be removed by eating rye-mush and molasses, baked apples, and other fruits.—[Recipe Book.

ENVY—ITS EVIL EFFECTS.

The envious man is in pain upon all occasions which ought to give him pleasure. The relish of his life is inverted; and objects which administer the highest satisfaction to those who are exempt from this passion, give the quickest pangs to those who are subject to it. All the perfections of their fellow-creatures are odious. Youth, beauty, valor, and wisdom, are provocations of their displeasure.—What a wretched and apostate state is this; to be offended with excellence, and to hate a man because we approve him! The condition of the envious man is emphatically miserable. He is not only incapable of rejoicing in another man's merit of success, but lives in a world wherein all mankind are in a plot against his quiet, by studying their own happiness and advantage.

IT is reported that the Mormons are much pleased with their new Governor Col. Steptoe, whom they soon hope to convert to their religous faith.—[Maquoketa Sentinel.

AT a ladies' celebration at Barrier, in England, nine hundred ladies were present. One of them let off the following toast: "Old bachelors—may they lie on a bed of nettles, sit alone on a wooden stool, eat alone on a wooden trencher, and be their own kitchen maid."

WHERE there is liberty, there is my country.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, MARCH 31, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

New Orleans, James Megaw.
Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Pittsburgh, Pa., B. F. Winchester.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.

POISONOUS INDULGENCES.

We recommend the following article to the special consideration of all who are any way addicted to the consumption of tobacco, believing it to be more or less injurious to all who use it. Alchoholic drinks, tobacco, opium, &c., are some of the principle causes of the vices that degrade humankind. They tend to vitiate the morals, stultify the intellect, poison the body and destroy the soul, and ought to be regarded not as luxuries and blessings of life, as now considered, but as the insidious destroyer of life.

The following is from the "Life Illustrated":

"'Strange indulgence!' the reader is ready to say. And yet a far too real one; even after the arsenic-eaters of Central Europe are left out of the account, although no reference is had to the almost universal use of alchoholic beverages. Laying all this aside for the time, there is still an immense consumption of poisons, of various degrees of potency, mostly known as narcotics or stimulants. It is safe to say that millions of the human race find their employment and sustenance in the cultivation, gathering, preservation, transportation, and retailing of these poisons! Other millions find, perhaps, (if we may judge from their devotedness to them,) the highest solace and enjoyment of life in their consumption.

"These thoughts are suggested by some facts presented in the 'Chemistry of Life.' The most prominent of these poisons that have become so necessary to human comfort, and some of which figure so largely in the commerce of all nations, are tobacco, opium, Indian hemp, the betelnut, and cocoa. While some would remove cocoa from the list, many others would retain it, and add coffee and tea.

"The natural history of tobacco and opium is well understood. Of Virginia tobacco, 10 parts in 1,000 are nicotine, and 1 in 1,000 tobacco-oil, both of which are, when obtained pure, among the most deadly poisons known. Opium contains at least four alkaloid substances, any one of which proves fatal in doses of from one to five-grains—that is until habit has conferred the ability of opium-eating in greater quantities.

"The Indian hemp (Cannabis Indica) is a plant growing largely in India, and allied to our common hemp. Its use gives a peculiar intoxication—a quiet, a delightful exhileration of the mind. It is supposed to be the hasheesh, so much celebrated by travelers in Persia.

"The betel-nut (Areca Catechu) is the fruit of a species of palm. Like the common catechu and gambir, it is of a very astringent nature, and may be employed in tanning; but authors disagree in regard to the narcotic properties of these substances.

"Cocoa and chocolate are obtained from the Theobroma Cacas, a native of the West Indies and the central regions of America. Pereira removes it from the class of poisons, by the declaration that unlike coffee and tea, it has no narcotic properties. But in regard to the virulency of tobacco, opium, and Indian hemp, there is no question; and these are by far the most widely used of the articles on our list.

"About 200,000,000 of pounds of tobacco are produced annually in the United States alone; in the world, 4,480,000,000 of pounds yearly; while the quantity of opium entering into the commerce of the world is set down at 20,000,000 of pounds annually. The relative poisoning power of these two substances will be better understood by remembering that opium is the dried juice of a plant, and not the plant entire, as in the case of tobacco.

"For the production of the world's tobacco, 5,600,000 acres of land are annually diverted from the raising of bread; for its opium, 1,000,000 acres; for its cocoa, 37,000 acres. If all this land and labor were devoted to food and clothing, how would they stock the world's market, prevent want, and furnish a subsistance for all with less expenditure of time and toil! How would they afford to slaving millions of men the time and recreation, self-improvement, and intellectual growth! It might be a deep question to-day whether an aristocratic feudalism in sentiment or tobacco most conduces to retard the progress of the human race. Tobacco is estimated to be used among 800,000,000 of men; opium among 400,000,000; Indian hemp among 250,000,000; betel-nut among 100,000,000; cocoa among 10,000,000.

"Powerful narcotics, when taken in certain quantities, excite the imagination and the passions, producing revery, exhileration, or intoxication; in larger quantities, they result in stupor and death. They seem at first to stimulate to action the brain and nervous system, and most of them have a direct effect in the same way upon the sexual passions. But whatever powers they may arouse, are, in consequence, left to become depressed and weakened when the excitement is past. The victim of an unnatural appetite becomes daily more powerless, destitute of energy, shattered in mind and body, and unfit for the requisitions or oportunities of life!

In the United States, intelligent physicians have estimated that 20,000 persons die every year from the use of tobacco. In Germany, where the streets as well as the houses are literally befogged with tobacco smoke, physicians have calculated that all the deaths that occur between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five, one-half originate in the waste of the constitution by smoking. Tobacco exhausts and deranges the nervous powers, and produces a long train of nervous diseases. It is peculiarly calculated to produce diseases to which this is liable; and especially those forms that go by the name of dyspepia, with all their kindred train of evils. It also exerts a disastrous influence upon the mind, and frequently produces a confusion of ideas, irritability of temper, want of energy and unsteadiness of purpose, melancholy, and sometimes insanity. These are the ultimate effects of the use of tobacco, and though one may not perceive them in his own case, we are assured that the tendency of the drug is alwarys towards disease.

The Point of Outfit for our Spring Emigration.

Atchinson is a new town situated on the western bend of the Missouri river, in Kansas Territory, about 500 miles from St Louis. It is surrounded by immense grazing grounds, contains abundance of good water, and is considered a healthy situation; and we have decided after mature deliberation to make this the general outfitting point for our Spring Emigration.

Our Agent writes from Atchinson under date of March 20th, and says: "We have located four claims about four miles from this place, where we can have a general camping ground. These claims embrace about three hundred and fifty acres of timber land, all black hickory, with some two hundred acres of beautiful prairie for farming. It is at the head of Deer creek, on high prairie land, where there is always a find breeze, and is certainly a healthy location if one can be found within four miles of the Missouri river. The road from the Steamboat landing, except the first half mile, is upon high rolling prairie with a gradual ascent."

Atchison is about midway between Weston and St. Joseph, contains from five hundred to one thousand inhabitants, is said to be as well supplied with rock, coal, and timber as any region of the country. These and other substancial reasons have led us to give Atchison the preference to any other point with which we are acquainted, as an outfiting post for our emigration.

On Monday, March 12th, we shipped one hundred and seventy-five Danish Saints on the 'Clara,' in charge of P. O. Hanson with instructions to land at Atchison, but contrary to orders given were landed at Weston, thirty miles short of their destination, and will be compelled consequently to reship to the point of outfit.

Elder Richard Ballantyne's company arrived on the morning of the 27th. About two hundred and fifty of which we shall reship as soon as possible to Atchison.

We shall continue to ship emigrants to the above point as fast as they arrive in this city, both those who are prepared to go through to the Valley and those who have only means enough to pay their passage to the place of outfit. Those who are unable to go through this season, and have sufficient means to take them to the upper country, are counselled to locate themselves in Leavenworth, Weston, Atchison, St. Joseph or any other favorable opening in that section of country where labor is in great demand and commands a fair remuneration. Those of our brethren who are scattered through the States will do well to bend their course in that direction as soon as circumstances will permit.

It is particularly desirable that every Latter-day Saint leaving St. Louis or any other organized branch for the upper country, should report himself to us as soon as possible, that we may organize branches in every town and district where circumstances may render it necessary.

Correspondence.

HISTORIAN'S OFFICE, G. S. L. CITY,
February 6th, 1855.

To the Editor of the Luminary:

DEAR SIR—The Eastern Mail having again made its appearance after a protracted suspension of upwards of two months, we are favored with the first number of your valuable paper, the appearance and general arrangement of which I like very well.

I have written to you every mail since the receipt of your Prospectus, and not having any assurance that the January mail would arrive from, and return to the East, I wrote you on the 1st of this month by the Southern route.

The weather has been extremely fine for the last two weeks, and continues so; indeed, in spring we could not expect it more pleasant and warm during the day, nor more mild nights. The health of the city and the settlements generally is good. Breadstuffs are still in abundance and likely to continue so till harvest, notwithstanding the amount of grain fed to the U. S. Dragoon horses. Walker, the Indian chief, died at Meadow creek in Millard county, on the 29th ult., after having just received a letter from Governor Young, accompanied with some presents. The presents and letter were burried with him. Some Indian prisoners were killed, likewise fourteen of Walker's best horses were shot, according to Indian customs. Some of the Utes think a Mormon chief ought to die to accompany him, and fulfil a time-honored custom with them.

During the spell of good weather, the Temple foudation has been literally crowded with workmen, this week the public hands are mostly turned to finishing the waste race for city creek, continuing on North Temple street down to Jordan river. The Endowment house on the north-west corner of the Temple block is about finished, being ready for plastering.

The Sugar works are in successful operation making molasses. There were 400 bushels of beets rasped the first half day. They remove the beet taste from the molasses. I rode down to the works on the 1st inst., in company with the Presidency. The main building is 103 x 40 feet, three stories high, with two wings on the north side 35 x 20 — It is certainly a grand affair, and when they are able to make the sugar it will be one of the greatest blessings to our Territory, by way of machinery, that is or can be produced here.

Elder Hyde has been appointed Probate Judge of Carson county, with instructions to locate there and organize speedily. The Hon. Judge Stiles has been appointed to Carson county, which is the third Judicial District in our Territory. The Supreme Court is in session, the Hon. J. F. Kinney presiding. The case pending, arises under the Fugitive Slave Law of the United States.

The Mormon Battalion has a splendid party this evening—the widows, wives, and children of all who composed that batalion, are invited to be present; it continues for two days and nights. J. V. Long is reporting. The Dramatic Association have been very successful this season in getting up several new plays which went off first rate, considering that the performers have to attend to their daily avocations in life, it is astonishing to witness their performances. The Hall is at present closed on account of parties. Gov. Young's health has been poor, for sometime back, though he is generally well enough to be around to some considerable extent. Presidents Kimball and Grant are well. Brother Kimball had a slight cold attended with some fever, which confined him two days during the Legislature. I heard brother Grant remark that he had not enjoyed such good health during any previous session, although there were some very protracted joint sessions. My health is very good for me, indeed much better than I have generally been favored with. I am confined a good deal to the History Office, to which my attention at present is entirely commanded. Brother Christopher Merkley had a cow weighed this week at the public scales, which weighed 1586 pounds. There are about thirty-five hands engaged working on the warm spring marsh north of the city, the Territory, County, and City having each made an appropriation towards mending that bottomless pit—we hope a good road will be made there now. Col. Steptoe, in behalf of the United States, has contracted for building a permanent bridge over Provo river, which is to be finished by April 1st. I understand the contract is for $6,500. Mr. Hancock's grist-mill at Payson, Utah county, is in successful operation, as is the grist-mill at Parowan, Iron county. The Iron works commenced on the 1st of January, but we have not heard what progress.—Messrs. Goddard & Pace keep Music Hall at Provo, open for dramatic performances and cotillon parties—a very convenient Hall—speaks well for the enterprise of its proprietors.

I received by the Eastern Mail, letters from Elders Preston Thomas, S. M. Blair, James McGaw, John S. Fullmer, and Cyrus Whelock.

GEORGE A. SMITH.

Lynch Law in the town of Liberty—Destructive Fire at Weston.

UPPER MISSOURI, March 10, '55.

EDITOR OF LUMINARY—Dear Sir: The finger of time has been forced to mark another of those horrible and sickening scenes of blood, that has been the duty of the historian to write of so often within the last few years, in the United States.

On Monday, the 4th inst., in the yard that encloses what should be the temple of liberty, in the town of Liberty, Clay county, Mo., a mob headed by some of the most respectable citizens of that county, rushed upon the door of the room in which a negro was confined, charged with the murder of a white man, and after a considerable labor succeeded in battering it down, when they took the negro out, and after allowing him time to speak to the populace, hung him to a tree in the Court House yard, and then left him to hang for near two hours. This sort of barbarism is becoming very frequent in this county.

On Friday, 9th inst., a fire broke out in the city of Weston, which raged with fearful progress until it had destroyed nearly two entire blocks, burning nearly or quite half of the Groceries, Stores, Drug-stores, Livery Stables, Hotels, etc., in the place.—The damage amounts to about a half million of dollars, which is partially covered by insurance. To-day the volumes of smoke has been so thick as to obstruct the view beyond a short distance.

Surely the arm of Jehovah is stretched forth to vex the nations and bring upon them sore calamities such as would open the eyes of any but those who have eyes and see not, ears and hear not, tongues and use them in profaning the name of God, speak evil of dignitaries, and taking liberties with the name of a certain spirit that the Archangel of God dare not do.

I remain yours truly, A TRAVELLER.

FROM WALES.

A Letter from Captain Dan Jones—Effects of the War in Great Britain—Earthquake in Wales.

UDGORN SCION OFFICE,
SWANSEA, Feb. 27, '55.

DEAR BROTHER:—It is a source of no ordinary pleasure to me and to the Welsh Saints generally, especially those whose privilege it is to emigrate this spring, to learn of your appointment to preside over the affairs in that important position of the gathering, and it is to be expected that in your counsels may be found the much needed antidote to the apostacy, sickness and death which have tended so liberally to fill the "grave-yard" with the Saints of God. That "Hell's Gate" of the gathering has already lost much of its terror by the competency of the Pilot.

We anticipate here, that the refulgent light of your "Luminary" will not only light up the pathway of the western bound Saints; but with the liberality of the "King of day" radiate its rays through the dark war clouds of the Easteren Hemisphere, parallel with our own "Star" of the first magnitude, and harbingers of the Millennial day; may they traverse the blue arch and encircle the world with their hallo, demonstrating to the pilgrims to the East in search of light, that a sun shines in the West.

You will be pleased to hear that the light of your Western Luminaries are very strengthening to the vision of the Eastern people, so that in some places a number subscribe for them all and suspend them in a conspicuous part of their library—a gratuitous eye salve for all kinds of spiritual blindness. For my own part I keep blowing away through my own trumpet for the people to go to Zion for peace and plenty, but by far the greater number prefer the music of the drum and fife leading them en masse almost to the Nicholas slaughter house; at the rate of one hundred a week, they enlist in this little town, impelled by fear of starvation at home and a desire to satiate their thirst for blood they rush to the mouth of the dog of war with flying colors and rejoicings.

So far from wars and the judgments of God converting the people to himself, we are shown ocular demonstrations that they generally tend to occupy their thoughts and decoy their minds therefrom. It appears that nothing less than a war and rumors of the wars will be listened to these days. They have but little taste for anything else, and while the wicked are slaying the wicked those who understand the signs of the times lift up the warning voice the louder, and are still more anxious to leave the turmoil of Babylon for the peaceful vales of Zion. Only about one hundred will be able to emigrate through to Zion from Wales this spring, who will leave Liverpool about the middle of March; more than twice that number will probably emigrate from Wales to the States, in fact all who can will be off this summer I presume, for our sky, land, and sea are full of events ominous of the approaching crisis, and when members of the government will admit that the great, Great Britain, the John Bull, who was lord of the soil, who did reign on the seas has been precipitated into the vortex of ruin, from which no hand can save him—that his army, the pride of the world, has already dwindled to a detachment of the French army; and when they publish abroad what is self evident to all, "that there is a dangerous spirit in the land," surely it is time for all who care for their lives, to stride the Western Ocean, ere it is too late to do so. In spite of every opposition the work of God moves along steadily and strong on this little and remote corner of his footstool. All the Priesthood and Saints are well united in sentiments and efforts to roll on the work, and although we have not baptised a thousand in the last year, all have tried hard to do it. The Lord blesses our labors more abundantly by teachiug, because the people were lately prohibited coming to hear us preach, and these "Lancasterian guns" of ours, well aimed, explode their shells in their houses and wound many. The Saints enjoy the gifts of the Spirit, and rejoice in the blessings of the Gospel very generally.

I was awakened in bed, very unceremoniously by an earthquake a few mornings ago, followed by a sound, and produced a feeling neither of which would be deemed earhly; with others it was not so gentle, rapping their dishes and houses rather roughly, but no lives were lost so far as I have heard.

But I have already intruded too much on your precious time I fear; with kind respects to yourself and yours, brother Andrus, and Siler if there, and those who know me, if any, ever praying for your success and the glory of Zion, I beg to subscribe myself

Your brother in the gospel, D. JONES.

From the Deseret News.

Death of Indian Walker.

FILLMORE CITY, Jan. 29, 1855.

PRESIDENT BRIGHAM YOUNG:

Dear Brother—I improve this the earliest opportunity to inform you of the Death of Capt. Walker, the Utah Chief after a sickness of 10 days; he died on the 29th inst., at Meadow Creek, about 6 miles from Fillmore. His complaint seemed to be a cold settled on his lungs.

I arrived at Fillmore on the 28th inst., and started next morning for Walker's lodge, and met the Utahs coming with Walker, and supporting him on a horse. He held out his hand, and shook hands, and seemed very glad to see me. He asked me if Brigham talked good and if I was going with him to the Navijoes. I told him that Br. Brigham talked very good, and perhaps I would go with him. I showed him the letter you sent to him, and I gave him all the articles you sent to him. He seemed greatly pleased with them, and wanted me to come next morning to Meadow Creek, and read the letter for him. On the next morning, before day, the Pauvans came running into the Fort, and said that Walker was dead, and the Utahs were mad; that they had killed two squaws, and two Piede children. Ka-no-she, the Pauvan Chief, sent us word to drive up all our horses, and cattle, and keep out of the kanyons; that the Utahs intended to kill two Pauvans and two Mormons, and a great many cattle.

About eighteen of our people went out in the morning, and found that the Utahs had killed two Squaws, Piede prisoners. and two Piede children, and about twelve, or fifteen of Walker's best horses; (The Pauvans said twenty horses.) They had buried Walker with the letter, and all the articles you sent to him.

Yours as ever, in the Gospel of Christ,

DAVID LEWIS.

P. S. Walker's last words to his people were not to kill the Mormon's cattle, nor steal from them. I was with him until he was struck with death. He was in his senses, and greatly desired to live. He possessed a good spirit and shook hands twice with me. As I was starting for the Fort he pressed my hand, and said 'come and see me again to-morrow, for I wish to have a long talk with you, but am too sick to talk now.'

From the Millennial Star.

Cape of Good Hope—Baptisms—Vote of the Saints.

Cape Town, Dec. 11, 1854.

PRESIDENT RICHARDS.

Dear Sir—The work is still progressing in this colony. Since I last wrote you, Elder Walker informs me that he has baptised 7, and Elder Smith from 15 to 20. In this vicinity, some are still inquiring, and some would be baptised if they did not fear the people. The Saints here, I believe, are doing as well as they can and are rejoicing in the Gospel. At one of our Conference meetings which we hold regularly once a month for prayer, exhortation, and singing, the Saints took a vote which they would like to have put in the Star. As it was a suggestion of their own, without my mentioning the subject, it certainly expresses their feelings. I will here write it just as it is on our records—

"Voted—That we sincerely thank the Priesthood in Zion for sending the servants of God to teach us the ways of life and salvation; also, we truly thank the Saints in England for what they have done in contributing of their means and substance, whereby the servants of God, when they came into their midst, were able speedily to waft their way to this land."

Remember me to the American brethren and all the Saints in the British Isles.

Your brother in the kingdom of patience,

JESSE HAVEN.

NOTICE.

The Passengers that came on board of the ship "Clara Wheeler," via New Orleans to St. Louis, that have not settled for their fare up, per steamer Oceana, will call at Mr. Snow's Office and make up all arearages as soon as possible, so that those who hold claims against the company may have the matter adjusted satisfactorily to themselves and the brethren. H. E. PHELPS.

Miscellaneous.

Arrival of the Atlantic—Death of Nicholas

New York, March 27.—The steamship Atlantic left Liverpool at 2 o'clock, P. M., and arrived off the light ship about midnight, but did not come in till daylight. She experienced Westerly gales during the entire passage.

The death of the Czar, Nicholas, is confirmed. He died shortly after noon, on Friday, March 2d. His death was caused by atrophy of the lungs, after only a few day's sickness;

His last words to the Empress were, "tell Frederic, (the King of Prussia,) to continue attached to Russia, as he has hitherto been, and never to forget his father's words." It is said that a few days before his death the Czar succeeded in effecting a complete reconciliation between his two elder sons, Alexander and Constantine, who were at variance.

News of the Emperor's death was received in England with every demonstration of joy. In several of the Theatres the managers came before the curtain, and announced the fact, which was received in most instances with tumultuous cheering. Some of the people were disappointed that the authorities did not ring the church bells!

At Berlin, the Court placed itself in mourning, and orders were issued for the whole Prussian army to wear the symbols of mourning for four weeks.

At Vienna the news caused much agitation. An order of the day by the Emperor of Austria directed that "in acknowledgment for service rendered with noble eagerness by the Emperor Nicholas, during a time of unfortunate trials, the Nicholas regiment of Cuirassiers in the Austrian army, should always preserve that name as a souvenir.

At Paris, the Police arrested the Ballad singers for chanting verses disrespectful to the dead Czar.

A telegraph from Berlin, dated March 6th, states that the Emperor Alexander the Second, who has succeeded quietly to the throne, has issued a manifesto, in which he promises to adhere to the policy of his father. The Grand Duke Constantine and other officials had formally taken the oath of allegiance to Alexander, and the whole garrison was to do so on the 3d.

Ambassadors had been dispatched to Vienna and Berlin to announce the new Emperor's accession to the throne.

A synopsis of Alexander's manifesto is received, via Konigsburg. He declares the welfare of his empire to be his only object; that he will endeavor to maintain Russia at the highest standard of power and glory, and aim to accomplish the wishes and views of his predecessors. He hopes the zeal of his subjects will assist him therein.

For several days the rumor was prevalent that the Grand Duke Michael had been severely wounded in an engagement on the Topraisen river, and had died in Sebastopol of his wounds. This requires confirmation.

The deceased Emperor had already recalled Menschikoff from the Crimea, and given the chief command there to Prince Gortzchakoff, and the second to General Osten Sacken. It is also stated that Gen. Rudign has been summoned from the high position he held in the army of Poland, to take the direction of the Ministry of War, in the place of Prince Balgorouska; and it was surmised that Gen. Bidikoff, the Home Minister of the Empire, would be removed. These appointments, if authenticated, are of much importance. Immediately on the death of Nicholas being known in Paris, orders were sent to Canrobert to press on the siege of Sebastopol with the utmost vigor. Of the departure of Napoleon for the Crimea, nothing additional was known. Preparations continue to be made.

ENGLAND.

The London Morning Herald says it has most excellent authority for stating that the Emperor has remonstrated against the committee for inquiring into the conduct of the war, and adds that he has said, that in the event of the committee continuing to sit, the armies of the two countries cannot act together, although they may act for the same object; in order, therefore, to satisfy Louis Napoleon, without affecting the English people, a dissolution will, it is stated, on the same authority, take place immediately. It is not known whether Lord Clarendon's visit to the Emperor of France had reference to the above matter or not.

Lord Lucan has been denied a court martial.

Roebuck's committee is proceeding in their investigation.

Apprehensions are felt that another Caffre war is about to take place. Government is taking active measures to avert it, if possible.

BELGIUM.

The political crisis continues, the country is yet without a ministry.

Brousa, with most of the inhabitants, has been destroyed by an earthquake.

Great Military Expedition to the Plains.

FOUR THOUSAND MEN TO TAKE THE FIELD.

We hear from Washington, that orders have been issued for the early march of four thousand troops to the Western Plains, with a view to the chastisement of the Indians, who have, for years past, been engaged in depredations upon the property, and the murder of American citizens. It is understood, that one thousand two hundred of the troops are to be stationed at Fort Laramie; eight hundred at Fort Kearny; six hundred at Fort Riley, and one thousand five hundred on the Upper Missouri. With a view to the sustaining of so large a military force, the proper officers have been directed to purchase a year's supply of provisions, and everything necessary for the expedition. Everything indicates an active Summer campaign, and the Indians will, it is probable, get enough of fighting and pillaging before the year is over.

Gen. Harney is to have command of this expedition. He was at Washington on the 21st, waiting for final orders, Col. Sumner will, it is supposed, have an important command assigned to him. The fitting out of so large a military command, for such a length of service, will of course require a great expenditure of money, and the most of it will go to our merchants, traders and farmers. We shall be very glad to see the Treasury relieved of its plethora of cash on these terms, and feel satisfied that a much better use can be made of it by our citizens.

The expedition will be on its march at the earleist possible day.

WHAT I LOVE.

I love to hear the summer birds,
Trill forth their songs of praise
To Him who gave to them their joys,
And taught them happy lays.
I love to see the morning sun,
Rise o're the earth so bright,
Then sink to rest ere evening's shade
Proclaims the birth of night.

I love to see the gentle flower
In various hues arrayed,
Blooming in some quiet bower,
Or in the forest glade;
But dearer far I love to see,
At morning, eve or noon,
An infant form on bended knee,
A tender, loving one.

I love to hear that tiny voice,
In accents low and mild,
Breathe forth in childhood's sweetest tones,
"Forgive a little child."
The child thus taught in early years,
To love the paths of truth
Will cling to them in after years,
Through all the snares of youth.

Then parents guard your little ones,
Teach them in youth to pray,
Direct their thoughts to Him who cheers
The "straight and narrow way."
Then when on thee the hand of death
Shall strike the fatal blow,
You'll know that when you've left this earth,
They'll have ONE friend below.

COUSIN HETTY.

LEGISLATIVE PARTY,

Given at the Social Hall, by the Governor and Legislative Assembly, on Monday, January 1, 1855, in compliment to Judge Kinney—his Associates—other United States Officers of the Territory—and Lieut. Col. Steptoe of the U. S. Army with the Officers in his command.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

HEBER C. KIMBALL, LORENZO SNOW,
J. M. GRANT, H. S. ELDREDGE,
SAMUEL W. RICHARDS.

Three o'clock P. M.—House called to order by President H. C. Kimball, who remarked that the time had arrived when we should begin our party. He wished to give a little council first, and would be plain and distinct. It was understood that this party was got up by the Governor and Legislative Assembly, and we want to set an example worthy of imitation for generations to come, to keep good order; and when there is dancing and music playing, no conversation nor disorder, but every man behave like a gentleman, and every lady like a lady. We do not wish any of the gentlemen or ladies to go down to the lower room, until they are invited. We do not wish whiskey or brandy to be brought to this party, and desire that none who are invited here should go out and get it; if this is done, we will consider it an insult. This is a total abstinence party; that is, the total abstinence of all spirituous liquors. We will introduce the cold water system until the table, then tea and coffee, if you please. The room where you came in, is the ante-room; gentlemen and ladies will there wait on you, for we wish perfect order and perfect harmony, that the angels who are sent to administer to us, and in connection with whom we hold the keys, may be well pleased with us, and touch us all with the power of God, that we may act well our parts, and that our musicians may be touched with an holy touch, that their instruments may inspire and exalt our feelings. We will dedicate this party, ourselves, and the music to the Lord. If these are your feelings, hold up your right hands to heaven, and say Aye (which was unanimously done). No person has been invited here, whose name was not on the list. This is the order of the Governor. His health is poor, and he does not know that he can come here, but I wish him remembered in our prayers, that God may touch him with an holy touch, for I desire that he shall be here to see us during this evening. The gentlemen, with their ladies, who are strangers to you, will be duly introduced.

President J. M. Grant then offered up prayer to the Lord, dedicating to him the assembly and the evening's proceedings.

After which, President Kimball organized the room with cotillon sets; and at the words 'all ready,' the lively strains of music filled each heart with the spirit of the dance.

The orchestra was occupied by musicians, (playing six first and second fiddles, a violincello, double bass, and flute), with a boy at each side in Gaelic pastoral costume holding his crook in hand.

At 4 P. M., Col. Steptoe and Miss Kinney were introduced by the Hon. H. C. Kimball, and soon thereafter the Hon. Chief Justice J. F. Kinney and lady; also Mr. McLure and lady; J. H. Holman, Esq., U. S. District Attorney; Lieut. Tyler, Mr. W. G. Rankin, and the Hon. A. W. Babbitt, Sec., and lady, were introduced by the Hon. J. M. Grant.

Cotillon followed cotillon in quick succession, all being order and quietness inside during the dances, although outside the tempest was howling, and the wind was blowing a perfect hurricane from the south, and had been during all the day.

At half-past 5, P. M., Major Reynolds, U. S. Army, Major Rose and lady, and Marshall J. L. Heywood, were introduced by Hon. J. M. Grant.

Hon. H. C. Kimball stated to the assembly that he had just received a communication from the Governor, which he would take pleasure in having read.

"Governor B. Young respectfully tenders his highest regards, and the complements of the season. to the ladies and gentlemen who assemble in the Social Hall this evening. and regrets exceedingly that his health, which will not permit him to venture from his room, should so inopportunely debar him the pleasure he anticipated in meeting his friends, and participating in the joyous dance on this happy, festive occasion.

"Trusting that the company will enjoy themselves to the fullest extent, and asking that the blessings of Heaven may rest upon the evening's recreations, he bids one and all a very, very good night.

"New Year's, 5, P. M."

At 6, P. M., Capt. Ingalls, Lieut. Mowry, and Hon. Judge Stiles, were duly introduced by the Hon. J. M. Grant.

At 7, P. M., Joseph Greene, of the firm of Kinney, Greene, and Co., and Lieut. Alston, were introduced by Hon. J. M. Grant. After the floor had been formed for a country dance, at a quarter past eight, P. M., Dinner was announced, whereupon, beginning at No. 1 until No. 43, were severally called on the floor with their respective partners, and in order were introduced to the lower room. Upon all being comfortably seated, President Kimball asked a blessing upon the bounties and luxuries spread before them, and gave thanks to the God of our fathers.

As I was unable to remember the dishes, dainties, and varieties offered on the occasion, I here copy the bill of fare, which was laid below each plate on the table:

NEW YEAR'S FESTIVAL BILL OF FARE.

FIRST COURSE.
SOUPS.

Oyster, Lobster, Tripe, Ox Tail.

SECOND COURSE.
MEATS.

Roast Beef,	Fricasseed Chicken,	Fried Cutlets,
" Veal,	Boiled Veal,	Hares,
" Chicken,	" Mutton,	Rolle Eau de,
Boned Turkey,	Roast Bear,	Fried Steaks,
Beuf a la Mode,	" Mutton,	Roast Turkey.

VEGETABLES.

Potatoes, Parsnips, Cabbage, Turnips,
Fritters, Slaw.

THIRD COURSE.
PASTRY.

Pound Cake,	Washington Cake,	Ladies' Cake,
Pain-au-ris,	Charlotte la Rushe,	Transparents,
Damson Pies,	Peach Balls,	Blanc Mange,
Raspberry "	Royal Favorite,	Fancy "
Cherry "	Deseret Pudding,	Omelets,
Mince "	Custard "	Ice Cream,
	Water Mellons.

DINNER at 8 o'clock, P. M. | SUPPER at 12 o'clock, P. M.

The several courses were announced by ringing of the bell. The waiters, who were gents, were all uniformed alike—having white jackets and aprons, with black pants, and, although the courses, dishes, and dainties presented on the occasion, called forth the wonder and admiration of all present, especially the strangers, yet, it in no ways, superceded the taste, skill, magnificence and ingenuity displayed in fitting up the apartment for the occasion.

The walls were beautifully studded with fig boughs, flags, banners, emblems, mottoes and paintings—on the south wall the words "Peace to the Stranger," on green silk was neatly executed in large capitals—and on the north wall "Union is Strength," was executed in the same manner. Our National Flag, the Stars and Stripes adorned the west wall, on its right a beautiful painting of the Pioneers crossing the upper Platte—the animals swimming, wagons rafting—a second raft building, and waters flowing. On the left of Our National Flag, was that of the Nauvoo Brass Band, and the elegant banner of this city, whereon is inscribed "Municipality, Order, Justice, G. S. L. City." On the east wall was extended the Flag of the Life Guards with the Stars and Stripes, whereon is represented the Beehive with Bees swarming round. Above is the Eagle, with the motto "Unum," and Below is a Black Bear, with the motto "Always Ready," on the corner are the words "Life Guards." On the same wall a large banner is extended whereon is represented a "Lion," the king of the forest.—Four small banners projected near the ceiling in each corner, on which were respectively inscribed—Purity, Virtue, Truth and Justice, and Wisdom; executed in elegant style.

On the posts around the building, near the top, were fastened fir tree branches, and on each side of the posts hung out from the branches, the flags of all nations. Below, the posts were wreathed with roses, with base of broad green silk ribbon, thence downwards were serpentinely wreathed with fir boughs. The columns or posts, in the centre of the building were artistically decorated in the same manner, and from column to column was extended green silk ribbon on both sides, whereon flowers and evergreens alternated the whole length.

At 9 1-2 Lieut. Livingston was introduced by Hon. J. M. Grant.

During the first table the musicians were engaged and the balance of the party were enjoying themselves in the dance.

After the first table had arose they proceeded and joined in the dance until the second table was called by No. as the first; in this table the music joined.

Prest. Kimball then called the remaining audience to attention and introduced Mr. Henry Mabin, who sang "The Man who could not get Warm"—"The Good Saint Anthony," and a Mormon Song, in his usual chaste, bold and comic style, which gave much satisfaction.

An address from Elder Orson Hyde being announced he arose and said, "I have been made happy on this occasion, and am joyful this evening, amidst the circumstances that surround this people in these valleys of the mountains, my heart is grateful to the dispenser of all good gifts among his creatures the children of men, for what my eyes behold and my senses enjoy this evening, and during my happiness, I have been led to think on the scenes of the past. My mind has ruminated over the changes of this people, but a few years and we were fleeing from the hand of persecution, which had been outstretched to crush us, and not knowing whither we went, tracked the prairies in search of a home, but by the overruling hand of Providence were we led in safety to our mountainous home, in the midst of a poor degraded nation of Indians, who looked upon us with a jealous eye. Our all was in our wagons, the country was untried. Mountaineers who had lived here told us we could not raise an ear of grain, indeed, so confident were they, that they offered $1,000 for the first ear of corn that could be raised here. Yet in the midst of these discouraging scenes we went to work, and when the ground was prepared, the seeds put in. Insects innumerable came down from the mountains to destroy the grain, but a devourer was prepared, and while the crickets would have swept every green thing before them behold the Gulls came and labored incessantly from the sun's first rays on the mountain tops, till she gilded the western horizon, eating the crickets and vomiting them, this we regarded as the same hand of Providence that had mercifully encircled us all the time, but amid all this you can discover we have arisen to our present enjoyments, while we have been living not knowing the moment the war-whoop would be sounded in our ears, and we called to arms to defend our wives and children; but what is now our condition, let this evening speak. I have been in almost every State in our Union, and in the States and kingdoms of Europe, from the mouth of the Rhine to the mouth of the Danube, in Asia and in Africa, and I have not seen anything that equals this occasion. It may have been equalled, but my heart has not participated in it, my eyes have not seen it. Let the world who look for a miracle, look here and while to-night I have been associating with you, my mind has been contemplating the elements around us in their fury, while all is calm and pleasant within these walls. May God grant, if the world like the elements without should rage in turbulence and war, that our people may continue in peace and harmony as is typified within this room to-night, and that it may be so my efforts during the remainder of my days will be unceasing. I wish you all a happy new year, and God grant that it may be so is my prayer, even so. Amen."

An address from Hon. J. F. Kinney, Chief Justice U. S. Supreme Court, U. T., being announced, he arose and said: "This is to me an occasion for rejoicing, this a time when the mind will reflect on the past history of this country. I can scarcely realize that we are here, ten or fifteen hundred miles from civilization, and yet we are in the very midst of it, not only civilization, but the most perfect refinement. I am reminded of the words of Daniel Webster, on an occasion of celebrating the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers. The same Heaven, he remarked, is over our heads, the same earth under our feet, but all else how changed, the same remarks may appropriately be applied to this Territory.—When we consider only seven years have gone since this people landed here without food to support them, living on herbs and roots, and behold now the splendor, the magnificence, and the taste that has been displayed here, we may wonder and be astonished, and yet my soul ascribes it to the Providences of that Good Being who controls all things for his glory, and the well being of his creatures. I rejoice in my heart that there has been such good feelings maintained here since my arrival among you. We are all brethren. We meet here on the same platform. We are all on the same level, all travelers together to the same unknown country, and it is my desire that the same kind, good feelings, may always be here and exist, shall I say between both Saint and Sinner, and continue, that has existed and been maintained since my arrival in this city. I wish you all a happy new year. May we all be found promoting the union that prevails here throughout the valley.

On the music returning from dinner, the U. S. officers present resumed the dance by Waltzing and dancing the polka, and all seemed to enjoy themselves, indeed so far as we could judge, there was no restraint on the feelings of any, but the spirit of order and of the meeting perfectly controlled all present.

Opportunely the company were waited upon to Ice Cream.

Half past twelve A. M., the company partook of supper in the same order as dinner, Prest. J. M. Grant acknowledging the Lord.

The hall was fitted up with much elegance for the occasion, and the general arrangements of the evening reflected great credit on Mr. Candland's judgment and taste.

The invitation cards were of an unique and superb description, the paper was small note ornamentally embossed, and fringed, headed New Year's Festival, under which was the eagle beautifully bronzed, semicircled by bronzed stars, representing the States in the Union, and at both sides of the eagle were bronzed stars representing the Territories. Where, by whom given, and to whom, with names of the committee and date followed in different type, ornamental but chaste, with occasional bronzing.

A quarter past one A. M., Prest. Kimball called the house to order, and said, we should before dismission, as we always do, acknowledge the name of the Lord, that his blessing, which had been over us while we had been together, might go home with us.

Brother Mabin sang "the Merry Mormons" with musical accompaniment, nearly the whole company joining in the chorus.

Benediction by Orson Hyde.

ROBERT LANG CAMPBELL, Reporter.

G. S. L. City, Jan. 2nd, 1855.

MR. EDITOR:—I sign for the first time Robert Lang Campbell. Lang is from my mother's name. Her maiden name was Agnes Lang, and I adopt her surname for a middle name, that I may be distinguished in the Church Records and in my correspondence from Elder Robert Campbell, our city Recorder, who is English by birth. I am Scotch, and have adopted this name, and would desire to be so addressed in my communications, for our mutual benefit.

WAR PROSPECTS.

Great as is the campaign of Sebastopol, it may be only the first of a series of gigantic struggles, extending over many years; for the restless spirit of war is gradually rising throughout the populations of Europe, and a strife has commenced which will be like the letting out of water. What may have been the prudence or necessity of the war it is for the future historian to inquire; as far as present action is concerned, all such inquiries may be laid aside. We have descended into the lists with the military monarchies of Europe as friends or foes; we have met the Emperor of Russia on his own ground; the superiority of civilization. the influence of commerce, we have given up; we have placed ourselves on a level with the hordes of the North, and it is now our task to make ourselvs superior to them in the only arts which are left to Europe for many years—those relating to military organization and military skill.—[Lond. Times.

OBITUARY.

Died of small pox, Tuesday evening, March 27, 1855, EDWIN W. WOOD, son of Emily and John Grimshaw of St. Louis, Mo., aged 17 months and 14 days.

Little Edwin is dead,
And the Saviour said
Let no obstruction be given—
Let children be free
To come unto me,
For of such is the kingdom of heaven.

A. S. WOOD.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

IN FOURTEEN MONTHLY PARTS, ROYAL QUARTO.

ROUTE FROM LIVERPOOL TO GREAT SALT LAKE VALLEY, ILLUSTRATED

By a series of Splendid Steel Engravings and Wood Cuts from sketches made on the spot from life in 1853, expressly for this work,

BY FREDERICK PIERCY,

Containing a Map of the overland portion of the journey,

EDITED BY JAMES LINFORTH.

THIS highly interesting and beautiful work will form a narrative of the journey from Liverpool to Great Salt Lake Valley, and will give a Historical description and Statistical information respecting the places, and the Indian tribes on the route, and in Utah Territory.

The mode in which the Latter-day Saints emigration is conducted—a review of it from the commencement, and incidental instructions to Emigrants will constitute an early part of this work.

The Statistical information will be drawn from the most authentic sources and consequently may be relied pon. That portion of it relating to the Latter-day Saints will be particularly valuable, owing to the difficulty hitherto experienced by all classes in obtaining anything accurate from the conflicting statements which have appeared from time to time in a great portion of the public press.

The Engravings, except the portraits of Joseph Smith, Heber C. Kimball, Willard Richards, Jedediah M. Grant, John Smith, and Joseph Walker and Arapeen, chiefs of Utah Indians, are all taken from sketches made on the spot and from life expressly for this work, and will be finished in the first style of art, presenting a detail and accuracy rarely aimed at in similar productions.

No pains or expense has been spared to render this work one of peculiar interest, usefulness, and beauty; and the Publisher feels confident that it will meet with that extensive patronage which can alone justify its publication.

STEEL ENGRAVINGS
By CHARLES FENN & EDWARD ROFFE.

New Oeleans; Baton Rouge; Natches under the Hill; Vicksburgh; Memphis; St. Louis; Camp at Keokuk; Nauvoo; Joseph Smith, the Prophet; Hyrum Smith, from an original portrait in the posession of his family; Willard Richards, from a daguerreotype; John Taylor; Carthago Jail; Room in which Joseph and Hyrum Smith were imprisoned; Well against which Joseph Smith was placed and shot after his assassination; Lucy Smith, mother of the Prophet; Ruins of the Temple at Nauvoo; Joseph and David Smith, sons of the Prophet; Entrance to Kanesville; Council Bluffs Ferry and group of cotton wood trees; View of the Missouri river and Council Bluffs from an elevation; Elk Horn river Ferry; Loup Fork Ferry; Wood river; Chimney Rock; Scott's Bluffs; Fort Laramie; Independence Rock; Devils Gate; Laramie Peak; Witches Bluffs; Great Salt Lake; Great Salt Lake City; Heber C. Kimball, from a daguerreotype; Jedediah M. Grant, from a daguerreotype; John Smith from a daguerreotype; President Brigham Young, Governor of Utah Territory.

WOOD CUTS
By MASON JACKSON.

Emigrant Ship leaving Liverpool; Light-house at the mouth of the Mississippi river; Old Fort Rosalie; Walnut Hills; Utah Territorial House, G. S. L. City; Costume for the Plains; Chimney Rock from the west; Fort Bridger; A Kanyon in the Rocky Mountains; Tabernacle, G. S. L. City; Joseph Walker and Arapeen, brothers, once Chiefs of the Utah Indians, from original drawings by W. W. Major.

Published by F. D. RICHARDS, Liverpool.
J. S. CANTWELL, Agent for St. Louis.

GOODIN & TOOKER,
GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,
No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.

HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.

We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfillment.

Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand. Lamps repaired, regilded and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 19 6m

FOR SALE AT A BARGAIN.

A GOOD SUBSTANTIAL ONE HORSE LUMBER WAGON, suitable for Gardners, Jobbers of Masonry, &c., will be sold cheap for Cash if applied for soon, at the south-west corner of Market and 15th streets.

W. H. HUISH,

MACHINIST. Broadway, between Ashlop and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERMLY.
mar 24] [16 3m

NOTICE.

I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware, and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at
ST. LOUIS PRICES.
mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

TO EMIGRANTS.

J D HARPER. T J HARPER.

AT the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo. can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especialy of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we willl sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.
mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L K & Co.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by
ALFRED PERSEY,
St. Louis, Mo.
The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

BLACKSMITHING.

T. S. ABURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommmendation.
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb. 1855. [mar 3, 15 3m.

D. G. TUTT. J. P. BAKER.
TUTT & BAKER,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.
WESTON, MO.,
Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.
March 3, 1855. 15 3m

J. B. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.
EVANS & MITCHELL,
MERCHANTS,
At Weston, Missouri,

HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.
STORAGE AND OUTFITS.
LEWIS N. REES,
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,

IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pistols, Buoy-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.
Groceries and Provisions.
Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.
He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Hentingcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 15 3m

G. M. & A. FISHER,
Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,

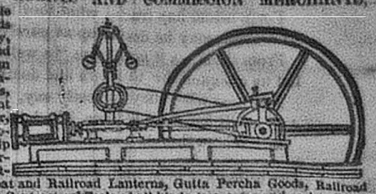
ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as And-irons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.
They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 15 3m

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

PHIL. ROCHILD & CO.,

HAVE constantly on hand in Kansas, Mo., a full supply of Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Groceries, Gutta Percha Goods, Provisions, Tinware, &c., which they will sell on as liberal terms as they can be bought for in Upper Missouri. [mar 3, 15 3m.

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,



FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.
N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.
Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,
Residence, No. 328 South Side Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets:
Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,

MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also, Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice.
All the above articles are warranted of the best American Iron.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!
O. H. COGSWELL,
At his Old Stand in Independence, Mo.,

WILL have on hand at the commencement of the out-fitting season, a large and well selected stock of outfitting goods for the Plains to Great Salt Lake City, and will furnish them on reasonable terms. He will keep constantly on hand, Flour, Bacon, Sugar, Coffee, Rice, Dried Beef, Hard Bread, and in a word, every article necessary for crossing the Plains. He flatters himself from his knowledge in that department of his business, having been a trader for the last four years in Great Salt Lake City, and his frequent passing over the Plains, that he will be well prepared to give general satisfaction.
And to the Salt Lake emigration he would respectfully say that Independence possesses advantages in point of location for out let directly, and for procuring Wagons, Stock, Provisions, &c., that no other place above St. Louis possesses. O. H. COGSWELL.
REFFERENCES.
BRASTUS SNOW, St. Louis, ORSON SPENCER, Cincinnati, O.,
MILO ANDRUS, St. Louis, EL. JOHN TAYLOR, New York,
CHAS. BASSETT, Springfield, O., JOHN HOW, St. Louis,
Feb. 24] WOODS, CHRISTY & CO., St. Louis. [14 3m.

BOOTS AND SHOES of every variety can be had at
O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

LEATHER of all descriptions, for Saddlery, Harness, and Shoemaking purposes to be had at
O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

OUT-FITTING FOR THE PLAINS.

THOSE crossing the Plains this Spring, will find it to their interest to call on the undersigned, where they will find a general assortment of every thing necessary in out-fitting for such expeditions.
Goods received and stored upon liberal terms.
Feb. 24, 14 3m A. G. BOONE, Weston, Mo.

OUT-FITTING.

R. CHARLES takes this method of informing the emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand a full supply of Groceries, Builder's Hardware, Cutlery, Boots and Shoes, and all grades of staple Dry Goods, which he will sell at wholesale and retail. Thankful for former patronage, he solicits a further trial on the levee Kansas, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

BLACKSMITHING AND GRAZING.

THE Subscriber has a Blacksmith Shop, lots on the prairie, and has Cattle for sale two miles from Westport, on the State line. His former business transactions with the Latter-day Saints and other Emigration having given general satisfaction, he solicits a trial in future.
Feb. 54, 14 3m* J. W. MARRION, Kansas, Mo.

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.

THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m* JAMES W. ELLIS.

BENJ. CROWTHER,

DEALER in Hardware, Table and Pocket Cutlery, Mechanics' Tools of every description, consisting in part of Axes of all kinds, Augers do., Awls, patent, with bitts, Bench Screws, Chisels of every description, Auger and Chisel Handles. Also, Blacksmith's Tools of every description, together with a large stock of Miscellaneous articles, such as Brushes, Paints, Japanned Tin Ware, Spoons, Rifles, Guns, Pistols, and other articles too numerous to mention, in fact, everything used by Mechanics, Housekeepers and the public in general, all of which will be sold low for cash. A liberal discount made to mechanics buying by the quantity. Call and see. Store situated south side of the Court House.
BENJAMIN CROWTHER,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Independence, Jackson Co., Mo.

OUT-FITTING!

M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Groceries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

EMIGRANTS.

THE Subscribers would say to the Emigration for the West, that they are engaged in buying and selling stock of all kinds. Orders for Horses, Mules or Cattle will meet with prompt attention. Persons wishing to purchase would do well to call on me before purchasing elsewhere.
WM. LIGGIT,
WM. IRWIN,
Independence, Mo.
Refer to J. HOCKIDAY,
O. H. COGSWELL. [Feb. 24, 14, 1m*

ISAAC HOCKADAY,

DEALER in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps and Ready Made Clothing, together with a large and general assortment of out-fitting goods of every description, suitable for California, Salt Lake, and New Mexico outfits.
Store north side of Public Square, Independence, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

FLOUR AND MEAL.

THE Subscriber takes this method of saying to the Emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand large quantities of Flour and Meal, which he will sell at as reasonable rates as such articles can be bought for in the up country, at his mill, known as the Jackson Mills, near Independence. He will also have a large supply in Independence, Mo.
THOMAS PITCHER.
REFERENCES: WILSON & PARKER; JESSE H. NOWLAND.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

CATTLE.

THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all of which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. B. & J. H. FLEMING,
Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.
REFERENCE.
ISAAC HOCKADAY, Independence, O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HADUS & MULLEN, Wayne City.
N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon, and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood of Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WAGONS AND YOKES.

YOUNG & SMITH are prepared to fill orders for Wagons and Ox Yokes to the Western Emigration. They have on hand a large lot the best Wagons made in the Western Country, and can supply any number of Yokes that may be desired. They will deliver their Yokes or Wagons in lots at any point on the river from Independence to Leavenworth City.
Independence, Mo., 1855. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WM. & JOHN McCOY,
Independence, Mo.,

DEALERS in Staple and Fancy Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Camp Equippage and Outfitting Goods of every description.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

S. P. KELLER,
DEALER IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE,
Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,
Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot
No. 27 Commercial Street,
WESTPORT, MO.
Feb. 24, 14 3m*

C. E. KEARNEY. W. H. BERNARD.
KEARNEY & BERNARD,
METROPOLITAN STORE,
WESTPORT, MO.,
DEALERS IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

JOEL WALKER. W. H. CHICK.
WALKER & CHICK,
Receiving, Forwarding, and Commission Merchants,
KANSAS, MO.
Feb. 24, 1855. [14 3m.

RIDDLESBARGER & CO.,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
Commission and Forwarding Merchants,
AT KANSAS, MO.,

HAVING done a heavy business in our line for the emigration of 1854, we would respectfully solicit further patronage. [Feb 24, 14 3m

PROVISIONS AND OUTFITTING.

H. M. HUDSON & CO., Corner of Main and Water streets, under the printing office, Kansas Mo., have constantly on hand a large supply of Provisions and Outfitting Goods, and having done business in their line at this place for some years with the Western Emigration, they earnestly solicit a share of their patronage this season. [Feb 24, 14 3m.

H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.
NORTHRUP & CHICK,
KANSAS, MISSOURI,

WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.
We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.
Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

Poetical Department.

Where There's a Will There's a Way.

We have faith in old proverbs full surely,
For wisdom has traced what they tell;
And Truth may be drawn up as purely
From them, as it may from "a well."
Let us question the thinkers and doers,
And hear what they honestly say,
And you'll find they believe, like bold wooers,
In "Where there's a will there's a way."

The hills have been high for man's mounting,
The woods have been dense for his axe,
The stars have been thick for his counting,
The sands have been wide for his tracks,
The sea has been deep for his diving,
The poles have been broad for his sway,
But bravely he's proved in his striving,
That "Where there's a will there's a way."

Have ye vices that ask a destroyer?
Or passions that need your control?
Let Reason become your employer,
And your body be ruled by your soul.
Fight on, though ye bleed in the trial,
Resist with all strength that ye may,
Ye may conquer Sin's host by denial,
For "Where there's a will there's a way."

Have ye Poverty's pinching to cope with?
Does Suffering weigh down your might?
Only call up a spirit to hope with,
And dawn may come out of the night.
Oh! much may be done by defying
The ghosts of Despair and Dismay;
And much may be gain'd by relying
On "Where there's a will there's a way."

Should ye see afar off that worth winning,
Set out on the journey with trust;
And ne'er heed if your path at beginning
Should be among brambles and dust.
Though it is but by footsteps ye do it,
And hardships may hinder and stay,
Keep a heart, and be sure you'll get through it,
For "Where there's a will there's a way."

ELIZA COOK.

PONTIUS PILATE AT VIENNE.

[An abridged Translation from the "Courier des Etats Unis," for the Louisville Journal.]

Vienne in Dauphiny, a province of France, the ancient capital of transalpine Gaul under the Romans, is situated on the river Rhone. There on the left bank of that beautiful stream, is seen a tomb of ancient architecture, which according to tradition is the tomb of Pontius Pilate—Pilate, under whose government Jesus Christ suffered. Passus este sub Pontio Pilato. It was in Vienne also that the Wandering Jew revealed himself in 1777—a most remarkable occurrence, the spot that contained the ashes of the judge of the Righteous, was to be trodden upon by a descendent of his accuser.

The following chronicle was extracted from an old latin manuscript found in a monestery near Vienne:

It was under the reign of Caligula, when C. Marcius was prætor at Vienne, that an old man, bent with age, yet of a tall stature, was seen to descend from his litter and enter a house of modest appearance near the temple of Mars. Over the door of this house was written in red letters, the name of F. Albinus. He was an old acquaintance of Pilate's. After mutual salutations, Albinus observed to him, that many years had elapsed since their separation. "Yes," replied Pilate, "many years—years of misfortune and affliction. Accursed be the day on which I succeeded Vallerius Gratus in the government of Judea. My name is ominous; it has been fatal to whomsoever has borne it. One of my ancestors imprinted an indelible mark of infamy on the fair front of imperial Rome, when the Romans passed under the Caudinae Furculae in the Samnie war. Another perished by the hands of the Parthians in the war against Arminius. And I—miserable me!—

"You miserable?" asked Albinus; "what have you done to entail misery on you? True, the injustice of Caligula has exiled you to Vienne, but for what crime? I have examined your affair at the Tabularium. You are denounced by Vitellus, prefect of Syria, your enemy, for having chastised the rebellious Hebrews, who had slain the most noble of the Samaritans, and who afterwards withdrew themselves on Mount Garizim. You are also accused of acting thus from hatred to the Jews."

"No!" replied Pilate, "No! by all the gods, Albinus, it is not the injustice of Cæsar that afflicts me."

"What then, is the cause of your affliction?" continued Albinus. "Long have I known you, sensible, just and humane. I see it—you are the victim of Vitellus."

"Say not so, Albinus—say not that I am a victim of Vitellus. No! I am the victim of a Higher Power. The Romans regard me as an object of Cæsar's disgrace; the Jews as the severe Proconsul; the Christians as the executioner of their God!"

"Of their God! did you say Pilate? Impious wretches! Adore a God born in a manger and put to death on the cross!"

"Beware Albinus, beware!" continued Pilate. "If the Christ had been born under the purple, he would not have been adored. Listen. To your friendship I will submit the events of my life; you will afterwards judge whether I am worthy of your hospitality."

On my arrival at Jerusalem, I took posession of the Pretorium, and ordered a splendid feast to be prepared, to which I invited the Tetrarch of Judea, with the High Priest and his officers. At the appointed hour no guest appeared. This was an insult offered to my dignity. A few days afterwards the Tetrarch deigned to pay me a visit. His deportment was grave and deceitful. He pretended that his religion forbade him and his attendants to sit at the table of the Gentiles, and to offer up libations with them. I thought it expedient to accept his excuse; but from that moment I was convinced that the conquered had declared themselves the enemies of the conquerors.

At that time Jerusalem was, of all conquered cities, the most difficult to govern. So turbulent were the people that I lived in momentary dread of an insurrection. To repress it, I had but a single centurion and a handful of soldiers. I requested a reinforcement from the Prefect of Syria, who informed me that he had scarcely troops sufficient to defend his own province. Insatiate thirst of empire—to extend our conquests beyond the means of defending them!

Among the various rumors that came to my ears, there was one that attracted my attention A young man, it was said, had appeared in Galilee, preaching with a noble unction, a new law in the name of the God that sent him. At first I was apprehensive that his design was to stir up the people against the Romans; but soon my fears were dispelled. Jesus of Nazareth spoke rather as a friend of the Romans than the Jews.

One day in passing by the place of Siloe where there was a great concourse of people, I observed in the midst of the group, a young man leaning against a tree, who was calmly addressing the multitude. I was told that it was Jesus. This I could easily have suspected, so great was the difference between him and those who were listening to him. He appeared to be about thirty years of age. His golden-colored hair and beard gave to his appearance a celestial aspect. Never have I seen a sweeter or more serene countenance. What a contrast between him and his hearers, with their black beards and tawny complexions! Unwilling to interrupt him by my presence, I continued my walk, but signified to my Secretary to join the group and listen.

My Secretary's name was Manlius. He was the grandson of the chief of the conspirators, who encamped in Etruria, waiting for Catalina. Manlius was an ancient inhabitant of Judea, and well acquainted with the Hebrew language. He was devoted to me and was worthy of my confidence.

On returning to the Pretorium, I found Manlius, who related to me the words that Jesus had pronounced at Siloe. Never have I heard in the Portico or read in the works of the philosophers, anything that can be compared to the maxims of Jesus. One of the rebellious Jews, so numerous in Jerusalem, having asked him if it was lawful to give tribute to Cæsar or not, Jesus replied: "Render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's and unto God the things that are God's."

It was on account of the wisdom of his sayings that I granted so much liberty to the Nazarin; for it was in my power to have had him arrested and exiled to Pontius; but this would have been contrary to that justice which has always characterised the Romans. This man was neither solicitous nor rebellious. I extended to him my protection, unknown perhaps to himself. He was at liberty to act, to speak, to assemble and addres the people, to choose disciples, unrestrained by any pretorian mandate.

Should it ever happen—may the Gods avert the omen!—should it ever happen, I say, that the religion of our forefathers should be supplanted by the religion of Jesus, it will be to his noble toleration that Rome shall owe her premature obsequies—whilst I, miserable wretch—I shall have been the instrument of what the Christians call Providence, and we—Destiny.

But this unlimited freedom granted to Jesus, revolted the Jews, not the poor, but the rich and powerful. It is true, Jesus was severe on the latter; and this was a political reason, in my opinion, not to control the liberty of the Nazerene. "Scribes and Pharisees!" he would say to them, "you are a race of vipers!—you resemble a painted sepulchre!"—At other times he would sneer at the proud alms of the Publican, telling him that the mite of the widow was more precious in the sight of God.

New complaints were daily made at the Pretorium against the insolence of Jesus. I was even informed that some misfortune would befall him; that it would not be the first time Jerusalem had stoned those who called themselves prophets; and that if the Pretorium refused justice, an appeal would surely be made to Cæsar.

This I had prevented by informing Cæsar of all that happened. My conduct was approved of by the Senate, and I was promised a reinforcement of troops after the Parthian war.

Being too weak to suppress a sedition, I resolved upon adopting a measure that promised to re-establish tranquility in the city, without subjecting the Pretorium to humiliating concessions. I wrote to Jesus, requesting an interview with him at the Pretorium. He came.

Oh, Albinus! now that the blood runs cold in my veins, and that my body is bent down under the load of years, it is not surprising that Pilate should tremble; but then I was young, in my veins flowed the Spanish mixed with the Roman blood, as incapable of fear as it was of puerile emotions.

When the Nazarene made his appearance, I was walking in my basilick, and my feet seemed fastened with an iron hand to the marble pavement. He was calm, the Nazarene; calm as innocence. Whem he came up to me, he stopped, and by a simple gesture seemed to say: "Here I am."

For some time I contemplated with admiration and awe, this extraordinary type of a man; a type unknown to our numerous sculptors, who have given form and figure to all the gods and all the heroes.

"Jesus," said I to him at last, and my tongue faltered; "Jesus of Nazareth, I have granted you, for the last three years, ample freedom of speech, nor do I regret it. Your words are those of a sage. I know not whether you have read Socrates or Plato; but this I know, that there is in your discourse a majestic simplicity that elevates you far above those great philosophers. The Emperor has been informed of it, and I, his humble representative in this country, am glad of having allowed you that liberty of which you are so worthy. However, I must not conceal from you that your discourses have raised up against you powerful inveterate enemies. Neither is supprising. Socrates had his enemies, and he fell a victim to their hatred. Yours are doubly incensed against you, on account of your sayings; against me, on account of the liberty extended towards you. They even accuse me indirectly of being leagued with you, for the purpose of depriving the Hebrews of the little power which Rome has left to them. My request—I do not say my orders—is that you be a little more circumspect for the future, and more tender in rousing the pride of your enemies, lest they raise up against you, the stupid populace, and compel me to employ the instruments of justice.

The Nazarene calmly replied: "Prince of the earth, your words proceed not from true wisdom.—Say to the torrent to stop in the midst of the mountain because it will uproot the trees of the valley; the torrent will answer you, that it obeys the laws of the Creator. God alone knows whither flows the waters of the torrent. Verily, I say unto you, before the rose of Sharon blossoms, the blood of the just will be spilt."

"Your blood shall not be spilt," replied I, with emotion. "You are more precious in my estimation, on account of your wisdom, than all these turbulent and proud Pharisees, who abuse the freedom granted them by the Romans, conspire against Cæsar, and construe our bounty into fear. Insolent wretches! They are not aware that the wolf of the Tiber sometimes clothes himself with the skin of the sheep. I will protect you against them. My Pretorium is open to you as a place of refuge; it is a sacred asylum."

Jesus carelessly shook his head and said with a graceful and divine smile:

"When the day shall have come, there will be no asylum for the Son of Man, neither on the earth nor under the earth. The asylum of the just is there, (pointing to the heaven.) That which is written in the books of the prophets must be accomplished."

(To be Continued.)

A DARK DAY AT CLEVELAND—GAS LIGHTED AT NOON.—Sunday, March 8th, was the darkest day that we have seen since the eclipse of the Sun. Lights were necessary at mid-day to see to read correctly. The darkness appears to have been prevalent over a wide space. One of our Cincinnati exchanges says that lights were necessary in that city at the breakfast and dinner tables, and until three o'clock in the afternoon it was difficult to read without artificial illumination. At high noonday the glitter of gas light, lamp light or candle light, could be seen in many windows, and a queer spectacle it was. A strange, ghastly light shone faintly over the sky, and from every chimney pillars of smoke towered and tottered lofily in the heavy air.—[Republican.

DECIDEDLY SHARP.

The New Orleans Picayune is a bright mirror, reflecting for our mirth all the fun and frolic culminated around it. "We have herd in our day of legal quibbles," says that witty journal:" but if a Philadelphia lawyer can beat the following, latlely argued to a jury in this city, he can take our hat, aye, and our corduroys. The prisoner is on trial for entering a house in the night time with intent to steal.

The testimony was clear that he had made an opening sufficiently large to admit the upper part of his body, and through which he protruded himself about half way, and stretching out his arm committed the theft.

Mr. Obfusticate Brief addresses the jury.

"What an outrage," (looking horrified, and with outstretched and trembling arms,)" I repeat, what an outrage upon your intelligence and your common sense is it for the State's attorney to ask at your hands the conviction of my client on such testimony! The law is against entering a house—and can a man be said to enter a house, when only one-half of his body is in and the other half out! Gentlemen, look to the Divine Law on this point. God commanded Adam and Eve not to eat the apple—i. e., the whole of the apple. And all the commentators agree that if they had only eaten one half, they would not have been expelled from the blooming garding of Eden."

The jury brought in a verdict of "guilty as to one-half of his body from the waist up, and "not guilty" as to the other half.

The Judge sentenced the guilty half to one year's imprisonment, leaving it to the prisoner's option to have the innocent half cut off, or take it along with him.

The Evidences Accumulate in proof of what we have long since asserted, viz: that the Mustang Liniment is the 'sine qua non' of all external remedies ever before offered to the afflicted.

We would call especial attention to the advertisement of this Liniment in our columns, and will take this occasion to say that this appears to be one of the few popular medicines that really possess all the virtues ascribed to them. In effectually curing the worst cases of Rheumatism, no matter how long standing, in an incredibly short time, and for sprains, bruises, sores, burns, or pains of any kind, it has no equal. We have heard of many cures that have been performed that really appear incredible, were they not vouched for by persons of responsibility and influence. It is said to be an infallible remedy for musquito bites.

See advertisement in another column. [17 2m

ADVERTISEMENTS.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
75 MARKET STREET,

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.

N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

75 Market Street,
(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)
Feb. 17, 13 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

BOOTS AND SHOES.
J. PARSON,
163 Morgan Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.

A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12t.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!
PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES,
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 0m*

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

J. G. SIMPSON. D. CAMERON.
GREAT SALE.
"AUCTION GOODS"
FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THE Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time submitted to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞ The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,
No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

NICHOLSON'S FRANKLIN
TEA AND COFFEE WAREHOUSE,
NO. 29 FRANKLIN AVENUE.
NEAR FOURTH STREET.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the public that they have now opened the above establishment, where may be found a large stock of fresh imported Teas of every variety of quality and price, selected in part, at the regular Eastern Tea sales, and from the stocks of the largest importing houses in the United States. We therefore feel confident that we can supply those favoring us with their patronage with Teas of undeniable excellence for strength and flavor, and at prices which cannot fail to give satisfaction.

Also an assortment of choice Coffees, Fresh Roasted, and Ground, by steam, on the premises. The arrangements for Roasting are such as to prevent the escape of that volatile oil with which the berry is impregnated, and to which it principally owes its tonic and other medicinal qualities.

We also keep constantly on hand a full assortment of Fresh Ground Spices, warranted. Our machinery is equal, if not superior, to any west of New York, and our knowledge practical; therefore, we pledge ourselves to suit in all cases, or the packages may be returned.

N. B. All packages marked from Franklin Tea and Coffee Warehouse are warranted pure. Chemists and others are challenged to analyze. NICHOLSON & CO.

Additional Sundries for Sale at the Franklin Tea Warehouse.

Pure Wines and Liquors, in bottles; pure old Brandies, very superior, various vintages; pure Old Port, Sandeman; pure Old Port, Victoria; fine old Sherry and Madeira Wines; Claret Wines, assorted qualities; pure French Cordials, assorted; Scotch Whisky, Scotch Ale and London Porter; Old Bourbon and Monongahela Whiskys, &c., &c.

Fruits—Raisins, Almonds, Oranges, Lemons, Currants, assorted Fresh Figs, &c. Chocolate, bitter and sweet; Broma, Cocoa; Preserves of all kinds; Jellies and Jams, Rice, Pearl Barley, Pearl Sago, Tapioca, Hecker's Farina, Saleratus, Arrow Root, Fancy Soaps, Bird Seed, &c.

Our Coffees may be found at the following places:
MR. JAS. H. FORBES, corner Eleventh and Market sts,
MR. JOHN NICHOLSON, Fifth street, South Market,
MR. D. NICHOLSON, corner of Fourth and Market.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of
RHEUMATISM
than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.

G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,
J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:
Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.
I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.
I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.
Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.
I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Croton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS
have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:

Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.

The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.

G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG & CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.
Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.
B. FORMON,
TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at

126 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House,
St. Louis, Missouri.
Jan. 13, 1855. [8 3m*

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST.
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.
Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN!
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. 28. [5 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their Interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 packets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERE.
Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Labeaume Steert,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MCLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.
Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞ For sale by J. H. MOLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.

Nov. 22, '54. T. W. HOLT. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PAPER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.
A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co. have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.
Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired;
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall,
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

Its fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,
OF CORINTHIAN HALL,
297 BROADWAY,
ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,
FOR THE SALE OF
FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,
FOR $4 EACH!
FOR A
LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR AN
INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
297 Broadway;
BIG HAT.
Nov. 15, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,

MANUFACTURER of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.

COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 133 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.

Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set. Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired. Tailors' and Tinners' Sheats, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, APRIL 7, 1855. VOLUME I---NUMBER XX.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Mailed to Subscribers at $2 per annum.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.

Advertisements inserted on accommodating terms.

All Communications relating to the LUMINARY should addressed to the Editor, Post-paid.

From the Deseret News.

Discourse by President Brigham Young, Tabernacle, Dec. 3, 1854.

(Conclusion.)

Have not all our missionaries complained of hard times in their fields of labor? And some lately sent out are coming home. It is hard times for the brethren who are preaching in India. I understand the cause of it, and I wish to tell you, that you may understand it when you go there, or whether you go, or not.

Take an artificial globe, and point out the spot where the Lord commenced to build up his Kingdom in the times before the flood: follow the history of that people down to the days after the flood; and find on the globe where their children settled, and where the confusion of languages took place; then trace the children of Israel from Egypt, follow their tracks along the sea, and in their wanderings through the Red Sea to the land of Canaan, then take the site of Jerusalem where the Savior was martyred; then follow the paths of the ancient Apostles of Christ, and see where they preached the Gospel; and when you have followed their tracks throughout the extent of their labors, and come to those who did not reject the gospel, or had not the privelege of receiving it. you have come to the borders of the ground where the good seed can be received.

Jerusalem is not to be redeemed by our going there, and preaching to the inhabitants. It will be redeemed by the high hand of the Almighty. It will be given into the possession of the ancient Israelites by the power of God, and by the pouring out of His judgments. The ground where you can sow the good seed, and where it will yield crops that you can gather, is outside of that where the ancient apostles, and prophets labored. They had the light and power of God with them; and made manifest the hand of the Almighty in delivering the people, and working miracles, and saving those that were redeemed, and the people who are the most ready to receive the Gospel are those who have lived without it from the days of Noah, to this time.

If you can find an island upon which a portion of the people who were scattered from the Tower of Babel found a resting place, and whose inhabitants were never visited by any of the ancient apostles, and prophets, and where Jesus Christ did not visit, and who have not received any knowledge of the Father, nor the Son, from the days of the confusion, there is the spot where the Elders will reap the fruits of their labor more than anywhere else.

Previous to our receiving the Priesthood in these latter times, when we were members of the different sectarian churches, we used to read much about the Waldenses whom Br. Woodward has been speaking about to-day, and who inhabit the mountains, and vales of Piedmont, and from whom the Baptists say they received their authority, or priesthood.—But their priesthood is no better than the Catholic priesthood. Do you think they as a people will receive the Gospel? No! a few of them will. You recollect that Br. Woodward said they were a mixed race, and are the descendants of those who heard, and most of whom rejected the Gospel. He said that but very few of them could read, and write; and that the priest was ready to chastise those who could read, if they were known to use their knowledge. Now, they are only like the brute; they are not to blame for their superstition; and they are not the people to readily receive the Gospel. I may say, they have put their cast-iron creed into the centre of an iron casti[illegible]; the creed, notions, and superstitions of their fathers, their priests, kings, judges, and men in authority have been cast into one mould, and there they are stereotyped in cast iron. You may break their iron bands, and set them at liberty, and but few of them will receive the Gospel.

Why is this? Because their fathers heard the Gospel, and the most of them rejected it; and the curse of the Almighty is upon them, and upon their posterity until they have wrought out their salvation by suffering; for the last shall be first, and the first shall be last. A nation which has had the privilege of receiving the everlasting covenant, and has rejected it, will be saved in the Kingdom of God, but it will be among the very last which will receive the Gospel. Perhaps you will marvel at this. It is no marvel to me, because I perceive natural principles, and sound reason for all these providences of the Almighty. All His providences to his people upon the face of the whole earth, are perfectly philosophical. Then recollect, there is a chance for all who are honest in heart. What shall we do with those who are dishonest? let them remain with the good until the time comes to cast them away, and gather out the good.

We might say much on this point, showing you why things are as they are concerning the inhabitants of the earth receiving, or rejecting the Gospel. Do you suppose they believe in Jesus Christ at Jerusalem? Can you make a Christian of a Jew? I tell you, nay. If a Jew comes into this church and honestly professes to be a saint, a follower of Christ, and if the blood of Judah is in his veins, he will apostatize. He may have been born and bred a Jew, have the face of a Jew, speak the language of the Jews, and have attended to all the ceremonies of the Jewish religion, and have openly professed to be a Jew all his days; but I will tell you a secret, there is not a particle of the blood of Judaism in him, if he has become a true christian, a saint of God; for if there is, he will most assuredly leave the Church of Christ, or that blood will be purged out of his veins. We have men among us who were Jews, and became converted from Judaism. For instance, here is Br. Neibaur; do I believe there is one particle of the blood of Judah in his veins? No, not so much as could be seen upon the point of the finest cambric needle, through a microscope with a magnifying power of two millions. This is a secret that you will perhaps find out, in a coming day, to your satisfaction. The Lord knew how to preach to the Jews, and told them what the truth was. You may as well undertake to command the most degraded of these Indian tribes, and give them arms and accoutrements, and try to put them through the regular military exercise, as to preach to the Jews to make them believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Jerusalem is not to be redeemed by the soft still voice of the preacher of the Gospel of peace. Why? Because they were once the blessed of the Lord, the chosen of the Lord, the promised seed. They were the people from among whom should spring the Messiah; and salvation could be found only through that tribe. The Messiah came through them, and they killed him; and they will be the last of all the seed of Abraham to have the privilege of receiving the New and Everlasting Covenant. You may hand out to them gold, you may feed and clothe them, but it is impossible to convert the Jews, until the Lord God Almighty does it.

We have this illustrated in the account of Cain and Abel. Cain conversed with his God every day, and knew all about the plan of creating this earth, for his father told him. But, for the want of humility, and through jealousy, and an anxiety to possess the kingdom, to have the whole of it under his own control, and not allow anybody else the right to say one word. what did he do? He killed his brother. The Lord put a mark on him; and there are some of his children in this room. When all the other children of Adam have had the privilege of receiving the priesthood, and of coming into the kingdom of God, and of being redeemed from the four quarters of the earth, and have received their resurrection from the dead, then it will be time enough to remove the curse from Cain and his posterity. He deprived his brother of the privilege of pursuing his journey through life, and of extending his kingdom by multiplying upon the earth; and because he did this, he is the last to share the joys of the kingdom of God.

Here are the Lamanites, another example. Their wickedness was not so great as those who slew the son of God. Jesus revealed himself to them after he was slain, and preached to them the gospel. But in the fourth generation the priesthood was driven from their midst, and after that, the laws, ordinances, and power of the gospel ceased to be with them. Is their curse as great as that of those in Palestine? No, it is light, in comparison. They began to thirst for each other's blood, and massacred each other, from generation to generation, until they sunk into wickedness, and evil principles the most degrading, and have become loathsome and vile. Still, the curse will be removed from them before it will be removed from the children of Judah; and they will become "a white and delightsome people."

Br. Ballantyne, and many of our brethren in distant lands write, "O how we would rejoice to have the privilege of visiting our mountain home." I would rather undertake to convert five thousand Lamanites, than to convert one of those poor miserable creatures whose fathers killed the Savior, and who say, "amen to the deed," to this day. Yea, I would rather undertake to convert the devil himself, if it were possible.

Then I say to the elders in those regions, "be not astonished if you have to see hard times." And if I had a voice that would reach the ears of all those elders, I would say, "leave them and come home. The Lord does not require you to stay there, for they must suffer, and be damned."

Now sisters, write to your husbands who are in regions where the gospel has been preached anciently to come home; and I say to all the elders who are in lands where the gospel has been preached previous to our day, "come away from that people, and leave them to live, and die in their sins, and ignorance." For the sins of their fathers are a sweet morsel to them, and they take pleasure in their wickedness; therefore, let them alone, and come home, and preach to the Lamanites.

There are many in this city who can bear witness to an incident I will now relate: Last Spring, when we visited Walker, the Indian chief, he was dull, and sulky, and lay in his tent, and would not come out to meet me. I went into his tent, and the first thing he said was, "Br. Brigham, lay your hands upon me, for my spirit has gone away from me, and I want it to come back again." He was full of anger, for his people had been fighting, and he did not know whether to turn on to the side of peace, or of war.

We laid hands upon him, and he felt better. At his request, we sung some Mormon hymns, and, as we left his tent, he was full of the good spirit, and would not injure this people, no, not one particle. He was full of kindness, and love to God, and to all His works. He travelled with us to Iron county, and had dreams which amounted to revelations. If I could keep him with me all the time, do you suppose he would have an evil spirit? No, he would be filled with the spirit of the Lord.

Last Sabbath we had an excellent discourse from Br. Aaron Farr; his spirit is good, and so is Br. Washington L. Jolly's. Br. Farr closed his remarks by saying, "that we were building fine houses, and neglecting the Temple of the Lord;" and Br. Jolly who referred to the same thing in his remarks. If it would not hurt their feelings, I would say, "It is none of your business if we do not build a Temple here for years." I know they feel anxious to have a place for us to administer the endowments in, and so do I.

Among those we administered the endowments to in Nauvoo, do you not think we administered to some who were devils, or in other words, full of the devil? You wish to see a temple built, and, when it is done, some poor miserable beings will come up, and say, "we were baptized by Br. So-and-so; Br. Brigham is a charming man; and what an excellent woman his wife is; cannot we have our endowments this winter, Br. Brigham?" And they will plead with Br. Kimball, and sympathise for this, or that man, saying, "Do let him have his endowment, for he is so generous, and loving, he gave a sister a pair of stockings, and shoes; cannot he have his endowment?" Well, he gets his endowment, and what for? To go to California, and reveal everything he can, and stir up wickedness, and prepare himself for hell.

I would rather see this people cleansed, and give the righteous their endowments, after they have waited awhile. Let the poor, and those who are humble before the Lord have the first chance. I shall not build a temple, nor commence to put one piece of hewn stone upon the foundation, or plane a board, or stick of timber for that building, until the Temple lot is fenced. If this people will pay one-fifth of the tithing that is due, we can build all that we wish.

I will venture to say that Br. Farr, and Jolly never counseled their brethren, where they have been laboring, to come up here, and pay their tithing; and yet they look to me and my brethren to do it all.—To send the gospel to the nations, to build Temples, and watch night and day over the interests of this kingdom, and they have not even mouthed tithing; or if they have, they have merely touched upon it, and when they get here, they whisper in my ear, "Br. Brigham, handle them carefully on tithing, for they know but little about it."

I wish you to understand me. Wait until this people have paid their tithing, before there is any demand made on the Lord, or on His servants for a temple. If this people rise up, and make demands on me for anything that has not been done; or complains about anything that they have done, I am ready to post up the books, and strike a balance sheet, and show whether it is you, or your president that is the defaulter.

If all the brethren understood, and would pursue a proper policy, they would do better than they now do. My policy is to get rich; I am a miser in eternal things. Do I want to become rich in the things of this earth? Yes, if the Lord wishes me to have such riches, and I can use them to good advantage. My policy is to keep every man, woman, and child busily employed, that they may have no idle time for hatching mischief in the night, and for making plans to accomplish their own ruin.

We see men in our streets employed only in plotting the ruin of this people. But men who are engaged in the kanyons, in stores, or in any active labor in the day time, when night comes they are glad to rest. Night is the time the idle, and the indolent watch for their prey. My policy is to keep everybody busy in building up this kingdom; in building houses; in breaking up land; in setting out fruit and ornamental trees; in laying out fine gardens, pleasant walks, and beautiful groves; and in building academies, and other places of learning.

There are hundreds of young men here who can go to school, which is far better than to waste their time. Study languages, get knowledge and understanding; and while doing this, get wisdom from God, and forget it not, and learn how to apply it, that you may do good with it all the days of your lives. May God bless you. Amen.

A CRITIC CRITICISED.

A Mr. Goddard has been lecturing during the past week in Cincinnati and Boston to prove that Milton is not a good poet, that the characters he delineates are unnatural, and our worship for him absurd. The New York Post reviews the reviewer, and occasionally pokes him up with the sharp stick of satire. Thus:

"Our gratitude to Mr. Goddard for having opened our eyes to the false worship to which we have been addicted, is tempered only by one feeling of apprehension, which it is due to him that we should express. Is there not danger that in helping with his talents to destroy the faith of the people in its popular idols, he is fostering a species of literary Pyrhonism, which will grow by what it feeds on, and which, not content with showing Shakspeare and Milton, and such as they, to be humbugs, will some day venture to lay their despoiling hands upon the name of Goddard, and show that he too is a humbug? If they should, is there anything we can do for him?"

INTERESTING FACTS IN SCIENCE.

The law of like is by far the most marvellous in natural science, and especially in that department where, from the minuteness of forms, study has been hitherto very limited, we allude to Entomology. A little observation in this department will unfold to the student a series of wonders unsurpassed by the gigantic exhibition of phenomena presented in Niagara and Vesuvius.

Not the least astounding among these facts, is the extraordinary multiplicity of species—the innumerable diversity of forms connected with animal nature. The large forms, such as are daily presented to us, seem comparatively limited, and we easily comprehend the reason; if they were very numerous, so must be their means of subsistence. But as only a certain amount of subsistence can be gleaned from a square mile, under the most favorable conditions, and that amount is not large, the existence of the larger forms comprise extremely limited numbers.—But when we descend to Entomology and Conchology, we are confused with the almost innumerable diversity of species and variety. Of the beetle alone, there has been ascertained no less than 13,000 branches of this one family. When surveying these apparently disgusting insects, what an idea of creative power might we not gather from a knowledge of this! The study of every branch of the insect creation presents the same fruitful and interesting reflection.

Lyonet, a French naturalist spent several years in examining the structure of a single insect and left the work unfinished—thus showing the exceeding delicateness of the structure. In the body of an insect, about an inch in length, M. Strauss has enumerated three hundred and six plates, composing the structure of the outer envelope; four hundred and ninety-four muscles for putting these in motion; twenty-four pairs of nerves to animate them, and forty-eight pairs of trachæ, or breathing organs, equally ramified and divided to convey air and sustenance to this complicated tissue.

We regard the common house-fly as a contemptible insect; but how important an object of study its structure may be, can be learned from the fact that its eye is one of the most singular and curiously constructed mirrors that science has yet invented or study discovered. The number of lenses in its eyes is numbered at six or seven thousand; in the eye of a dragon-fly, twelve thousand; in the eye of a butterfly, seventeen thousand. The wings of the house-fly have a power of six hundred strokes in a single second, which can propel it thirty-five feet per second, or more than a mile a minute. The beauty of the butterfly is proverbial; but how much more intense should be our admiration when we learn that it is a thing of thirty-four thousand eyes, and that in a single wing there have been found one hundred thousand scales. The wings of many insects are of such extreme tenuity that 50,000 of them, placed over each other, would not compose the thicknes of a quarter of an inch; and yet, thin as they are, each wing is double, so that the actual laminæ here would be 100,000. The web of a common spider is an object of curiosity when we reflect that each thread is composed of 4,000 filaments, and that 4,000,000 of these filaments would not make a cord thicker than a single hair of a person's head. One species of spider lives in water, in a house of air, like a diving bell; and another builds a house in the ground, with a door upon elastic hinges which keep it constantly shut.

Conchology presents some very curious facts. A notion was once prevalent in England and Scotland, that a species of parneete shell contained the germ of a young goose. A writer named Maur wrote a treatise expressly on this bird, and says he "opened a hundred of the goose-bearing shells in the Orkneys, and found in all of them the rudiments of a bird completely formed." Girard and Sir Robert Murray both confirm these statements! Some of the clamp-shell species have shells weighing over 500 pounds. Some of the smaller shell fish will penetrate by boring into the hardest rock, they being prepared with a phosphorescent liquor which they discharge upon the rock, thus decomposing it, and enabling them, by means of a broad fleshy tongue, to build a home in the hardest ledge. The pearl shell fish are well known. The erroneous value once attached to the pearl can scarcely be believed. Julius Cæsar presented the mother of Brutus with a pearl for which he paid over $200,000. The famed ear-rings of Cleopatra were estimated in value at $800,000,000. The total number of species of shells hitherto described, amounts to 2,600 exclusive of varieties.

MACHINE TO RECORD THE BEATING OF THE PULSE.—Prof. Bierds has been exhibiting a machine at Frankford, Germany, to record on paper the beating of the pulse. The arm of the patient is placed in a longitudinal cradle, and screwed down sufficiently to keep it steady. A small erection on one side holds a sort of lever worked on a hinge, at the end of which a pencil is inserted, the end of which has been dipped in India ink. This goes into a cylinder upon which paper has been stretched.—The lever rests upon the pulse, and at every movement records the action upon the paper. If the pulse is steady, a regular zig-zag line is drawn on the paper, but in cases where the pulse is rapid and jerking, the line goes up and down, making long and uneven marks.

If they had not deemed themselves wise they would not have appeared so foolish.

A soft answer turneth away wrath.

Report to the President, Senate, and People of the United States of America, from the Legislative Assembly of Utah Territory.

We are unanimously resolved, that we do for ourselves and our constituents most decidedly deprecate the slanders and misrepresentations of all persons who know, or profess to know, the feelings and actions of the inhabitants of Utah, and, when speaking or writing about them, put error for truth, and truth for error.

And we deprecate the spirit that induces many of the reputed wise men of our nation to give heed to such foul, and baseless calumnies, to the retarding of the onward tendency of all honorable efforts, and hindering the righteous progression of our Union as a whole by constantly tending to create disaffection in its members, and throwing impediments in the pathway of all improvement.

We are further resolved that the conditional purchase, with the $20,000 appropriated by Congress for erecting suitable buildings for the accommodation of the Legislative Assembly of Utah, of the main portion of the Council House in Great Salt Lake City, was the most judicious temporary application of those means that the circumstances would admit of, both for the Assembly and the General Government; thus saving an annual rent of some $4000, which would soon have swallowed up the whole amount; accommodating the Assembly better than could otherwise be done; and preserving the entire sum for permanent investment at the Capital of Utah, in accordance with the designs of Congress.

We are further resolved that we are familiar with the course which his Excellency Governor Young has taken with the said $20,000, and do unqualifiedly assert that his management thereof from the beginning has been of the most judicious and responsible character, and with strict economy, and fidelity to the interests of the General Government therein; and we deprecate the misrepresentations which have been made in relation to this matter, and the effect those misrepresentations have had in the Departments at Washington, and in the Halls of Congress.

That the public mind may be better informed than heretofore on the subject of the $20,000, about which there has been so many false representations, we will now take the liberty of making a brief statement of the main facts in the case.

In the summer of 1851, the Hon. A. W. Babbitt delivered the money in question to his Excellency Brigham Young.

During the following October and November, the Committee, appointed for the purpose, located the site for our Capital at Fillmore City, in Millard County, and before the expiration of that November, labor and material had begun to be expended for the erection of a State House; since which time, amid scarcity of labor that could be hired, amid Indian disturbances, and amid other disadvantages unknown to residents in old settled States, or to those in the golden State, $26,777 53c. have been economically and advantageously applied towards erecting the commodious south wing of the main building; and we confidently assert that no like appropriation has ever been more judiciously managed, both for the interests of the General Government, and of a Territory, than this has been by Governor Young. The above amount is exclusive of the $1,669 50c., which was expended in locating the site, and which the Department disallowed on the ground of its not being customary; $8,703 98c. have been allowed, and accounts for the $18,073 55c. will be forwarded by the mail which goes out January 1, 1855.

In conclusion, we most respectfully request the rulers and wise men of our Nation, and all who desire to act uprightly, to avoid deciding a matter before they have heard both sides of the question, lest injustice be done, and the innocent suffer.

Trusting that truth will prevail, Gentlemen, we remain yours very respectfully,

HEBER C. KIMBALL,
President of the Council.
JEDEDIAH M. GRANT,
Speaker of House of Rep's.
WILLIAM CLAYTON, Secretary.
THOMAS BULLOCK, Chief Clerk.

Unanimously adopted December 21, 1854.

THE VOLUNTARY SYSTEM.—An old Minister used to amuse me beyond anything; poor old soul. Once the congregation met and raised his wages from three to four hundred dollars a year. Well, it nearly set him crazy; it bothered him so he could hardly sleep. So, after church was over the next Sunday, he says—"My dear brethren, I hear you have raised my salary to four hundred dollars. I am greatly obliged to you for your kindness, but I can't think of taking it on no account. First, you can't afford it no how you can fix it, and I know it; secondly, I ain't worth it, and you know it; and thirdly, I am nearly tired to death collecting my present income—if I have to dun the same way for that, it will kill me."—[Sam Slick's Nature and Human Nature.

A DISTINCTION WITHOUT A DIFFERENCE.—The following appears to be the distinction between two admirals who have not achieved much distinction of any other kind—Napier was expected to do something, and didn't do it; Dundas was expected to do nothing, and did it.—[Punch.

Without frugality none can be rich: and with it, few would be poor.

Uniformity of design is rarely found where accuracy of description is wanting.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, APRIL 7, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

New Orleans, James Mcgaw.
Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Pittsburgh, Pa., B. F. Winchester.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.

SUSPENSION OF PAGE & BACON.

On the 3rd inst., Page & Bacon, of this city, published their card to the public, announcing the necessity they were under of suspending payment and closing their doors.

The public are becoming so accustomed to these occurences, that they are regarded as mere matter of course—every-day business circumstances.

It is but six weeks since the same doors were closed, but the firm being backed up by some influential and wealthy citizens, business was soon resumed, and they seemed to have a good measure of public confidence, so that when the doors were opened and payment resumed there was but very little run upon them.

The recent failure of Page, Bacon & Co., of San Francisco, and their inability to resume business, as anticipated, and the declining confidence consequent thereon, has almost paralysed them, and has caused such a pressure for payments on this firm as to cause their doors to be closed again against all applicants, until the firm is able to recover and resume payment.

The Evangelical Lutheran, published at Springfield, Ohio, has, in a recent number presented its readers with an editorial, headed the Mormons. It is commenced with a volley of slander and abuse, and finally resolves itself into the oft repeated question; "Shall the Mormons be admitted as a state of the Union?"

It is not often that we condescend to notice the scurrilous trash published against us, but our position demands that we should occasionly strike a coup de plumie at our slanderers, otherwise their ebullitions of vituperation would be considered to contemptible to notice.

We will not be guilty of saying the writer is a man or Christian, or that he possesses conscience or intellect, but we will venture to say that a writing medium or other spirit, green or blue, did write or cause to be written on or about the Mois de Mars, a chapter of false and base accusations, punctuated with the acrimony of an evil heart, the accursed fountain of unrighteousness; and we will say moreover, that the creature aforesaid did fiendishly and maliciously boast that three immaculate Sister States, Ohio, Illinois and Missouri, had successively driven the Mormons from their society.

Civilized people could not live at peace with them! says the writing medium, consequently to relieve their pious feelings and follow the dictates of their conscience, they trampled under foot the sacred rights of man, bidding open defiance to law and justice, and in their wicked, depraved and infatuated madness drove the then defenceless Mormons from their homes, robbed them of their posessions, murdered men, women and children with savage fury, and called it civilization.

Who would have thought that wholesale plunder, arson, rape, and murder perpetrated by the Sister States could possibly establish proof of their civilization until so informed by our Evangelical writing medium. Some persons have thought that miracles had ceased, but wonderful to think on! so great is the change prduced in a few years, that what was considered heinous, execrable and barbarous, is now considered by Evangelical Christians to be the apogee of civilization. If Prophets, Apostles and Saints appear among them and announce their holy missions, and labor to build up the kingdom of God, their feelings are outraged, their motives impugned, their scanty possessions plundered, their lives jeopardized, and perhaps sacrificed on the bloody shrine of modern civilization.

American Christians have fallen into the egregious blunder of Anti Christians of Nero notoriety—they have committed acts of violence and deeds of cruelty towards us, the bare recital of which would cause the warm blood to congeal in the veins, and arouse every feeling of indignation in the human breast; not the Christian breast. Our past experience has taught us that the tender feelings of the Christian, are cruel; to sattiate their fiendish hate, they have despoiled our goods, burned our houses, destroyed our temples and driven us from the tombs and sepulchres of our fathers, and they still call themselves civilized Christians. If this is civilization we should be glad to learn wherein it differs from barbarism for we confess our inability to discover any difference. Tenez! tenez!! says the picayune scribbler of the Evangelical Lutheran. I'll show you the difference gentleman—polygamy, polygamy! there's the difference. Then what an old barbarian Abraham must have been; and from accounts his posterity were but little better, for some had two, some ten, and some upwards of a hundred wives.

But shall we admit the Mormons with polygamy into the great confederation of States? asks young Luther. To be sure, why not? says every sensible man. If Abraham and all the old polygamic Prophets are admitted into the Government of heaven, as the most noble, distinguished and illustrious of its subjects; why should not the Mormons be admitted into their own national Government with the same institution? if it was a true principle of domestic policy and government in former ages, it is a true principle now—if it is a barbarous practice now, it was so then and remains so in the family organization of heaven.

It is said that when the rich man died he went to hell, but when Lasarus died he was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom. Should the pious advocates of monogomy object to Abraham's bosom as a resting place, they must follow Dives to the great pandemonium of Hades and try Belzebub's; his society may be more congenial, as he has no wives, and is said to be a good Christian, and decidedly opposed to polygamy.

RIOTS IN AUSTRALIA.

The last dispatches from Australia contain accounts of the revolutionary spirit and feeling of the Australians towards the British Government. On the 6th of January, Martial Law was proclaimed at Ballarat, but the order was withdrawn in forty-eight hours. The Governor, Sir C. Hotham, was obliged to apply to the Legislative Council to pass an indemnity act, for the purpose of clearing him of the responsibility he had assumed.

The military and diggers had several sharp encounters. Many lives were lost on both sides, and a number of persons more or less wounded. The conduct of the military was considered by correspondents of the local journals to have been very merciless towards the insurgents, and unnecessarily cruel.

A meeting has been since held at Mount Alexander, which was attended by 4,000 miners. Speeches of a very inflamatory character were made. The subjoined are among the resolutions passed:

That as the Legislature has taken no satisfactory steps to redress the grievances of the residents on the gold fields, this meeting protests against the injury done them, and resolves to take out no more licenses for gold digging, and to quietly abide the consequences; and, as it is necessarry that the diggers should know their friends, every miner agrees to wear, as a pledge of good forth, and in support of the cause, a piece of red ribbon on his hat, and not to be removed until the license tax is abolished.

That this meeting indignantly protests against the violent and illegal resort to arms, on the part of the government, against the people of Ballarat, and the hostile attitude assumed by them towards the naturally peaceably disposed and industrious inhabitants of the gold fields, by placing them illegally under martial law, and deliberately records its unalterably fixed determination, in the event of the government refusing to withdraw the military from the diggings, to use every just means within its power to obtain their sacred and inalienable rights.

Poor England! her troubles are increasing and multiplying on every hand, both at home and abroad; her glory has departed from her, and as a shattered wreck she is fast drifting towards the gulf of ruin, wherein all the pusilanimous, weak and wicked nations will be soon precipitated to rise no more for ever.

We have been favored with a lengthy article from our respected and esteemed friend, Prof. Spencer, entitled "Popular confidence declining in the United States, its causes, consequences, and only remedy." It is written in the authors usual chaste and cogent style, and will be found an able delineation of the circumstances and times we live in.

It will be commenced in the next number.

Election Riots in Cincinnati.

The Cincinati Commercial contains nearly a column concerning the riots on Wedn'y last, said to have been occasioned by certain outrage and bribery at the ballot box; revolvers, bowie-knives, stones, clubs, and other misiles were freely used on the occasion.

A cannon was used by the beligerents, which was taken and re-taken several times. Several were killed and a number wounded. The Germans were the principle sufferers in the affray.

The Mayor took his position in front of the ballot box, in order to command peace and check the mob, but he was roughly handled, his clothing were torn, and several severe blows inflicted. The ballot box was finally stamped to fragments, and the contents scattered in every direction. The excitement was terrible.

Earthquake in St. Louis.

On Wednesday evening, about 9 o'clock, a slight shock of an earthquake was very sensibly felt in this city. The deep low murmuring sound that accompanied the shock, was unmistakably evident to all who ever heard its deep hollow voice before. Our office was sensibly agitated. Stovepipes rattled, and houses were violently shaken in some parts of the city; no damage done, but 'tis a gentle warning—a slight report of a portion of the Lord's artillery, which will finally overthrow the ungodly nations.

IMPORTANT POSTAL ARRANGEMENT.

We again call the attention of our readers to the new postal arrangements which are now in force throughout these United States. We give the following extract upon the subject, from the New York Herald:

Post Office, New York, March 24, 1855.

Notice is hereby given that, in accordance with the acts of Congress passed March 3, 1855, from and after the 1st of April next letters will not be dispatched from this office, in the mails, unless the postage thereon is prepaid, except only letters addressed to places beyond the limits of the United States, in those cases in which such letters can now be sent without prepayment.

Inquiries having been made at this office in respect to the proposed disposition of letters deposited without prepayment, a letter from Horatio King, Esq., the First Assistant Postmaster General, is subjoined hereto, communicating the instructions of the Post Office Department upon this and other points of interest to the public.

ISAAC V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

Post Office Department,
Appointment Office, March 22, '55.

Sir: Your letter of the 20th inst. is received. In answer, I am directed by the Postmaster General to inform you—

1. The act of 3d March, 1855, making no provision for unpaid letters to places within the United States, on the same or day following any such unpaid letter or letters being put into a Post Office, the Postmaster thereof will post up conspicuously in his office a list of the same, stating that they are held for postage. If not attended to, such letters must be returned monthly to the Dead Letter Office.

2. Letters part paid should be dispatched, charged with the additional postage due at the prepaid rate, according to distance, established by said act, except where the omission to pay the correct amount is known to have been intentional, when they should be treated the same as letters wholly unpaid.

3. It is proper to forward a letter when requested, in writing. When forwarded, no additional postage should be charged if the letter, contrary to its address, has been missent. If it has been sent according to its address, and then forwarded, it must be charged with additional postage at the prepaid rate, according to distance, established by the act of March 3, 1855, aforesaid.

4. Ship letters, as they cannot be prepaid, and are not supposed to be embraced in the new act, will continue to be dispatched agreeably to the provisions of the fifteenth section of the act of March 3, 1825.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

HORATIO KING
First Assistant Postmaster General.

Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster New York.

ELDER BALLANTYNE'S VISIT.

Company of the Charles Buck Shipped for Atchison.

We have had a very interesting and agreeable intercourse for a few days with our much esteemed and faithful brother, Ballantyne. He arrived among us full of faith and the spirit of God, in the full enjoyment of the faith and confidence of his company, and the spirit and influence of his presidency. On Sunday, the 1st inst., in our large and well filled church, he gave a very interesring and descriptive narrative of his late mission to Hindostan, which was listened to with intense interest.

We felt ourselves edified and refreshed under his remarks, and feft to thank and praise God for the many manifestations of his over ruling power, and providential care towards our faithful brethren whilst wending their way to, and traveling amongst the dark and benighted nations of the earth. We have been favored by our reporter with a copy of the discourse, which our readers may expect shortly.

Brother Ballantyne rendered us much aid and assistance whilst in this city, in providing for the Saints in his charge, over whom, it may be truly said, he watched with a fathers care.

In consequence of the rivers being low, boats were scarce, and fares very high, and it was not without considerable difficulty that we finally succeeded in shipping the company to Atchison, the point of outfit. The unprecedented rush to Kansas and Nebraska has materially increased the rate of fares and the difficulty of shipping to the upper country.

On Saturday March 31st we shipped on the "Admiral" forty Danes, under the presidency of Elder Hogan.

On Tuesday, April 3rd, we shipped one hundred and ninety-one souls of the same company in charge of Elder Richard Ballantyne, with instructions to land at Atchison, and to take the general charge of the P. E. Fund passengers now under his charge, and those that may be hereafter shipped to that place.

ST. LOUIS CONFERENCE.

On Friday, April 6th, at 10 o'clock A. M., the Conference met pursuant to appointment, commenced by singing the first Hymn, "The morning breaks, the shadows flee."

Prayer by Elder Milo Andrus, who afterwads gave a brief introductory address, and was followed by Elders McGaw, Case, and Snow, who thanked God for the privilege enjoyed of celebrating this, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the kingdom of God on the earth—rejoiced that our brethren in the vallies of Utah has favorably recognized us and our organizations as a stake of Zion, and hoped we should ever prove ourselves worthy of their confidence and blessings. The weather was delightful; the Church was well attended; the spirit of peace and joy seemed to dwell in every bosom. Present of the Twelve Apostles—Erastus Snow. Presidents of Seventies—Milo Andrus, Charles Bassel, and James McGaw. High Priests unnumbered. We will give the details in the next issue.

Elder Richard Ballantyne with the company of Saints under his Presidency, arrived on the 27th ultimo. An interesting description of the voyage will be found in another column. It should have appeared in the last number—it was written and sent to the printer about the middle of last week with other interesting articles, which he chose to lay over till this week, thinking, probably, the news would be more interesting when a little cold. (!) If our readers should not exactly appreciate his taste, they may console themselves with our assurance—"better late than never."

Correspondence.

Letter from Richard Ballantyne, President of the Saints on the Charles Buck.

St. Louis, March 29, 1855.

My Dear President Snow:—Through the tender mercies of God, our Eternal Father, I am at this time and in this place, permitted to address you a few lines, that you, and the readers of your excellent Luminary, may be informed of the welfare of myself and the company of Saints that I had the charge of from Liverpool to St. Louis.

We crossed the Atlantic ocean in eight weeks, on board the commodious and well ventilated ship "Charles Buck," commanded by Captain William Smalley, of the state of Maine. Our voyage was pleasant, and the Saints were cheerful on board. They were faithful in attending to their prayers, and in exercising that charity which thinketh no ill, and that hideth a multitude of sins. They were obedient to counsel, and cleanly in their habits. They were compassionate towards each other, and endeavored to cherish that tender sympathy which led them to rejoice and to mourn together. They were patient in adversity, and did not complain, when, through the rascality of those who were not Saints, they found themselves destitute of many of the comforts and necessary blessings of life, and when ultimately they were limited in the usual supplies of food and water.

This company was at first shipped on board the "Helois," in Liverpool, by President F. D. Richards, and were provided for on an unusually comfortable and liberal scale, but the ship having drifted ashore in the river Mersey before putting out to sea, was so injured that she had to go into the dry docks for repairs, while the passengers were detained in Liverpool, but ultimately, by the Captain of the "Helois," and the Insurance Company, they were re-shipped on the "Charles Buck." The excellent provisions furnished by President Richards were withheld from them on their reshipment, either by the Captain of the Helois, or the Insurance Company, or the united avariciousness of both, and in their stead, some raw oatmeal, coarse biscuit, and a little rice and flour furnished, and even of these articles a sufficient quantity was not shipped, so that the passengers were placed on short allowance of provisions two weeks before our arrival in New Orleans, and a few days before our arrival at the city mentioned they were on short allowance of water.

Notwithstanding these unpleasant circumstances, the company manifested an unusual measure of cheerfulness and patience. And, though we had some sickness and debility among the people, which was chiefly occasioned through the want of something nutritious and congenial to eat, we had but few deaths during the voyage. There were on board 401 of our own passengers, and about 50 Irish. One boy, 6 years old, the son of John Grimmeto, fell into the ocean and perished. The infant child of brother Charles Hartley died of dysentery. A young child belonging to brother Wm. Atkin died of croup. An old lady named Antoms, who had been sickly for three years, died at the mouth of the Mississippi, and was buried on an island there. The wife of brother Sutton gave birth to a boy which died of canker shortly after.

These distressing visitations of providence, though fewer in number than some other companies have experienced, were painful at the time, yet they served to amalgamate the feelings and sympathies of the Saints, and afforded an opportunity of administering consolation to the bereaved. And we endeavored to improve them in awakening the Saints to duty, and in so sanctifying themselves in spirit, body, clothing, and in everything associated with them, as that they being pure in heart might elude severer trials, and the grasp of the destroyer on the Mississippi, and the waters and plains of the Missouri river.

On our arrival at New Orleans we were kindly welcomed by Elder McGaw, who rendered us much aid in providing for the immediate wants and further progress of the company. He contracted with the Captain of the Michigan to carry us to St. Louis for three dollars and a-half for each adult passenger, children under fourteen and over one year half price, and infants under one year free. The Captain's name is Sheble; his conduct towards us was disgraceful in the extreme—of this you will hear from me again. As we left the wharf, John Eccluson fell overboard and was drowned. Four children died on the way up to St. Louis. One Danish brother, by the name of Norberg, fell overboard, the morning before arriving at St. Louis, and perished. The health of the company on arriving was generally good. Provisions were high; costing on an average one dollar and fifty-six cents for each passenger from the time of arriving at New Orleans to arriving at St. Louis, making cost of the passage five dollars and six cents for each adult passenger.

Yours &c.

RICHARD BALLANTYNE.
President of the Company.

Jackson's Point, Holt co., Mo.
March 22nd, 1855.

To the Editor of the Luminary:

Dear Brother:—Having just paid a short visit to Kanesville, Pottawatamie, and Mill counties, in Iowa, I thought that a short description of what I saw there would not be uninteresting to you and your numerous readers.

I arrived in Kanesville at 12o'clock on the 15th of March. Before arriving there, I enquired for a man by the name of Fulsom, and the gentleman of whom I made the inquiry said there were three gentlemen in town by that name, the citizens distinguished them by calling one Land-office Fulsom, another Michigan Fulsom, and another Brother Fulsom. "A Mormon, Sir, I presume." "Yes," said the gentleman. "That's the man I want to find," said I, which caused the gentleman to strain his eyes to see whether I was a white or black man, and for my own part, I could scarcely tell what I was myself, as these cold north winds have almost used me up. I shortly found Brothers Fulsom, Mace, Brown, Littlefield, Johnson, and others, with whom I took a hearty Mormon shake of hands, and felt pleased to see some of my brethren that I had been acquainted with heretofore. I found another class of men calling themselves Mormons, that were tight to my heels, wishing to know my business, and shortly ascertained by my inquiries that I wished to buy oxen. They informed me that Mormons ruled in that place, and that they could regulate the price of cattle at their will. I thought, on looking round, seeing and hearing what I did, the crowded dogeries, the blasphemous oaths, and the running of horses, that if the Mormons ruled there, they must, of course be a different set from those that I had left in the mountains of Utah, or yet in the maiden stake at St. Louis. But permit me to follow these gentlemen, or, pardon me for the term, these accursed apostates, in their windings a little further. They will, for the sake of money, say that they are good Latter-day Saints when they meet with an Elder that they think has any money to expend to fit out the poor, and when they meet with the drunken rabble, they will say, "Damn the Mormons to hell, we'll get all out of them we can." From all such men, Good Lord, deliver us.

I will now take up another class of men with whom I have associated in company with my brethren in holy places. They have stopped here whilst poor, and their eyes have become partly dim, their children have grown up from infancy to man and womanhood, and have partaken of the influences with which they have been surrounded. The one who can drink the most whisky, chew the most tobacco, play the best game at poker or euchre, and swear the most scientific, is thought to be decidedly the best man. The fathers and mothers have stayed here so long that they have become as powerless as the dry mullen stalk in the midst of the sheep pasture around which the sheep and the goats, in the shape of their children, play with impunity. It seems to me as though such parents had forgoten the use of the square and compass, and were strangers to that all-important principle on which the righteous patriarch Abraham received the promises, will, and wisdom of God—on condition that he would command his posterity after him.

I also had a short conversation with a widowed sister who has been such for nearly seven years; on asking her the cause of her remaining single, she frankly and openly said that she had had many offers for matrimony, but found, on a thorough investigation of their character, that it was, to a greater or less extent, mixed with treachery and deceit, and that in her seven years widowhood, she had not found the man that was the protector of the virtuous and innocent, but rather a disposition in all to prostitute, and said further that if the men were not in the mountains that would protect the virtuous and innocent, they were scarce elsewhere. The above named person I have known from her youth, and believe that her statements were frank, open and true.

I also had an interesting interview with some others whose names I forbear to mention under existing circumstances. They stopped here whilst poor and the Lord has blessed them with plenty, and they have not entirely forgotten his tender mercies towards them, yet they are in a state of inactivity, but they believe in the Lord, and in the power of his holy priesthood, and they truly felt and expressed their thanks that we had chanced to meet again on the earth, and I humbly pray when this article comes into their possession, that the spirit of the writer may accompany the same, and when they have read and retired to rest, that sleep will depart from them, and the spirit of the Lord whisper unto them, that it is time they were up and out of Iowa, and if this should be the result, I shall have accomplished the object that I have in view in writing these feeble lines, and the glory and the honor shall be the Lords for ever. Amen.

When I came to the shores of the Missouri river, or to the identical spot where the camp of Israel landed in June, '46, it will be impossible for me, with my powers of description, to give even a faint idea of what I felt. On that spot once stood the prophets and apostles who hold the living oracles of God, the destinies of men, nations, kingdoms, on this earth in their hands, but how little known and understood by poor fallen man. I then turned my eyes and gazed at those distant bluffs that were spotted with our wagons and tents, with our wives at work, and our children sporting and playing over those hills, whilst the vast plains below were filled with horses and cattle that moved the Israel of God to their home of freedom in the valleys of the mountains. I then looked upon that piece of table ground where the liberty pole was raised, and the proud American Eagle above the stars and stripes unfurled its wings in the fresh breezes of heaven's atmosphere, whilst the drum and the fife called loudly for volunteers to swell the ranks of the American army, to take part in the achievement of more glory and more territory to these United States, called "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

I have passed through these upper countries over lands that the general government have had our money for, and after that, we forced to leave them, contrary to every principle of law of right either of God or of man; but the spirit seems to whisper, be still, and know that I am God, and if those who bear rule on this land, which is to be a land of freedom, for such it is ordained, do not rise up and wash their hands from the blood of innocence by judging and awarding a righteous judgment. I will come forth, saith the Lord, from my hiding place, and appoint them a place with hypocrites and unbeleivers, where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

I am as ever a servant of the people for the Gospel's sake,

MILO ANDRUS.

From the Millennial Star.

INDIA—CHINA.

Perilous Voyage from Singapore to Hong Kong—Persecution—Departure of Elder W. Willes for Liverpool.

Hong Kong, China,
December 10th, 1854.

Dear President Richards—I arrived in this place on the morning of the first instant, after a long and sickening voyage of 35 days from the Straits of Malacca, or Singapore. We put in here in distress. I was a passenger on board the Prince Woronzoff from Edinburgh, Scotland, Captain Harris. This unfortunate brig is three years old, clipper built, and as fine a vessel as sails the ocean.

On the ninth day out, 15 miles to the westward of Paliwon Island, in south latitude 8 deg. 50 min., east longitude 117 deg. 15 min., just before the dawn of day, on Saturday the 4th of November, in a heavy fog and rain, our clipper struck with great violence on a coral reef, or sunken rock. The captain ordered port the helm, and all on board was as silent as the charnel house of death. We struck three or four times on those rough and pointed rocks, and our hopes were almost gone, and death stared us in the face; but thank the Lord, He sent to our relief an unusually large wave, which carried us over the rock into deep water. We manned the pumps, and sounded the water in the hold, and found that the vessel made one inch of water every three minutes, or 20 inches per hour. Our spirits groaned within us. It was a time of the deepest distress. I felt that my mission had been according to the will and counsels of heaven, and I could not but ask, "Father, must I leave my body here?" But I felt, "Thy will, O Lord, be done."

I had a little hope that we might save ourselves in our boats, but to our terror the captain informed us that the inhabitants of Paliwon Island were all cannibals. The island is not far from Borneo, where live probably the most cruel race of beings on the earth, being both land and sea pirates.

Our gallant brig was bound for Shanghai, and the captain was determined to run her into that port, if possible, to save expense, otherwise we might have put into Manilla, which would have been far better.

Here commenced the epoch—trouble, sorrow, sickness, pain, vituperation, and abuse. I was sick and had to stand in the water at the brake of the pump morning and night, to keep us afloat, and save our lives, with however but little hopes. We were 15 days in a gale of wind, almost a typhoon. Our sails were torn into ribands and new ones bent. Our yards were carried away, the rigging was chafed and much injured, and we were in momentary expectation of seeing the masts go by the board.—Ringbolts were torn from the decks, and spars, boats, and lumber were adrift, being torn from their fastenings. Sometimes we were carried on mountain waves, and then again thrust down into the great abyss of waters, in the troughs of the sea, expecting at times to be buried, as the vessel often shipped seas which swept the decks fore and aft.—I was sick, and my body was borne down with pain from costiveness and the general disorganized state of my system.

All this was but trifling. Said the captain, "Ah! you are the Judas, your religion is of the devil, you all ought to be put to death, and if Jesus was now on the earth, you would put him to death."

"No," I replied, "we are his friends, and not his enemies." The persecution came hotter and hotter. After reading Elder Spencer's letters, the captain said he was a liar, for he condemned everybody and everything but his own order. I told the captain that that man, kingdom, or nation that fought against the Saints of Latter-days, should go backward and not forward, should sink and not swim.

We passed Formosa Island two days out in the Pacific Ocean. The leak increased, and caused alarm, and we turned our course and stood for Amoy. The storm came on again, accompanied with thunder and lightning, the clouds gathered blackness, the elements became furious, and the seas again swept our decks; we then put into Hong Kong. After running within three days' sail of Shanghai, we were driven back 700 miles to the very place where I wanted to land 35 days before.

From the time we left Singapore, the captain's spirit strove against me continually. I prayed and gave thanks and prophesied good, while the captain prophesied evil, and said the vessel would never see Shanghai, that we should have head-winds, and that he had been cursed ever since they ran upon the coral reef, and I was the Jonas—I had brought all the evil upon them, and not good. I testified to them of the truth of this work, both day and night, that it was the kingdom of God, and that the Lord was with us. Mr. Harris said it was all of the devil, and we would all go to the devil together. He could not bear the name of a Saint, and said—"I am as much of a Saint as you, and have continual revelations and the gift of prophecy." He was a very pious Baptist, of Edinburgh, Scotland.

I landed in this den of devils, or island of pirates, in spite of all my Indian or European foes. The captain came here because he could not go anywhere else, until he had landed an Elder in Israel, although much against his will. These seas should be avoided if possible in future by the Elders at this season of the year, which is the time of the regular monsoons, which often increase into hurricanes and tornadoes.

I have recovered from my sea sickness and bodily infirmities, and am trying, if possible, to get a free passage to California. I am expecting to leave next week, on board the ship Lucas, for San Francisco. The China seas are dreadful. The ship Gazelle got in yesterday from San Francisco, with masts and rigging carried away—a perfect wreck. She had 200 passengers and 16 drowned. Four more vessels from the same place put in here for repairs. Several others have been lost.

This is the third time, in the neighborhood of the continent of Asia, that I have been in perils in sinking vessels on the sea. Have I complained? God forbid, it is all right. I acknowledge the hand of God in all this. Though He slay me, yet will I put my trust in Him. I was stoned, mobbed, and rejected in Bankok, Siam. I fled to Singapore, and there found the same spirits to contend with, and while they were putting their engines in operation against me, I took the first opportunity to leave them.

Where shall we go to find peace on the earth, but in Zion? I have preached, and asked from the citizens the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table? They say—"D—n the Mormon plurality of wives, they ought to be burnt at the stake."

Elder William Willes will give you the details of what I have here stated. He left Singapore for Liverpool on the 14th October, on board the clipper ship Gazelle, Captain Leslie. Brother Willes spent four days with me, which was like balm to a wounded spirit, or water to a thirsty man. When I was hungry, he took me to the bazaar, and bought a loaf of bread and a bowl of soup with a few vegetables and China fixings. We ate the same on the strand or beach at the foot of the market, where thousands were passing by, some of whom stopped to gaze on two "Mormon" Elders, as we sat on the ground, in good native style, to stop the cravings of hunger, for we had not where to lay our heads.

Our parting was like extracting teeth. May the Lord God of Israel bless our worthy brother Willes, and give him a speedy passage to the bosom of his dear family.

It is now almost twenty-six months since I left Deseret. I have visited the capital of India, drunk of the waters of the Irrawaddy, in Burmah, touched at Penang, or Prince of Wales' Island, drunk of the beverage that flows from its mighty summit, spent ten weeks at Singapore, all the time having an eye on India; where I arrived the 6th of last April, and spent 127 days, crying repentance unto the people. I was rejected, and I washed my feet as a testimony against my foes—American missionaries and Europeans. I have now travelled 16,000 miles, preaching as I have come.

Farewell! may we all meet again. God bless you all. Amen. E. LUDINGTON.

Concealing faults is but adding to them.

OBITUARY.

DIED, at her residence, Southampton, New Brunswick, after a severe illness, ELIZABETH, wife of M. G. D. Philips, in the 40th year of her age.

Her end was peace.

From the Deseret News.

Interesting account of a trip to the Navijos, and of the Ancient Ruins in that region.

SPRINGFIELD, Utah Co., Dec. 21, '54.

To the Editor of the Deserett News:

Sir,—On the 13th of October last, by request of Governor Young, I left this city in company with eleven white men and one Indian, to explore the southern part of our Territory, and, if possible, to trade with the Navijos for sheep, goats, and horses, as they have an abundance of these animals; and besides, are quite a manufacturing people; making all their blankets, leather, bridle-bits, &c., many of which are executed with most curious workmanship. They also work iron, gold and silver into a multitude of forms, and articles for the warrior, husbandman and tradesman.

On the 17th, we left Manti with our full fit-out of men and animals, and with five wagons. We never felt more gloomy and doubtful, or undertook what appeared to us a more hazardous work, during an experience of twenty years in this church. A wild, mountainous, and dreary desert, hitherto almost entirely unknown, lay before us, and what was still more formidable, Indian Walker and his allies had decreed that we never should pass, and with twenty Spaniards had posted themselves on our route, and their rallying smoke was in full view. Still, we unanimously resolved to go ahead, and our enemies fled before we reached their position, the Spaniards their way, and Walker his, leaving our path perfectly open. In this, and many other instances in our tour, we publicly acknowledge our wonderful protection and deliverance by the hand and power of God.

We followed Gunison's trail to within 25 miles of Grand River, which, according to our calculation, is 350 miles from Great Salt Lake City. This road, so far, was a tolerably good one, but the country has little or no wood, grass or water. There is a beautiful valley on Grand River, 20 miles long, and from 5 to 10 wide; it has good soil and grazing range, is very well timbered and watered, and is about fifty miles from the Elk Mountain. From here, we traveled 110 miles to St. John's river, over a very rough and mountainous region, difficult to pass over even with pack animals, being covered with dense forests of cedar. It is 40 miles from St. John's river to the nearest Navijo town.

The Navijos met us with very hostile feelings, as they are at war with the whites, and three days before we arrived, had killed, boiled, and eaten a white man, so great was their exasperation. By the persuasion of two friendly Indians with us, our guide and interpreter, they listened to an explanation of our business. We were finally enabled to form a treaty, and did some trading with them, while they were doing some tall stealing from us. They were highly excited, but the chiefs appeared more cool, appeared quite friendly, and wished us to come again and trade. Trade is the best letter of introduction a white man can take among Indians. The great captain wished us not to go among their towns and villages, as there were some that could not be controlled, and he did not want to fight us. He said we had come a very great way, and he wished us well, and then sent to his town and brought out an abundance of corn, meal, flour, bread, beans, dried pumkin, dried squash, pine nuts, with sheep and goat meat of the fatest quality, to fit us out for our journey home.

On the north side of the St. John's river, and about 500 miles south-east from Great Salt Lake City, we traveled over a section of country, mostly among the mountains, and about 40 miles in length, up and down the river, by 25 miles in width, covered with the ruins of buildings of former towns and villages. The walls of many buildings were still standing entire, some of them three or four stories high, with the ends of the red cedar joists yet in the wall, some projecting eight or ten inches, but worn to a point at their extremities. Every building was a fortification built in the strongest manner immaginable, and in a style that the present age know nothing of; and many of them still show their whole manner of structure, and even the marks of the workmen's tools.

The first ruins we discovered were three stone buildings, crumbled to mere heaps. One appeared to have been a pottery, for in and around it were loads of fragments of crockery of fine quality, ornamented with a great variety of figures painted with various colors as bright as if put on but yesterday.

From here we travelled ten miles, with occasional ruins by the way, and entered a deep kanyon with projecting shelves of rock, and under these shelves were numerous houses or fortifications. The one we examined was divided into twenty-four rooms, each nearly square and enclosing an area of about 144 square feet. The front wall was built up to the overhanging cliff, which formed the roof, and was curved, and full of port holes. The stones were all squared and faced, were of an equal thickness, and laid up with joints broken in a workmanlike manner. The only entrance we could find, was a hole about two feet square and eighteen inches high from the ground, which is the usual size of all the doors, both in the outer and partition walls, with the exception of some subterraneous entrances, which were yet smaller, and difficult to find. Through the perfection of the rocky roof, there was very little rubbish in the rooms. From the first room we passed through a small hole in the right hand corner of the second, and then through another hole into the third, and so on, from left room to right, and from right to left, and so on all through the twenty-four rooms; and every wall was supplied with port holes.

Fifty yards above this was a large cave with a narrow winding entrance, guarded by a high wall; near the mouth of this entrance is an opening in the rock leading off into the mountain which we did not explore, and after a little looking and rummaging about we found an outlet to the cave. For 3 or 4 miles up this kanyon buildings were everywhere in view, of various forms and dimensions, and in almost every stage of decay.

From here to St. John's river, a distance of 10 miles, there were scattering ruins; and from there, in 12 miles N. E., we came to the head of a kanyon, whose sides or banks, even to the very head, were perpendicular, and shelving, and near the banks there was no soil on the rocks. Right on the brink of this precipice, and under the shelves of the rock beneath, was the best building sites for those beings who built and dwelt here ages ago.

All around the head of this kanyon, and down on either side, as far as we could see, were houses of every conceivable form, and size; and in places where the soil was sufficient, they were overgrown with sage and cedar, in every respect like that on the mountains around. In the centre of this kanyon, and near the head, was a building 16 or 20 feet square, four stories high, and built upon a flat rock about 4 feet higher than the level of the bed of the kanyon, and but little broader than the building; to this we could not find an entrance, and unlike all the rest, it had no port holes.

One large building which we entered, stood on the edge of the precipice, with its front wall circular and flush with the bank which formed the back part, making the ground plan of the building like a half moon. There were no windows in the lower story of any building, and every entrance was made as difficult and hidden as possible. The door, or hole into the one last mentioned was guarded by two or three walls of different angles, thus making a crooked, narrow passage to the door, and every part of this passage was in full view from the port holes of the building, the front wall being full of them, like pigeon holes, pointing in every possible direction; they were not more than two inches in diameter on the outside, and were plastered smooth on the inside with a kind of cement with which the stones are laid, and the rooms plastered, and is as hard as the stone.

The inside arrangement of all the houses was much alike, all having port holes in the partition walls, and very small, obscure passage ways from one room to another, from one house to another, and from one or two houses back, into the mountain.—Some on the cliff above were connected with those below.

We noticed there was no water about there, and enquired of the Indians how the former inhabitants could have managed; they told us they had heard that a very long time ago there was water running there.

We asked them who built those houses. They smilingly shook their heads and said they had never heard, but that surely somebody built them a very long time back.

We very readily came to a conclusion drawn from the Book of Mormon in second chapter of the book of Nephi, that the ancient possessors of those strong holds were robbers of the Gadianton Band, and we considered this locality as one of their very strong holds.

Yours most respectfully,
W. D. HUNTINGTON.

The following is a short extract from the chapter alluded to, taken from the first paragraph of the 494th page:

And it came to pass in the latter end of the eighteenth year, those armies of robbers, had prepared for battle, and began to come down, and to sally forth from the hills, and out of the mountains, and the wilderness, and from their strong holds, and their secret places, and began to take possession of the lands, both which was in the land south, and which was in the land north, and began to take possession of all the lands which had been deserted by the Nephites, and the cities which had been left desolate.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

EUPATORIA, Feb. 17.—The Moniteur contains the official report of the attack by the Russians on Eupatoria, Feb. 17th. The Russian force amounted to 25,000 men. The battle lasted six hours and cost the Russians 500 killed and 2,000 wounded, according to some accounts; while correspondents who walked over the field estimate the loss of the Russians at 300 killed and 700 wounded, and of the Turks 80 killed and 100 wounded.

Omar Pacha in his official report of the battle says that the Russians three times tried to storm the works, and were each time vigorously repulsed.—He adds, "I have every reason to be satisfied with the conduct of my troops during the day. Although behind works only half finished, and not fully armed, they showed a bold front and were very steady."

BRITAIN.—THE ROEBUCK COMMITTEE.—The following editorial paragraph from the London Morning Herald, ministerial paper, is considered to give the clue to a hasty visit made on the 3d inst. by the Earl of Clarendon to the Emperor Napoleon at Boulogne:

"We have excellent authority" (says the Herald) "for stating that the French Emperor has remonstrated against the committee for enquiring into the conduct of the war, and that he has said that, in the event of the committee continuing to sit, the armies of the two nations cannot act together, although they may act for the same object. In order, therefore, to satisfy Louis Napoleon, without affronting the English people, a dissolution of Parliament will, it is stated on the authority we have alluded to, take place almost immediately."

It is announced in English papers that besides the 10th Hussars and 12th Lancers, an infantry force comprising the 8th, 25th, 29th, 43d, 53d, 61st, 86th, 87th and 98th regiments, having a present strength of 8,000 men, will proceed from India, early in the spring, to the seat of war, via Alexandria.

A dispatch from Constantinople, dated March 1st, says a shock of earthquake has been felt here.—Broussa has been almost destroyed by earthquakes, and 2,000 lives were lost. [Quære 200?]

OUTFITS FOR CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE AND OREGON.

WM. C. WILSON,
DEALER IN
Groceries, Wines, Liquors, and Provisions,; Pilot Bread and Crackers,
No. 195 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.

☞Is prepared to furnish everything in his line, at the lowest rates, and from past experience in the trade, feels assured, that parties intending to cross the plains, will find it to their interest to give him a call, and compare prices before purchasing elsewhere.

ON HAND AND FOR SALE LOW, THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES:

TEAS—A choice assortment of Imperial, Gun Powder, Young Hyson and Black.
COFFEE—Rio, Havana, Laguayra and Java—burnt and ground.
SUGAR—Crushed, Lump, Powdered, Clarified, New Orleans and Brown—all grades.
MOLASSES—Golden Syrup, Sugar House and Plantation.
LIQUORS—Best brands of Pure French Brandy, Holland Gin, Jamaica Rum, Irish, Scotch, Monongahela and Bourbon Whiskey, and all kinds of Domestic Liquors.
WINES—Pure Port, Maderia, Malaga, Sherry, Muscat, Champagne, Claret and White, Cordials, &c., &c.
BACON—Ham, Sides and Shoulders, Dried Beef and Beef Tongue.
FRUIT—Raisins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, Citron, Dried Apples and Peaches, &c., &c.
SUNDRIES—All kinds of Pickles, Sauce, Ketchups, Spice, Fancy Soaps, Candles, Oil, Gas, Fish, Mats, Cords, Buckets, Baskets, Brooms, Tubs, Lobsters, Oysters, Sardines, Cooking Extracts, Essences, Arrow Root, Farina, Sago, Corn Starch, Oat Meal, Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Maccaroni, Vermicelli, Honey, &c., &c. [apr 7 20 2m

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE and OREGON.
EMIGRANTS
Can be supplied with every variety of
PILOT BREAD & CRACKERS
Baked expressly for the overland Emigration, and WARRANTED to KEEP, at
J. B. WILLSON'S BAKERY,
No. 186 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
☞The trade supplied at the LOWEST RATES. [apr 7 20 2m

IN FOURTEEN MONTHLY PARTS, ROYAL QUARTO.
ROUTE FROM LIVERPOOL TO GREAT SALT LAKE VALLEY, ILLUSTRATED
By a series of Splendid Steel Engravings and Wood Cuts from sketches made on the spot from life in 1853, expressly for this work,
BY FREDERICK PIERCY,
Containing a Map of the overland portion of the journey,
EDITED BY JAMES LINFORTH.

THIS highly interesting and beautiful work will form a narrative of the journey from Liverpool to Great Salt Lake Valley, and will give a Historical description and Statistical information respecting the places, and the Indian tribes on the route, and in Utah Territory.

The mode in which the Latter-day Saints emigration is conducted—a review of it from the commencement, and incidental instructions to Emigrants will constitute an early part of this work.

The Statistical information will be drawn from the most authentic sources and consequently may be relied pon. That portion of it relating to the Latter-day Saints will be particularly valuable, owing to the difficulty hitherto experienced by all classes in obtaining anything accurate from the conflicting statements which have appeared from time to time in a great portion of the public press.

The Engravings, except the portraits of Joseph Smith, Heber C. Kimball, Willard Richards, Jedediah M. Grant, John Smith, and Joseph Walker and Arapeen, chiefs of Utah Indians, are all taken from sketches made on the spot and from life expressly for this work, and will be finished in the first style of art, presenting a detail and accuracy rarely aimed at in similar productions.

No pains or expense has been spared to render this work one of peculiar interest, usefulness, and beauty; and the Publisher feels confident that it will meet with that extensive patronage which can alone justify its publication.

STEEL ENGRAVINGS
By CHARLES FENN & EDWARD ROFFE.

New Orleans; Baton Rouge; Natches under the Hill; Vicksburgh; Memphis; St. Louis; Camp at Keokuk; Nauvoo; Joseph Smith, the Prophet; Hyrum Smith, from an original portrait in the posession of his family; Willard Richards, from a daguerreotype; John Taylor; Carthago Jail; Room in which Joseph and Hyrum Smith were imprisoned; Well against which Joseph Smith was placed and shot after his assassination; Lucy Smith, mother of the Prophet; Ruins of the Temple at Nauvoo; Joseph and David Smith, sons of the Prophet; Entrance to Kanesville; Council Bluffs Ferry and group of cotton wood trees; View of the Missouri river and Council Bluffs from an elevation; Elk Horn river Ferry; Loup Fork Ferry; Wood river; Chimney Rock; Scott's Bluffs; Fort Laramie; Independence Rock; Devils Gate; Laramie Peak; Witches Bluffs; Great Salt Lake; Great Salt Lake City; Hober C. Kimball, from a daguereotype; Jedediah M. Grant, from a daguerreotype; John Smith from a daguerreotype; President Brigham Young, Governor of Utah Territory.

WOOD CUTS
By MASON JACKSON.

Emigrant Ship leaving Liverpool; Light-house at the mouth of the Mississippi river; Old Fort Rosalie; Walnut Hills; Utah Territorial House, G. S. L. City; Costume for the Plains; Chimney Rock from the west; Fort Bridger; A Kanyon in the Rocky Mountains; Tabernacle, G. S. L. City; Joseph Walker and Arapeen, brothers, once Chiefs of the Utah Indians, from original drawings by W. W. Major.

Published by F. D. RICHARDS, Liverpool.
J. S. CANTWELL, Agent for St. Louis.

GOODIN & TOOKER,
GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,
No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.

HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.

We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfilment.

Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand. Lamps repaired, regilded and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 19 6m

FOR SALE AT A BARGAIN.

A GOOD SUBSTANTIAL ONE HORSE LUMBER WAGON, suitable for Gardners, Jobbers of Masonry, &c., will be sold cheap for Cash if applied for soon, at the south-west corner of Market and 15th streets.

W. H. HUISH,

MACHINIST, Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as
PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERMLY.
mar 24] [18 3m

NOTICE.

I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware, and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at
ST. LOUIS PRICES.
mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

TO EMIGRANTS.

J D HARPER. T J HARPER.

AT the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especialy of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we willl sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.
mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L K & Co.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by
ALFRED PERSEY,
St. Louis, Mo.
The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

BLACKSMITHING.

T. S. ABURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for the Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommendation.
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb. 1855. [mar 3, 15 3m.

D. G. TUTT. J. F. BAKER.
TUTT & BAKER,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.
WESTON, MO.,
Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.
March 3, 1855. 15 3m

J. B. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.
EVANS & MITCHELL,
MERCHANTS,
At Weston, Missouri,

HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.
STORAGE AND OUTFITS.
LEWIS N. REES,
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,

IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pirtols, Buoy-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.
Groceries and Provisions.
Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.

He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Heningcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 15 3m

G. M. & A. FISHER,
Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,

ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as And-irons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.

They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 15 3m

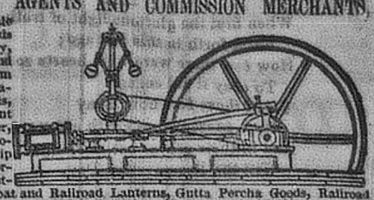
WANTED.

A RESPECTABLE WIDOW wishes to obtain a situation as Housekeeper. She will undertake Sewing, the education of Children, and otherwise render herself useful. Address F. BROWN, Postoffice.

PHIL. ROCHILD & CO.,

HAVE constantly on hand in Kansas, Mo., a full supply of Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Groceries, Gutta Percha Goods, Provisions, Tinware, &c., which they will sell on as liberal terms as they can be bought for in Upper Missouri. [mar 3, 15 3m.

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MAIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,



FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.
N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.
Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,
Residence, No. 328 South Side Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets:
Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,

MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also, Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice.
All the above articles are warranted of the best American Iron.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!
O. H. COGSWELL,
At his Old Stand in Independence, Mo.,

WILL have on hand at the commencement of the out-fitting season, a large and well selected stock of outfitting goods for the Plains to Great Salt Lake City, and will furnish them on reasonable terms. He will keep constantly on hand, Flour, Bacon, Sugar, Coffee, Rice, Dried Beef, Hard Bread, and in a word, every article necessary for crossing the Plains. He flatters himself from his knowledge in that department of his business, having been a trader for the last four years in Great Salt Lake City, and his frequent passing over the Plains, that he will be well prepared to give general satisfaction.
And to the Salt Lake emigration he would respectfully say that Independence possesses advantages in point of location for out let directly, and for procuring Wagons, Stock, Provisions, &c., that no other place above St. Louis possesses. O. H. COGSWELL.

REFERENCES.
ERASTUS SNOW, St. Louis; ORSON SPENCER, Cincinnati, O.,
MILO ANDRUS, St. Louis; EL. JOHN TAYLOR, New York,
CHAS. BASSETT, Springfield, O., JOHN HOW, St. Louis,
Feb. 24] WOODS, CHRISTY & CO., St. Louis. [14 3m.

BOOTS AND SHOES of every variety can be had at
Feb. 24, 14 3m. O. H. COGWELL'S, Main street, Independence, Mo.

LEATHER of all descriptions, for Saddlery, Harness, and Shoemaking purposes to be had at O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

OUT-FITTING FOR THE PLAINS.

THOSE crossing the Plains this Spring, will find it to their interest to call on the undersigned, where they will find a general assorment of every thing necessary in out-fitting for such expeditions.
Goods received and stored upon liberal terms.
Feb. 24, 14 3m A. G. BOONE, Weston, Mo.

OUT-FITTING.

R. CHARLES takes this method of informing the emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand a full supply of Groceries, Builder's Hardware, Cutlery, Boots and Shoes, and all grades of staple Dry Goods, which he will sell at wholesale and retail. Thankful for former patronage, he solicits a further trial on the levee Kansas, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

BLACKSMITHING AND GRAZING.

THE Subscriber has a Blacksmith Shop, lots on the prairie, and has Cattle for sale two miles from Westport, on the State line. His former business transactions with the Latter-day Saints and other Emigration having given general satisfaction, he solicits a trial in future.
Feb. 54, 14 3m* J. W. MARRION, Kansas, Mo.

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.

THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m* JAMES W. ELLIS.

BENJ. CROWTHER,

DEALER in Hardware, Table and Pocket Cutlery, Mechanics' Tools of every description, consisting in part of Axes of all kinds, Augers do., Awls, patent, with bitts, Bench Screws, Chisels of every description, Auger and Chisel Handles. Also, Blacksmith's Tools of every description, together with a large stock of Miscellaneous articles, such as Brushes, Paints, Japanned Tin Ware, Spoons, Rifles, Guns, Pistols, and other articles too numerous to mention, in fact, everything used by Mechanics, Housekeepers and the public in general, all of which will be sold low for cash. A liberal discount made to mechanics buying by the quantity. Call and see. Store situated south side of the Court House.
BENJAMIN CROWTHER,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Independence, Jackson Co., Mo.

OUT-FITTING!

M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Groceries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

EMIGRANTS.

THE Subscribers would say to the Emigration for the West, that they are engaged in buying and selling stock of all kinds. Orders for Horses, Mules or Cattle will meet with prompt attention. Persons wishing to purchase would do well to call on me before purchasing elsewhere.
WM. LIGGIT,
WM. IRWIN,
Independence, Mo.
Refer to J. HOCKIDAY,
O. H. COGSWELL. [Feb. 24, 14, 1m*

ISAAC HOCKADAY.

DEALER in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps and Ready Made Clothing, together with a large and general assortment of out-fitting goods of every description, suitable for California, Salt Lake, and New Mexico outfits.
Store north side of Public Square, Independence, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

FLOUR AND MEAL.

THE Subscriber takes this method of saying to the Emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand large quantities of Flour and Meal, which he will sell at as reasonable rates as such articles can be bought for in the up country, at his mill, known as the Jackson Mills, near Independence. He will also have a large supply in Independence, Mo.
THOMAS PITCHER.
REFERENCES: WILSON & PARKER; JESSE H. NOWLAND.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

CATTLE.

THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all of which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. B. & J. H. FLEMING,
Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.
REFERENCE:
ISAAC HOCKADAY, Independence, O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HADUS & MULLEN, Wayne City.
N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon, and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood of Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WAGONS AND YOKES.

YOUNG & SMITH are prepared to fill orders for Wagons and Ox Yokes to the Western Emigration. They have on hand a large lot the best Wagons made in the Western Country, and can supply any number of Yokes that may be desired. They will deliver their Yokes or Wagons in lots at any point on the river from Independence to Leavenworth City.
Independence, Mo., 1855. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WM. & JOHN McCOY,
Independence, Mo.,
DEALERS in Staple and Fancy Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Camp Equipage and Outfitting Goods of every description.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

S. P. KELLER,
DEALER IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE,
Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,
Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot
No. 27 Commercial Street,
WESTPORT, MO.
Feb. 24, 14 3m*

C. E. KEARNEY. WM. R. BERNARD.
KEARNEY & BERNARD,
METROPOLITAN STORE,
WESTPORT, MO.
DEALERS IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

JOEL WALKER. W. H. CHICK.
WALKER & CHICK,
Receiving, Forwarding, and Commission Merchants,
KANSAS, MO.
Feb. 24, 1855. [14 3m.

RIDDLESBARGER & CO.,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
Commission and Forwarding Merchants,
AT KANSAS, MO.,

HAVING done a heavy business in our line for the emigration of 1854, we would respectfully solicit further patronage. [Feb 24, 14 3m

PROVISIONS AND OUTFITTING.

H. M. HUDSON & CO., Corner of Main and Water streets, under the printing office, Kansas Mo., have constantly on hand a large supply of Provisions and Outfitting Goods, and having done business in their line at this place for some years with the Western Emigration, they earnestly solicit a share of their patronage this season. [Feb 24, 14 3m.

H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.
NORTHRUP & CHICK,
KANSAS, MISSOURI,

WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.
We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.
Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

Poetical Department.

RESURRECTION HYMN.

TUNE: "SIEGE OF MONTEREY."

When first the glorious light of truth,
Burst forth in this last age;
How few there were with hearts so bold
To obey it did engage
Yet of those few how many
Have passed from Earth away;
And in their graves are sleeping;
'Till the Resurrection Day.

How many on Missouri's plains,
Were left in death's embrace;
Pure honest hearts too good to live,
In such a wicked place.
And are they left in sorrow,
And in doubt to pine away?
Oh no; in peace they're sleeping,
'Till the Resurrection Day.

And in Nanvoo the city where
The temple cheered the brave;
Hundreds of faithful saints have found
A cold but peaceful grave.
And there they now are sleeping;
Beneath the silent clay;
But soon they'll share the glories,
Of a Resurrection Day.

Our patriarch and prophet too,
Were massacred; they bled;
To seal their testimony they
Were numbered with the dead.
Ah, tell me are they sleeping?
Methinks I hear them say:
Death's icy chains are bursting,
'Tis the Resurrection Day.

And here in this sweet peaceful vale
The shafts of death are hurled,
And many faithful saints are called
To enjoy a better world;
And saints are often weeping
For their friends who've passed away,
And in their graves are sleeping
'Till the Resurrection Day.

Why should we mourn because we leave
These scenes of toil and pain;
Oh happy change the faithful go,
Celestial joys to gain;
And soon we all shall follow
To the realms of endless day;
And taste the joyous glories
Of the Resurrection Day.

WM. CLAYTON.

PONTIUS PILATE AT VIENNE.

(Concluded.)

[An abridged Translation from the "Courier des Etats Unis," for the Louisville Journal.]

"Young man," answered I, mildly, "you oblige me to convert my request into an order. The safety of the province, which has been confided to my care, requires it. You must observe more moderation in your discourses. Do not infringe my orders; you know them. May happiness attend you: Farewell."

"Prince of the earth," replied Jesus, "I come not to bring war into the world, but peace, love and charity. I was born the same day that Cæsar Augustus gave peace to the Roman world. Persecution proceds not from me. I expect it from others, and will meet it in obedience to the will of my Father who has shown me the way. Restrain, therefore, your worldly prudence. It is not in your power to arrest the victim at the tabernacle of expiation."

So saying, he disappeared like a bright shadow behind the basilick.

Herod, the Tetrarch, who then reigned in Judea, and died devoured by vermine, was a weak and wicked man, chosen by the chiefs of the law to be the instrument of their hatred. To him the enemies of Jesus addressed themselves. Had Herod consulted his own inclination he would have ordered Jesus immediately to be put to death; but though proud of his regal dignity, yet he was afraid of committing an act that might diminish his influence with Cæsar.

Herod called on me one day at the Pretorium, and on rising to take leave, after some insignificant conversation, he asked me what was my opinion concerning the Nazarene.

I replied that Jesus appeared to me to be one of those grave philosophers that great nations sometimes produce; that his doctrine was by no means dangerous; and that the intention of Rome, was, to leave him that freedom of speech which was justified by his actions. Herod smiled maliciously, and saluted me with ironical respect, and then departed.

The great feast of the Jews was approaching; and their intention was to avail themselves of the popular exaltation which always manifests itself at the solemnities of the passover. The city was overflowing with a tumultuous populace clamoring for the death of the Nazarene. My emissaries informed me that the treasure of the temple had been employed in bribing the people. The danger was pressing. A Roman centurion had been insulted.

I wrote to the prefect of Syria, requesting a hundred foot soldiers and the same number of cavalry. He declined. I saw myself alone with a handful of veterans in the midst of a rebellious city, too weak to suppress disorder, and having no other choice left than to tolerate it.

They had seized upon Jesus; and the seditious rabble, although they knew they had nothing to fear from the Pretorium, believing on the faith of their leaders, that I winked at their sedition, continued vociferating, "crucify him! crucify him!!"

Three powerful parties, at that time, had combined together against Jesus. First, the Herodians and Sadduces, whose seditious conduct appeared to have proceeded from a double motive; they hated the Nazarene, and were impatient of the Roman yoke. They could never forgive me for having entered their holy city with banners that bore the image of the Roman Emperor; and although, in this instance, I had committed a fatal error, yet the sacrilege did not appear less heinous in their eyes. Another grievance also wrankled in their bosoms. I had proposed to employ a part of the treasure of the temple in erecting edifices of public utility. My proposal was scowled at. The Pharisees were the avowed enemies of Jesus. They cared not for the Governor; but they bore with bitterness the severe reprimands which the Nazarene had, during three years, been continually throwing out against them wherever he went. Too weak and pusilanimous to act by themselves, they had eagerly embraced the quarrel of the Herodians and Sadduces. Besides these three parties, I had to contend against the reckless and profligate populace, always ready to join in a sedition, and to profit by the disorder and confusion resulting therefrom.

Jesus was draged before the Council of the Priests and condemned to death. It was then that the High Priest, Caiaphas, performed a derisory act of submision. He sent his prisoner to me to pronounce his condemnation and secure his execution. I answered him that, as Jesus was a Galilean, the affair came within Herod's jurisdiction, and ordered Jesus to be sent thither. The wiley Tetrarch professed humility, and, protesting his defence to the lieutenant of Cæsar, he commited the fate of the man to my hands.

Soon my place assumed the aspect of a besieged citadel; every moment increased the number of the seditious. Jerusalem was inundated with crowds from the mountains of Nazareth, the towns of Galilee, and the plains of Esdreloth. All Judea appeared to be pouring into that devoted city.

I had taken to wife, a girl from among the Gauls, who pretended to see into the future. Weeping and throwing herself at my feet, "Beware," said she to me, "beware and touch not that man, for he is holy. Last night I saw him in a vision. He was walking on the water—he was flying on the wings of the wind. He spoke to the tempests, to the palm trees, to the fishes of the lake, all were obedient to him. Behold! the torrent of Mount Cedron flows with blood, the statues of Cæsar are sold with the filth of the gemoniæ; the columns of the Pretorium have given way, and the sun is veiled in mourning like a vestal in the tomb. O, Pilate! evil awaits thee. If thou wilt not listen to the words of thy wife, dread the curses of a Roman Senate, dread the frowns of Cæsar!"

By this, my marble stairs groaned under the weight of the multitude. The Nazarene was brought back to me. I proceeded to the Hall of Justice, followed by my guards, and asked the people in a severe tone, what they demanded? "The death of the Nazarene," was their reply. For what crime? "He has blasphemed; he has prophesied the ruin of the Temple; he calls him the Son of God, the Messiah, the King of the Jews." Roman justice, said I, punisheth not such offences with death. "Crucify him, crucify him, crucify him!" shouted forth the relentless rabble.

The vociferations of the infuriated multitude shook the palace to its foundation. One man alone appeared calm in the midst of the tumult. He was like unto the the Statue of Innocense placed in the temple of the Enminides. It was the Nazarene.

After many fruitless attempts to protect him from the fury of his merciless persecutors, I had the baseness to adopt a measure, which, at the moment appeared to me to be the only one that could save his life. I ordered him to be scourged, then, calling for a ewer, I washed my hands in the presence of the clamorous multitude, thereby signifying to them my disapprobation of the deed.

But in vain; it was his life they wanted. Often in our evil commotions, have I witnessed the furious animosity of the multitude; but nothing could ever be compared to what I beheld in the present instance. It might have been truly said that on this occasion, all the phantoms of the infernal regions had assembled at Jerusalem. The crowd appeared not to walk; they were borne off and whirled as a vortex, rolling along like living waves, from the portal of the Pretorium even unto Mount Zion, with howling screams, shieks, and vociferations, such as were never heard either in the seditions of Pandonian, or in the tumults of the Forum.

By degrees the day darkened like a winter twilight, such as had been seen at the death of the great Julius Cæsar. It was likewise towards the ides of March. I, the contemned Governor of a rebellious province, was leaning against a column of my basilick, contemplating athwart the dreary gloom, this Theory of Tartus dragging to execution the innocent Nazarene. All around me was a desert.—Jerusalem had vomited forth her indwellers through the funeral gates that lead to the Germoniæ. An air of desolation and sadness enveloped me. My guard had joined the cavalry, and the Centurion to display a shadow of power, was endeavoring to maintain order. I was left alone and my breaking heart admonished me, what was passing at that moment appertained rather to the history of the gods than to that of man. Loud clamors were heard proceeding from Golgotha, which born on the winds appeared to announce an agony such as never had been heard by mortal ear. Dark clouds lowered over the pinnacle of the Temple, and their large ruptures settled over the city and covered it as with a veil. So dreadful were the signs manifested both in the heaven and on the earth, that Dionysius, the Areopagite, is reported to have exclaimed: "Either the author of Nature is suffering, or the Universe is falling to pieces,"

Towards the first hour of the night, I threw my mantle around me, and went down into the city towards the gate of Golgotha. The sacrifice had been consumated. The crowd was returning home; still agitated, it is true, but gloomy, sad, taciturn and desperate. What they had witnessed had struck them with terror and remorse. I also saw my little Roman cohort pass by mournfully, the standard bearer having veiled his eagle in token of grief, and overheard some of the soldiers murmuring strange words which I did not comprehend. Others were recounting prodigies almost similar to those which had so often smote the Romans with dismay by the gods. Sometimes groups of men and women would halt, then, looking back towards Mount Calvary, would remain motionless, in the expectation of witnessing some new prodigy.

I returned to the Pretorium, sad and pensive.—On ascending the stair, the steps of which were still stained with the blood of the Nazarene, I perceived an old man in a suppliant posture, and behind him, several women in tears. He threw himself at my feet and wept bitterly. It is painful to see an old man weep. "Father," said I to him mildly; "who are you and what is your request?" "I am Joseph, of Arimatha," replied he, "I am come to beg of you, on my knees, the permission to bury Jesus of Nazareth." "Your prayer is granted," said I to him, and at the same time ordered Manlius to take some soldiers with him, to superintend the interment, lest it might be profaned. A few days after the sepulchre was found empty. The disciples of Jesus published all over the country that he had risen from the dead, as he had foretold.

A last duty remained for me to perform. It was to communicate to Cæsar the details of the deplorable event. I did it the same night that followed the catastrophe, and had just finished the communication when the day began to dawn.

At that moment the sound of clarion playing the air of Dianna, struck my ear. Casting my eye toward the Cesarean gate, I beheld a troop of soldiers, and heard at a distance, other trumpet's sounding Cæsar's march. It was the reinforcement that had been promised me—ten thousand men, who, to hasten their arrival had marched all night. "It has then been decreed by the Fates," cried I, wringing my hands, "that the great iniquity should be accomplished—that, for the purpose of averting the deeds of yesterday, troops should arrive to-day. Cruel destiny, how thou sportest with the affairs of mortals. Alas! it was but too true, what the Nazarene exclaimed when writhing on the cross: "All is consummated!"

The Philosophy of Rain.

To understand the philosophy of this beautiful and often sublime phenomenon, so often witnessed since the creation of the world, and so essential to the very existence of plants and animals, a few facts derived from observation and a long train of experiments, must be remembered:

1. Were the atmosphere every where at all times of a uniform temperature, we should never have rain, or hail, or snow. The water absorbed by it in evaporation from the sea and earth's surface, would descend in an imperceptible vapor, or cease to be absorbed by the air when it was once fully saturated.

2. The absorbing power of the atmosphere, and consequently its capacity to retain humidity is proportionately greater in warm than cold air.

3. The air near the surface of the earth is warmer than it is in the region of the clouds. The higher we ascend from the earth the colder do we find the atmosphere. Hence the perpetual snow on very high mountains in the hottest climate.

Now, when, from continued evaporation, the air is highly saturated with vapor, though it be invisible and the sky cloudless, if its temperature is suddenly reduced by cold currents descending from above, or rushing from a higher to a lower latitude, or by the motion of saturated air to a cooler latitude, its capacity to retain moisture is diminished, clouds are formed, and the result is rain. Air condenses as it cools, and, like a sponge filled with water and compressed, pours out the water which its diminished capacity cannot hold. How singular, yet how simple, the philosophy of rain! What Omniscience could have devised such an admirable arrangement for watering the earth?

CONFLAGRATION IN MEMPHIS.

The Republican contains lengthy details from which we extract the following:

On Sunday, the first inst., a destructive fire occurred in the city of Memphis, which raged with unabating fury until almost an entire block was reduced to ashes; forty-six horses perished in the flames. The Appeal Office, two Livery Stables, a number of stores and dwelling houses were destroyed. Loss estimated at one hundred thousand dollars.

The heaviest sufferers in this disastrous conflagration are Messrs. Newby & May, and Cockrell & Whitney, who not only lost several of their finest and most valuable horses and carriages, on which they had no insurance, but will be greatly inconvenienced in re-establishing themselves in business, though, with their accustomed go-ahead spirit, we learn that Newby & May were going ahead again yesterday. But a more distressing sight to these gentlemen was to see so many of their finest, noblest animals, lying amid the smouldering ruins, a charred mass of flesh and bones. The spectacle was truly heart-rending to every beholder, and many were the expressions of sympathy from the numerous lookers-on yesterday, as the carcasses were being removed, as to the sad fate of these unfortunate animals. Forty-six bodies were counted lying amid the ruins, all of which, however, did not belong to Messrs. Newby & May and Cockerell & Whitney, as several of them were owned by our citizens, and were kept there to board.

A COLD PUN.

A certain wit declared of late
That every acting magistrate
Was water in a freezing state.
—That is, JUST-ICE.

Ingratitude calls itself no man's debtor.

The longest life is but a parcel of moments.

Study wisdom, and you will reap pleasure.

The Evidences Accumulate in proof of what we have long since asserted, viz: that the Mustang Liniment is the 'sine qua non' of all external remedies ever before offered to the afflicted.

We would call especial attention to the advertisement of this Liniment in our columns, and will take this occasion to say that this appears to be one of the few popular medicines that really possess all the virtues ascribed to them. In effectually curing the worst cases of Rheumatism, no matter how long standing, in an incredibly short time, and for sprains, bruises, sores, burns, or pains of any kind, it has no equal. We have heard of many cures that have been performed that really appear incredible, were they not vouched for by persons of responsibility and influence. It is said to be an infallible remedy for musquito bites.

See advertisement in another column. [17 2m

ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. G. SIMPSON. D. CAMERON.

GREAT SALE.
"AUCTION GOODS"
FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THE Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time submitted to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞ The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below Manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,
No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan.

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES,
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

BOOTS AND SHOES.
J. PARSON,
163 Morgan Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.

A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12tf.

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of

RHEUMATISM

than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.

G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours, J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:
Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.
I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.
I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.
Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New Yook.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.
I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Croton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS

have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:

Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.

The small size retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.

G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG & CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.
Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.
B. FORMON,
TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

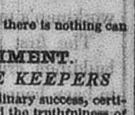
RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at

126 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House,
St. Louis, Missouri.
Jan. 13, 1855. [8 3m*

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST.
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.
Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
75 MARKET STREET,



CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.

N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

75 Market Street,
(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)
Feb. 17, 13 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN!
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. 23. [3 3m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 19, 1854. [4 tf.

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEFEBRE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEFEBRE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 packets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
80 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEFEBRE.
Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Lubeanme Steert,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MCLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, palns, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.
Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞ For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.
T. W. HOIT.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PAPER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.
A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY.

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY,
Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired;
A whispering maiden said—
"See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his vest,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

Its fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,
OF CORINTHIAN HALL,
297 BROADWAY,
ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,
FOR THE SALE OF
FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,
FOR $4 EACH!
FOR A
LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR AN
INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
297 Broadway;
☞ BIG HAT. ☜
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,
Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.

COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 133 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.

Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set, Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tinners' Sheats, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, APRIL 14, 1855. VOLUME I---NUMBER XXI.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Mailed to Subscribers at $2 per annum.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.

Advertisements inserted on accommodating terms.

All Communications relating to the LUMINARY should addressed to the Editor, Post-paid.

Popular Confidence in the United States Declining—its Causes, Consequences, and only remedy.

BY ORSON SPENCER.

That want of confidence, or spirit of distrust, is widely diffused throughout this nation, hardly needs to be proved, because it is generally admitted and acknowledged. It has even become proverbial in every department of society, that public confidence is in a rapid decline. The acknowledgement is made without blushing or scruple, from the lips of the highest Christian of the Presidential mansion, even to the kitchen maid in her obscure domestic circle. The concession, "public confidence is gone," has lost a measure of its significance and terrific import, even by reason of its familiarity and commonness.

We often see this truth illustrated in the general aspect of business. Business men do not enter into the field of enterprise from any assurances of the abiding integrity and virtue of the people, for they find but small ground to warrant any such assurance. Other causes animate their hopes, and objects of questionable utility furnish the incentives to action. A great show of riches has become a very questionable index of real wealth. The princely show of the merchant, his costly livery, his palace, his fame in foreign ports, do not raise him above the eye of vigilant suspicion—he may have traded to too great excess, and his assets fall far, very far, below his liabilities. The spirit of distrust dogs all his movements. A paralysis seizes every department of business. The spirit of enterprise has met with so many rebutting influences, that it is fast giving place to timidity and cowardly supineness, or to the maxim, "let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die;" or in other words, if we don't enjoy all we can grasp, and as fast as we can grasp it too, somebody else will, and we shall be thought no better of for it. It is now ackowledged by public journalists, that wealthy capitalists, both in the United States and England, are beginning to horde up their gold and silver, being fearful to put it out to any kind of usury or per centage. What is true of the wealty, is probably equally true of smaller capitalists, who having less to do with, are more cautious of exposing to loss the little which they have, and therefore horde it up.

But business men are not the only class paralysed by the spirit of distrust. The politics of the nation are minutely interwoven by the same fatal miasma of distrust. In what rulers can the people repose unwavering confidence?—what Postmaster or Revenue officer? what Mayor of a city, or Representative to a State assembly? what Foreign Ambassador or Consul? what Representative or Senator in Congress? or what candidate to the Chief Magistracy, now gains the unwavering and uncontested confidence of the people? Not one out of the whole lot. Every candidate or incumbent is either sadly distrusted, if not absolutely vilified, as unfit for the office. And all parties pretty well agree in the decision, that each class of incumbents in office will act only for their own selfish and personal ends and selfish aims. The loaves and fishes, or the spoils of office, are generally supposed to be the objects of all parties. Balance of power between divided States, balance of trades, balance of advantages between different localities, mark out so many race courses among officious politicians.

Again, professional men are no less the objects of popular distrust than business men and politicians. The legal profession has long since been the object of taunt and jeer. Such a living creature as an honest lawyer is almost universally regarded as a practical impossibility. And just and equitable claims are with much frequency abandoned, sooner than risk the expense and corruptions of a legal process in courts of judicature.

The medical profession have fallen under the same weight of distrust and odium in the popular mind. The divisions and sub-divisions of the medical profession—the endless variance and bitter opposition of the integral parts thereof—furnish ample proof of self distrust. This distrust is wide spread among the people, and it is a question of serious debate among a great majority of people, whether the medical profession have not killed as many as they have cured, and whether the people left to the dictates of their own common sense would not have been better off without the prescriptions of professed medical doctors. This spirit of settled distrust towards medical men is widely and increasingly diffused throughout the United States, and cannot be truthfully denied.

Again, the clerical or religious profession, which ever ought to be entirely beyond the reach of all reasonable distrust, is, above and beyond all other professions, more distrusted than any other.

The congregation regard their minister as selfish—one who can be bought by the highest bidder—a higher salary, and more popular field of effort, draws the reverend gentleman, in nine cases out of ten, and the people fully believe that it is a selfish cord that has drawn him to another place. And what does all this argue but a want of confidence? What is it that has caused four or five meeting houses to be erected in the same little town, where one large house might accommodate the whole town? The answer is plainly seen—it is purely a lack of confidence in each other. There are meeting houses erected for Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Universalists, in the same little town, and none of them filled on the Sabbath. Now, have these different worshippers confidence in each other? No, they have not. They continually watch each other with a jealous eye. The Baptist will not break bread to a Methodist minister, or suffer him to teach their church in matters of religion. On the other hand, the Methodist church will not suffer a cold Calvinistic Presbyterian to teach religion to the warm-blooded Wesleyans. The Presbyterians will not trust the still more formal teachers of the Litany to instruct their church; and none of these four will, by any means, suffer the Universalist to be their teacher.

What else but a want of confidence is continually causing division and sub-division in every church in christendom, whether Catholic or Protestant, Jew or Greek? And these divisions are becoming more and more embittered and rancorous. They are seen in the criminations and recriminations that flow from ten thousand pulpits and antagonistic luminaries and periodicals, and from these they are traceable up through fisticuffs, gutting of churches, fires and stabbings, to the wide spread carnage of battle fields, where whole Christian nations are acting out the belligerent spirit that is fostered in the village parish. And as an evidence of a popular distrust of any one religion whatever, it is perfectly observable that a national religion is regarded as a curse to the nation. If any one denomination was elevated to an indisputable ascendency in the United States, it is supposed that serious results would follow, and that a religious monopoly would constitute an institution highly dangerous to the nation. It is thought that such a monopoly would abuse power—subvert religious freedom, and unconstitutionally check and extinguish the rights of conscience. Such are the views entertained concerning the most credible religious body in the United States. Now, all I wish to educe from this view of a religious ascendency at present, is to show that the people of the United States look with distrust upon every religious denomination whatever. They consider that it would be highly alarming and dangerous to allow any one sect to obtain a large ascendency. And why is this? Because they dare not trust to their virtues—they have no confidence in their righteousness—they are afraid of the growing power of the best of them. Thence they regard religious competition as wholesome, salutary, and absolutely necessary to the preservation of equal rights, and the peace and prosperity of the nation. Hence the conclusion is obtained beyond denial, that religion is no more trustworthy than any other defective and false system.

Again, popular sayings are often a most infallible index of the extent of popular distrust and lack of confidence. Among these, you hear such an expression as this, "It is difficult to say who can be trusted in these times." Go where you will, it is difficult to find the man, or set of men, or the company or firm, who can safely be trusted. Credentials, certificates, and recommends are scarcely looked at; they are supposed to have lost their virtue—that which was once salt is now suspected to be destitute of savor. If persons seem to bring good credentials, they are boldly met with needful caution—"We are accustomed here to watch honest men just the same as though they were rogues." This expression is so far popular and universal as to take class among maxims and wise proverbs. It is a bold and glaring comment upon the established spirit of distrust that now reigns in the land. Hence you perceive that confidence is fast receding from the people. The honest man, whether in business transactions, or in religious teachings, or political dogmas, stands precisely on the level with the rogue; neither is he trusted any farther than he can be watched. Go to the domestic fireside, and you will see the same spirit of distrust. The good lady at the head of her household says, "How difficult it is in these times to get a trusty servant girl. I tried an Irish girl for a while, but I was always afraid of her divulging family matters at the confessional; and from that I have tried Dutch, and English, and American, and I find that the sluttish pilfering habits of one, and the growing impudence of another, and the too great familiarity of a third with my husband, and the wastefulness of a fourth, have nearly induced me and my husband to break up house-keeping and go to lodging, if it were not for the danger of being poisoned or robbed, as some lodgers have been.

Again, what social virtue can be named that does not lie under suspicion, and even has to be watched and guarded in order to its preservation. If chastity were never sold, or violated, or given away, or pawned, or obtruded, then confidence in male and female purity would still exist. But what is the fact in this matter? Do parents dare trust their sons in the female society that exists in any of the cities of this land? Do wives dare trust their husbands abroad, even, without indulging painful suspicion and jealousy? But female chastity is still more distrusted than that of males. An unprotected female is well nigh regarded as one abandoned and lost to virtuous feeling. Seduction in its varied forms, and violence to females is so common as almost entirely to have banished all public confidence. The most sacred conjugal ties do not escape the suspicious eye of a distrustful public.

Again, the sad lack of public confidence is awfully manifest in the multiplied demonstration of defence and aggression. Locks, bars, and safes are seen on every hand, indicating that confidence has fled from the community. Revolvers, bowie-knives, and sword-canes, so genererally worn, tell a similar tale.

But enough has been said to show that Public Confidence is in a rapid state of decline, and tending to a speedy extinction unless there is a most timely restoration. I shall therefore next consider what has caused this great waste and destruction of confidence. The true cause is most easily discovered, and readily pointed out. The public have had nothing to repose their confidence upon. Confidence, like any other promisory obligation, must have something to rest upon. It must have its substantial props and supports; otherwise, being baseless and groundless, it must immediately and inevitably fall. Confidence in these United States has failed, just in proportion as its props have been removed. When the basis of any building is taken away, the edifice must fall, as a matter of course. The mill will not grind when there is no grain in the hopper. The mystery of "no confidence" in people is readily unlocked when men have the right key. Restore the only true basis upon which all confidence must ever rest and you will have confidence restored. And what is that basis? The answer is plain—it is the integrity and truthfulness of the people. This is the great secret, and this is the key to the whole mystery. Integrity and truthfulness implanted in the hearts of the people, will restore confidence, and nothing else will do it. Faith must always have truth to rest upon—truth not merely in show and ideal form, but truth in deed and in spirit; and the lack of the real spirit and power of truth has caused this vast shipwreck of confidence. Look where you will, and you will see that confidence has been abused, insulted, betrayed, violated, outraged, and kicked out of doors by every trade, and by every profession, where it is wanting. If you ask why confidence among the trading community has failed, the answer is at hand—men in trade have violated their obligations; they have betrayed their trust. A burnt child simply dreads the fire. Some traders are gross defaulters—downright swindlers; but there are other traders that approximate to their character at perceptible distances, even to the most dim remoteness. They are not all such gross defaulters and such barefaced swindlers. But the spirit of defaulting is visible in the honeyed tongue of the lying clerk that stands behind the counter, and in the jesuitical mask affixed to the silks, laces, and broadcloths, backed up by lying assurances and references to first cost, and small per centage, or dead loss. And what is true of one branch of trade is applicable, with some measure of proximity, to every branch of trade. Confidence is continually betrayed, insulted, abused, tortured and forfeited at every turn and in every trade. It is indeed true, that one trade has a plausible pretext for criminating another and even all other trades. And they (the different traders) all dwell in glass houses and all untiringly throw stones at each other, for which they have the most ample provocation. Speculators, if not open defaulters and swindlers, are still daring adventurers, whose success is generally at the expense of others, and if they fail, others have to pay the sorrowful cost of their temerity. An ignorant adventurer abuses confidence when he freights with any other than his own goods. That is a mercantile gambler and black-leg who stakes borrowed capital for the chance of a heavy sweep, while his unexpected loss is thrown upon his confiding creditors. He jeopardises the confidence of the lender, with the secret design (if he is a loser) of making bankruptcy of all the credulity that can possibly be garnered around him. In this course, he even consoles himself with the assurance that he is only doing what multitudes of others are continually doing, and still more persons would do, if they only possessed the tact and ability to do the same. Indeed, the wide spread prevalence of mercantile gambling has planted a deep conviction in the minds of many that a business of this sort is really necessary, and a kind of justifiable self-defence against speculating monopolies, and against coming to penury and destitution. Indeed, it is now very widely conceded that most all trades have run into that rapid, wild, and vitiated eddy of speculation, that none can live and flourish in a pure even current of honest dealing. The old adage, "make money, honestly, if you can, but make it," indicates the general determination of the people to peril all confidence in prosecuting their idolatrous worship of money.

Again, in our political relations, there exists the same want of confidence, arising from an almost universal abuse and betrayal of it. But corruption, intrigue, and political fraud, do not arise from the breast of the people in private life—the people, compared with their rulers, are a fountain and storehouse of virtue—but political distrust springs originally from places of office, emolument, honor, and power. In these places the confidence of the people is disappointed, abused, mocked, insulted, and spurned as a thing of nought. The people in private life are of the last and always the best repositaries of virtue; with them, temptations to corruption come last and weakest; but in places of public trust and emolument come temptations to bribery, swindling, intrigues, and conspiracies, together with a hypocritical boasting of patriotism, independence, liberty, inherent rights, popular sovereignty, free institutions, and bunkum capital of every sort and composition. Still the people are slow to descend into the dirty paths of polical corruption; they rather seek for new and untried paths to power, which the vultures eye has not peradventure seen. But, alas! office-holders, in their strife and scramble for supremacy, have foreclosed every avenue to honorable political distinction, and the honest people find a filthy self-extolled demagogue sitting astride every highway and pathway that leads to office, from the Presidential chair to the parish postmaster; consequently confusion, in one dark, deep, wide-spread cloud, spreads over the whole horizon of the great people. Advantage is then taken of the darkness and gloom created by corrupt demagogues, in order to excite the angry passions of crimination and recrimination; parties are rapidly organised and multiplied; principles are no longer a bone of honorable debate, arising from excusable misapprehension; but the spirit of fault searching and the eye of intrigue, that characterises the adroit fencer and bloody gladiator, marks each movement of the wily politician; the Constitution itself is made to play any tune that will suit the intrigue and self-aggrandisement of the party; the opposite party is traduced, slandered, vilified, and branded with every opprobious epithet, as immoral, unpatriotic, political swindlers and traitors, and the very important destiny of the nation is said to depend upon the success of a favorite party, and the speedy downfall and crushing of the opposite party; at length the political corruption which has long been nourished in public departments is widely diffused among the great mass of the people; the most honest begin to feel a suspension of interest in political matters; they can no longer deposite their votes with any hopes of desirable success, and the best men no longer enter the list as candidates for political preferments. In this state of indifference about parties, the most candid citizen at length considers that he may as well sell his vote to the highest bidder, because neither party suits him. But after a season has elapsed, however, the current of political corruption becomes so diffusive and disastrous in deranging commerce, manufactures, interal improvements, and the social and domestic tranquilty of life, that all classes of society become submerged in the angry tide of excitement; the alarm drum is beat by a score of diverse combatants, to summon the nation into the field of strife and imminent peril. Annexation and secession, preponderance of political power, backed up by hireling votes, slavery and anti-slavery, and emigration aid societies, bowie-knives and revolvers, constitutes the electric wire that vibrates among the people. In this state of deception, false alarm, and private and general wickedness, how hopeless proves every effort to restore confidence. The basis of all political confidence has long since been crumbling away; the last way-marks and vestiges of it are nearly obliterated from these United States. The evil is generally acknowledged to exist, without even a passing straggler to deny or to debate it. Despair sits with a drooping wing on every countenance; the sigh and shake of the head say there is no hope.

But let us next inquire, what has been the influence of religion? Has it been to secure confidence, or to destroy it? We venture to answer, most unequivocally, it has been the latter. The religion of modern sects has done more to break up the whole system of confidence and scatter the seeds of distrust than any other one cause. It claims to be more reliable than anything else upon which the hopes and confidence of the people is predicated, and it has disappointed the people worse, and confused their minds more, than all other secular and political treachery and swindling whatever. Do not call me a blasphemer because I make such an announcement. No; I fully believe in God, and in Jesus as the only Savior, and also in the Old and New Testament, yet I can fully prove what I assert about modern Christianity. It has destroyed confidence wherever it has gone. When it first came to this country, a native chief, on his dying bed, was asked by a clergymen if he did not want to go to heaven. He looked the clerical inquirer searchingly in the face, and then asked if christians went there, and being told in the affirmative, said he did not want to go there. If the lap of chrisendom furnishes any model of Heaven, then no good man or woman ever would want to go there. The divisions and sub-divisions of religious bodies, out-strip in number even the fractions and segments of political parties. Their continual strife and jargon is more heated and devout, and more and more obstinate and unyielding; and the lips of their own parties freely admit that there is no more ground to confide in professors of religion than anybody else. The origin and central head of modern christianity is said to be a "God without body, parts, or passions." Now the fruits of such a supposed tree as this, as might be expected, are alike undefinable, untangible, unsubstantial, and unreal; settling down in an incubus of mysticism, error, and confusion; creating a charmed house for innocent conviviality; a damper to all expansive intellects, and a seminary to all turpitude and crime.

(To be Continued.)

SERVANTS IN RUSSIA.

An amusing anecdote was told me by a French lady. One of her countrywomen was engaged as dressing-maid to a lady of rank in Russia. One day, while combing out her mistress's long black hair, she hurt her head. The lady turned round and gave her a slap on the face. The French woman, who had hold of her hair, which she was on the point of tying, so that it was all gathered together in her hand, grasped it tightly, and then inflicted a sound correction on the lady's ears with the hair-brush. Perhaps it may be thought that she was immediately punished by being taken to the police, or at least summarily dismissed from the household. Far from it: the maid knew the character of the Russians well, and also what she was about; she was perfectly aware that her mistress would not dare to expose her, on account of the disgrace to herself—for it would have been an indelible one for a noble to have been beaten—in any place but Count Orloff's office—and especially by a menial; she therefore not only took the whole quietly, but presented the maid with 30 silver roubles and a new gown to buy her silence.

FOR THE LUMINARY.

THE MORMONS IN MISSOURI.

BY CHARLIE.

The last day of May, 1854, we arrived at Independence, Mo., after a tedious journey of twelve hundred and fifty miles, over the snow covered mountains of Utah, the barren plains of Nebraska, and the fertile vallies of Kansas. After tarrying a day or two, to rest from the fatigue of the journey, I bade my travelling companions farewell, and left for Wayne City, to await the arrival of the packet steamer, for Council Bluffs. At the Hotel where I stopped, were several travellers, also waiting for a passage up the river. After supper as we were seated on the verandah, anxiously waiting for the appearance of the expected steamer, the conversation turned upon the Mormons; and the early history, present condition, and future prospect of this peculiar people, were fully discussed. The subject was introduced, by a hory headed, wicked old man, who proudly boasted, that he had served his country in the war of 1812, the Black Hawk war, and other frontier troubles, and Indian disturbances. But his crowning act of valor, was reserved for the murderous warfare waged against the defenceless Mormons, by the mobocrats of Missouri. His brightest laurels, were won at the massacre of Haun's Mills, where he and his blood-thirsty fellows, inhumanly butchered some fifteen or twenty, unresisting men and boys, and threw their bodies into a deep well, while (to use his own words) some were dead, and others were kicking.

The conversation was kept up for several hours, and my heart sickened within me, at the recital of cruel wrongs, gross outrages, and unprovoked murders, exultingly boasted of, by those who had played a full part in these bloody tragedies, although several years had elapsed, since this cruel persecution, which resulted in the expulsion of the Mormons from the State; yet instead of manifesting any sign of remorse for the wicked deeds, the guilty perpetrators seemed to glory in their shame, and take especial pride in numbering their victims. They exhibited much apparent satisfaction, in relating the bloody scenes in which they had been engaged, the murdering of men, women, and children, the burning of Mormon houses, the destruction of their property, and confiscation of their goods.

During a pause that intervened, I ventured to enquire what was the occasion of this unlawful attack on the Mormons? I was answered by the grey headed murderer. Said he: "They were a community of thieves and robbers, and quite unfit to dwell in contiguity with white folks. They tried to create uneasiness and dissatisfaction in the minds of our slaves. They robbed our orchards, stole our grain, and drove off our horses and cattle. Their political influence was also dangerous to our interests. They elected all of our county officers, and if allowed to remain another year they would have succeeded in sending their Representatives to the State Legislature. This, the old citizens (as they were called in contradistinction to the Mormons) determined at all hazards to prevent. For this purpose a mob was raised, and the Mormons were driven from the State."

I knew that this statement of the old man, was a base fabrication of falsehoods, and had its origin in his own wicked and corrupt heart, and was only made in answer to my inquiry, to justify the disgraceful part he had himself performed in this bloody crusade against a quieet and unoffending people. It was worse than vain to attempt to reason with a man possessed of such a depraved heart, but I could not forbear remarking, that our laws were good and effectual, and if the Mormons were guilty of crime, they could have been brought to legal justice, and forced to pay the penalty of the law transgressed, without interference of mobs, or offering brutal violence to innocent women and children.

By frequent visits to the bar, and each time mistaking the whisky bottle for the water pitcher, our aged champion of mobocracy, and veteran hero of Haun's Mills, became exceedingly boisterous, and his blasphemous voice was heard loud above his fellows, cursing the Mormons and swearing eternal hostility against the whole sect. He seemed to imagine that he was again engaged in butchering his obnoxious neighbors, and fancied he saw the fitful flames of burning houses, and heard again the dying shrieks of his victims. He drew from his belt a huge bowie knife, and exultingly declared that its trusty edge had drank the blood of more than one Mormon woman.

But this imaginary contest was a brief one. This grey headed monster had now encountered a more potent foe, than a handful of unarmed Mormons. He had now grappled with a far more fearful antagonist, than a helpless woman or child. Capt. Whisky was the victor, and our vanquished hero rolled helpless under the table.

(Continued on fourth page.)

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, APRIL 14, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

New Orleans, James Mcgaw.
Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Pittsburgh, Pa., B. F. Winchester.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.

NOTICE TO OUR EMIGRANTS.

To save having to answer a thousand times, what may be answered at once, we would say to all our emigrants who intend crossing the plains, that, first, every male capable of bearing arms, must be supplied with a good rifle or other fire-arms, and at least one-half pound of powder and two pounds of lead, or shot and balls.

Every person will need to have, when they leave Atchison, one hundred pounds breadstuffs, and a few pounds bacon or dried beef, and as much sugar, tea, coffee, and dried fruit as they calculate to eat during a three month's journey over the plains.

All P. E. Fund passengers, including the $40 passengers, will have breadstuffs, meat, and the usual allowance of groceries furnished them at the point of outfit, but any one may add any articles of luxuries to their supplies, which they choose, for their individual use. Independant emigrants will be supplied with flour and bacon in sacks ready for the journey, at Atchison, by giving us their orders in season.

SALT LAKE MAIL.

Many are anxious to learn when the next mail may be expected. We will say, for the general information and consolation of those interested in the question, that we have little expectation of receiving another mail from Utah, until about the 10th of May.

We have learned from very good authority, that the February mail that started from Independence, returned the same day, and the following extract from the Independence Dispatch, will indicate the probable whereabouts of the March mail.

"The mail party which left here on the first inst., returned on the 28th, having gone as far as Cottonwood Springs, eighty miles beyond Fort Kearny.—Mr. Hudspeth, the conductor, informs us that the escort which attended them determined to turn back from that point, as many of them were snow-blind, and others frost-bitten, and as the mail party had orders not to proceed without an escort, they also returned. It had been snowing for five days up to the day on which they turned back. No news on the plains of any importance. Mail matter has been deposited at every station on the route, and to get this through, the contractors will start out five wagons on the 1st of April."

"The Santa Fe mail, from and after the 1st of April, will be carried semi-monthly, instead of monthly, as heretofore. Much credit is due the enterprising contractors, who, notwithstanding they have a route of 800 miles across the plains, often in winter encountering severe snow storms and drifts, have never yet failed to be in time, always bringing the entire mail due, besides passengers, who speak in high terms of praise of their gentlemanly conductors, and comfortable coaches."

"'Where there is a will, there is a way,' and some of our mail lines within the borders of Missouri might learn a useful lesson by noticing the manner in which this line is conducted."

Mail matter, says the Dispatch, has been deposited at every station on the route, and several wagons will be employed to send it through, so our subscribers in Utah, may expect the accumulated mails of last fall and winter, about October, 1855, unless the oxen give out, or the conductors get scared, in which case it may lay over until the Pacific railroad is constructed.

But seriously, we feel indignant against the careless and inefficient manner in which our mails are conducted. Whilst we appreciate patience as a virtue, and strive to exercise it, en attendant, our mails, we cannot refrain expressing our most unqualified contempt of the mail administration to and from Utah.

Mr. Woodson, of Independence, the former contractor, inflicted the most wanton injustice upon the people of Utah, in the careless and inefficient manner in which they carried the mails; for after much of the mail matter, which had accumalated at various points was completely destroyed, an ox train was fitted out, by which some tons of mail matter was sent through, which arrived in September, 1854, some of which had been accumulating as far back as 1852,

The numerous delinquencies, and flagrant injustice inflicted upon the people of Utah Territory, were faithfully represented to the proper department at Washington, and earnest remonstrances were made against letting the contract to men who possessed no direct interest in the prosperity of the Territory, for there were never lacking excuses to justify such men in their delinquencies.

The department in re-letting the contract, instead of heeding these representations, rejected many liberal offers from the most responsible men of the Territory, and gave the contract to Messrs. Reside & Magraw, of Philadelphia, which went into effect from and after the 1st day of July, 1854; but before five months had expired, they were whining at the door of the contract office, wishing to be released from their contract, and Congress was called upon to relieve the contractors, by the appropriation of thirty thousand dollars.

We had hoped that this would tend to facilitate our mail communication with Utah, but from present appearances, we should judge, that they are likely to be as uncertain as ever.

We hope the above will meet the eye of the contract department, and the contractors likewise, that measures may be taken to remove the inconveniences and difficulties under which the people of Utah are laborong, through the maladministration of the mail department,

---

We beg to call the attention of our readers, to the advertisement of Messrs. Wilson & Cooper.

They have a commodious store, elegantly fitted up, and well stocked with every variety of Dry Goods, from the most delicate silks, finest muslins and broad cloths, to the stoutest and most substantial articles of manufacture.

If those about crossing the plains will call on Messrs. Wilson & Cooper, they will find an assortment of Dry Goods not to be excelled by any house in the city.

The method in which the business of this firm is conducted, merits the approval of all right minded men. The lowest price is marked in plain figures, from which there is no abatement, except when a large quantity is taken, so that a child unacquainted with the quality of goods, will be dealt with on the same terms as older persons, and may safely purchase without fear of being imposed upon.

Remarks of Pres. E. Snow at the opening of the Conference, April 6, 1855.

During this conference, we wish to have a full and complete report of the condition of the several wards of this city, and the branches within the limits of this Stake of Zion—the number of members in good standing; how many of these, who were in this city last conference, have been rebaptised, and the number who have not. We shall also receive a report from the Bishop, of the amount of tithing received, and of the receipts and expenditures for the various departments under his control.

We shall also present the general authorities of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, for the approval of this conference, to try the faith and feelings of the Saints, relative to those men who are our leaders and shepherds in the Lord. We shall also present, for the approval of the conference, the president, and other authorities, of this Stake of Zion. We also wish to appoint Bishops in the various wards of this city, and in the separate branches belonging to this Stake.

We wish the united voice of this conference, sustaining our action in every matter we may present before you, and in presenting the general authorities of the church, and in all other matters, that may be submitted for your consideration, we wish the free expression of the Saints, and hope that you will vote according to your convictions of right, and the feelings of your hearts.

It is immaterial to me in what order these things are presented, only I wish that when they are presented, you will act freely, conscienciously, and in unison. It is our privilege, if we live as we ought before the Lord, to see eye to eye, and be of one heart and one mind.

The world say that the mormons are fools, because they all vote one way, but to me this is the greatest evidence of their wisdom, and it proves that they have the light and guidance of the spirit of truth, which makes their hearts as one.

Our enemies say, what our leaders propose, the Saints are ready to carry out. I say, Glory to God! Hallelujah! Amen! that our brethren and sisters give the world this evidence that we are in the truth. Whenever we are prepared to enter into celestial glory, to every proposition of our Heavenly Father, we shall say, amen. We are approximating to that period all the time.

But is it not the privilege of the Saints to vote any way they choose? Yes. The people of God have the greatest freedom imaginable—the most perfect liberty to do right. But if they wished to do wrong, have they the liberty to do so? Yes. They have the liberty to receive the counsels of God, or reject them—to sustain the authorities and doctrines of the church, or reject them. There is no compulsion or restraint, only the Lord reserves the right to reward every man according to his works. It is our duty to act free before the Lord, realizing our accountability to him. Whether our conclusions are right or wrong—whether our dicisions are just or otherwise, if we act according to the best of our knowledge, that is all that is required of us. If we vote for anything wrong, we will correct it when we learn better. When we are convinced that we have erred, we will turn away from our error, and repent. But it is out privilege to be guided by the spirit of truth, so whatever we may agree upon will be right. Then will our voice be as the voice of one man, because we shall see as the Lord sees, and comprehend by the light of his Holy Spirit. May the Lord grant that it may be in our midst during this conference as it has been heretofore.

In the councils of this church in Zion, and in all the various quorums, the Elders of Israel have learned to act upon this principle of union. Since I have been associated with the quorum of the Twelve Apostles, there has never been, to my recollection, a single instance of disagreement, or a dissenting voice to any measure that has come before us for our action; and as far as I am acquainted, this principle prevails with the first presidency, and the general authorities of the Church. In the early history of the Saints it was not always so. When they were children in the Gospel, they did not understand this principle so clearly as now. The devil created a division of feeling, the influence of which was to destroy. But they are daily learning this important lesson, "If ye are not one, ye are not mine." The world fears the union we are striving to gain, but the Saints of God rejoice in it. Division is the weakness of the world, while union is the strength of the Saints—the wisdom and power of God unto salvation. The motto of the world is "divide and conquer," that of the Saints is "unite and subdue."

Let us unite our ranks spiritually and temporally, and become as one great family, to subserve the interests of the Kingdom of Heaven.

Would I separate from this kingdom to assist in building up a Gentile city? No. According to the feelings of my heart, I am ready to swear by high heaven, never to lift an arm, or strike a blow, to build up a Gentile city, so help me God. I have no no interests separate and aside from the kingdom of God.

If I spend my time here, it is to gather up the lost sheep of the house of Israel. If I counsel my brethren to build up the houses, edifices, and railroads of the Gentiles, it is for the accomplishment of another object which I have view. It is only a matter of necessity—for the time being, and we will dispense with it the first possible opportunity. But as long as the Lord wishes us to serve them, in order to train and educate our spirits, let us serve them faithfully. The Lord delights in the faithful performance of every duty. "Submit yourselves unto your masters as unto the Lord," asking him to open the way for your emancipation, and hold yourselves ready to step into the first open door.

Is not St. Louis organised into a stake of Zion, and shall we not build it up? I will say that God has not given it to his saints for an inheritance, but as a place to rest their feet, and in his mercy, has favorably disposed the hearts of the people for our sakes. He has not hallowed and sanctified it to the Saints, separate from Gentile rule and influence, that it might be built up a city of holiness unto the Lord, but he has given it to us as a temporary resting place, while he is accomplishing his purposes in gathering his Saints out of Babylon, and separating them from the wicked.

But what shall I say of those who, instead of going forward to the peaceful vallies of Utah, voluntarily stop here in hell. I will say that some of them would be more miserable in Heaven than with unclean spirits. Such individuals, if they go up to Zion, will soon wish to return. They cannot bear the purity of the Saints, and will hasten to seek a more congenial clime, a more suitable atmosphere. But when they get back, some will begin to learn the difference between bitter and sweet—between the spirit of the Saints and the spirit of the world. They learn, by sad experience, what they would not learn by counsel or advice. Some of them repent in sack-cloth and ashes. They learn to appreciate the worth of the Saints when they are separated from their society, and have no chance to return.

Concerning those who stop here, whose hearts are pure, I say it is all right. And to those who are not yet able to endure the law of Zion, whose spirits are not tried, proven, and instructed, who are not yet qualified to enter into the congregations of the Saints in Zion, it may be well for them to stop and learn profitable lessons and experience, till they know more of their relations to Zion. When I look upon such Saints of God, I say it is all right, if they work righteousness, and seek the salvation of God. If they cannot endure the laws and regulations of Zion in the valley, they can here learn little by little, till they get their spirits enlarged, and prepared to receive greater things when they reach the home of the Saints.

If they are prepared to go, and have the means to do so—all right—and they shall be more blessed than those who remain—except those that the Lord requires to remain to assist the authorities of this stake of Zion, and the region round about. Such individuals feel that they are down in hell on a mission to labor and bring the people up.

I expect we shall continue to work while we live, and to all eternity, to bring up those who are down below, to teach them principles by which they may be exalted. Like as we see it manifested in this world, so it is in the Kingdom of God throughout the vast extent of space. Were we capable of beholding the vast extent of God's creations with an allseeing eye, and could comprehend the works of Jehovah, the extent of his dominions, the ramifications of his government, and the keys of power and priesthood, we should find the same means of communication there as we have them here in miniature. We would see messengers going through the vast creations of God, bearing his word and laws, the keys of power and exaltation, and principles by which those of inferior grades of intelligence might be exalted.

For instance, messengers were sent to this earth, which resulted in the organization of this church twenty-five years ago. They were clothed with authority from their spheres from exalted positions in the government of the Kingdom of God. Peter, James, and John, who held the keys of power, were sent to the earth to restore those keys, and to set in order those principles of government and doctrine, by which a people might be raised from their low estate—from the degredation and unbelief of a corrupt world, to participate in the blessings of the Kingdom of God.

By these heavenly messengers, keys and messages were received by the servants of God, to send abroad salvation, to organise and establish branches of his kingdom among the children of men wherever they will receive the truth of the Gospel. Missionaries are sent forth from the Most High, inspired by the spirit that emanates from him, to gather in the honest in heart, those who exercise faith in God and repent of their sins, those who have courage enough to face the frowns of the world, the poor, the halt, the lame, the blind, that they may be tried and proven, and become pliable and obedient, and be prepared to enter the holy of holies, and obtain keys of endowment and power to go forth again to the nations of the earth and gather up many souls.

This is the work that is going on in this little earth, as a small branch of the kingdom of God. This is a miniature representation of what we would witness had we an allseeing eye to penetrate the heights and depths of the outstretched dominions of Jehovah.

When this work will cease I do not know, but I believe it never will cease as long as there is anybody lower, to be brought higher, or anybody to beget intelligences to be exalted. If you can calculate the end of it, you are a better mathematician than I am.

When power is given to man on earth, you will see the same order of priesthood carried out, as it is in heaven, and it is so now, so far as it has been set in order. But what we have seen, is but a small part of the priesthood, like as the twigs and branches are but a small part of a tree. Every portion of the priesthood is of the same, but that which we have received is no more the whole, than the twigs and branches are the whole of the tree. We have the priesthood more fully developed and more power set forth in it, in this our day, than in many other dispensations. It perhaps has never been more fully organised since the days of the flood, than at the present time. But I do not expect that we have yet received all, or that we have arrived at the end.—We might as well suppose that the boys who attend our common schools, have learned all they have power to attain too. We might as well say that Newton fathomed the heights and depths of astronomical science, although he opened to the mind many important truths, before unknown; yet others have gone on, and by the use of these new discovered keys, additional great and sublime truths have been developed.

But if they were in possession of the Urim and Thummim that Abraham had, they would be able to penetrate a thousand times further than with Herschel's telescope. They would then understand the principles of the universe in a ten-fold degree more than they can by any other means on the earth.

With regard to the development of the Kingdom of God, many people say that Mormonism now is quite a different thing from that which they embraced some fifteen or twenty years ago. Say they "I am a mormon of the old school—I believe in primitive mormonism; I believe in the Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, and in the first principles of the Gospel, as taught by the early leaders of the Church. I stand upon that broad foundation, and cannot be removed." This teaches us that sunh persons have been standing sull all the time, that they remain statua-quo. Their souls are no larger than they were fifteen or twenty years ago. And it would be so hard to pry open their narrow-contracted souls, to get in one ray of light, that it would crack their craniums. I would not give the ashes of a rye straw for such mormons; they are as bad as sectarians. If I was going to be a sectarian, I would go the whole hog, tail and all. I hope you comprehend my parables.

We will suppose that a man coming from the north of Europe, where indian corn does not grow, on his arrival in this country, is shown a field of corn that has just sprung up, and is yet a small and delicate plant, with green and slender blades. He sees no more of it till fall, when he is shown a field of dense and sturdy stalks, crowned with tassels, and bearing heavy ears of grain. He is surprised, and exclaims, "This is not corn.—I know what corn is. It is a beautiful little plant with delicate green leaves, quite unlike the tall and sturdy plant that has grown up in its place."

So it is with those individuals who do not recognise the principles of Mormonism in its present developed condition. Instead of keeping up with the spirit of the Gospel, they have remained stationary, and Mormonism has grown out of their knowledge and comprehension.

Now, brethren and sisters, if we wish to enjoy the spirit of Mormonism, we must keep pace with it. The Kingdom of God is continually on the move, and will not stop for you and I. We have the privilege of going on the special train. We should not be like the Dutchman, who got off the cars to transact some business of his own; the train started and left him swinging his hat and crying, "Hallo! hallo! stop the engine." If you wish the Kingdom of God to carry you into celestial glory, you must live up to the spirit of the times. When the spirit of God works, you must work with it, or else it will work you under and crush you, or leave you behind crying, hallo! and swinging your hat.

The great Mormon wheel turns around, and though you may go down with it, if you hold on you will rise again.

Hold on in the hour of trial and do not complain. Bite your tongue rather than grumble; or adopt Br. Heber's plan, and carry a piece of india rubber in your pocket, and when you feel like complaining or finding fault, put it in your mouth and bite it till the fit is off. Then you feel as the negro did when he was whipped; he felt so good when he got over smarting.

There is nothing but misery in apostacy. Br. Brigham says that "hell is to want to and can't." You may want peace in apostacy, but cannot find it. Hold on then. The angels of Heaven are engaged in this work, and they are constantly watching over us, and will afford us succor in the hour of trial, and we shall feel doubly blessed when the Holy Spirit rests down upon us. If we grumble and complain, we will have the more to suffer, for the screws will be turned till we cease to murmur. When we have passed the ordeal, God will bless us and our generations. He will give us the seal of the living God, which many of his faithful servants have attained to.

These are the men for whose sakes God will rebuke kings and princes, saying, "Touch not my prophets and do my servants no harm.

S. J. Lees, Reporter.

Minutes of the St. Louis Semi-annual Conference, held in the Church, cor. Fouth st. and Washington avenue, April, 1855.

FRIDAY, April 6, 10 A. M.

Conference organized by appointing Erastus Snow, President, J. S. Cantwell, Clerk, and S. J. Lees, Reporter.

Present of the quorum of the Twelve Apostles—Erastus Snow. Presidents of Seventies—Milo Andrus, James McGaw, and C. H. Bassett. High Priests not numbered.

The choir sung "The Morning breaks, the Shadows flee." Prayer by Elder Milo Andrus. Elder James McGaw addressed the meeting, followed by Elder James Cose.

Adjourned till 2 o'clock, P. M. Dismissed by Elder C. H. Bassett.

2 o'clock, P. M.

Singing by the choir. Prayer by Elder Wiley B. Corbett.

President Snow addressed the meeting, giving the outlines of the business to be presented before the conference. His remarks will be seen in another column. Remarks by Elder C. H. Bassett.

Adjourned till 7 o'clock, P. M. Dismissed by Elder Milo Andrus.

7 o'clock, P. M.

Singing. Prayer by Elder Sheppard.

Meeting addressed by Elders W. B. Corbett, J. Sheppard, and J. Dalrymple. Remarks by Pres. E. Snow.

Adjourned till Saturday, April 7, 10 A. M. Benediction by Pres. Snow.

SATURDAY, April 7, 10 A. M.

Meeting opened with prayer by Pres. Snow. Singing by the choir. Remarks by Elder Case and Pres. Snow. Singing.

Adjourned till 2 o'clock, P. M. Dismissed by Elder James McGaw.

2 o'clock, P. M.

Meeting opened with singing by the choir. Prayer by Elder Milo Andus. Remarks by Elder Milo Andrus.

Pres. Snow moved that this conference sustain Brigham Young as Prophet, Seer, Revelator, and President over the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in all the world.

Carried unanimously.

Moved, That we sustain Heber C. Kimball and Jedadiah M. Grant ar his counsellors.

Carried unanimously.

Moved, That we sustain Orson Hyde as President of the quorum of Twelve Apostles, and Parley P. Pratt, Orson Pratt, Wilford Woodruff, John Taylor, George A. Smith, Amasa Lyman, Ezra T. Benson, Charles C. Rich, Lorenzo Snow, Erastus Snow and Franklin D. Richards, as members of that quorum.

Carried unanimously.

Moved, That we sustain John Smith as Patriarch over all the Church in all the world.

Carried unanimously.

Moved, That we sustain George A. Smith as Church Historian, and general Church Recorder.

Carried unanimously.

Moved, That we sustain Joseph Young as the first President of the Seventies, also his counsellors.

Carried unanimously.

Edward Hunter was sustained as Presiding Bishop of the Church.

Erastus Snow was sustained as President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the Western States.

Elder Milo Andrus was sustained as President of the St. Louis Stake of Zion, with his counsellors, Charles Edwards and George Gardner.

The High Council of this Stake of Zion was sustained, with Elder Milo Andrus as President.

Kleber Worley was sustained as Bishop of this Stake, and Thomas Harris and Edmund Holdsworth as his counsellors.

Robert Windley was sustained as President of the Elders quorum, with Joseph Barker and Alexander Dow as his counsellors.

William Brecker was sustained as President of the Priests' quorum, and A. W. Sanders, and N. G. Soff as his counsellors.

Joseph Seal was sustained as President of the Teachers' quorum, with C. L. Walker and George Higginson as his counsellors.

Joseph Marshall was sustained as President of the Deacons' quorum, with Samuel Clegg and John Bodfish as his counsellors.

William Lowe was set apart as Bishop of the First Ward in this city, Edward Cook of the Second and Third Wards, Charles Chard of the Fourth Andrew Sproule of the Fifth, and Joseph Jones of the Sixth Ward.

On motion, the Gravois and Dry Hill branches were organized into one ward, to be known as the Gravois Ward, and Elder John Yates was set apart as Bishop of the same.

On motion, the branch at Alton and the places adjoining were organised into a ward, to be known as the Alton Ward, and Elder Joseph Sheppard was set apart as Bishop of the same.

Samuel Burgess, William Henshaw, Charles Brindle, and Thomas Harris were set apart as members of the High Council, to fill vacancies.

The Priesthood were notified to meet at 7 o'clock P. M.

Singing by the choir. Benediction by President E. Snow.

Adjourned till Sunday morning, April 8, 10 o'cl'k.

7 o'clock, P. M.

Priesthood met according to appointment. Opened with prayer by Elder McGaw.

Pres. Snow recommended Br. Isaiah Combes to be ordained to the office of an Elder, and to preach the Gospel in the vicinity of Alton till further orders, which was sanctioned by the meeting, and Br. Combes was instructed to meet with the Elders quorum Tuesday eve., 10th inst., and receive his ordination.

Charles Brindley, William Henshaw, and Thomas Harris, were set apart as members of the High Council, under the hands of Pres. Milo Andrus and his counsellors.

Joseph Jones, Charles Chard, Edward Cook, William Lowe, and Andrew Sproule were ordained Bishops, according to their appointments, under the hands of President Erastus Snow and Elder Milo Andrus.

Br. John Yates was ordained Bishop of the Gravois Ward, and Joseph Sheppard Bishop of the Alton Ward.

Pres. Snow addressed the meeting, instructing the brethren in the duties of their new calling. His remarks will appear in a future number of the Luminary.

The faith and blessings of the Saints were voted to attend Elder Joseph Bland, who is going to labor in the vicinity of Troy, Ill.

Meeting adjourned with prayer.

SUNDAY, April 8, 10 A. M.

Singing. Prayer by Elder Milo Andrus.

Pres. Snow addressed the meeting to some length. His remarks were forcible and interesting, and will appear in full hereafter.

On motion, Elder James Case was appointed a mission up the valley of the Mississippi, to visit all the Saints he can find, to organise them into branches, to build them up and strengthen their faith, and also instruct them to subscribe for the Luminary and other Church publications.

Elder William Morrison was appointed to organise the Saints in the vicinity of St. Charles into a branch, and preside over them; also to preach the Gospel and baptize all who may repent.

Elder James Kinney was sustained as President of the Centreville branch, Illinois.

Elder Robert Humphries was sustained as President of the Bellefountaine branch.

Elders James McGaw and C. H. Bassett were appointed to travel and preach in this Stake of Zion, to stir up the dead branches to reprove evil, rebuke wickedness, and effect a reformation generally, till called to further duties by Pres. Snow.

On motion, Elder Benj. S. Clapp was appointed to organize the Saints in Texas into a Conference, to be called the Texas Conference, and to take the presidency of the same.

Elders William Martindale, Oscar Tyler, and Preston Thomas were appointed to labor in the State of Texas under the direction of Pres. B. S. Clapp.

Elder Milo Andrus was appointed to organize the Saints in the upper country on the Missouri river into branches, to set them in order and, and to do them good generally.

Meeting addressed by Elder Milo Andrus.

Adjourned till 2 o'clock P. M. Benediction by Elder C. H. Bassett.

2 o'clock, P. M.

Singing by the choir. Prayer by Elder James McGaw.

Remarks by Elder James Case. After the administration of the Sacrament, the Clerk read the Tithing report, Poor Fund report, Treasurer's report, P. E. Fund report, and Conference report, which were accepted. The report of the Conference will be seen in another column.

Remarks by Pres. E. Snow and Elder Milo Andrus.

Adjourned till 7 o'clock P. M. Dismissed by Pres. Snow.

7 o'clock, P. M.

Singing by the choir. Prayer by Elder H. W. Church. Singing.

Remarks by Elder Church. Elder Milo then addressed the meeting. His remarks were interesting and edifying to the Saints, and were delivered in his usual happy and forcible style. His discourse was reported, and will appear in a future number of the Luminary.

Conference adjourned till the 6th of October next, at 10 o'clock, A. M., to meet in this house.

Dismissed by Elder Charles H. Bassett.

ERASTUS SNOW, Pres.

James S. Cantwell, Clerk.
Samuel J. Lees, Reporter.

Among the pile of correspondence by the last California Steamer, we received the following which we hasten to lay before our readers:

PROSPECTUS FOR THE

MORMON HERALD:

A MONTHLY PERIODICAL, DEVOTED TO THE DISSEMINATION OF LIGHT AND LIFE.

Parley P. Pratt proposes to publish to subscribers, sixteen pages, large octavo, double columns, monthly, under the above title. The first number will be issued in May next. Office, at the Mormon Book Depot, near the corner of Dupont and Sacramento streets, San Francisco.

Terms—Five dollars per annum, in advance. No subscription will be taken for less than one year.

Elders abroad are requested to act as agents. The name and address of each subscriber should be forwarded in a plain and legible manner.

As a Historical, Propetic, Doctrinal, and Philosopical Journal, we shall render this periodical worthy of the distinguished title it bears.

San Francisco, March 1st, 1855.

'Tis with great pleasure that we view this new token of Mormon progress in the Golden State. Success to the Herald and all its patrons. They cannot spend money more proffitably, nor time more pleasantly, than in the perusal of Elder Pratt's Poetical, Philosophical, Prophetical, and Apostolical effusions for he is one of the happyest writers of the age.

We place the Herald on the list of our exchanges.

Correspondence.

—This letter has just come to hand via California.—

G. S. L. City, January 29, 1855.

Elder E. Snow:—Pursuant to my commencement last month, I would say: Our California mail arrived on Saturday last. We have had no mail from the East for two months.

From the 1st to the 15th of January, we had rather severe weather, since then it has been as fine as spring. Sixty hands are daily engaged in towering the large blocks of stone into the temple foundation. The joiner work of the new council flouse is finished, and the building is ready to recieve the plasterers.

The Legislative Assembly adjourned on the 19th inst. They passed an act appropriating $4,840 to aid the Deseret Iron Company, $2,500 to build an academy in this city. A new compilation of the laws of the Territory will soon be republished, as they have already gone to the printer. Judge Kinney and the Judiciary, gave a party on Tuesday last, at the Union Hall. Presidents Kimball and Grant; Prof. Pratt, and many others were present.

Col. Steptoe has let out the job of building a bridge across the Provo, to be paid out of the money appropriated by Congress, to build a Military road from this place to California. The last news from Walker, he with his band was camped on Chicken creek, in fine humor. President Young's health, for the past month or two, has been very poor. Several interesting plays have come off at the Social Hall, which has been crowded with auditors, the doors however will be closed after to-night, as the Battalion, Typographical Association of Deseret, and some others, are to have the Hall for a series of parties. The Dramatic Association of Provo, have been performing in the Music Hall, for the amusement of the inhabitants of that place, with good success.

The California mail brings a great many accounts about one Elder Pratt, who has been preaching Patriarchial matrimony in California. Hon. Orson Hyde has been elected Probate Judge of Carson county, by the Legislature, and had instructions from the Governor, to proceed forthwith to attend to it. Carson county has been constituted the third Judicial district, and the Hon. Geo. P. Stiles directed to locate there. Iron, and Washington counties have been included in the second Judicial district.

I close by subscribing myself, yours,

GEORGE A. SMITH.

Miscellaneous.

I ALWAYS LOVED.

BY W. W. PHELPS.

I always loved my father, who brought me into being,
To help him share the earth;
I always loved my mother, because she cloth'd my spirit,
And gave my body birth;
I always loved my kindred, because we play'd together,
So harmlessly in youth;
I always loved my home well, where I began to flourish,
And gather gems of truth;
I always loved my studies, for then the spirit whisper'd,
"There's wisdom from the dead;"
I always loved my Bible, in that I got the tidings,
"All truth is from the head;"
I always loved my maker, for he begat my spirit,
And taught me how to love;
I always loved my priesthood, because its endless power,
Was perfect from above
I always loved the women, in every stage of virtue,
With them we live again;
I always loved the union, that joins the Saints forever,
So let me love. Amen,

NEVER INSULT A STRANGER.

Not many years ago, one of the gorgeous palaces of the Hudson River was moving proudly up the rolling current, freighted with human beings of every class, from bustling New York. Women decked in all the artificial charms of fashion, languidly reclining upon easy cushions, men sitting here and there upon the upper decks, admiring the unfading beauties of adjacent bluffs, and rocky cliffs, others nervously passing to and fro with business cast of countenance, watching the movements of the boat, and the hour hands of their "patent levers," wondering when genius will invent vessels to ride upon the lightning and beat the telegraph.—The sharp ringing music of the dinner bell brought all to their feet, with smiles beaming from countenances before as dull as an inland lake; and such was the impetuous haste to reach the dinner table, that corns were trod upon without apologies, ribs bruised without any demand for explanations, and all were quietly seated around the inviting board doing justice to the viands spread before them.—Among the number of those participating in this meal, was a colored youth, whose intrusion was soon noticed by his fellow passengers, and the captain was forthwith invited to notify the dark skin to leave the table. This notice was given. The young man rose indignantly and withdrew. That young man was a son of the then King of the Sandwich Islands, and is now himself the reigning monarch. Uncle Sam is yearning for those beautiful islands, needs them for a great Pacific Depot where whalers and merchants can deposit their cargoes, and refit for other voyages, and the golden prize was already within his grasp, when the death of King Kamehameha III. put an end to such blissful dreams of acquisition, by placing his son Kamehameha IV—the insulted colored youth of the Hudson—upon the vacant throne. His hatred of Americans was then enkindled, burns deep, and will never be extinguished. So long as he lives and reigns those splendid dominions will be beyond our reach, or pass into the possession of another power. Little did those American passengers think, when they turned up their aristocratic noses at the colored youth, that they were creating an obstacle to our acquisition of the Sandwich Islands. But so it proved, and this should instruct us that a needless insult should never be offered to the most humble individual, for the time may come when those same individuals will be placed in positions to do us much harm.—[Davenport Courier.

This is not the only blunder committed by Uncle Sam in his treatment of King's sons who have traveled unknown through his Territory. We advise him to be careful in future, lest he fall into blunders from which he may never be extricated or redeemed.—[Ed.

IMPORTANT FACTS.

There are six hundred thousand drunkards in G. Britain and Ireland. Sixty thousand of whom die every year, whose places are regularly filled up from the ranks of moderate drinkers.

Eight million quarters of grain are annually destroyed in making intoxicating liquors. Forty-five thousand seven hundred and sixty-nine acres of land is required for growing this grain, which if made into bread, would afford three loaves per week to each family in the united Kingdom.

Three quarters of a pound of the best meal are consumed in making one gill of whisky.

Upwards of twenty millions of gallons of spirits, besides large quantities of ale, porter, wines, and other intoxicating liquors, are consumed every year in that country.

In Edinburgh, in 1829, £450,000 were expended in such drinks.

In Great Britain and Ireland, they give, in the year, half a million of dollars in support of all their religious societies, whilst they spend fifty millions upon strong drinks.

From the use of strong drinks, arise four-fifths of all the poverty, three-fourths of the vice and crime, and nine-tenths of all the disease and madness in that country.—[Edinburgh Statistics.

CONGRESSIONAL MORALITY.

The Editor of the Louisville Journal relates the following ludicrous joke, passed upon some of our distinguished Legislators, during the last Congress:

"We were infinitely amused, three or four weeks ago, by a practical joke in Washington City, upon a number of the nice men of Congress."

'A couple of merry fellows, one of them a distinguished member of Congress from a Southern State, and the other a distinguished ex-editor from Kentucky, concocted a letter purporting to be addressed by a young lady to a very fine looking gentleman. It was got up in first rate style. The pretended young lady set forth therein, that she had several times seen the gentleman she was addressing, that she was captivated by his fine face and manly form, that her heart was deeply touched by all she saw and heard of him, that she must make his acquaintance before his departure from the city, that she hoped and prayed he would forgive her seeming boldness, as it was the first imprudent act of her life, that she had always moved and was still moving in the highest circles of the Capital, that she would be upon a certain square of a certain street at precisely twelve o'clock on the following day, in a dress which she described with great particularity, and that she hoped and trusted he would meet her, and thus afford her an opportunity of a brief personal intercourse with the idol of her heart. The two wags had between thirty and forty copies of this letter written by a female friend of theirs, and they sent these copies to between thirty and forty members of Congress, selecting those, of course, who were known to entertain a very exalted opinion of their own personal facinations.

'Everything being thus arranged, the two jokers called upon us and another young gentleman, explained what they had done, and invited us to get into their carriage, ride with them to the point of assignation, and see the sights. We unhesitatingly consented, and we saw sights sure enough. Riding upon the designated square, we beheld the whole of the thirty or forty members, Northern men and Southern men, Whigs, Democrats and Know-Nothings, walking to and fro, all gazing earnestly in every direction, and at every female figure to discover the object of their anxious search.

'We concluded, that if a few more copies of the letter had been sent to members of the House of Representatives, the House would have had to adjourn for the want of a quorum.

"Mr.—do—you—keep—any—thing good—to take here?"

"Yes, we have excellent cold water—the best thing in the world."

"Yes, I know it," was the reply, "there's no—one thing that's done so much—for navigation as—that; and even as a beverage—it's capital—mixed with a little brandy."

A western "pote" gets gets off the following explanatory of a steamboat explosion:

The engine groaned,
The wheels did creak,
The steam did whistle,
And the boiler did leak,
The boiler was examined—
They found it was rusted,
And all on a sudden
The old thing busted.

A clergyman in England is now suffering the severe penalty of 12 months imprisonment, for marrying a couple at half past six in the morning, when the ecclesiastical law forbids that such a ceremony shall take place before 8 A. M.

A penny saved is twice earned.

OBITUARY.

Died, of Consumption, at Great Salt Lake City, Dec. 25, 1854, Francis Fletcher, in the 36th year of his age.

NOTICE.

We have received and have on sale the following books and pamphlets.

Book of Mormon,	$1 00
Book of Doctrine and Covenants,	95
Voice of Warning,	50
Spencer's Letters,	50
Hymn Books, Morocco gilt, ext.,	1 25
" " Calf "	80
" " Roan "	50
Government of God, by J. Taylor,	50
New Jerusalem, or the Fulfilment of Modern Prophecy,	15
Divine Authority of Joseph Smith,	10
Remarkable Visions,	10
Only Way to be Saved,	5
Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, by O. Pratt, 6 parts, 10cts. ea., or per sett,	40
Polygamy, by a Lady in Utah,	5
The Seer, by O. Pratt, vol. 1, to which is added 6 parts of Divine Authenticity of the book of Mormon, and Polygamy, by a Lady of Utah, elegantly bound, in one vol.	2 25
Orson Pratt's works, bound,	1 50
Times and Seasons, vols. 4, 5, and 6, well bound, ea.	1 50
Portraits of the First Presidency,	1 25

Route from England to Salt Lake may be expected in a few weeks.

We have a few numbers of the Millenial Star of vol. 17 on sale.

Those wishing any of the above books, or wishing to subscribe regularly for the Millenial Star, can apply to me every Sunday at the Church, or by post.

Apr, 14 21.] JAS. S. CANTWELL.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. J. VINCENT, MIDWIFE, East side of Fourth street, between Market and Walnut streets, St. Louis, Mo.
Mrs. J. Vincent wishes to inform her friends and the public, that she has removed from between 8th and 9th, on Market street, to the above place, and hopes by strict attention to her duties, to merit a further continuance of their patronage. [apr 14 21 3m

TO EMIGRANTS.
C. B. HUBBELL, Jr., 102 4th st., St. Louis
Informs persons travelling towards
SALT LAKE OR CALIFORNIA,
That they will find at his store, the largest stock of DRY GOODS in the city, comprising every variety of kinds adapted to their wants, which he will sell at prices fully TWENTY-FIVE per cent. lower than any other house in the trade, to which your attention is invited.
N. B. One price only ever asked, and no deviation. [apr 14 21 2m

GREAT ATTRACTION
AT
WILSON & COOPER'S NEW STORE!
The attention of Emigrant starting for
UTAH, CALIFORNIA, AND OREGON,
Is respectfully called to our IMMENSE STOCK of
FASHIONBLE DRY GOODS!
Comprising every article in the trade, from the plain substantial articles of every-day use, to the finest and most elegant fabrics of first class Dry Goods and LINEN DRAPERY.
Goods are all marked in PLAIN FIGURES, from which no abatement is allowed under any circumstances.
N. B. A discount of FIVE per cent. will be allowed to parties going west, on all bills over $100. WILSON & COOPER, apr 14 21] Cor. 4th and Locust sts., St. Louis.

OUTFITS FOR CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE AND OREGON.
WM. C. WILSON,
DEALER IN
Groceries, Wines, Liquors, and Provisions,; Pilot Bread and Crackers,
No. 195 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
☞ Is prepared to furnish everything in his line, at the lowest rates, and from past experience in the trade, feels assured, that parties intending to cross the plains, will find it to their interest to give him a call, and compare prices before purchasing elsewhere.
ON HAND AND FOR SALE LOW, THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES:
TEAS—A choice assortment of Imperial, Gun Powder, Young Hyson and Black.
COFFEE—Rio, Havana, Laguayra and Java—burnt and ground.
SUGAR—Crushed, Lump, Powdered, Clarified, New Orleans and Brown—all grades.
MOLASSES—Golden Syrup, Sugar House and Plantation.
LIQUORS—Best brands of Pure French Brandy, Holland Gin, Jamaica Rum, Irish, Scotch, Monongahela and Bourbon Whiskey, and all kinds of Domestic Liquors.
WINES—Pure Port, Maderia, Malaga, Sherry, Muscat, Champagne, Claret and White, Cordials, &c., &c.
BACON—Ham, Sides and Shoulders, Dried Beef and Beef Tongue.
FRUIT—Raisins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, Citron, Dried Apples and Peaches, &c., &c.
SUNDRIES—All kinds of Pickles, Sauce, Ketchups, Spice, Fancy Soaps, Candles, Oil, Gas, Fish, Mats, Cords, Buckets, Baskets, Brooms, Tubs, Lobsters, Oysters, Sardines, Cooking Extracts, Essences, Arrow Root, Farina, Sago, Corn Starch, Oat Meal, Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Macoaroni, Vermicelli, Honey, &c., &c. [apr 7 20 2m

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE and OREGON.
EMIGRANTS
Can be supplied with every variety of
PILOT BREAD & CRACKERS
Baked expressly for the overland Emigration, and WARRANTED to KEEP, at
J. B. WILLSON'S BAKERY,
No. 186 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
☞ The trade supplied at the LOWEST RATES. [apr 7 20 2m

IN FOURTEEN MONTHLY PARTS, ROYAL QUARTO.
ROUTE FROM LIVERPOOL
TO GREAT SALT LAKE VALLEY, ILLUSTRATED.
By a series of Splendid Steel Engravings and Wood Cuts from sketches made on the spot from life in 1853, expressly for this work,
BY FREDERICK PIERCY,
Containing a Map of the overland portion of the journey,
EDITED BY JAMES LINFORTH.
THIS highly interesting and beautiful work will form a narative of the Journey from Liverpool to Great Salt Lake Valley, and will give a Historical description and Statistical information respecting the places, and the Indian tribes on the route, and in Utah Territory.
The mode in which the Latter-day Saints emigration is conducted—a review of it from the commencement, and incidental instructions to Emigrants will constitute an early part of this work.
The Statistical information will be drawn from the most authentic sources and consequently may be relied pon. That portion of it relating to the Latter-day Saints will be particularly valuable, owing to the difficulty hitherto experienced by all classes in obtaining anything accurate from the conflicting statements which have appeared from time to time in a great portion of the public press.
The Engravings, except the portraits of Joseph Smith, Heber C. Kimball, Willard Richards, Jedediah M. Grant, John Smith, and Joseph Walker and Arapeen, chiefs of Utah Indians, are all taken from sketches made on the spot and from life expressly for this work, and will be finished in the first style of art, presenting a detail and accuracy rarely aimed at in similar productions.
No pains or expense has been spared to render this work one of peculiar interest, usefulness, and beauty; and the Publisher feels confident that it will meet with that extensive patronage which can alone justify its publication.
STEEL ENGRAVINGS
By CHARLES FENN & EDWARD ROFFE.
New Ooleans; Baton Rouge; Natches under the Hill; Vicksburgh; Memphis; St. Louis; Camp at Keokuk; Nauvoo; Joseph Smith, the Prophet; Hyrum Smith, from an original portrait in the posession of his family; Willard Richards, from a daguerreotype; John Taylor; Carthage Jail; Room in which Joseph and Hyrum Smith were imprisoned; Well against which Joseph Smith was placed and shot after his assassination; Lucy Smith, mother of the Prophet; Ruins of the Temple at Nauvoo; Joseph and David Smith, sons of the Prophet; Entrance to Kanesville; Council Bluffs Ferry and group of cotton wood trees; View of the Missouri river and Council Bluffs from an elevation; Elk Horn river Ferry; Loup Fork Ferry; Wood river; Chimney Rock; Scott's Bluffs; Fort Laramie; Independence Rock; Devils Gate; Laramie Peak; Witches Bluffs; Great Salt Lake; Great Salt Lake City; Heber C. Kimball, from a daguereotype; Jedediah M. Grant, from a daguerreotype; John Smith from a daguerreotype; President Brigham Young, Governor of Utah Territory.
WOOD CUTS
By MASON JACKSON.
Emigrant Ship leaving Liverpool; Light-house at the mouth of the Mississippi river; Old Fort Rosalie; Walnut Hills; Utah Territorial House, G. S. L. City; Costume for the Plains; Chimney Rock from the west; Fort Bridger; A Kanyon in the Rocky Mountains; Tabernacle, G. S. L. City; Joseph Walker and Arapeen, brothers, once Chiefs of the Utah Indians, from original drawings by W. W. Major.
Published by F. D. RICHARDS, Liverpool.
J. S. CANTWELL, Agent for St. Louis.

GOODIN & TOOKER,
GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,
No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.
HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.
We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfilment.
Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand. Lamps repaired, reglided and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 19 6m

FOR SALE AT A BARGAIN.
A GOOD SUBSTANTIAL ONE HORSE LUMBER WAGON, suitable for Gardners, Jobbers of Masonry, &c., will be sold cheap for Cash if applied for soon, at the south-west corner of Market and 15th streets.

W. H. HUISH,
MACHINIST, Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as
PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERMLY.
mar 24] [18 3m

NOTICE.
I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware, and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at
ST. LOUIS PRICES.
mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

TO EMIGRANTS.
J D HARPER. T J HARPER.
AT the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especialy of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we willl sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.
mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.
EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L K & Co.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.
TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by
ALFRED PERSEY,
St. Louis, Mo.
The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

BLACKSMITHING.
T. S. ABURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for the Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommmendation.
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb. 1855. [mar 3, 15 3m.

D. O. TUTT. J. F. BAKER.
TUTT & BAKER,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.
WESTON, MO.,
Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.
March 3, 1855. 15 3m

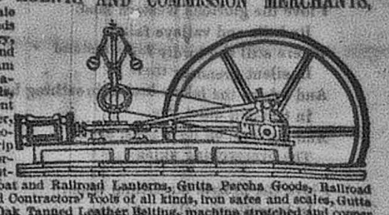
J. B. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.
EVANS & MITCHELL,
MERCHANTS,
At Weston, Missouri,
HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.
STORAGE AND OUTFITS.
LEWIS N. REES,
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,
IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pirtols, Buoy-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.
Groceries and Provisions.
Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.
He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Heningcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 15 3m

G. M. & A. FISHER,
Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,
ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as And-Irons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.
They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 15 3m

WANTED.
A RESPECTABLE WIDOW wishes to obtain a situation as Housekeeper. She will undertake Sewing, the education of Children, and otherwise render herself useful. Address F. BROWN, Postoffice.

PHIL. ROCHILD & CO.,
HAVE constantly on hand in Kansas, Mo., a full supply of Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Groceries, Gutta Percha Goods, Provisions, Tinware, &c., which they will sell on as liberal terms as they can be bought for in Upper Missouri. [mar 3, 15 3m.

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MAIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.


N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.
Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,
Residence, No. 328 South Side Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets:
Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,
MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also, Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice.
All the above articles are warranted of the best American iron.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!
O. H. COGSWELL,
At his Old Stand in Independence, Mo.,
WILL have on hand at the commencement of the out-fitting season, a large and well selected stock of outfitting goods for the Plains to Great Salt Lake City, and will furnish them on reasonable terms. He will keep constantly on hand, Flour, Bacon, Sugar, Coffee, Rice, Dried Beef, Hard Bread, and in a word, every article necessary for crossing the Plains. He flatters himself from his knowledge in that department of his business, having been a trader for the last four years in Great Salt Lake City, and his frequent passing over the Plains, that he will be well prepared to give general satisfaction.
And to the Salt Lake emigration he would respectfully say that Independence possesses advantages in point of location for out lot directly, and for procuring Wagons, Stock, Provisions, &c., that no other place above St. Louis possesses.
O. H. COGSWELL.
REFFERENCES.
ERASTUS SNOW, St. Louis, ORSON SPENCER, Cincinnati, O.,
MILO ANDRUS, St. Louis, EL. JOHN TAYLOR, New York,
CHAS. BASSETT, Springfield, O., JOHN HOW, St. Louis,
Feb. 24] WOODS, CHRISTY & CO., St. Louis. [14 3m.

BOOTS AND SHOES of every variety can be had at
O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

LEATHER of all descriptions, for Saddlery, Harness, and Shoemaking purposes to be had at O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

OUT-FITTING FOR THE PLAINS.
THOSE crossing the Plains this Spring, will find it to their interest to call on the undersigned, where they will find a general assortment of every thing necessary in out-fitting for such expeditions.
Goods received and stored upon liberal terms.
Feb. 24, 14 3m A. G. BOONE, Weston, Mo.

OUT-FITTING.
R. CHARLES takes this method of informing the emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand a full supply of Groceries, Builder's Hardware, Cutlery, Boots and Shoes, and all grades of staple Dry Goods, which he will sell at wholesale and retail. Thankful for former patronage, he solicits a further trial on the levee Kansas, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

BLACKSMITHING AND GRAZING.
THE Subscriber has a Blacksmith Shop, lots on the prairie, and has Cattle for rate two miles from Westport, on the State line. His former business transactions with the Latter-day Saints and other Emigration having given general satisfaction, he solicits a trial in future.
Feb. 54, 14 3m. J. W. MARRION, Kansas, Mo.

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.
THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m. JAMES W. ELLIS.

BENJ. CROWTHER,
DEALER in Hardware, Table and Pocket Cutlery, Mechanics' Tools of every description, consisting in part of Axes of all kinds, Augers do., Awls, patent, with bits, Bench Screws, Chisels of every description, Auger and Chisel Handles. Also, Blacksmith's Tools of every description, together with a large stock of Miscellaneous articles, such as Brushes, Paints, Japanned Tin Ware, Spoons, Rifles, Guns, Pistols, and other articles too numerous to mention, in fact, everything used by Mechanics, Housekeepers and the public in general, all of which will be sold low for cash. A liberal discount made to mechanics buying by the quantity. Call and see. Store situated south side of the Court House.
BENJAMIN CROWTHER.
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Independence, Jackson Co., Mo.

OUT-FITTING!
M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Groceries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

EMIGRANTS.
THE Subscribers would say to the Emigration for the West, that they are engaged in buying and selling stock of all kinds. Orders for Horses, Mules or Cattle will meet with prompt attention. Persons wishing to purchase would do well to call on me before purchasing elsewhere.
WM. LIGGIT,
WM. IRWIN,
Independence, Mo.
Refer to J. HOCKIDAY,
O. H. COGSWELL. [Feb. 24, 14, 1m

ISAAC HOCKADAY,
DEALER in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps and Ready Made Clothing, together with a large and general assortment of out-fitting goods of every description, suitable for California, Salt Lake, and New Mexico outfits.
Store north side of Public Square, Independence, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

FLOUR AND MEAL.
THE Subscriber takes this method of saying to the Emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand large quantities of Flour and Meal, which he will sell at as reasonable rates as such articles can be bought for in the up country, at his mill, known as the Jackson Mills, near Independence. He will also have a large supply in Independence, Mo.
THOMAS PITCHER.
REFERENCES: WILSON & PARKER; JESSE H. NOWLAND.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

CATTLE.
THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all of which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. B. & J. H. FLEMING,
Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.
REFERENCE.
ISAAC HOCKADAY, Independence, O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HADUB & MULLEN, Wayne City.
N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon, and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood of Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WAGONS AND YOKES.
YOUNG & SMITH are prepared to fill orders for Wagons and Ox Yokes to the Western Emigration. They have on hand a large lot the best Wagons made in the Western Country, and can supply any number of Yokes that may be desired. They will deliver their Yokes or Wagons in lots at any point on the river from Independence to Leavenworth City.
Independence, Mo., 1855. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WM. & JOHN McCOY,
Independence, Mo.,
DEALERS in Staple and Fancy Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Camp Equippage and Outfitting Goods of every description.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

S. P. KELLER,
DEALER IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE,
Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,
Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot
No. 27 Commercial Street,
Feb. 24, 14 3m* WESTPORT, MO.

C. B. KEARNEY. W. B. BERNARD.
KEARNEY & BERNARD,
METROPOLITAN STORE,
WESTPORT, MO.,
DEALERS IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

JOEL WALKER. W. H. CHICK.
WALKER & CHICK,
Receiving, Forwarding, and Commission Merchants,
KANSAS, MO.
Feb. 24, 1855. [14 3m.

RIDDLESBARGER & CO.,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
Commission and Forwarding Merchants,
AT KANSAS, MO.,
HAVING done a heavy business in our line for the emigration of 1854, we would respectfully solicit further patronage. [Feb 24, 14 3m

PROVISIONS AND OUTFITTING.
J. H. COLE & CO., Corner of Main and Water streets, under the printing office, Kansas Mo., have constantly on hand a large supply of Provisions and Outfitting Goods, and having done business in their line at this place for some years with the Western Emigration, they earnestly solicit a share of their patronage this season. [Feb 24, 14 3m.

H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.
NORTHRUP & CHICK,
KANSAS, MISSOURI,
WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.
We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.
Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

Poetical Department.

THE WESTERN LAND.

BY T. D. WILKINS.

I love the glorious western land,
Its hills and valleys fair,
Where still the lordly forests stand
In silent grandeur there;
And where the lake's broad, breathing breast
In tranquil quiet lies,
And mirrors, on its waves, at rest,
The overarching skies.

I love the prairie stretching wide,
In boundless realms of green,
Where, like the ocean's ceaseless tide,
The waving grass is seen—
Where many a noble river flows,
With current swift and strong,
'Mid smiling meadows in repose,
And mossy banks along.

I love the sturdy western men,
With strong, unflinching will,
Who pierced the lovely forests when
They crowned each rising hill,
Who made the monarch oak to bow
Its lordly, towering head,
And crushed the autumn leaves below
Their heavy, fearless tread.

Oh, many a deed of daring then,
Those frowning woods had seen,
When painted bands of dusky men
Stole through the forest green,
And when the ranks of foemen met
Within the dim old wood,
The green hue of the sod was wet
And colored with their blood.

I love the glorious west that lies
In pictured splendor fair—
I love to gaze upon its skies,
I love to breathe its air.
Bright land of hope, the sullen past
Yields up its crown to thee,
And earth has given to thee at last
A home of Liberty.

FOR THE LUMINARY.

THE MORMONS IN MISSOURI.

BY CHARLIE.

(Concluded.)

From his drunken ravings, and more sober admissions, I gathered the principle incidents of the following story:

A few miles to the south of Far West, in a remote corner of the county, a company of Mormons had located themselves, and commenced clearing away the timber, and breaking up the prairie, sowing grain and planting gardens, and making other necessary improvements. In a few months they had erected comfortable log dwellings, smoothly hewed, and neatly whitewashed inside and out. They were built a uniform distance from the street, with a beautiful flower garden in front, enclosed by a neat fence of whitewashed pickets. Outside the yard was a double row of beautiful shade trees, which had been transplanted with great care, from the neighboring forest; altogether presenting a neat and comfortable appearance. Several mechanic shops were already in successful operation, and all hands were busily engaged in putting up a flouring mill, for the mutual benefit of the new settlement. The education of their children engaged their early attention, and a commodious building, answering a double purpose of meeting house and school room was soon erected, and a flourishing school was established, under the superintendence of one of their better educated females. The rich prairie soil yielded abundant crops, affording to the husbandman ample reward for his labor, and furnishing for himself and family a comfortable subsistance.

The people were happy in the enjoyment of social comforts, and practising the cherished tenets of their peculiar religion; and the Mormon village pointed out by the unprejudiced traveller, as the abode of industry and contentment.

In the adjoining county, but a few miles distant from the Mormons, was another settlement, the history of which would reflect but little credit on its slothful inhabitants. Their decayed fences, dilapidated houses, half finished barns and stables, and fields overgrown with weeds and brambles, were unmistakable signs of idleness, and betrayed a lack of enterprise, and a careless indifference to everything, that in more refined society, is more essential to neatnesss and comfort. They were entirely unacquainted with the first degrees of refinement, and seemed to be quite content with their hog hominy, and whisky, and clad in their butternut colored jeans, negro driving and horse racing, was the extent of their low ambition. They had watched with an eye of uneasy jealosy, the growing prosperity of their enterprising neighbors. The comfortable houses, well cultivated fields, blooming gardens of the Mormons, compared with their own rickety cabins, half tilled farms, and neglected gardens, afforded such a palpable contrast, as to create in their minds a feeling of envy, which gradually grew into a spirit of bitter persecution.

Old Phillip Logan, or as he was more familiarly called Uncle Phil., was the leading character of the neighborhood. He was proud in his acknowledged superiority of judgment, and rich in the possession of a miserably cultivated plantation, and a dozen superannuated negroes.

He was considered a proficient at card playing, a safe bettor on a horse race, and an excellent judge of cheap whisky; and was looked up to by his fellows as the directing spirit of all their movements.

On his first accquaintance, Uncle Phil. had entertained a very favorable opinion of the Mormons; but his only son and daughter having joined with this unpopular sect, his former good feelings were turned to a deep and abiding hatred; and he sought frequent opportunity to annoy his unoffending neighbors. The son was ordained to the ministry and sent on a foreign mission. The daughter remained at home, but was prohibited from meeting with her brethren and sisters, by her hard hearted father, who threatened her with severe chastisement if she should even mention the subject of Mormonism in his hearing.

Harriet was an interesting girl of seventeen, with a lovely face and pretty form. Her manners were sweet and engaging, and she had inherited from her good mother—now long since dead—a kind heart and an amiable disposition. She was natually of a religious turn of mind, and in adopting the faith of the Mormons, she was dictated by a just sense of right, and justified by her own convictions of duty.

She was an isolated flower, sweetly blooming among the obnoxious weeds and worthless plants. She experienced no pleasure in the rude company that she often met at her fathers house, but was rather disgusted with their uncouth manners, and vulgar conversation. She occupied most of her leisure hours, in silent communion with her own thoughts, and in calling to mind those fondly cherished precepts, early taught by her pious mother. Occasionally she eluded the vigilance of her father, and notwithstading his repeated cruel threats, she succeeded in meeting with her brethren and sisters of the faith, to join with them in the worship of God.

In the afternoon of a pleasant autumn day, Harriet was alone in her little room, indulging in a train of meloncholy thoughts. She had heard sad tidings from her kindred Saints at Far West. They were beset by a fierce mob, who threatened to destroy the city, and murder the inhabitants. The leader of the mob had sent a messenger to Uncle Phil., requesting him to gather up the fighting men of his neighborhood and proceed with all possible dispatch, and join him at his head quarters near Far West. Harriet had overheard the conversation between her father and this messenger, and her heart was pained to learn that a war of extermination had been declared against the Mormons, and that a numerous mob was already in the field, ready to execute their bloody designs. It is no wonder that the kind heart of the poor girl swelled with sorrow, as she contemplated the sufferings that awaited her persecuted brethren and sisters, and their helpless little ones. She leaned pensively against the window jamb, and looked anxiously out into the highway. Her pale brow rested in the palm of her delicate hand, and the tips of her tiny, tapering fingers, were hid in the rich tresses of her auburn hair, which hung in natural ringlets around her alabaster neck. Roses bloomed upon her fair cheek, and tears of sadness stood in her large and lustrous eyes. Her ruby lips were slightly parted, exhibiting a double row of snowy teeth, one of which standing a little out from its pearly fellows, formed a gentle dimple in her slightly pouting lips. Her reclining position, showed the perfect symetry of her form, and the expression of sadness that shaded her countenance, added to her interesting loveliness.

A sound of footsteps was heard in the yard, and Uncle Phil. hurried past the window into the street. He stopped to tell negro John that he would not return till the morrow, then mounted his horse and rode rapidly away. Harriet watched him till he was out of sight, then putting on her bonnet and shawl, she hurriedly left the house. She passed through the back yard sprang over the garden fence, and hastening across the fields, she entered a thick wood that skirted this side of the farm.

Uncle Phil. eager to respond to the call of the mob Captain, visited every man in the settlement, and instructed them to rendezvous at the old log blacksmith shop, at the crossing of the roads.

At night-fall of the same day, they gathered at the place appointed, all armed to the teeth, and ready to engage in the murder of their fellow men; because, forsooth, they chose to worship God, agreeably to the dictates of their own consciences, and dared, as American citizens, to exercise the right of suffrage. One of the company was despatched for a bottle of whisky, and Uncle Phil. proceeded to make known his plans. He proposed, instead of immediately joining the mob at head quarters, to first make the attack on the Mormon village, near their own settlement. He represented the present occasion as affording a favorable opportunity of carrying out their long contemplated plan, of stopping the progress of their Mormon neighbors, by destroying their flourishing village. He also assured them that the men had all gone to Far West to assist their brethren in defending that city, and the women and children would be an easy prey. This proposition met with the ready assent of the cowardly ruffians, for they were much better pleased with the prospects of warring with the defenceless women, than with the idea of exposing themselves to the unerring aim of Mormon rifles. All were impatient to engage in this nefarious expedition, and after bracing up their courage, by repeated heavy draughts from their well filled bottles, they vaulted into their saddles and rode off in a brisk trot towards the devoted village.

An hour's ride brought them to the lone oak in the outskirts of the village. Here they came to a halt and one of the party was sent forword to reconnoitre.

In a few minutes he returned, and reported that the men were all absent as was supposed, and the women were assembled at the school house, dressed in long white robes, and had strange sort of caps or turbans on their heads, and were earnestly praying in an unknown language. Uncle Phil. declared that things could not be more favorable, and dashing his spurs into the flanks of his horse, he rode furiously around the tree, and flourishing his heavy bowie-knife in the air, he exultingly swore that he was not afraid of any Mormon woman in all Missouri.

The whisky bottle was again passed around, and the company moved forward toward the school room. They reached the picket fence with which the building was enclosed, and leaving their horses in care of two or three lads that came along for the purpose, they crept stealthily along, till they reached the door. Uncle Phil. rushed into the room, followed by his ruffian comrades, and with a yell of fiendish triumph they seized upon their frightened victims. Their voice of prayer suddenly ceased, and a wild cry of horror was heard instead. The death dealing knife came down with terrible effect. Each fatal blow, emancipated a pure and radiant spirit. Mormon blood flowed freely, and snowy robes were stained with crimson gore. Frantic shrieks, and savage shouts, dying groans and fiendish yells, wildly commingled and rent the air. Keen edged weapons of death were reeking with blood, and the murderers hands were not yet stayed. Agonizing cries for mercy, were only answered by death-giving blows. A score of tender maidens, and elderly matrons lay weltering in gore, while many dragged their shrieking victims to the yard, and there forced them to submit to a fate worse than death.

After satiating their thirst for blood, and gratifying their unhallowed passions, these fiends incarnate to complete the work of destruction, proceeded to fire the village. Having accomplished this, they met again under the lone tree. Here they paused awhile to survey the scene before them. The long row of white cottages was wrapped in a continuous sheet of fire, and fitful bursts of flame and smoke issued from the roof of the half finished mill. For a few minutes they gazed upon the burning town, with an expression of fiendish satisfaction resting upon their hideous faces, then uttering a shout of hellish triumph, they wheeled into the highway and rode furiously homeward.

They drew up at the old shop, and were soon gathered around their leader, anxious to learn the plan of their future operations. Uncle Phil. was in high glee. He prided himself on the part he had taken in the evenings transaction. He had not only achieved a signal victory over a party of defenceless women, but he had also secured a rich and delicate trophy—a golden locket containing a miniature likeness of a young and beautiful female. He had taken it from the neck of one of his fair victims, while she was strugling to free herself from his foul embrace. He approached nearer the light to examine more closely his delicate prize. He fixed his eyes upon the picture with a gaze of intense earnestnes. His rough face assumed a death-like paleness. He essayed in vain to conceal the deep emotion that heaved his breast. A storm of compunctious pangs and bitter remorse was raging there. His trembling knees smote together. He struck his hand to his brow and reeled heavily forward, vehemently exclaiming, "Great God, what have I done! It is my daughter! My own Harriet! And by myself dishonored!"

When Harriet saw her father leave the house in the afternoon, she supposed that he would proceed direct to Far West, and taking advantage of his absence, she hurried across the fields and through the woods to the Mormon village, little aware of the terrible destiny that awaited her. She was in the prayer meeting with her sisters, and so disguised by her pecular dress, that her father did not recognise her, and while dealing violence and death to Mormon women, he unknowingly hurled his own daughter into the jaws of ruin.

The picture in the locket, was the likeness of Harriet's mother, taken in her younger days. While on her dying bed, she attached to it a beautiful chain, woven from her own glossy hair, and placed it around the neck of daughter, with the request, that she would always wear it in memory of her; and it had never left its place, near the heart of Harriet, until it was so unceremoniously snatched from its virgin sanctuary, by the ruthless hand of her reckless father.

While I confess that I have blended fiction with the facts of the above story; yet I do assert, that wrongs as cruel, and outrages as gross, have been inflicted upon the Mormons in Missouri, by the mobocrats of that State, and these facts recorded, will appear as dark spots on the pages of her history.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, March, 1855.

DETAILS OF THE ASIA'S NEWS.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The following is the manifesto of King Alexander the Second to his army, dated St. Petersburg, March 3d:

"Valiant warriors, faithful defenders of the church, the throne and the country, it has pleased Almighty God to visit us with a most painful and grievous loss. We have all lost our common father and benefactor in the midst of his unwearied care for Russia's prosperity and the glory of the Russian arms. The Emperor Nicholas, my most blessed father, has departed to eternal life. His last words were "I thank the glorious loyal guard who, in 1825, saved Russia, and I also thank the brave army and fleet, and I pray God to maintain the courage and spirit by which they have distinguished themselves under me. So long as this spirit remains, Russia's tranquility is secured, both within and without, and woe to her enemies. I love my troops as my own children, and strove as much as I could to improve their condition. I was not entirely successful in that respect. It was from no want of skill, but because I was unable to devise anything better, or to do more."

May those ever memorable words remain preserved in your hearts. as a proof of his sincere love for you, which I have to the largest extent; and let them be a pledge of your devotion for me and Russia.

Signed, ALEXANDER II.

A FLORISHING little town in the western part of Massachusetts has elected a woman as a member of the school committee.

The Evidences Accumulate in proof of what we have long since asserted, viz: that the Mustang Liniment is the 'sine qua non' of all external remedies ever before offered to the afflicted.

We would call especial attention to the advertisement of this Liniment in our columns, and will take this occasion to say that this appears to be one of the few popular medicines that really possess all the virtues ascribed to them. In effectually curing the worst cases of Rheumatism, no matter how long standing, in an incredibly short time, and for sprains, bruises, sores, burns, or pains of any kind, it has no equal. We have heard of many cures that have been performed that really appear incredible, were they not vouched for by persons of responsibility and influence. It is said to be an infallible remedy for musquito bites.

See advertisement in another column. [17 2m

ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. G. SIMPSON. D. CAMERON.

GREAT SALE.
"AUCTION GOODS"
FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THE Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time submitted to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞ The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below Manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,
No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan.

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES,
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

BOOTS AND SHOES.
J. PARSON,
163 Morgan Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.

A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12tf.

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and inconfoverfible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of

RHEUMATISM

than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.

G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,
J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:
Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.
I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.
I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.
Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.

I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Oroton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS

have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:

Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumors, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.

The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.

G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG & CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.
Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.

B. FORMON,
TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at

126 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House,
St. Louis, Missouri.
Jan. 13, 1855. [8 3m*

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST.
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.

Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
75 MARKET STREET,

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.

N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

75 Market Street,
(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)
Feb. 17, 12 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. 23. [5 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 61 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenues.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m. FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
60 packets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERE.
Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 6m*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Lubeaume Steert,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MC'LEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, palns, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALBERD.
Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞ For sale by J. H. MOLHAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.
T. W. HOIT.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PARER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.
A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERHD, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.
Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired;
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his vest,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

His fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,
☞ OF CORINTHIAN HALL, ☜
297 BROADWAY,
ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,
FOR THE SALE OF
FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,
FOR $4 EACH!
FOR A
LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER
DRESS HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,
GO TO CORINTIAN HALL!
FOR AN
INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
297 Broadway;
☞ BIG HAT. ☜
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 4th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,

Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.

COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 138 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.

Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set, Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tinners' Sheats, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, APRIL 21, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XXII.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Mailed to Subscribers at $2 per annum.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.

Advertisements inserted on accommodating terms.

All Communications relating to the LUMINARY should addressed to the Editor, Post-paid.

Popular Confidence in the United States Declining—its Causes, Consequences, and only remedy.

BY ORSON SPENCER.

Sectarianism is the anomaly and undefinable wonder of all ages—a freak of percentage that defies analogy this side of the pit of perdition. The nearest approach to its pedigree has shown that it is a bastardy of superanuated parentage, that received its first impulse of growth from want of swaddling bands, and want of washing; and presently, affecting to be of the lineage of Melchisideck, from the fact of its being without known father or mother, it readily paid allegiance to a God without body, parts, or passions, as best suited to the last principle of universal irresponsibility and unlimited agency and corruption.

Sectarian Christianity cannot restore confidence when it has done so much to destroy it. The very Bible, which it ought to have used as a strong basis upon which to build the confidence of the people, is rendered null and void; a, worse than this, it is even turned into a fable and a lie.

If the Bible speaks all those varied, discrepant, and contradictory things which its votaries ascribe to it, it then becomes one of the most absurd, barefaced liars that ever was palmed upon the credulity of mankind.

One votary declares solemnly that the Bible says this; another, professing to understand it better, says it means the opposite, while a third says it means neither of the two ways, but another thing altogether. And a hundred different persons declare that the Bible testifies differently about the same thing. Now any witness who will tell so many different stories about the same thing, as it is abundantly declared the Bible does tell, must be set down as a downright lying witness, that is wholly unworthy to be believed. Modern Christians have herein sunked their own canon, and destroyed the testimony of their best witness; because they have told many lies themselves, or they have made the Bible to tell them. But if the Bible is guilty of telling lies, their religion, which is based upon the Bible, is false; but if the Bible is true, and they have told the lies, then they have lost their influence and credibility, and cannot restore confidence.

I have said that sectarian religion has been one fruitful source and radical cause of the direful spirit of distrust that is widely felt and seen both in trade and in political feuds and corruptions.

What I say is true and indisputable. Take the five jarring churches in one little town as a miniature picture of illustration. These five churches have been organised by five paid ministers on the acknowledged basis of a lack of confidence in the teachings and dogmas of each other. This avowal of no confidence, is the cornerstone and one grand starting point of the five religious divisions. The people are taught to pay these five men, in order to carry out these distinctive and opposing features of these five parties. And the Sabbath day too, with all its sacred associations and ordinances, is employed to rivet the clashing dogmas upon the people of this little town. And from these hireling religious factions spring directly or indirectly every other faction in the trade and politics of the town; and every other family feud and quarrel, or alienation between husband and wife, parents and children, brothers and sisters and neighbors, spring directly or indirectly from this one source. The minister being the social head, if that "head is sick the whole heart is faint."

Now if these five religious factions could and would peacably and intelligently unite in one righteous organization and apostolic doctrine, there never could or would emanate from that town any of that distrust that now exists and taints and vitiates every branch of trade, politics, and domestic order.

It is one settled and eternal truth, that men that will not do good till they are hired to do it, will never do it after they have been hired. Let men do good, not by constraint, but willingly, of their own accord and choice. Let religious ministers do good and teach the will of God without hire, and ninety-nine out of a hundred will disappear from the ministry, and the remainder will start right and do more good than the whole ninety and nine. No system of lying and cheating, stealing and robbing, political intriguing, whoring and murdering, ever did or ever will make much progress, without pretending to have the aid and sanction of religion and religious teachers. Abel would not sanction the covitous, apostate spirit of Cain, but stood firmly up to the rack of martyrdom, and refused, immovably, to yield to the unrighteous innovation of his brother. And, consequently, God arrested, with his own hand, and tried and condemned Cain, and affixed a signal mark and punishment upon him to this day.

A pure religious system will always cleanse itself from error and corruption (or its devotees perish in the attempt) just as the chaff is separated from the wheat, and the bran from the flour. But divided religion God never owned, but always abhorred, because it creates distrust under the show of greater promises and more awful penalties than any strictly irreligious system. And the pulpits of sectarianism are so many foundaries of ever varying lies, in full blast, under the care of paid ministers, and any man that would believe them all, would believe a greater amount of lies, than any fallen angel, or fiend of darkness, was ever known to do, or could be conceived to do.

God never commissioned any ministers to go forth to teach opinions and suppositions, or any man's bare belief or mere human precepts and dogmas, and any men who do these things in His name, are regarded as false apostles, deceitful workers, bringing in damnable heresies; and these heresies waste and destroy alike church and state, trades and families, and those that propagate them, and those that hear them.

Again, what was true of the inhabitants of Palestine in the first century, is equally true of the Christian generation in the nineteenth century. It is an adulterous generation. Adulterous not only in regard to sexual intercourse, but also in regard to every other intercourse. Which of the liquors is not adulterated? Examine the brandy, gin, rum, whisky, wine, and ale. The adulterations in each of these articles are proverbially poisonous and abominable. Examine the milk and oil offered for sale in the cities; where can you buy the pure article? How many articles of merchandise are cheats and adulterations? Cotton fabrics are sold for linen, and at other times for worsted and silk. Shoes are sold with wooden inner soles. The medical humbuggery, filling newspaper columns, is scarcely behind pious frauds. Specifics. curatives, and nostrums have long since failed to excite public confidence. Currency and jewelry are continually scrutinised with suspicion. False teeth, false colored hair, painted and floured cheeks, and other imitations too numerous to mention, constitute this generation an adulterated age. The general inquiry now is, Where can we find that which is genuine and no cheat? Deception and fraud are so universally practiced by all persons and in all kinds of business, that the most vigilant, wary, and cautious rarely pass long undeceived.

Now at the same rate with which confidence has declined during the last twenty-five years, another half century will not have elapsed, before a hopeless bankruptcy will have spread over the whole face of society. Despair will then hold in death-like sullenness every movement of the people, save it be in acts of violence and crime and blood-guiltiness. The very land will cease to feel the hand of industry under the tillage of the husbandman. No man will buy merchandise to be used any longer in trade. Ships will cease to be freighted with articles of commerce. Safety will no longer be found on the wake of the railway track, nor in contiguity with the steamboat engine. Might will then constitute the supreme and sovereign law of right. The usual and general offices of humanity will be utterly abandoned, and the principles of love and brotherhood, which have been so generally kicked and scouted out of every public profession, and every public office, and out of all trades and commercial transactions, and out of all religious fellowship, will scarcely be discoverable only in the past. And instead of meeting in every man a brother and a friend, they will meet an adversary and deadly foe. And, as a natural result, blood-shedding, famine, and the awful pestilence will stalk through the land, like so many hungry wolves, howling and leaping for their prey.

Mark well this great truth, that when well grounded confidence leaves any nation, then the redeeming vitality of that nation is gone, and its death throes and mortal agonies must certainly follow.

The spirit of Jehovah constitutes the grand element of well grounded confidence. That spirit has been withdrawing from the nation just in proportion to its want of confidence, and whenever it ceases to strive to maintain its dominion in the hearts of the people of this nation, then, even just then, such despair and commotion, and such surges of crime and cruelty will follow, as no tongue ever told, or human heart ever conceived. And he whose spirit is banished from the land by this national sin, will visit the nation according to their desolating offence.

In the long repeated acts of violating confidence, the whole nation has sinned against God. Both nature and conscience teach all men that no one man should violate his obligation to his fellow-man. He should not create a palpable cause of distrust. The law of God forbids such a thing. The spirit of God dictates a course of right actions between man and man. And it is by a repeated and general transgression of these dictates that this whole nation has sinned.

The three professions which Christ anciently condemned distinctively, he now condemns with the same marked distinction. These three are priests, lawyers, and doctors. These three constitute the moral, political, and sanatory head of all society. When these violate confidence, the poison of distrust runs down to the remote extremities of all society. None but a God, or he who has the spirit of a God, dare attack such a formidable host as these three combined professions present. Their influence has crimsoned the earth with the blood of martyrs, and sent up a fearful wail to the heavens for vengeance. This nation has bowed down to their influence for the last twenty-five years, until confidence is now a stranger in this land, whose visits are "few and far between."

If it has been a transient visitor at the halls of the Legislature, it has been often rejected. And no man who will maintain the only principles upon which confidence can be secured to a faithful legislator, can now gain an election to Congress. If it goes to the medical doctors, with a simple prescription of holy oil and imposition of holy hands, it produces a sudden shock in the bosom of medical rulers, like that felt by the Assyrian leper, when he discovered that a prophet's prescription was "no great thing."

If it goes to the clerical alumni, it is scouted as a needless obtruder, and the institutions of the most venerable patriarchs are scandalised as the relics of a dark age, and the prophetic gifts of the only spirit which can secure confidence, and saving intelligence, are despised.

And from these dastardly and bitter repulses in the reigning professions of society, confidence has become an outcast and uncalled-for vagabond in the common and lower grades of society. It has now no certain dwelling place, or reliable point of rendezvous.

The primary cause of this wide spread and desolating distrust, has proceeded from an original distrust of God, through the cunning of wicked men and the devil. From this first step of unbelief in a being who is perfectly reliable, all confidence between man and man has been shaken. From losing faith in God, they have proceeded to lose faith in each other, and also in themselves.

Now the result of destroying confidence, is the increasing prevalence of lies, thefts, frauds, robberies, murders, and wars. And the public journals of this nation are, most emphatically, journals of crimes of various magnitudes, and the commotions and miseries of the people.

The spirit of integrity and truth has, so far, forsaken the land, God has measurably withdrawn his spirit, in consequence of its being so universally rejected and trampled under foot. Therefore, his wrath has already begun to kindle against the people. It has even already burst forth, judicially, in the vivid lightning, and in the thunder, rivalling the earthquake, also in tempests and hail-storms, and in the frightful collision of the most angry elements.

The measure of confidence which exists in a popular Republican Government, constitutes the guage by which you estimate the true force of law in that government. When you tell me the amount of confidence exercised in any popular government, then I am thereby prepared to tell you how much force and reliable efficiency the legislative acts and laws will have in that same government.

Just as fast as confidence leaves the people, so fast and so far will the laws of the land fail to be executed. And if, through pique or malice, some undertake to execute the statute law, they are liable to be met by an overwhelming popular force, making a frightful show of vengeance against the executioners of law.

The popular will is the sovereign will. Yet the sovereign will of the people has almost ceased to operate through the channels of statute law. And why? Simply because those channels of statute law have become so corrupted that they are not reliable. Legislators have partially betrayed the popular confidence in their enactments, and lawyers, under exorbitant fees, have stretched the narrow and scant covering to such opposite sides and ends of the bedstead, as to leave equity so fleeced and destitute of its due, as to enrage the popular feeling against statutory means of justice. Consequently, the popular will has turned into a spunky rebel, who impudently measures his right by the Ishmaelitish rule of might.

But how is the popular will to be regulated and made wholesome and safe? Not, surely, by hirelings and demagogues, who have both fattened and rioted upon the hard earnings of the credulous and confiding? No, never. If confidence is ever to be restored, and the popular will is ever to become the conservitor of the people's rights, it will never be done by paid demagogues and hirelings—it will never be done by the present generation of priests, lawyers, and doctors. Never.

These professions have swelled to the size of dropsical bulk under their hireling intrigues and treacherous surfeitings. These professions savor of the nauseous stench of filthy rags—even the doubles that catch the draft that proceeds from the most perturbed bowels; such bowels as their own misconduct have, for a long time, sickened, deranged, and purged, till the whole atmosphere is tainted with the malaria. The putrid carcasses of the dead, and the effluvia of the charnel house, might as well be looked to, to breed sanatory laws for the people, as for any one of these three professions to be made a rational hope of redeeming long lost confidence.

Will any one for a moment turn a lingering glance towards pulpitdom, for a hope of the restoration of confidence? Vain hope! Fifteen centuries of the same old clack and ding-dong of pulpitdom is all sufficient to exhaust the patience of Heaven, with its fruitless efforts to obtain either unity or confidence.

In the mean time, in the per-view of its operations, millions of the human family have bathed their mother earth in tears and blood. Human precepts and dogmas, in the place of commandments directly revealed from the heavens, have disappointed the credulity of many ages, and tantalised the precious hopes of humanity, until the general wail of sixty centuries has filled the atmosphere of our globe to the height of the third heavens, and penetrated the ear of the God of all Gods.

The wide-spread wreck of humanity under the beacon lure of false religions, has moved the heart of Jehovah to turn a pitiful eye over the angry sea of earth's sufferings, and stay the crimson tide of delusion. The long promised angel of his presence has struck the death nell of Babylon, and priestcraft is doomed, and ere long, graven images will fall, and not a wizard will peep, or a "familiar spirit" respond in treasonable whisper.

Priestcraft has long scalped the brain of intellect, in order to inflict more fatal punctures and fractures, and poisoned the heart of innocence with tears and turpitude, and a mystic spell, until its own offsprings have been born giant skeptics and parricides. And now the unnatural parent, like the murderous Joab of old, must perish even between the porch and the alter.

"The spirit of deep sleep" that is poured in righteous retribution upon the priestcraft of the age, is beginning to be revealed in the suicidal blood that flows religiously in the awful Crimea. The sword, and kindred judgments, may cause the nations to feel, when the proclamations of a Prophet's voice for a quarter of a century has failed to do it.

Again, neither can lawyers restore popular confidence. It is beyond their ability now to do it. Lawyers, from the lowest to the highest grades of eminence, have done that which none but devils and angels, to the devil incarnate, would ever have attempted to do. For fee and reward, they have defended criminals of the blackest die in their soul-damning crimes, and then boasted of their triumph and their shame.

Neither can the doctors restore confidence. While some have gloried in the pestilence and in the plague, as so many panderers to their avaricious lusts, others have been mowed down by epidemic diseases, like the famous conjurors before the seven sons of Sceva.

And now that which renders the restoration of confidence desperate, beyond the reach of angelic faith, even, is, that not only the leading professions are corrupt, but the spirit of deep sleep is poured upon the great mass of the people, so that their hearts are also waxed gross, and their eyes are closed, and their ears hear not, lest they should be converted, and God, by the truth, should heal them.

A priest that is not galvanised, or steeped in the principles and practices of hirelings, is regarded as no priest in any way fitted to the wants of the age in which we live.

The things which are the greatest abominations in the sight of God, are esteemed as things of the greatest worth by the people, and the reverse. What the priests are, the people have become assimilated to. Both priests and people are drunk; but not with wine or strong drink, but they are intoxicated with the dregs of iniquity. They are caught in every net. They lie snared at the head of every street. Every department of business has its fallen victims. Even the strong men and mighty are dead drunk and weak as the feeblest.

Will the people receive priests that go forth without purse or scrip? No, they prefer such men as preach for "hire and divine for money"—such as "feed themselves and not the flock."

Are the people ready and willing to receive new revelations from God, even as all other holy men and women have done before them? No. Unlike all other righteous men and woman in all past ages, they refuse, with scorn, the word of God and the ministry of angels now, prefering the old prostitute, to the new and unpolluted virgin. Who does not know that the old Scriptures have been prostituted to every corrupt and abominable spiritual lust. Any body in these days may claim affinity with the Bible. It requires no courtship or marriage ceremony, only to believe what you have a mind to, and practice to your liking under some spiritual name. Any body may now turn down the nuptial sheets and jump in. Even Campbell, Jackson, Davis, and Robert Owen, or Fanny Wright, Ann Lee, and Ecce Homes—even young girls, without baptism or the Holy Ghost, are inducted into great mysteries long side the table leg (and other legs) through the principles of free loveism. The old prostitute is not only a common street walker, lying down under every tree, but she hires lovers. Politicians hire voters, and the priests hire and coerce hearers, and the people say, Amen.

To be Continued.

EXTRAORDINARY OCCURRENCE.

Considerable sensation has been caused in the towns of Topsham, Lympstone, Exmouth, Teignmouth and Dawlish, in the south of Deven, in consequence of the discovery of a vast number of foot-tracks of a most strange and mysterious description. The superstitious go so far as to believe that they are the marks of Satan himself; and that great excitement has been produced among all classes may be judged from the fact that the subject has been descanted on from the pulpit. It appears that, on Thursday night last, there was a heavy fall of snow in the neighborhood of Exeter and the south of Devon. On the following morning the inhabitants of the above towns were surprised at discovering the foot-marks of some strange and mysterious animal endowed with the powers of ubiquity, as the foot prints were to be seen in all kinds of unaccountable places—on the tops of houses and narrow walls, in gardens and court yards, enclosed by high walls and palings, as well as in open fields. There was hardly a garden in Lympstone where these foot-prints were not observable. The track appeared more like that of a biped than of a quadruped, and the steps were generally eight inches in advance of each other.—The impression of the foot closely resembled that of a donkey's shoe, and measured from an inch and a half to (in some instances) two and a half inches across. Here and there it appeared as if cloven; but, in the generality of the steps, the shoe was continuous, and from the snow in the centre remaining entire, merely showing the outer crest of the foot, it must have been convex. The creature seems to have approached the doors of several houses, and then to have retreated, but no one has been able to discover the standing or resting point of this mysterious visitor. At present it remains a mystery, and many superstitious people in the above towns are actually afraid to go outside their doors at night.—[English paper.

A Fable for Strong-Minded Women.

BY HORACE GREELY.

A vine was growing beside a thrifty oak, and had reached that height at which it required support.

"Oak," said the vine, "bend your trunk so that you may be support to me."

"My support," replied the oak, is naturally yours, and you may depend on my strength to bear you up, but I am too large and too solid to bend. Put your arms around me, my pretty vine, and I will manfully support and cherish you, if you have an ambition to climb as high as the clouds. While I thus hold you up, you will ornament my rough trunk with your pretty green leaves and shining scarlet berries. They will be as frontlets to my head, and I shall stand in the forest like a glorious warrior, with all his plumes. We were made by the master of life to grow together, that by our union the weak may be made strong, and the strong render aid to the weak."

"But I wish to grow independently," said the vine, "why cannot you twine around me, and let me grow up straight, and not be a mere dependant upon you?"

"Nature," answered the oak, "did not design it. It is impossible that you should grow to any height alone; and if you try it, the winds and rain, if not your own weight, will bring you to the ground.—Neither is it proper for you to run your arms hither and thither among the trees. The trees will begin to say it is not my vine—it is a stranger—get thee gone; I will not cherish thee. By this time thou wilt be so entangled among the different branches that thou canst not get back to the oak; and nobody will then admire thee or pity thee."

"Ah, me; said the vine, "let me escape from such a destiny;" and with this she twined herself around the oak, and they both grew and flourished happily together.

The following extract from the speech of the Czar, Alexander II, to the Corps Diplomatique will show that he possesses a little of the same grit of his honored sire, and will not be trifled with.

"I solemnly declare here before you, gentlemen, that I remain faithful to all the sentiments of my father, and that I will persevere in the line of political principles which served as a rule to my uncle, the Emperor Alexander, and to my father. These principles are those of the holy alliance. If that alliance no longer exists, it was not my father's fault. His intentions were always upright and loyal, and, if recently they were misunderstood by some persons. I do not doubt that God and history will do him justice.

"I am ready to contribute towards a good understanding, on the conditions which he accepted. Like him, I desire peace, and wish to see the evils of war terminated; but if the conferences which are about to open at Vienna do not lead to a result honorable for us, then, gentlemen, at the head of my faithful Russia, I will combat, with the whole nation, and will perish sooner than yield.

"I solemnly declare that I will not give up the first inch of Russian territory to our enemies! I will take good care to prevent their penetrating any further on the soil of our country, and never!—never!—may my hand wither first!—will I affix any signature to a treaty which shall bring the slightest dishonor on the national honor.

"This speech was responded to with vehement applause.

SPIRITUAL SPINNING.

P. B. Randolph, a traveling lecturer on Spiritualism, relates, among other curious phenomena, the following. The young lady seems to be a sort of human silk worm, though the substance, which has "a kind of steelish look," may be yarn:

"In the same place is a Miss W., in whose presence there occurs a phenomenon that throws the performances at the "Miracle Circles" in Ohio and New York entirely in the shade. It is nothing less than the creation of matter. For the spirits will spin from her finger ends what looks like fine steel wire, perfectly visible and palpable, for it can be handled. This substance is about as fine as horse hair generally, and has a kind of steelish look. It is soft to the touch like velvet, and when held in the flame of a candle, it turns and twists as if it felt the flame. Some of it was placed in a book and kept several hours, but finally exhaled. I do not feel competent to account for this startling phenomena: It is one of those facts which are extremely valuable, as it may furnish the key to that vast problem, the formation of the universe. I trust some who are competent, will go to Earville, and investigate the subject."—[Mor. Herald.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,
SATURDAY, APRIL 21, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer, address box 488.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor, 102 Nassau st., cor. of Ann.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folsom, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquakota, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.
Wm. Cazier, Nephi City.

The present Religious Movement concerning Sectarianism and the Bible.

There is a restless spirit of anxiety in this nation, and indeed throughout the world, to establish some system of social and religious government, adapted to the wants of mankind. Catholicism has tried its hand for many centuries, but has miserably failed. Protestantism has met with no better success; Socialism has assayed its skill in a hundred forms, but with the same result. Christian sects have had their peace societies, Evangelical alliances and a thousand other elaborately concocted schemes, which have all alike proved abortive. Mormonism at length stepped into the arena, and has taken a stand and position, that commands the attention and admiration of the whole world. Sectarianism that has clothed itself with purple and scarlet and fine linen, that has vaunted itself as heaven-born and eternal, is now found to be spurious, corrupt and infirm, and is threattened with an inglorious grave, as a just reward for its presumption and folly.

We learn from the public journals, that a conference has been held lately at Oswego, N. Y., which continued several days; The object was to adopt measures to break up all old religious denominations and organizations, and build up a new system of their own to take the place of every other. They hold that all Sectarianism is wrong, and that there should be but one universal Church.

The Revd. Mr. McQuae at the conference of the Bible Revision Association held at the Mercantile Library Hall last week, remarked, that the revision movement, had been called a disorganizing movement. He believed it was, and he was in favor of disorganizing everything except Christianity.

A few years ago, if a man had dared to speak against King James' translation of the Bible, or derogatory in any way to orthodox Christian societies, he would have been denounced as a blasphemer, and branded as a heretic; but now strange to say, we have duly organized Christian societies. One to revolutionise the Bible, and present the world with a faithful translation. Another is engaged to break up all old religious denominations and organizations.

The age we live in is said to be an age of progress; but what progress has modern Christianity made during the last few hundred years? Its course has been one continued backward motion, so much so, that it is now considered necessary to break up everything it has ever accomplished.

Dr. Hopson, a member of the Bible Revision Society, remarked in justification of the revision movment, said that the Scriptures were not faithfully translated; some statements were historically false, and as by it all men were to be finally judged, it was imperitive that we should have a plain and perfect translation.

We do not wish to discourage the Association in its undertaking, but we can tell the learned members that they will never make a faithful and perfect translation if they labor at till doom's day. When they have corrected the two thousand errors it is said to contain, it will still be as uncertain as an exclusive rule of faith and practice as it is now. Its parables will still remain as ambiguous—its miracles as incredible—its peculiar institutions as repugnant, and its doctrines and general principles as objectionable to the wicked and unbelieving as they are now.

There are several good and substantial reasons why the translators can never make a correct and perfect translation. In the first place they have not a correct and perfect copy of the original to translate from. In the second place they have not sufficient wisdom and understanding to give a perfect translation, even though they had a correct copy of the original; and unless it be given by inspiration of the Holy Ghost, by which the Prophets wrote and spoke, a perfect translation never can be obtained so long as the world stands.

But are there not original copies of the Hebrew and Greek, in which the Old and New Testaments were written? says one. We answer, there are those copies that are called original, but they are numerous and diversified, as are the Latin, Greek and English translations of those several copies; and the original Hebrew or Greek manuscript, or even original copies of them can nowhere be found. The Jews through whom the Bible directly came, witheld many portions of the Old Testament writings, which related to the coming of the Messiah. The Catholic Church struck out many of the most plain and important portions of the New Testament. King James' translaters, in order to please their lord and master, and foster antiquated customs and traditions, and gratify the unprincipled spirit of the age, gave to some portions an unwarrantable rendering, and in some cases no rendering at all, so that the Greek words have been left in the English Bible unto this day untranslated, as so many evidences of the iron bound spirit of both King and Priests, who were engaged in this celebrated translation.

Dr. B. F. Edwards, another distinguished member of the Bible Revision Association, at the last session of the conference held in this city, remarked, they had undertaken a Bible revision, in order to secure a faithful translation of the word of God, and it became them, when they should know what the word of God was, to embrace it and follow its teachings, regardless of prejudice, bigotry, or opposition. If it taught them that baptizo should be rendered sprinkle, to be sprinklers; and if it taught them, Mormonism, to be Mormons. If truth made them free, they would be free indeed, and if, when they had their translation perfected, they were not disposed to be governed by it, then it would be of no avail to them whatever.

If a faithful translation teaches Mormonism, the Dr. is bound to embrace it, or violate his resolution and engagement; and if it does not favor and substantiate Mormonism, in every ordinance, doctrine, and principle, we will engage to renounce and abandon it forever, in favor of that doctrine or system it does establish. But if it teachers faith in living Prophets and Apostles, we will believe in it, and when we find Prophets and Apostles sent of God, we will believe in them. If it teaches baptism for remissions of sins, we will be baptised and have our sins remitted. If it teaches the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, when we meet with a man invested with the power to administer holy ordinances, we will receive the imposition of hands, and the gift of the Holy Ghost. If it teaches the morality and purity of the principle of polygamy when legally proctised, we will receive it as an article of our faith, and will sustain its righteous character though all the prejudice, bigotry and opposition in the world be arrayed against us. If it teaches that Abraham, although a polygamist, was a righteous and honorable man, a friend of God, and the father of the faithful, we will not object to follow in his footsteps, nor refuse to participate in his blessings and be numbered among his children, particularly as 'tis said, through Abraham and his seed, shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; and because we may have but one wife, we shall not be so presumptous and foolish to consider ourselves on that account, more righteous and honorable than the old Patriarchs or modern Prophets.

We think it possible that the Lord may be as well pleased with Abraham, Jacob, Joseph, Brigham and other Prophets and Patriarchs of former and latter days who may have several wives, as he is with the Pope, Bishops and Priests of the Romish church who acknowledge none, or of Sectarian Christians who profess to have but one, particularly as under the rule and dominion of the former prostitution is fostered and licensed, and under the latter winked at, and almost universally practised.

It is one thing to have a Bible, and another to be governed by its spirit, said the Revd. J. T. Creath at the late Conference. It may be remarked, that the Christian mobs of Missouri and Illinois had the Bible, which they hugged to their bosoms, as a much loved and fondly cherished object; yet they illegally drove, and inhumanly murdered many of their fellow citizens; if they had been governed by the spirit of the Bible, they would have joyfully received the Prophets, and would not, as they have, basely murdered them.

The spirit of the Bible is the spirit of prophecy and revelation, it will teach man to love God with all his heart and neighbor as himself, when we speak of the spirit of the Bible we mean the spirit that dwelt in the hearts of those whose actions and history that book records. The Bible itself has no more spirit about it than any other book, for like other books the paper is made of rags, and its contents are printed with ink and type, and there is no spirit about it whatever, but that which is imparted by those who handle it. When the Methodists deal with it, it is accompanied by a stream of hell-fire and a shower of flaming brimstone; when dispensed by the Quakers a spirit of taciturnity is communicated, and every sect and denomination the peculiar spirit that governs them. But when the Latter-day Saints handle it, the old Prophets and Apostles seem to live again before us, Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons stand among us, ancient ordinances, doctrines, principles and institutions are again restored to us, and a complete organization of the kingdom of God is presented to us.

Is it the Bible that does all this? by no means. It is the spirit of the living God, by which the word becomes quick and powerful, sharper than a two edged sword, without that spirit all the Bibles in the world would profit us nothing. It may be translated a thousand times and still be powerless and insufficient to save one soul in the kingdom of God.—There is no power in earth nor in heaven that can quicken the law of God and render it effectual in saving mankind, but the holy and eternal priesthood, which has been held by the Prophets and Ministers of our God in every dispensation, which is now held by Brigham and other good and faithful men, who will wield its influence and power until all things that can be shaken shall be shaken, that, that which cannot be shaken may remain.

Saturday evening last, an original scene was presented in the play of Richard III, at the Varieties Theatre, which may be considered characteristic of its cognomen.

Mr. Buchanan was acting in the character of Richard. He meets young Richmond in combat, who according to Shakspeare, should be the conquerer. But Richard showered such real earnest and well-directed blows on the arms of poor Richmond, one cut on the arm was so severe that he threw his sword and glove at Richards feet, and walked off the stage. He considered doubtless the last fell stroke, "the unkindest cut of all."

The stage manager afterwards appeared, made an apology for the occurrence of the evening, observing that, "although Tragedy had been transfered into Comedy, to the acters belonged the Comedy, but to him the Tragedy."

Richard the conquerer, next appeared and said; "I have been on the stage six years—I have never struck a man before in my life, on the stage. I trust the audience will uphold me."

Poor Richmond finally made his appearance and said: "I thought I fenced according to the rehersal; but I received a severe blow on the arm from Richard's sword, so I left the stage," the actors exit—the curtain drops and the audience disappears well satisfied with the evenings diversion.

St. Louis can hereafter boast of an original scene in Richard.

We have received a letter from Elder Richard Ballantyne announcing his safe arrival at Atchison with the company of Perpetual Emigrating Fund passengers under his charge, all in health and excellent spirits. Elder Ballantyne speaks in the highest terms of the Steamer "Golden Gate" and her officers, and of the kind treatment which he and his company received from all on board, presenting as it did a striking contrast to the mean and dastardly treatment which they had experienced from the officers and crew of the "Michigan," during their passage up the Mississippi.

The "Golden State" returned to this place on Monday, and on Thursday a company of about fifty saints took passage on board of her, part of whom are bound for Salt Lake and others intend waiting in Kansas Territory, among the former are Elders Gregory and Wright, who are returning from their missions in the Eastern States. President Milo Andrus and Hon. James McGaw are among her passengers. They go up to procure teams and outfits, and to council and aid our emigration generally in their preparation for the plains.

"Two young ladies have fallen in love with one young man in Petersburg, Va., and threatened to settle the difficulty with pistols.

"There is strong temptation to that young man to join the Mormons, and marry both of these spunky girls. Thus may he, honorably and amicably adjust a serious difficulty, which promises fatal results to one of two very spirited women, who love not wisely but too well.—[Morning Herald.

The Clever Editor could no doubt if he chose show many other cases wherein difficulties might be "amicably and honorably" settled by the liberal and common sense regulations of Utah. But it must be remembered that in all cases the preliminary requisition, necessary to the proper adjustment of such difficulties, is baptism for the remission of sins; and about twelve months probation, to see if the candidate is worthy of one wife; and if he should have a Laban to deal with, he might be required to serve fourteen years for the second.

Arrival of the Salt Lake Mail.

We feel happy in presenting the following items from the Republican, received by telegraph from Independance.

The news is not of importance, says the dispatch—Brigham Young is Governor still, as much as to say, that item might be expected, from the fact, that he will remain Governor, as long as the Lord wants him to hold that office.

The Republican caption is capital—we mean, in capitals.

UTAH TERRITORY.

BRIGHAM YOUNG STILL GOVERNOR.

The balance is as follows:

INDEPENDENCE, April 16.—The Salt Lake Mail arrived at six o'clock, P. M., yesterday.

The news is not of importance.

Brigham Young still continued to act as Governor of the Territory.

The snow was very deep on the mountains.

The party met with no detention or molestation from the Indians. They seemed disposed to be peaceable, have returned the stock which they had stolen, and are anxious to make amends for past transgressions.

The periodical despatches from the east, and west, that, Sebastopol is not taken, and Governor Young is still Governor, we think might be safely stereotyped, and published a few days in advance of the Mails. As this is a fast age, our suggestion if acted upon, would undoubtedly be appreciated.

Correspondence.

FOR THE LUMINARY.

Utah—Who shall be her Governor?—Shall she be admitted into the Union?

Much, very much, may depend upon the descision of these questions! The appointment of her Governor will show the dominant bias of the Executive, towards admitting Utah into the Union. It is said that the President has been perplexed to know whom to appoint over Utah. Col. Steptoe, said to be very much of a gentleman, a soldier and a Christian, after near six months residence in Utah, wavers and hesitates concerning the acceptance of such a post. This dubity of choice, is the last that can be expected of him.

Those, who have known the inhabitants of Utah best—who have witnessed their union, their patrition, their loyalty, and ardent devotion to Governor Young, have supposed that six months residence in that Territory, would have banished the last vestige of prejudice from the mind of Col. Steptoe; and he would have said, as he has said in a handsome petition to the President—Brigham Young is the man to be Governor of Utah. The first impression of Col. Steptoe, thoroughly fortified by so long and intimate acquaintance with Brigham Young and the citizens of Utah, is the best impression which he will ever have, even though he should take months longer to consider of it. Brigham Young is the man, so says Judge Kinney, his associates, and the merchants of Utah; and so would say Moses and the Prophets, if allowed to speak in the matter. Shall the paltry salary of $1800 per annum, with an Indian agency of $1000 more, bribe one that is a gentleman and a Christian, to accept the appointment himself, after he has recomended another as the most suitable man? The sequel must determine.

If he does accept now, the public may justly suspect him of selfishness or hypocrisy, or of both. The people of Utah, too, will look with a jealous eye upon such an incumbant, who obtrudes himself over a people where he is not wanted. The Colonel knows well who the people of Utah want for Governor. There are no two sides in Utah. It's the hallowed abode of e pluribus unum. The fair and loftly eagle is there undisturbed in her mountain home. And the Colonel knows it, the U. S. Judges know it, and President Pierce would know it if he went there too. If honest men go there strangers to it, and overloaded with prejudice, they are disbanded of their ignorance and their prejudice at once.

An ancient King once sent men to Ramah with embittered feelings of hostility against David, but the messenger was seized with the spirit of good will and prophesied good to David, instead of evil; a second set of messengers did the same, and also a third. Then the King in his perplexity, resolved to go himself, which being done, he himself was carried away with the same spirit. Thence the exclamation, is Saul also among the Prophets? President Pierce himself, if he loves his country and its most devoted citizens, would upon minute acquaintance speak well of Utah, as Judges Kinney, Reid, and Col. Steptoe have done before him. No honest man could help it. The people of Utah posses an ardent temperament, and an unwasting amount of diligence. They believe that this whole continent has a more ample destiny and glory than most persons suppose. They believe that Columbus was inspired of God to find this continent, and the framers of the Constitution were equally inspired. Their devotion to the Constitution and the liberty and independence of this great country, cannot be surpassed by any people. Then let Utah have a Governor, such as her own people shall choose, sustained by the President. Do not imitate the conduct of King George III, who repeatedly imposed upon the young colonies, Governors, who neither had the spirit nor interests of the colonies at heart. A few lion hearted men both in the Parliament and in the colonies, remonstrated against such appointments, but in vain till alienation ensued. Let the virgin patriotism and loyalty of Utah, be cherished as a mountain gem, of rare discovery and excellence, and in the day of her country's necessities, she will come up to her help, like a young lion from the overflowing of Jordon.—Let Utah into the confederation as soon as the amount of her population will justify; let her delegates sit side by side with the delegates of other States, and wherever the inferiority lies, the light will show when they are brought into contact and comparison with each other; and the State that exhibits the greatest thrift, union and progress, will tell what tree bears good fruit.

* *

CINCINNATI, March 30, 1855.

From the Millennial Star.

EAST INDIA MISSION.

Voyage from Calcutta to Rangoon, Singapore, St. Helena, and Liverpool—The Burmese—Labors among them.

Liverpool, March 3, 1855.

To President F. D. Richards:

Beloved Brother—In obedience to the dictates of the Spirit of truth, and the counsel of the authorities, I am speeding my way to Zion, (after an absence from this land of nearly four years,) where I hope shortly to arrive, and know for myself those privileges and blessings which the Saints are permitted to enjoy in the bosom of the Church, and which are realized by all the faithful, but which cannot be described through the imperfect medium of speech.

As it has not been my privilege to forward you any communications for some months past, owing to my travelling engagements, it may not be out of place to furnish you with some items connected with my movements since leaving the first scene of my labors in the Bengal Presidency, from whence I took my departure for Rangoon in Burmah in March 1854. My kind brethren who had been spreading the work in Burmah, sent me several pressing invitations to labor among them for a time, which induced President Jones to acquiesce, although he had made arrangements in part for my immediate return to the Valley. I staid during a period of six months, and had the pleasure of seeing nearly twenty added to the Church. I opened a school, the fees of which, added to the blessings of the brethren, enabled me to reach Liverpool, where I arrived on the 1st instant, all well, on board the barque Gazelle, Captain George Leslie, who behaved with much kindness, and permitted me to testify, and distribute the Word, among the crew during the voyage of four-and-a-half months from Singapore.

But it may not be amiss to relate some of the intermediate circumstances which occurred. From Rangoon, on the Irrawaddy, the late scene of the war, I took ship for Palo Penang, or Prince of Wales' Island, situated in the Straits of Malacca; the land of nutmegs, mace, sugar, and "eternal verdure," as brother Parley would say; where I staid four days, during which time I had the pleasure of bearing my testimony and distributing tracts among a few inquirers, who stated their determination to send for the works of the Church and "sifi Mormonism to the bottom."

The American Consul tried to get me a passage to America on board the Plymouth, U. S. frigate, lying in the roads, but the captain refused, giving, as his reason, that it was contrary to the regulations; although I offered to become useful in proportion to my capability. After repeated and ineffectual attempts to obtain a passage direct for California, or the eastern ports of America, a providential and gratuitous offer was made me by a ship-master to take me to Singapore, where, he stated, I should be able to get a passage to England or America; but I discovered, when on board, and sails set, that he had offered me the passage that I might assist him and his crew in defending them from the piratical Malays, who infest the Straits of Malacca. This did not deter me from continuing the voyage, as I felt more confidence in things connected with the "effectual fervent prayer," than in the bright and bristling display of small arms and small cannon with which he was furnished. All ended harmlessly! Arrived at Singapore, after six days' delightful sailing, surrounded by the most enchanting scenery among the thousands of beautiful islands, I had the pleasure to meet with Elder Ludington, who was laboring at Singapore, and who introduced me to several of his acquaintances, to whom I had the pleasure of bearing my testimony.

The captain of the Gazelle, on the passage to Liverpool, kindly took me on shore at the island of St. Helena, where he introduced me to several of the leading merchants, &c., with whom I left the Book of Mormon, Voice of Warning, Joseph Smith the Prophet, and five pamphlets. A young gentleman, with my consent, sent the bellman round to announce an address to be delivered by me in the main street, where about four or five hundred of all ages and complexions assembled to hear me read the Testimonies of the Witnesses, and direct them regarding the way to gain an entrance into the kingdom of God. They stood for upwards of an hour, listening with respect and attention, and I afterwards gave replies to questions on emigration, organization, and doctrine. During the time I was speaking, under the influence of a vertical sun, a kind young gentleman came forward with a glass of pure water, and presented it to me. I felt to ask for a thousand blessings upon his head, to which I believe all the Saints will heartily respond their loud amen. From the eagerness manifested by several to obtain the printed word, and the remark which escaped them, that they had heard of "Mormonism" only through the medium of the public prints, which being, as they admitted, of a conflicting and uncharitable character, they were glad of the opportunity of discovering the merits or demerits of "Mormonism" from our own statements. I am in hopes some of my audience will be corresponding with the Office in Liverpool, for they seemed anxious to get the Star.

During my residence in the East, it was my pleasing lot to visit upwards of twenty places, in all of which, many Europeans and Eurasians received me with much kindness, fed, clothed, and blessed me with means for travelling through that wide-extended and broiling climate, chiefly out of kindness to a countryman, partly out of curiosity, and but slightly out of love for the truth, for which, at present, there seems to be very little space. No less than nine different newspapers contained articles, philippies, and letters, pro and con; so that it may be reasonably concluded, that nearly all the Europeans and also the educated natives have been fully apprised of "Mormonism."

In Burmah, the natives follow the patriarchal order of plurality, and until they were corrupted by Christians, licentiousness was almost unknown among the female sex. Any violation of social sanctity is followed by condign punishment of the offender, by the injured husband, who, in one instance during my stay, sent an adulterer to his long account, by despatching him with a daah, a huge kind of razor, which is used for miscellaneous purposes in the arts and in war. The Burmese are a jocular, sociable kind of people, but live in a primitive sort of style, although weaving and some few simple and ornamental arts are in vogue. Every woman, nearly, can weave cloth; their plaids are very good, and strongly resemble the Scottish ones. They are a people unfettered by caste; freely eating with Europeans and others, but not at all choice whether it happen to be animal or vegetable, decomposed or otherwise; in short, they have starved out the jackals (which swarm in India) but I believe there are none in Burmah.

The Burmese are particularly fond of children, and quite worship those of Europeans, exclaiming with great emotion when they see them—"tay slaarra," (very handsome). The priests, or poongees, profess celibacy, refuse money, wear flowing yellow garments, and always keep their heads and faces shaved. They are held in great veneration during their life time, and when dead, lie in state, and are kept above ground in honey for sometimes a whole year, the length of time they keep them unburied being in proportion to the estimation in which they are held. They act in the capacity of teachers to the male population, all of whom, I believe, are able to read, write, and cipher. No individual can with impunity either injure or insult a poongee, while habited in his robes; not even the king; but an anecdote is related of one of the kings, who wished to punish a poongee, and effected his object, by having a splendid new dress prepared, and the luckless wight, having denuded himself of his sacerdotal toggery, and substituted the king's present, was most unmercifully beaten by several stout fellows who were lying in ambush for that purpose.

The Burmese are very liberal, and even profuse in their offerings at their temples or pagodas; and after they have deposited them, it matters not whether they are allowed to remain, or are taken away; they have done their part, and with that are quite contented. For instance, on one occasion it is related that the king being about to erect a pagoda at Ava which should be adorned with golden images, each of which was to weigh as much as the giver, a great many came forward and deposited their images, which are said to have been placed inside the pagoda, and formed the subject of animated conversation among the British troops in Burmah, who were expecting to be sent to take Ava, (the capital), in case the king refused to reimburse John Company for the expenses of the war. Hundreds of pagodas were destroyed in Rangoon, Prome, and other places, and the bricks were used for making new roads, by the British since the late war, which was followed by a famine, when many parents sold their children for food. It may not be uninteresting to mention that many thousands of idols of gold, silver, brass, &c., were found in the solid masonry of the pagodas, and were taken away by Europeans and scattered to almost every part of civilizedom. I have two in my possession, intending them as presents to the Deseret Museum.

Among the singular practices in vogue among the people of India, is that which prevails among many of the agriculturists in the Himmaleh mountains, who, while they are at work in the field, (if small patches on the sides of the mountains may be considered to be fields,) place the heads of their young children under the trickling of water, which operates as a soporific, and it is asserted that the little creatures continue to sleep as long as the operation is carried on, and, like all mountaineers, are a very hardy and athletic race. Again, in Burmah, as soon as a child is weaned as smoking cigars is much practised, it takes to the cigar, so that it is quite general to see little ones of a year old, puffing away with the greatest zest imaginable. In India, I have frequently seen children of three years old, smoking with all the nonchalance of old folks.

It affords me much pleasure at all times to communicate to my brethren the many interesting items connected with those parts in which I have been honored to labor, and it is my intention to do so from time to time, as opportunity offers.

With the most fervent prayers for the success of the great cause of truth, in which we are unitedly engaged, I remain, most affectionately yours in the Holy Covenant, WILLIAM WILLES.

WHETEVER the wind may do in winter, it cannot be denied that in spring it 'turns over a new leaf.'

Discourse by Elder Richard Ballantyne, St. Louis, April 1, 1855.

Beloved Brethren and Sisters:—I am happy in having the privilege of meeting with you this morning to worship God, and in this opportunity of uniting my voice with my brethren in bearing testimony to the goodness of God, and of the great work now being performed among the nations of the earth.

I have a severe cold, my lungs are weak, and I don't know that I shall be able to speak so that you may all hear; but I ask the Lord that he may bless and strengthen me, and you, that you may exercise faith for me, that what I say may be sanctified to your comfort and consolation.

I feel thankful to the brethren and sisters in St. Louis, especially to President Snow and the Bishops, for the hospitality with which the brethren and sisters of my company have been entertained. I feel to rejoice in this, because it is an evidence to me that all is right in St. Louis. When I see the Saints sympathising with the poor, receiving them into their houses, it shows to me that they are in possession of true godliness, that they have the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ. To minister unto the poor and needy and show kindness to the careworn stranger is, to me, the best evidence of vital godliness that can be adduced.

I do not know what I may be led to say this morning, but I believe that whatever you desire me to say, will be said. I believe this is the privilege of the Saints. They shall have that which is meet for them in due season. I have experienced the truth of this in many instances, and know that when the Saints meet together in faith, and are united in their feelings and desires, they can receive wisdom and intelligence, and the mind and will of God concerning them; for the spirit of the Lord in them will draw forth the rich treasures of instruction that proceeds from the same spirit, for we are all baptised into the same spirit.

I have been, as you have heard, on a mission to the East Indies. I was appointed to that mission by the authorities of the Church in Great Salt Lake City, in the year 1852. I left my family and friends in the Valley, as many of my brethren who had missions appointed them elsewhere; some to China, some to Australia, some to South America, and others to different nations in Europe.

We went forth without purse or scrip, according to the will and commandment of God, who opened up our way wherever we happened to be. The Lord was always with us for our deliverance. No matter how great the difficulty, his power and arm was with us, and saved, even when it seemed impossible to do so. In this way we gained experience, and by this, we knew that the Lord was with us.

When we arrived at San Francisco, it seemed as though we could go no further. There were but few Saints in the city. Our company numbered thirty-eight, and we required a large sum of money to enable us to embark for our various fields of labor. We did not feel that the Lord had sent us thus far to be left to ourselves, neither did we feel as though he wanted us to go to the gold mines to dig up money, there. We therefore met together, and prayed to our Heavenly Father, that he would direct us, and open to us a door of deliverence. Our prayers were heard and answered, and we were directed in the course necessary to pursue, in order to obtain the means for the voyage before us. It may appear singular to some that we were led as we were; it appeared strange to ourselves, but we knew it was of the Lord. We divided the city into districts, and appointed two brethren to each district, to call upon all the people to help us with means to fulfil our missions. We did not expect the inhabitants of San Francisco would contribute much to us, still we believed that this would be the course to obtain it, for it was manifested to us that this would be the means of bringing us deliverance.

We called upon the people, we found them opposed to us, and had no symyathy whatever for us, or the people of Salt Lake City. They had no faith in us, nor in the everlasting Gospel that we bare to the nations of the earth.

When thus situated, we were comforted and relieved by the intelligence that God had touched the hearts of our brethren, that they were able and willing to contribute all we needed, for the spirit of the Lord had whispered to them, that the glory belonged to them to carry out this mission, and not to the Gentiles.

Brother Horner first brought us the news. He met with us in our little meeting, and the spirit of the Lord rested upon him, and he told us that whatever we wanted, we should have. The Saints sent word for us not to rely upon the Gentiles any more, they would supply all our wants, that they desired the honor and reward of it themselves. In a very short time we raised upwards of six thousand dollars for the missions, whereas, it seemed a few days before that it was impossible to obtain ten dollars.

I know it is a good thing to follow the dictates of the spirit of the Lord. It is good to follow the spirit of the Lord wherever it may lead you; it is especially good for the Elders of Israel; it is their only source of reliance; it points out to them the right way, and gives them instruction and joy that the world can neither give nor take away. No circumstance that may occur can particularly militate against them if they follow its dictation. No matter whether we are received or rejected—whatever comes, all is right, so that we follow the voice of the Holy Spirit.

We have thus the satisfaction of knowing that the course we take is according to the mind and will of our Heavenly Father. The sentiment of our heart should be at all times, "Not my will, but thine be done, oh, Lord!" We come not to do our own will, but the will of Him that sent us. When in this state of mind, we can rejoice as well in adverse circumstances, as in the greatest prosperity.

This, then, is the course we were led to pursue—a course that was never taken upon so systematic and large a scale before; but it had the desired effect—it wrought out for us deliverance to the glory of God.

We soon embarked for our several missions; myself and twelve others to the East Indies. We had a prosperous voyage to Calcutta. Some of the company was appointed to Siam, and the balance to Hindostan. Before we separated, we held a conference. We found the Church in a scattered, disorganised, and apostate condition. Elders Willis and Richards had been there and raised up a branch of 200 members. We had heard of their labors in Calcutta before we left our mountain home, and we expected to find a large number of Saints, but in this we were disappointed. The Church was a wreck—nearly all had apostatised and associated themselves with other people. Those who were born of English fathers and Hindoo mothers were weak in the faith. It was about the time the doctrine of Celestial Marriage, or Polygamy, was published to the world, which was, to some, a stumbling block, but, with hard labor, we were enabled to comfort the weak, instruct the ignorant, and direct their feet in the ways of life and salvation. We rebaptised some, and baptised a few others.

You may, perhaps, wonder why it was that so large a branch of the Church could get so completely disorganised in so short a time. If you understood the Hindoo character, perhaps your wonder would not be so great. The love of the truth is not in them. They have not stability of character. They have about as much regard for error as truth. They do not, in point of virtue, know the differenee between lies and truth. They would about as soon perjure themselves in evidence as tell the truth. This is the character of the people.

Their object in embracing the Gospel, was not for the love of the truth, so much as it was to secure some temporal advantage. They thought by uniting to the church, they would have help in need out of the treasury of the church—that they would be sustained and upheld. When they found they must trust in the Lord for help, they began to scatter. The other missionaries began to introduce themselves among them, and they promised them help. They promised them money, clothes, and something to eat. In this way, they led away a few to unite with other churches, but it is not for the love of truth, but with few exceptions.

There may be a few who embrace the Gospel for the love of it, but very few. They do not seem to have the root of the matter in them.

This is the reason the Church in Calcutta was disorganised, and so few Saints left. But I will proceed with my narrative.

Madras was the field of our labors, but we had the same difficulty to encounter in Calcutta that we had in San Francisco—we had no money; but the spirit of the Lord rested upon us, and said we must go. There was only one ship going to Madras for three months to come. We went to the Captain and asked him to give a passage; we told him we were servants of the Lord, and desired to go with him to Madras. He refused to take us without being paid, and required 580 rupees. We told him we had no money, and no prospects of getting any. He still refused, and we asked him again and again, but he as often refused. I went still again, and took Br. Jones with me, to see what influence he would have upon the Captain's mind, but he continued unwilling to help us; so much so, that Br. Jones went away and did not speak a word to him. We were not discourged; we wanted to go with him, and we felt that we must go with him. We went away, and raised all the money we could, which amounted to about 80 rupees. We went to the Captain, and told him we could give this, with the exception of 10 rupees, which we required for another purpose, and we would give him the credit of the Church for the other 510, and have it recorded to his honor in the archives of the Church. The spirit of the Lord then began to work upon him, and he consented to take us. He took us into his cabin, and was very kind to us, although he was a hard character at first.

I told him if he took us he should have a safe passage, so one day, as we were running down to Madras, a vessel approached within ten rods in front of us, and we appeared in emminent danger. She seemed as though she must stike us; the Captain reminded me of my promise. I told him all was right, we should be safe; and so we were, for as we neared, the vessel took a sudden turn, as though by the hand of the Lord, and cleared us by about one yard; he was surprised and humbled, for this had an effect upon his mind, and he began to enquire concerning our mission. I gave him books and instructions. The spirit of the Lord worked upon his mind by day and by night, and told him he must be baptised for the remission of sins.

He became our friend when we arrived at Madras. Before we went on shore, he gave me 50 rupees, provided a home for us there, and gave us such things as we needed.

Soon after we landed, we got printed one thousand of "The Only Way to be saved." We felt to use the means in our hands for the publication of truth. Our money was soon gone, and we began to involve ourselves in debt. One day when we had a bill to pay, we called upon the Lord; soon after, the Captain called, attended by his servant, with a box in his hand. He asked us if we did not want some money, and we told him we did, he then gave us means, which relieved us from our embarrassment.

After we had been two weeks in Madras, we went down to St. Thomas' Mound, where was a brother. The vision of the Lord rested upon me, so that I saw this man and his house, so that when we came to the place, I knew both the house and the occupant.

Soon after, when the Captain was about leaving, he gave us an order upon him for sixty rupees. He felt it was his duty to be baptized, though he is not baptised yet. He met with some little stumbling blocks in the way; but theLord used him as a means of blessing us, and I feel to bless him, and say the blessings of the Lord shall follow him for what he has done. After he was gone, we were left upon the tender mercies of the world. The brother who was there became tired of us. His wife was wearied of us. He finally denied the truth of the Gospel.

We were in the midst of a strange people, in a strange land, yet our way was not dark, for we had the light of revelation to guide us. We called upon the Lord to bless us in all things, and he guided and sustained us; yet sometimes we were in difficulties, and did not see how we could sustain ourselves, but we came out all right.

It was a sickly country, still we labored diligently. We involved ourselves in debt, sometimes more than seemed to be wisdom, but we always obtained deliverance in time of need. At one time, when we were hard set, the Lord sent us forty rupees, from a person we had never seen, which caused us to rejoice, and gave us increased assurance that the Lord would sustain us.

We did not accomplish much in that country, but we had a message from the Lord. We labored diligently to make known his will, and to bear a faithful testimony of the Gospel. We had to rest upon our own responsibility. We hired a respectable house in Madras, large enough to accommodate a good congregation. We labored for three months; the people flocked to hear us, especially those who were well educated, but they would not shoulder any responsibility.

The missionaries who are paid and sent there to convert the heathen, and to labor for their salvation, associate only with the princes of the land. Those who do the labor are natives, trained under their direction, and are called Catechists. A great number of them came to us for instruction. We taught them the Gospel, and they seemed to receive it with rejoicing. They would go to their minister and ask, "Why did not you preach this Gospel to us?" They were told, in reply, to mind their own business, or they would be put out of employment. They were afraid of this, and not having faith to rely upon the Lord, the good seed was choked up.

They still came in small companies. We preached nearly every night in the week. Whilst they sat under our instructions, the spirit of the Lord would rest down upon them, and our counsels seemed to be relished, and, for a time, our prospects appeared good and flattering, but finally each one turned to his God.

We baptised twelve amongst them; two Baptist missionaries, one still occupied in the service, and was the agent for the Tract Society, and the other was in the Government employ. We conferred the Priesthood upon them, and they are now laboring for the good of the people in that dark and benighted country.

It is hard upon a person's constitution to labor in that country; he has to rely upon the Lord continually for himself, and for the people, who have but little faith in the Gospel, when they receive it. They seem, each time they meet, to need resurrection, as it were, from the dead. He has to sustain himself and them through faith and much labor.

From the labor that was laid upon us, my constitution began to give way. For two months I could not speak, yet I felt assured God would not leave me to die in that country. The brethren there thought it would be best for me to leave, and return home, or go to England. I felt it was my duty to do so, and began to make preparations for it. But how to get the means to go to England, I did not very well know. There was no hope to be encouraged from the people who had embraced the Gospel. They were asking five hundred dollars, or one hundred pounds, for the passage; but I went to work and prepared myself; I believed the Lord would open the way for us. We went to the captain of a vessel which was bound for London. He thought he could take one or two in his cabin. I went to see the ship, which was laying out at sea about a mile. I went down into the cabin, surveyed the accommodations, and all being satisfactory, I told him I was a servant of the Lord, I had come to preach the Gospel, and now wished to return home to America, and I asked him, in the name of the Lord, to give me a passage to London, and trust in the Lord for pay.

He thought, from the way I went about it, that I had the money in my pocket, and when he learned to the contrary, he hung down his head thoughtfully and in surprise, and then said he would let me know in a few days. I returned, made ready for my departure, and in two days, a note came to me from the Captain, saying he would take me, and give me as good accommodations as his cabin would afford, and added that he could get no rest, day or night, till he wrote that letter.

The Lord will open the way for his servants if they will put their trust in him. This circumstance was the more marvellous to me, when I afterwards learned that he was a man that hated the truth, and despised our people. When I came on board, he invited me to preach, and, although I was very weak, yet I preached to them. During my remarks, he told me four or five times to stop, that he could not bear it any longer. I told him I would stop when I had finished my testimony. From that time till I arrived in London, I had no associate but him. The spirit that was in him was opposed to the spirit that was in me, still, sometimes the spirit of the Lord rested down upon him. He would not willingly yield to the spirit of God, but did all he could to resist it. The same Sabbath that he forbade me to preach, he was under the influence of the power of darkness all the day. He was a torment to all on board, though I enjoyed myself in the spirit of the Lord, and attended to my duty as usual. We had been in the habit of having our prayers together. I generally asked him to read a chapter in the Bible, and I would pray. On the evening of the day that he forbade me to preach, when we met in the cabin, he hung down his head, he had not confidence to take the Bible and read, as usual. After waiting about an hour, I said, "Captain, will you read a chapter for us." He replied, "Yes, sir." He did so, and I prayed, after which he felt better. It was a very cold night, and he said, "You have not clothes enough to keep you warm, get into my bed, and I will lay on the floor." I could not accept of such kindness, and insisted that he should occupy his own bed. He did all in his power to make me comfortable, and seemed to feel for my welfare. Sometimes he was very kind, and at other times, he was very ugly to all on board. I felt that he had no power to harm me, nor did I ever come under his evil influence. I felt that he who was with me was greater than any who was against me. I tried to do him all the good I could, and to save him if possible.

Another circumstance I will relate in regard to our voyage. I asked the captain to allow me to preach to the sailors. He told me that I had no business at that end of the ship, it was not my business to associate with the men. The powers of darkness rested upon him, he was taken sick, and was confined to his bed for a month, and when the hand of the Lord was upon him, the sailors acknowledged the power of God, and said he was sick because he would not allow me to preach to them.—While he was sick, I had ample opportunity to instruct them in the gospel, they confessed the truth of it, but all, were not willing to embrace it. Some of them said, they would obey the gospel and go up to Zion the first opportunity.

During the captain's sickness, I waited upon him and nursed him, and tried to bless him in his body if I could not in the spirit. I so far gained his confidence, that no one could do anything to please him like myself. As we approached London, I was expressing to him my gratitude and obligations, but he said, "it is I who am endebted to you, for you have been the means of saving my life; if you had not waited upon me as you did, I should have died."

I felt thankful to my Heavenly Father for this favor, for I should have felt much wounded, if I had left him with any feelings of churlishness. The Lord overruled these things in such a way, that he was placed under obligations to me.

When I went to England, I expected to stop there at least two years, but Prest. Richards appointed me to bring out this company of Saints.—They are a good people, and I recommend them to your generosity, they are a kind people, and worthy of your hospitality. With a few exceptions they have been willing to listen to counsel, they have been patient in adversity, and have not murmered nor complained. They enjoy the good Spirit of God and have been much blessed under adverse circumstances, both on the sea and on the river.—Before we left the ship, we held a Conference, and we had but two murmerers to put on our record, I was one of them, and was appointed general murmerer. I will not say who the other was, but I thought his name was entitled to a place on the record also.

Well, brethren and sisters, I pray the Lord to bless and comfort you, that you may renew your covenants and be faithful, and get a good and holy influence, such as there is among no people but the Latter-day Saints. I have never associated with a people who enjoy so much of the spirit of God as in Utah. The spirit of God is there, in an especial manner, and there is peace and unity. I bear this testimony from my knowledge of matters and things there. I would encourage you who are here, to remove from this place as soon as you can; for a more reckless hardened and bloodthirsty spirit, I have never witnssed in any country, than I have seen in New Orleans and in coming up the river. There appears a determined spirit to do violence. We could hardly prevent them from committing violence upon our brethren and sisters, the sooner you are delivered from such spirits the better. I pray God to reward you for your hospitality extended to his Saints. Amen.

The following is the report referred to in the Minutes of Conference published last week:

No. of Branch.	Name of the Branch.	Represented by.	Quo. of the Twelve.	High Priests.	Seventies.	Elders.	Priests.	Teachers.	Deacons.	Rec'd by letter.	Rem'vd by letter.	Baptised since last Conference.	Cut off.	Died.	Doubtful Standing.	Re-baptised.	Not Re-baptised.	No. of Members including Officers.
1	St. Louis	J. S. Cantwell.	1	16	13	128	85	45	21	198	11	29	12	6	101	749	325	1079
2	Alton,	H. J. Hudson.	1	6	3	46	19	8	3	25	7	16	5	4	2	163	44	261
3	Gravois,	John Yates.
4	Bluff City,	No representative
5	Fairfield,	Robt. Humphreys.
6	Bellefontaine,	John Wright.	1	6	3	49	19	9	3	25	7	16	5	7	2	163	44	261
7	Centerville, Ill.,	James Kinney.
8	Maquoketa, Io.,	J. Dalrymple.	1	3	4	4	3	1	1	3	1	3	1			3		31
9	Dry Hill,	Wm. Gittings.	1	3	4	4	3	1	1	3	1	3	1			3		31
10	Burlington, Io.,	Jno. Sprigler.	1	3	2	3	1	1	1	3	1	3	1			3		31
	TOTAL,		1	17	27	205	126	66	30	304	34	65	30	19	101	1010	331	1661
	Died of the English Emigration,	Adults,															11
	" "	Children under 8 years,															5
	" Danish	Adults,															12
	" "	Children under 8 years,															5
	Total of deaths in St. Louis, including 6 former residents,																	39
	Children blessed since last Conference, Males, 18; Females, 23;																	41.

INDEPENDENDE, MO.

LEATHER of all descriptions, for Saddlery, Harness, and Shoemaking purposes to be had at O. H. COGSWELL'S, Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

OUT-FITTING!
O. H. COGSWELL,
At his Old Stand in Independence, Mo.,

WILL have on hand at the commencement of the out-fitting season, a large and well selected stock of outfitting goods for the Plains to Great Salt Lake City, and will furnish them on reasonable terms. He will keep constantly on hand, Flour, Bacon, Sugar, Coffee, Rice, Dried Beef, Hard Bread, and in a word, every article necessary for crossing the Plains. He flatters himself from his knowledge in that department of his business, having been a trader for the last four years in Great Salt Lake City, and his frequent passing over the Plains, that he will be well prepared to give general satisfaction.

And to the Salt Lake emigration he would respectfully say that Independence possesses advantages in point of location for out let directly, and for procuring Wagons, Stock, Provisions, &c., that no other place above St. Louis possesses. O. H. COGSWELL.

REFERENCES.

ERASTUS SNOW, St. Louis, ORSON SPENCER, Cincinnati, O.,
MILO ANDRUS, St. Louis, EL. JOHN TAYLOR, New York,
CHAS. BASSETT, Springfield, O., JOHN HOW, St. Louis,
Feb. 24] WOODS, CHRISTY & CO., St. Louis. [14 3m.

BOOTS AND SHOES of every variety can be had at O. H. COGSWELL'S, Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

BENJ. CROWTHER,

DEALER in Hardware, Table and Pocket Cutlery, Mechanics' Tools of every description, consisting in part of Axes of all kinds, Augers do., Awls, patent, with bitts, Bench Screws, Chisels of every description, Auger and Chisel Handles. Also, Blacksmith's Tools of every description, together with a large stock of Miscellaneous articles, such as Brushes, Paints, Japanned Tin Ware, Spoons, Rifles, Guns, Pistols, and other articles too numerous to mention, in fact, everything used by Mechanics, Housekeepers and the public in general, all of which will be sold low for cash. A liberal discount made to mechanics buying by the quantity. Call and see. Store situated south side of the Court House.

BENJAMIN CROWTHER, Feb. 24, 143m. Independence, Jackson Co., Mo.

ISAAC HOCKADAY.

DEALER in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps and Ready Made Clothing, together with a large and general assortment of out-fitting goods of every description, suitable for California, Salt Lake, and New Mexico outfits.

Store north side of Public Square, Independence, Mo. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

FLOUR AND MEAL.

THE Subscriber takes this method of saying to the Emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand large quantities of Flour and Meal, which he will sell at as reasonable rates as such articles can be bought for in the up country, at his mill, known as the Jackson Mills, near Independence. He will also have a large supply in Independence, Mo. THOMAS PITCHER.

REFERENCES: WILSON & PARKER; JESSE H. NOWLAND. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WAGONS AND YOKES.

YOUNG & SMITH are prepared to fill orders for Wagons and Ox Yokes to the Western Emigration. They have on hand a large lot the best Wagons made in the Western Country, and can supply any number of Yokes that may be desired. They will deliver their Yokes or Wagons in lots at any point on the river from Independence to Leavenworth City.

Independence, Mo., 1855. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WM. & JOHN McCOY,
Independence, Mo.,

DEALERS in Staple and Fancy Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Camp Equippage and Outfitting Goods of every description. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING.

R. CHARLES takes this method of informing the emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand a full supply of Groceries, Builder's Hardware, Cutlery, Boots and Shoes, and all grades of staple Dry Goods, which he will sell at wholesale and retail. Thankful for former patronage, he solicits a further trial on the levee Kansas, Mo. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

RENOVAL.

MRS. J. VINCENT, MIDWIFE, East side of Fourth street, between Market and Walnut streets, St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. J. Vincent wishes to inform her friends and the public, that she has removed from between 8th and 9th, on Market street, to the above place, and hopes by strict attention to her duties, to merit a further continuance of their patronage. [apr 14 21 3m

TO EMIGRANTS.

C. B. HUBBELL, Jr., 102 4th st., St. Louis
Informs persons travelling towards
SALT LAKE OR CALIFORNIA,

That they will find at his store, the largest stock of DRY GOODS in the city, comprising every variety of kinds adapted to their wants, which he will sell at prices fully TWENTY-FIVE per cent. lower than any other house in the trade, to which your attention is invited.

N. B. One price only ever asked, and no deviation. [apr 14 21 2m

GREAT ATTRACTION
AT
WILSON & COOPER'S NEW STORE!

The attention of Emigrant starting for
UTAH, CALIFORNIA, AND OREGON,
Is respectfully called to our IMMENSE STOCK of
FASHIONBLE DRY GOODS!

Comprising every article in the trade, from the plain substantial articles of every-day use, to the finest and most elegant fabrics of first-class Dry Goods and LINEN DRAPERY.

Our goods are all marked in PLAIN FIGURES, from which no abatement is allowed under any circumstances.

N. B. A discount of FIVE per cent. will be allowed to parties going west, on all bills over $100. WILSON & COOPER, apr 14 21] Cor. 4th and Locust sts., St. Louis.

OUTFITS FOR CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE AND OREGON.

WM. C. WILSON,
DEALER IN
Groceries, Wines, Liquors, and Provisions,; Pilot Bread and Crackers,

No. 195 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.

☞Is prepared to furnish everything in his line, at the lowest rates, and from past experience in the trade, feels assured, that parties intending to cross the plains, will find it to their interest to give him a call, and compare prices before purchasing elsewhere.

ON HAND AND FOR SALE LOW, THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES:

TEAS—A choice assortment of Imperial, Gun Powder, Young Hyson and Black;
COFFEE—Rio, Havana, Laguayra and Java—burnt and ground.
SUGAR—Crushed, Lump, Powdered, Clarified, New Orleans and Brown—all grades.
MOLASSES—Golden Syrup, Sugar House and Plantation.
LIQUORS—Best brands of Pure French Brandy, Holland Gin, Jamaica Rum, Irish, Scotch, Monongahela and Bourbon Whiskey, and all kinds of Domestic Liquors.
WINES—Pure Port, Maderia, Malaga, Sherry, Muscat, Champagne, Claret and White, Cordials, &c., &c.
BACON—Ham, Sides and Shoulders, Dried Beef and Beef Tongue.
FRUIT—Raisins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, Citron, Dried Apples and Peaches, &c., &c.
SUNDRIES—All kinds of Pickles, Sauce, Ketchups, Spice, Fancy Soaps, Candles, Oil, Gas, Fish, Mats, Cords, Buckets, Baskets, Brooms, Tubs, Lobsters, Oysters, Sardines, Cooking Extracts, Essences, Arrow Root, Farina, Sago, Corn Starch, Oat Meal, Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Maccaroni, Vermicelli, Honey, &c., &c. [apr 7 20 2m

GOODIN & TOOKER,
GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,
No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.

HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.

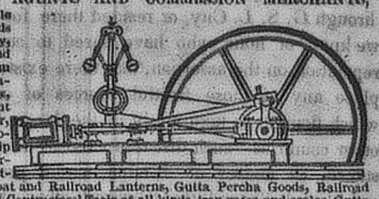
We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfilment.

Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand. Lamps repaired, regilded and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 19 6m

W. H. HUISH,

MACHINIST. Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERMLY. mar 24] [18 3m

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MAIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,



FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.

N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices. Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,

Residence, No. 328 South Side Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets:
Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,

MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also, Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice. All the above articles are warranted of the best American Iron. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by ALFRED PERSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE and OREGON.
EMIGRANTS
Can be supplied with every variety of
PILOT BREAD & CRACKERS
Baked expressly for the overland Emigration, and WARRANTED to KEEP, at
J. B. WILLSON'S BAKERY,
No. 196 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
☞The trade supplied at the LOWEST RATES. [apr 7 20 2m

UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L K & Co.

CATTLE.

THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all of which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. B. & J. H. FLEMING, Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.

REFERENCE.
ISAAC HOCKADAY, Independence, O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HADUS & MULLEN, Wayne City.

N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon, and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood of Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!

M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Groceries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WESTPORT, MO.

S. P. KELLER,
DEALER IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE,
Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,
Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot
No. 27 Commercial Street,
WESTPORT, MO.
Feb. 24, 14 3m*

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.

THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo. Feb. 24, 14 3m* JAMES W. ELLIS.

C. E. KEARNEY. W. R. BERNARD.
KEARNEY & BERNARD,
METROPOLITAN STORE,
WESTPORT, MO.,
DEALERS IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

Poetical Department.

THE POPULAR CREED.

BY CHARLES SEIBAS.

Dimes and dollars, dollars and dimes!
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes!
If a man is down, give him a thrust—
Trample the beggar into the dust!
Presumptuous poverty's quite appalling—
Knock him over! kick him for falling!
If a man is up, oh! lift him higher!
Your soul's for sale, and he's the buyer—
Dimes and dollars, dollars and dimes!
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes!

I know a poor, but worthy youth,
Whose hopes are built on a maiden's truth,
But a maiden will break her vows with ease,
For a wooer cometh whose claims are these:
A hollow heart and an empty head,
A face well tinged with a brandy red,
A soul well trained in villany's school—
And cash, sweet cash—he knows the rule;
Dimes and dollars, dollars and dimes!
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes!

I know a bold and an honest man,
Who strives to live on the christian's plan,
But poor he is, and poor will be,
A scorned, a hated wretch is he;
At home he meeteth a starving wife,
Abroad he leadeth the leper's life—
They struggle against a fearful odds
Who will not bow to the people's gods!
Dimes and dollars, dollars and dimes!
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes!

So get ye wealth, no matter how!
"No questions asked" of the rich, I trow—
Steal by night and steal by day,
(Doing it all in a legal way)
Join the church, and never forsake her;
Learn to cant and insult your maker;
Be hypocrite, liar, knave and fool,
But don't be poor—remember the rule,
Dimes and dollars, dollars and dimes!
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes!

From the Millennial Star.

WHAT SHALL BE DONE WITH UTAH?

Shall Polygamy be tolerated in Utah? This question is daily assuming importance in the halls of the United States Congress. It being a matter with which its members have no right to interfere, the more they meddle with it, the more huge they will find its dimensions. In connexion with the slavery question, it may prove a firebrand that will light the funeral pile of national integrity and Constitutional liberty.

Men in their wisdom are beginning to devise ways and means to crush this "man child"—"Mormonism," which is of such rapid growth and development that it has become a wonder even in this age of unparalleled progress.

We perfectly coincide with the Editor of the New York Tribune, that this subject "is environed by grave embarrassments"—so grave, indeed, that both editors and members of Congress will find its specific gravity, when compared with their wisdom and power, altogether too great for them to handle.

Of the many respectable men who have travelled hrough G. S. L. City, or resided there for a time, we know of none who have dared to stake their reputation on the assertion, that there existed in that place any of those fruitful sources of corruption which flourish so luxuriantly in the large towns of other countries—such diseased excrescences, for instance, as houses of ill-fame, street prostitution, gambling hells, and the thousand other appliances which feed the depraved appetites and cankered souls of a vast multitude who are steeped in such licentious and debasing crime that the fiends of the infernal pit might be ashamed of their company.

This state of things is so congenial to the tastes of pious editors and Christian statesmen that they are quite blinded to its existence, if they can find no other way of exercising their philanthrophy than in dictating morals to Utah. Could not these gentlemen find plenty of business nearer home, in settling domestic broils and dissensions, without interfering with the family relations of Latter-day Saints? The great efforts made by the enemies of the Saints to find iniquity among them, and their evident inability to prove their suppositions, is strong evidence of the paucity of those great social evils among the people of Utah, which exist to such fearful extent in every other community of Christendom. We boldly make the assertion, knowing that facts will substantiate it, that in no other community in the world is there so great an amount of social happiness and domestic felicity as there is among the people of Utah. Neither is there any other people of equal importance, with regard to whom there is so much stupid ignorance or wilful misrepresentation exhibited by the world.

It at least becomes gentlemen of the press, who endeavor to guide public opinion, and profess to disseminate correct information for the benefit of the people, to avail themselves of such sources of information as are plainly within their reach, concerning the religious tenets, domestic relations, and the civil, educational, and military organizations of a people who are attracting the attention of the world, and whose influence is extending through both hemispheres.

The day will come when the principles and practices of the Latter-day Saints will be universally known. Then those who have mobbed and persecuted them, and those that would do so now, could they fully act out the spirit that controls them, will find that the reality of "Mormonism" is very different from what they, in their evil surmisings, are now so ready to believe, and we would suggest the propriety of their expending their bitter calumnies and inexcusable animadversions upon more worthy objects, and where the consequences of them will be less likely to return upon the heads of their authors. It would appear that the lying spirit which was in the mouths of the prophets of Ahab, is effectually performing the duties of his office in these days, and similar results may be expected to follow.

Considering the circumstances under which they have been placed, the Latter-day Saints are remarkable for their rapid growth in numbers, power and influence. How to check this increase has been the study of its enemies ever since the Book of Mormon was brought forth. There are thousands in the world, and particularly in the United States, at the present time, who are endeavoring to solve this most difficult of all problems.

There will doubtless be many plans suggested for the disposal of Utah, but as it is a case in which the Lord is particularly interested, no one need doubt but what His plan will prevail in the end, in spite of mobocrats and political stock-jobbers.

There are three plans which, we presume, now occupy a somewhat prominent position before the public in the United States. The first is to take a constitutional course, and at the proper time admit Utah into the Union as a State with the privilege of choosing her domestic institutions. Second, "by extending the limits of California and Oregon to the east, and those of Kansas and Nebraska to the west, till they join each other in the heart of Utah," thus splitting up the territory into four divisions, with the vain hope of thereby counteracting the union of the people. The third may be considered the last resort in case all the more plausible methods fail, and that is, to force her by abuse into a quarrel with the General Government, and then endeavor to enact over again, on a more extended scale, the bloody tragedies of Missouri and Illinois.

The first is the only just and constitutional course left for the General Government to pursue; and every departure from it will involve Congress deeper and deeper in the meshes of political difficulty, and load them with a responsibility, the crushing influence of which will still further weaken the bonds of the American Union.

The second is rather a medium course, and may become a favorite hobby with many who do not approve of either of the two extremes. Let us examine the probable results of such a measure. If the Congress and people of the United States have not found it out, they have yet to learn, that Brigham Young controls Latter-day Saints out of, as well as in, Utah, and that their affairs throughout the world—in America, Europe, Asia, South Africa, and on the islands of the sea, are conducted as he dictates, and are under the direction of men who receive their authority from him. Now suppose Utah to be divided, and the four parts annexed to California, Nebraska, Oregon, and Kansas. The "Mormons" of Southern California already send one of their number as a Representative to the State Legislature of California. Suppose that by the addition of part of Utah to that State, 10,000 "Mormon" voters were added to those already there, and 10,000 more were thrown into each of the future States of Nebraska, Oregon, and Kansas. With the number of voters rapidly increasing every year, and all under the dictation of President Young, let members of Congress, in their conceited wisdom, ask themselves how long it will be before the Latter-day Saints will control the election in four States of the American Confederacy, and the voices of "Mormon" Senators and Representatives be heard in the halls of Congress, teaching the principles of political economy as based upon the law of righteousness, and showing corrupt politicians how to legislate for the best good of all, without regard to individual interests, or party purposes.

The last of the three projects named for checking the growth of the Latter-day Saints—extermination, has been twice tried and has failed. It would be but the natural fruits of that reckless mobocratic spirit, which is gradually increasing among the people, and setting at defiance all law and order. Its rule of action is that "might makes right," and when that might is guided by popular phrensy, it generally knows no bounds but the limit of its power, or the merciless destruction of its victims.

We earnestly desire peace, but if we are compelled again to defend our homes from destruction, our wives and daughters from being ravished, the brains of our old men, and little ones from being dashed out, and our Prophets from being imprisoned and slain, may the God of battles nerve our souls, and lend His power to our arms, that we may successfully defend our mountain fastnesses, which He has given us, against those fiends who disgrace the human form, and neither regard the supplications of virtuous mothers, nor the cries of prattling innocence.

This we do know, that the time of our deliverance from the power of our enemies draws near. They have yet to drink double of the bitter cup which they have so mercilessly administered to the Saints, and they yet have to endure four-fold the loss of homes and kindred—those bitter tears and heart-rending sorrows which have sent husbands and wives, parents and children, to untimely graves. They will yet be glad to be guided by that wisdom which they now despise, and receive succour and protection—yes civil, political, and religious salvation, from the very people they now wish to destroy.

Although the Saints are yet a small people, there is power in their words; and their movements being so closely watched, shows they are dreaded. The reason is, they are guided by the revelations of heaven, which will ever circumscribe the wisdom of men, and the power of the Almighty is upon them, that all things may be overcome which oppose the progress of His kingdom.

The Louisana Missourian, of the 5th, says: A common negro woman, with a small child, sold in Bowling Green, on Monday last, for $1122. On the same day, a span of mules sold for $300. Our millers are paying $1,75 per bushel for good wheat, and our factories any price the farmers ask for tobacco.

A convention of Christianized Jews is to be held in New York city in May next. A correspondent of the Rochester Advertiser says that a prominent matter to be brought before the convention is the consideration of the return of the Jewish people to Palestine, and to take measures to cooperate with the Jews in England (who have already moved in the matter) and other parts of the Eastern world.

The Pope is about to erect a colossal statue of the Vergin Mary at Rome, in celebration of the triumph of the Immaculate Conception dogma. Three hundred medals are to be struck, of virgin Australian gold.

Riches are but ciphers; it is the mind that makes the sum.

Let every man praise the bridge he goes over.

FIRES IN THE WOODS.

Extensive fires are raging in the pine woods of South Carolina and Georgia. A dispatch from Columbia says: A tremendous fire is raging all around us, and houses, mills, fences and a vast amount of property has been destroyed. On the Charlotte road, the woods for many miles are on fire, and many saw-mills and dwellings have been burnt. The railroad itself is burning, and travel has been interrupted. On the Carolina road, the woods on both sides of the track are burning. A car loaded with cotton was consumed near Gadsden yesterday; it was feared that the track also would take fire. The woods are also burning on the Greenville road. There is a tremendous gale blowing, and all efforts to stay the flames are useless. The Savannah papers also state that the fire was raging extensively in the pine woods between that city and Macon. The railroad was in great danger, and cotton trains had ceased running.

PRESERVING PEACH TREES.

A writer in the New York Times recommends the sowing of tansy about the roots of peach trees, as a means of preserving them. He says that he once knew a large peach tree which was more than forty years old, while several generations of similar trees, in the same soil had passed away. This led to examination, and a bed of tansy was discovered about the trunk. It was naturally inferred that the preservation of this tree to such a green old age, was attributable to the presence of this plant. 'Twas decided to try the experiment on others, and accordingly a few of the roots were placed about each of the other trees on the premises, some of which gave signs of decay. Not only has it preserved for several years the sound trees, but renovated those that were unsound. The order of the plant, he says doubtless keeps off the insect enemies of this kind of tree, and it might have the same effect on others, as the plum, apple and pear, as well as the elm, sycamore and other ornamental trees.

Among the pile of correspondence by the last California Steamer, we received the following which we hasten to lay before our readers:

PROSPECTUS FOR THE

MORMON HERALD:

A MONTHLY PERIODICAL, DEVOTED TO THE DISSEMINATION OF LIGHT AND LIFE.

Parley P. Pratt proposes to publish to subscribers, sixteen pages, large octavo, double columns, monthly, under the above title. The first number will be issued in May next. Office, at the Mormon Book Depot, near the corner of Dupont and Sacramento streets, San Francisco.

Terms—Five dollars per annum, in advance. No subscription will be taken for less than one year.

Elders abroad are requested to act as agents. The name and address of each subscriber should be forwarded in a plain and legible manner.

As a Historical, Propetic, Doctrinal, and Philosopical Journal, we shall render this periodical worthy of the distinguished title it bears.

San Francisco, March 1st, 1855.

'Tis with great pleasure that we view this new token of Mormon progress in the Golden State. Success to the Herald and all its patrons. They cannot spend money more proffitably, nor time more pleasantly, than in the perusal of Elder Pratt's Poetical, Philosophical, Prophetical, and Apostolical effusions for he is one of the happyest writers of the age.

We place the Herald on the list of our exchanges.

A lie has no legs, but scandal has wings.

NOTICE.

We have received and have on sale the following books and pamphlets.

Book of Mormon,	$1 00
Book of Doctrine and Covenants,	95
Voice of Warning,	50
Spencer's Letters,	50
Hymn Books, Morocco gilt, ext.,	1 25
" " Calf "	80
" " Roan "	50
Government of God, by J. Taylor,	50
New Jerusalem, or the Fulfilment of Modern Prophecy,	15
Divine Authority of Joseph Smith,	10
Remarkable Visions,	10
Only Way to be Saved,	5
Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, by O. Pratt, 6 parts, 10cts. ea., or per sett,	40
Polygamy, by a Lady in Utah,	5
The Seer, by O. Pratt, vol. 1, to which is added 6 parts of Divine Authenticity of the book of Mormon, and Polygamy, by a Lady of Utah, elegantly bound, in one vol.	2 25
Orson Pratt's works, bound,	1 50
Times and Seasons, vols. 4, 5, and 6, well bound, ea.	1 50
Portraits of the First Presidency,	1 25

Route from England to Salt Lake may be expected in a few weeks.

We have a few numbers of the Millenial Star of vol. 17 on sale.

Those wishing any of the above books, or wishing to subscribe regularly for the Millenial Star, can apply to me every Sunday at the Church, or by post.

Apr, 14 21.] JAS. S. CANTWELL.

The Evidences Accumulate in proof of what we have long since asserted, viz: that the Mustang Liniment is the 'sine qua non' of all external remedies ever before offered to the afflicted.

We would call especial attention to the advertisement of this Liniment in our columns, and will take this occasion to say that this appears to be one of the few popular medicines that really possess all the virtues ascribed to them. In effectually curing the worst cases of Rheumatism, no matter how long standing, in an incredibly short time, and for sprains, bruises, sores, burns, or pains of any kind, it has no equal. We have heard of many cures that have been performed that really appear incredible, were they not vouched for by persons of responsibility and influence. It is said to be an infallible remedy for musquito bites.

See advertisement in another column. [17 2m

ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. G. SIMPSON. D. CAMERON.

GREAT SALE.
"AUCTION GOODS"
FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THE Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time submitted to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below Manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,
No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES,
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

BOOTS AND SHOES.
J. PARSON,
163 Morgan Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.

A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12tf.

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indispufable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of
RHEUMATISM
than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

Path Finder Office, May 11, 1854.

G. W. Westbrook:—

Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,
J. T. WHITNEY.

Elizabethtown, Tenn., May 26, 1855.

Mr. G. W. Westbrook:—

Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

Philadelphia, June 11, 1854.

Mr. G. W. Westbrook:

Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.

I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out. I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.

Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

Port au Prince, Hayti, Jan. 16th, 1854.

I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Croton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS

have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:

Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.

The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.

G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG & CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.
Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.
B. FORMON,
TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

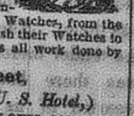
Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at

126 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House,
St. Louis, Missouri.
Jan. 13, 1855. [6 3m*

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST.
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.

Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
75 MARKET STREET,



CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.

N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

75 Market Street,
(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)
Feb. 17, 13 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 8, 1855. [11 3m*

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. 23. [6 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their Interest to call on ALMA ROELER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPHRE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPHRE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 packets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
20 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoo Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPHRE.
Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Labeaume Street,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

M'CLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. McLean—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.
Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞For sale by J. H. McLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.
T. W. HOIT.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PARER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.
A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARE ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

☞Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.
Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired;
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

His fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,
OF CORINTHIAN HALL,
297 BROADWAY,
ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,
FOR THE SALE OF
FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,
FOR $4 EACH!
FOR A
LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,
GO TO CORINTIAN HALL!
FOR AN
INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
297 Broadway;
☞BIG HAT.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,
Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c., &c.
COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 133 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.
Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set. Blades put into Knives; Hanors and Scissors ground, set and repaired. Tailors' and Tinners' Shears, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, APRIL 28, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XXIII.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Mailed to Subscribers at $2 per annum.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.

Advertisements inserted on accommodating terms.

All Communications relating to the LUMINARY should addressed to the Editor, Post-paid.

Popular Confidence in the United States Declining—its Causes, Consequences, and only remedy.

BY ORSON SPENCER.

(Conclusion.)

Do the people of this land want such men as Abraham, Moses, and Joseph Smith, to stand up in God's behalf, and concentrate the faith of all kindreds and people in one endless priesthood and unbroken unity, wherein both Church and State can know their true position and relation to each other, and enjoy mutual rights? Alas! the people too generally respond, they do not. They have drunk of the intoxicating cup so long, and hired priests, lawyers, and doctors to give to them, till they intend to fathom the very dregs.

Could they listen to a prophets voice, calling them to turn to the old paths and land marks of truth and safety, then they would soon behold "strong nations rebuked afar off." Then men of faith would rise up and subdue kingdoms, and put to flight the armies of the aliens. Fraud, rapine, and strife would hide their heads; arson, murder, treason, and carnage would no longer fatten the soil with their scythe, but peace, plenty, and brotherhood would crown the efforts of man, and God would be as familiar once more as any father should be with his children.

Do the people want anything approximating to the nature of a Theocracy? No. They dread the most distant approach of it, even as sheep that have been often abused and starved by false shepherds, fear the very name of the good shepherd.

But let this nation reject the theocracy of Heaven, and make war against the Saints, and their destiny will ere long become like that of all other nations, who have openly defied the God of Israel.

And what is that destiny? The fruitful field will become a barren wilderness, and many a lofty city will be laid low as Sodom was—the implements of husbandry will be converted into swords, revolvers, and engines of slaughter.

At the rate which wickedness has increased for the last ten years, this nation, before a half century shall elapse, will have enough to do, to stem the angry tide of countless distractions, without attending to any ordinary industrial avocations whatever. The misery, stench, plague, famine, and slaughter of the battle fields of the Crimea, will be too near home to escape any man's personal observation.

The God of human destiny will, by no means, be an idle spectator to such scenes as the future may reveal to unchecked wickedness. The elements and contiguous planets, that have been tributary to prosperity, under an orderly conduct of human affairs, will manifest undoubted tokens of corresponding displeasure. The earth will utter its indignation in grum tones of wrath—the winds will howl and snatch up the habitations of man, as being worthy of better tenants—the hail will leap from their dark hiding places like angry beasts from their lair—the waters will jump from their level bed like the bones of Elisha—air and planets will muster at the warning voice of the Highest—day and night will utter their voice, but not to call men to peaceful industry and refreshing sleep, but to strife, slaughter and mourning.

I know that men under the intoxicating spirit of the age, even boast of progress. But even steam power, through its perversion, has done more to destroy than to bless mankind. It has monopolised capital and depressed labor—it has set wealth and beggery at antipodes, and balanced them on an unequal lever—the great mass in beggary on the short end of the lever, and the aristocratic few and rich on the long end.

Progress has been marked by the discovery of the bane of all peace and union, and the overthrow of more social, domestic, civil, and religious virtues, than ten centuries have accomplished heretofore. It has been characterised by the discovery and fatal use of the engines of human destruction—by the corruptions and defalcations of commerce—by forgeries and swindlings—by more rapine and whoredom—more burglary and arson—more treason and robbery—more murder and parricides—more alienation of kindred feelings and love of humanity—and by more visions, sexual indulgence, followed by every hateful passion of envy, jealousy, divorce, poisoning, stabbing, and deep secret plots, for the most hellish ends, than any dark age before.

Progress! Every frothy declaimer talks about progress! Which way is the car of progress headed? Let the perversion of every invention answer! The rapid steamer and the lightning car are as men running the gauntlet, and carry more passengers annually to Hell than to Heaven!

Talk about American destiny! Destiny! When all things now look more like the destiny of the mountain avalanche! the roaring maelstrom! the cataracts of human wrath! the sea of human gore! the gathering armies of the damned, seen and unseen! the divided powers of all earth, allied to the equally divided powers of all hell, marshalling for the last great onslaught!

The electric wire daily vibrates with the report of more fraud, wrath, war, and bloodshed, than anything else! Vexation and hellish glee are synonymous with daily report! The inebriate boast of a hundred million Americans, in forty-five years to come, is backed up with the breaking loose of the mountain gorges of every fiendish passion, and the noise of the distant cataracts of human gore! Yet the throes of convulsed nature, and of earth's dissolution, are regarded as only the natural fruits and pains of a lawful pregnancy, coming to a happy issue! The midwives say, "only a little worse before you will be better—take a little more punch and toddy." And the Priests chant to the tune of $5,000 a year, "all is peace and safety." Splendid orators shout, progress! progress!! PROGRESS!!!

Infidels too, electrified by the same spirit of progress, rejoice over the broken ruins of superstitious dogmas, as though the ruin of privies furnished an ample site on which to erect the grand edifice of nature. Say they, the day now dawns for the complete emancipation of mind. The thick scales have so far fallen from their minds, that they can see that nature has no progenitor. Though she has given birth to a great many intelligent personages, yet she herself has no personal, intelligent, designing parentage. The egg produces the hen, and the hen produces the egg, but the hen and egg together are produced by nobody.

Progress! Who keeps the log book?

Women too, are imbibing the spirit of progress, and demanding admittance to the bar, and to the sacred desk, and to surgery, and will doubtless soon set a joint as naturally as any adulterous generation would choose.

Infidelity has a foundation in weakness and rebellion, unsurpassed by any religious dogmas. If it is not downright idiosy, it is surely madness, without a redeeming feature of sanity. When it ungods creation, at that very moment it virtually annihilates all creation. That which annihilates a cause, must, with an equal certainty, annihilate the effect. If there is no God, then it is equally true that there is nothing else. The bare supposition of no God, carries an irresistible conviction with it that there is nothing besides God. Hence, the universe is a blank—a nonentity; and men and things neither do or ever did exist; neither can any one ever write or talk about any men or things whatever.

The infidel that ascribes to nature the spring and source of all efforts, is rationally bound to ascribe to it all that a believer in God would ascribe to the being called God. He is also bound equally to acknowledge the same accountability, and pay homage to the same laws and commandments, as unto the believers in God. And these laws and commandments must come to men through one everlasting channel of prophets, and the gifts of the Holy Spirit.

There is no common sense or sanity outside of an unqualified allegiance to these laws and commandments. When men really follow the dictates of nature in spirit and in truth, they will then harmonise with the revelations of God through prophets even to a hair's breadth. And those who reject the revelations of God through prophets, say plainly that they do not hear the voice of nature, neither do they know its simplest and plainest dictates. Hence their unqualified blindness, if not total insanity and destitution of the simplest dictates of common sense.

The child, uncorrupted by bad education and a perverse tabernacle, would as naturally grow into the belief and knowledge of God, through prophetic revelations, as it would ever learn to eat and drink, and to talk and walk.

The most unnatural of all sense that was ever talked or written, is the sense of infidelity. And the infidel should no more run loose in society, than the maniac among the tombs, were it not for the supposition that a large congregated class of the same stamp are said to bring about some self-respect and returning symptoms of sanity. The whole world are in the same pickle-tub, with a little varmation in the strength of the brine.

The doctrine of infidelity upsets the plainest axioms—even those of cause and effect—from the cradle to the grave, and involve absurdities too many and gross, even to be thought of without taking physic, in order to be rid of the insanity, stench, and gripes, before putrefaction ensues.

If Popular Confidence is ever restored in these United States, it must be done by the aid of Theocratic principles. And these principles are the simplest and most intelligible of all principles. They are no more confined to religious organizations, than they are to political, social, or domestic associations. They belong to people of all grades, pursuits, avocations, and orders of life.

In a popular government, like this of the United States, "the law of society is opinion." It is so acknowledged to be by the most popular writers of the day. In a Theocratic government, the law of society is truth, and only truth. Herein is the distinguishing difference.

In the first case, the social law is based upon mere opinion. Opinion is the corner-stone and foundation that upholds the law of society. In the latter case, the theocratic principle, that is to govern and uphold the social system, is simple truth, and nothing but the truth. And the two systems will be as widely different as the foundations differ upon which the two are built.

Truth is stable, permanent, and always reliable. Opinion is never stable, always fluctuating, and uncertain. Opinion is the dictate of narrow views and limited acquaintance; but truth, never. Opinion is necessarily changable, with an increase of light, but truth never changes or fluctuates, but abides forever, and is equally reliable under all changes whatever. Opinion never benefitted any society, community, or government upon the whole. If opinion sometimes steps into the right path, it oftener crosses it than otherwise. Truth always steps in, and always remains there. Truth not only courts confidence, but always warrants it with ample security. Opinion is always courting confidence, but never lawfully marries, unless it is with a view to be divorced when the next counter opinion comes along.

The offspring of opinion is confusion, attended with a hesitancy to own its parentage, except in case of extreme shame and debauchery. The offspring of truth is order, invariably, and a frank acknowledgement of its pedigree.

The lawful propagators of truth always have an infallible knowledge of the rectitude of the principles they inculcate. The propagators of opinions never have any such knowledge. The assertions of the former always warrants our confidence even to a perfect degree of assurance, but the assertions of the latter always warrant our distrust, however painful. The propagators of opinion tell what they do not know, while the propagators of truth tell only what they do know.

Any organization, social, civil, or religious, that is based upon opinion, is always based upon uncertainty, and is continually liable to disruption and revolution. Furthermore, opinion is always liable to be weighed down by counter-opinion, and that in its turn by a succession of opinions in an infinite series. This latter consequence is always attendant upon a sectarian religion, or a democratic government, that has no other basis.

The continued fluctuations of opinion for the last seventy-five years—since the Declaration of Independance—is ample proof of the foregoing result. The whole nation has been continually the victim of ever vascillating opinions. And this state of things will forever continue, so long as the theocratic principles of immutable truth are rejected.

These latter principles are perfectly compatible with the highest order of republican liberty, and the enjoyment of equal popular rights. A theocratic order, where understood and observed, will be the people's favorite. It opens an ample store-house of privileges to all people, nations, kindreds and tongues. It belongs to no exclusive casts of men, nor to privileged orders of men. It is no respecter of persons, but every where, and among all people, he that works righteousness will receive favors according to his meritorious deeds.

The high and the low, the rich and the poor, the learned and unlearned, are equally elligible to the highest favors in the gift of the supreme, in their proper times and seasons. No elevation of rulers, however high, nor influx of favors into their lap, however many, can ever tend, in the least degree, to disparage or lessen the benefits of meritorious subjects, whether the number of subjects is few or many. No extension of magisterial retinue, or circumference of wealth, or splendor of dignity, can ever lessen the benign influence, or abridge the equitable bearing of rulers towards the ruled. No official dignity or patronage can ever be employed to abridge the merited privilege of inferiors, or to take undue advantage of the credulity of the loyal and confiding. No favoritism can ever bias the ends of justice. Certainty always crowns the efforts of the patriotic, the virtuous, and the wise.

There is no loop-hole through which the spirit of oppression can ever find admission into a theocratic system. Neither can any measure of inequality ever obtain in such a system, except such as is endured by personal choice, negligence, or transgression. And this kind of inequality is totally annihilated by the stubborn fact, that it happens to every member of the community alike, who may be equally obnoxious to the laws of such an order. It should be constantly kept in mind, that theocratic principles extend alike to social, civil, domestic, and religious organizations, and likewise to individual and national transactions.

A Theocratic government is a Representative government, in the highest sense of the term. The right of voluntary elective franchise in the election of rulers is inalienable. The liberty to dissent from the laws of a theocracy can never be denied; but neither wisdom, prudence, or safety will ever justify it. The reason is obvious—laws which are based upon truth, can never admit of intellectual, virtuous, or safe dissent. It is naturally impossible to dissent from truth and virtue with any permanent success.

In a theocracy there is perfect freedom to choose bad rulers, and adopt bad measures, but never any justification in so doing; neither can there be success in it; neither is there ever any compulsion to do right. Such compulsion would be incompatible with perfect freedom. Strictly speaking, compulsion never could make any one do right. The best qualities of such an act would be wanting, namely, choice. Hence the people are allowed to express their choice, from the lowest grade of supervisory agents, to the highest presidency over the whole polity. Even commandments, emanating from superior authority to subordinates, are always matters of choice, and never impair the free agency of those to whom they come.

Commandments are simply truth, accompanied with a just penalty to the disobedient. Truth likewise is always inseparable from a penalty to such as disobey it. Truth, though eternal, must have a personal embodiment and efficiency in God, without which, it would cease to be truth; but truth cannot exist abstracted from its author, which is God; and any man who denies God, denies the truth, and is a liar, whatever number of truths he may be the bearer of. That arithmetical production which starts with the least possible error in simple addition, is a damnable lie, whatever aggregate of truth may be embodied with it. Hence the deification of nature abstract from its author, is not only a lie, but it is idolatry mistified by enlargement. The worshippers of nature, in place of worshipping a small image of sixty feet in height, composed of certain costly materials, really, in point of fact, worship a vastly larger image, that compasses all the innumerable objects of their widest conception. The object of their worship, instead of being a visible image which the natural eye can readily comprehend in all its parts, is the panorama of all creation.

Now, the idolaty of these consists in the universality of the objects worshipped, including the natural laws by which they are governed. But idolatry is of the same intrinsic nature, whether we worship one object, or innumerable millions of objects—whether we worship one law of nature, or an infinite number of them. The worshippers of nature may continue to develope nature with great accuracy and success, still their system is a radical lie, that will involve its votaries in hopeless ruin in the end.

Again, a theocratic system is progressive in its course. From men the most rude and unpolished, it takes them into the brightest sun-light of deification, through the simple process of truth, under the dictates of the only author and finisher of confidence.

Under the tuition of theocratic principles, sublimary beings are continually emerging into higher spheres of intelligence, and basking into the radiance of greater wisdom. Experience demonstrates every step in the progress, and to them that do well, with an undivided heart toward their eternal head, there is no misstep or sacrifice. Father and mother, houses and lands, if lost, are only lost in order to be doubly gained, enhanced and ensured forever; and the evil that exists is only an evil to that do evil, which becomes a blessing to those who do well, and facilitates their progess in righteousness.

On the other hand, the regress and downward march of the wicked is facilitated by the blessings which they under-value and despise. Hence the most aggravating torment of the chief of devils is to be convened with the sons of God in the presence of the Father.

If there is one strong desire which out clamors another, and all others, it is to be screened from the face of Him who sitteth upon the throne, even their best friend and oldest brother, who died for them. Hence, the men in all ages who hold the keys of the greatest blessings, and would most untiringly administer the greatest favors to evil doers, are, above all men, the most shunned, dreaded, and despised. Release a thief and a robber, but kill that dreadful benefactor, who would lay down his life for us, even the prophet Jesus and Saviour.

Whose society is everywhere and by everybody spoken against? What large body of people have not been allowed to remain in the States, nor yet to abide in peace out of the States? Whose houses and grain-fields have been wantonly burned with fire? Whose city has been wholly depopulated by a merciless populace? What city and county have been mostly driven into the wilderness in the winter of a cold climate? Whose men have been called to leave their unprotected wives and children to fight the selfish battles of seventeen millions of lazy lookers-on, who were sleepishly and hellishly gazing at the spectacle of their wives, children, and infirm sires and matrons, perishing with hunger, cold, and hardship? And why was all this hatred and banishment of so many innocent and righteous people? Simply because the presence of such just men is too great a torment to be endured by evil doers! The just men who have been hated in all ages "without a cause" are the worst and most fiery fagots of hell to all evil doers.

ORSON SPENCER.

THE SPIRITS—ASTOUNDING FACTS.

We copy the following article concerning the Spirits and Spiritual communications from the "Hartford Times." It may no doubt appear astonishing to many of our readers that disembodied Spirits should condescend to employ themselves or be employed in amusing their christian brethren of this mundane sphere, by such useless and rediculous exercises, as ringing bells, turning and rapping tables, suspending them in the air as here represented, and a thousand equally foolish and senseless manifestations; but when it is understood that thousands are dayly entering the Spirit world who have no better employment or higher missions to perform, it will cease to appear particularly wonderful. Hence we find Z. Taylor and other ex-presidents of the United States. With Senators, Lawyers, Parsons, Popes, Bishops, Judges and other dignitaries, who have passed as smart specimens of their several orders whilst in this state, have now no better employment than turning tables, ringing bells, spining spiritual yarn, hunting up stolen goods or other fantastic tricks, by order of their Liege Prince.—see christian Spiritualist.

Whether this is done merely to keep them out of further mischief, or to subserve the interest of his kingdom we will leave for the consideration and decision of our readers.

"MR. EDITOR:—The following occurrences recently transpired under the observation of the writer, and in the immediate vicinity. The narration which I am about to make, will I am aware, be utterly incredible to many people; and yet it is entirely and exactly true. Of the perfect accuracy of the incidents here related, testimony, the most ample and conclusive can be produced.

"A circle of eight or nine friends was formed for the purpose of witnessing the spiritual manifestations, with Mr. D. D. Hume as the medium. The table, a pretty heavy one, was repeatedly lifted to quite a distance from the floor and hung suspended in the air about as high as our heads, swaymg to and fro. This was in a well lighted room, the gas burner being near the party, and could by no possibility have been done by any trick or physical agency on the part of any of the circle.

"Loud 'raps' were made all about the floor, the walls, the ceiling, the table, &c., the sounds being similar to those produced by a carpenter when driving home a tenpenny nail. Most, I believe all, of those in the circle were several times touched or taken hold of, palpably and strongly, by invisible hands—and this while all of us sat quietly with our hands on the table. A bell, which we had placed beneath the table, was distinctly rung several times, and presently it was placed by an invisible agency in the writer's hand, which had for a moment dropped and rested unconsciously on one knee. The medium was at another end of the table, and no member of the circle could have done this undetected by the others. One gentleman, a skeptic on these matters, was several times strongly grasped by a viewless hand, in different parts of his person, and the bell was conveyed up into his hand. The bell was then taken from him and carried around the room, ringing frequently, while none of us moved.

"Later in the evening, when the company, were preparing to retire, and after some of the party had gone from the room, the spirits requested us to wait; and those that remained were permitted to see the most remarkable part of that evening's proceedings. The gas light had been turned down, but sufficient light remained in the room to render ourselves, and most objects quite visible, and the hands of the party, which rested on the table, could be distinctly seen. The spirits asked—

"How many hands are there on the table?

"(There were six of us in the party, and the answer given, after counting, was 'Twelve.')

"Reply—'there are Thirteen.'

"And there, sure enough, on that side of the table which was vacant, and opposite to the medium and to the party, appeared a thirteenth hand! It faded as we gazed, but presently up it came again—a hand and an arm, gleaming and apparently self-luminous; and it slowly moved forward towards the centre of the table! To make sure that we were not deceived and were not laboring under a hallucination, we counted our own hands which were all resting in sight upon the table. There it was, however, an arm and a hand, extending back to the elbow, and there fading into imperceptability. We all saw it, and all spoke of it, to assure each other of the reality of the thing. It had the color and appearance of silver, but with this difference—to a certain extent, self-luminous; it emitted a faint but a perceptible light. Presently it vanished, but we were soon permitted to see not only the same thing again, but the process of its formation. It began at the elbow, and formed rapidly and steadily until the arm and hand again rested on the table before us. It was so plainly seen that I readily observed it to be a left hand. I inquired—

"'Can you write with that hand, in plain sight?'

"Ans—(by raps)—'Perhaps.'

"A sheet of paper and a pencil were placed in the centre of the table, the hand receding meanwhile from view. In a moment it came up again (always appearing from the vacant side of the table) and slowly moved forward to the paper which it grasped and drew back to the edge, and there shook and rattled it for some moments, but failed to write anything legible. It then disappeared, and the next moment the bell was taken from beneath the table, carried from the circle some six feet towards the centre of the room, and there rang by invisible means, and so distinctly that persons in another room, beyond an intervening hall or passage way, plainly heard it. Presently it was brought back and dropped upon the table—and this while each of us sat quietly, without moving. The hand again appeared, was seen to take the bell from the table, and place it in the hands first of one and then of another of the party. At length it was placed in mine; but, slipping my hand over the bell, I grasped the hand that held it, desiring some more tangible knowledge of its character than that afforded by sight. It was a real hand—it had knuckles, fingers, and finger nails; and what was more curious (if possible) it was soft and warm—feeling much like the hand of an infant, in every respect but that of size.

"But the most singular part of this queer and (to me) strange occurrence is yet to be told—the hand melted in my grasp!—dissolved—dissipated—became annihilated, so far as the sense of feeling extended. It subsequently re-appeared on the table, and again vanished, after a statement (by the raps) to the effect that this hand had been produced by a near relative of some of those in the circle, who had been in the interior life a number of years. This question was then spelled out:—

"'Would you like to see the hand of a colored person?'

"In a moment more there appeared a rather dull looking, grey hand, somewhat shadowy, and not quite so clearly defined as the first—but it was unmistakably there, and its grey hue could be clearly seen.

"But this account grows lengthy, and must close. Occurrences yet more astounding than any here related remain untold. Perhaps in another chapter I may give some of them, and also a glance at one theory concerning the philosophy of the production of these startling realities. FACT.

Hartford, March 18, 1855.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, APRIL 28, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer, address box 488.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor, 102 Nassau st., cor. of Ann.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folsom, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Feit.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.
Wm. Cazier, Nephi City.

The dawn of Religious Liberty in Spain.

This age is emphatically an age of revolution—every nation is affected by it. The fire-brand has been thrown into the world, and will never be extinguished, until every principle, institution and government that need revolutionizing, shall be revolutionized; and every oppressive fetter that enslaves the nations shall be broken, and the down-trodden and oppressed go free.

Among the revolutions of thrones, governments, empires and kingdoms of the age, Spain! Catholic Spain, has caught the flaming brand, and its concomitants have succeeded the innovation.

The Spanish nation, is at length, partially emancipated from the thraldom of civil and religious despotism, and now sits waiting for a trial of her faith, virtue and integrity. It will soon be seen whether she is worthy of the deliverence wrought out for her by the spirit of the age, or whether, like other nations, she will display a spirit of carelessnes and apathy concerning her best interests, and reject the Everlasting Gospel when it shall be preached to her, and fall in the general wreck of nations, to rise no more.

We copy the following item interesante sur le sujet, from a small publication called Zions Herald, written by an english correspondent:

"The late revolution movement in Spain is bringing to the people of that country, deliverance from the despotism, civil and religious, under which they have so long suffered. The cry from Spain for the knowledge of the gospel of Christ is loud, unceasing and urgent. Mr. Hope of the Free Church of Scotland, and Mr. Alton, the Wesleyan missionary at Gibralter, have made a tour of some months through the province of Andalusia, distributing the Bible and conversing with the people, and wherever they went they found the people renouncing Papal worship, and preparing to read and study the Scriptures, as the sole rule and standard of their faith and practice. In one town alone, there are nearly four thousand persons that have thrown off the trammels of Popery. And another significant fact is that besides the freedom of the press, already conceeded in the latest discussion in the Cortes on the point of liberty of religious worship, the question was lost by only a majority of four. So rapidly does the cause of religious freedom advance in Spain, that already a Spanish Evangelical society has been organized in this country, and arrangements are in progress, and plans in contemplation, of the most comprehensive and effective character, fitted to bring the greater part of the Spanish peninsula to a speedy acquaintance with the gospel of Christ. This mission is based on broad Protestant principles, and is unconnected with any particular denomination."

THE CAMELS ARE COMING.

It will be recollected that by a recent act of Congress a certain amount was appropriated to the Secretary of War to try the experiment of introducing camels on this continent as beasts of burden, and for military purposes. As the Navy department have occasion to send stores to our squadron in the Mediterranean, the storeship Supply, now at the N. York yard, has been selected for that purpose, and on her return voyage will bring the camels. This vessel will be commanded by Lieut. David D. Porter, an officer of the Quartermaster's department of the army, to purchase the camels, and on her homeward voyage will bring them to the United States. The vessel will be prepared with all despatch for the sea.

There is no doubt that the experiment of introducing camels as beasts of burden, and for military purposes, in the southwestern part of the country, will prove entirely successful. Their great endurance, ability to carry large burdens, and the length of time that they are enabled to exist without water, will render them a valuable adjunct to the army in the section of country for which they are intended.—[Evening Mirror.

It is particularly gratifying to all lovers of truth to behold the predictions of the anctent Prophets hastening to their completion and fulfilment. So careful does the Lord appear that the sayings of his servants be accomplished and their veracity sustained, that their least predictions are studiously considered and faithfully honored. It matters little whether it be the destruction of a nation, the overthrow of kingdoms, or the general wreck of empires; each and every endorsement is finally honored, and so small a matter as the employing of camels and dromedaries as beasts of burden for the gathering of Israel, does not escape the observation and attention of the ruling spirit of our God. When the time is fully come, men are inspired, the subject is agitated, acts of Congress are passed, means are appropriated, the Secretary of war and the naval department of this great nation is commissioned that the propecies may be fulfilled. It matters not whether it be the edicts of Emperors, or enactments of Legislators, the Lord God of Israel controleth them as he will, and causeth even the bellowing earthquake, the dreaded tornado and the furious storms of the angry elements to subserve His purposes, and fulfil His high behests, therefore let all the earth praise and worship Him.

MORMONISM.

Mormonism is certainly one of the strangest things that ever agitated our little world. It has awakened more interest and excitement than any principle ever promulgated. It has aroused the hitherto quiescent spirits of earth and hell—spirits that have conspired together to check its movements, and damn its character and influence, but it has grappled bravely with its strongest adversaries, and encountered boldly ten thousand difficulties, and still remains firm and unmoved as the throne of Jehovah. It has never stooped to Kings, Presidents or Emperors, but has pursued the same straight-forward, indpendent and undeviating course in all its varied movemets from the day it was organized until this day. The same noble, dignified and celestial character then sealed upon its brow, it has abundantly sustained in its progressive development, and each stage of its chequered history, has furnished additional evidence of its nobility and greatness.

Mormonism is not a listless, inactive, common place principle, it is continually revolving, and in its revolutions every society, nation and government is affected—it moves effectively and continuously in every sphere of life—it has acquired what philosophers have long sought in vain—a perpetual motion.

The P. E. Fund is one of its offspring which like its parent (as its name implies) is also endowed with perpetual motion. It will be found ever rolling from west to east, and from north to south and back again by the same perpetual motion. A few more revolutions and Daniel's prophecy concerning it will be fulfilled—from a little stone it will assume the gigantic dimensions of a mountain and fill the whole earth. Mormonism is not like the Christian's God without body, parts or passions, but it is a real entity, a tangible existence, a bone fide organization. It has no affinity with the crude materialism of Pantheism and Socialism, nor with the Psychololical nonsence of Sectarianism, but it strikes the happy medium and seizes truth from each department and bears it off in its mighty revolutions. Neither is it like the Christian's heaven beyond the bounds of time and space, but 'tis located where it will continue to live, increase and exercise authority and government worlds without end, and no power can hinder its progress, nor wrest the everlasting spirit of government from its hand; but it will most assuredly flourish and prosper, and when every system that has polluted and cursed the earth has sunk into oblivion and is lost in the pending wreck of nations and crush of worlds, it will occupy unmoved its position sur la Terre, and will be still acknowledged as the kingdom of our God.

Is not Mormonism an immoral system? says one. We think not; we have carefully examined the subject and have never yet been able to discover any immoral tendency in it; but to the contrary we believe it will compare honorably with any of the systems of the age, and would put them individually to the blush, if they were not too far steeped in iniquity and abominations to the susceptible. However, one thing is certain, Mormonism cannot be accused of Monogomy, nor with its more ugly sister—celebacy. It is consequently uncontaminated by their bastard progeny of evils. It cannot boast of magnificent monesteries, nor their corresponding conveniences—Nuneries. Neither is it cursed with brothel houses and licensed prostitution. These institutions are peculiar to boasted Christendom, they flourish and abound in Catholic France, and may be found indeed on the virgin soil of America; some even have said that 'tis more degraded and cursed by seduction and prostitution than any other nation, but they have none of them much to boast of in point of morality, and when we hear of Christian scribblers charging Mormonism with immorality, it reminds us of folks living in glass houses.

We need not mention the numerous cases of robbery, purjury, arson, rape, and a thousand other damning sins which characterize the Christian nations of the nineteenth century; their own journals contain sufficient testimony and evidence of these things to damn a thousand nations and sink them down to hell. If Mormonism was guilty of one hundredth part of the beastiality and licenciousness that abounds in the Christian nations, the Christian devils would begin to love it, the ungodly would respect and honor it, and pious Christians would cease to persecute it, and it would soon become as popular as the apostate Churches of modern Christendom. If ye were of the world, the world would love you, but because ye are not of the world and I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you, said Jesus; and if these sayings were true with regard to the Jewish Saints, they are also true concerning the American Saints.

Does the world really believe Mormonism to be a wicked and corrupt system? No, certainly not; but 'tis known to move far above the general niveau of morality, and more especially beyond the Christian standard.

Does the political aspirant embrace Mormonism as a means of acquiring political destinction, that he may ride rough-shod over his fellow man? 'tis an unpopular method; some have tried it, but have been damned in the attempt.

Does the whore-monger seek an assylum in the Mountain Territory that he may satiate his beastly lusts? No! a house of ill-fame cannot be found in all the Territory. It was for this reason that the fugitive judges said it was peculiarly hard for them.

Does the vile seducer live, move, and have a being under the fostering aegis of Mormonism? No! The villain's life must answer for the accursed deed.

Mormonism lives and has ever lived transcendently superior to the low, mean, depraved and damnable practices that curse the Gentile world, and if the apostate and rebellious nations will not speedily repent and forsake their corrupt and loathsome deeds, they will soon be like unto Sodom, Nineveh and Babylon—they will utterly perish.

Has Mormonism reason to fear the wrath and vengeance of the Almighty? No, certaintainly not; for God himself is the author of it, and He is bound to sustain it, worlds without end.

But will not the United States, or united nations arise in their strength and fury and destroy it? If they can hurl the Almighty from his throne, and overthrow the kingdom God hath reared, then they may operate with some success against Mormonism, but till then it has nothing to fear from men nor devils, and conscious of its own potency it will stand like a mighty rock in the midst of the ocean. It has already braved the foaming billows of impassioned madness, and has borne unmoved the rough surges of tempestuous rage. A hand unseen has protected it from the fury of the raging elements, so that the roughest storms have spent their violence upon it without effect, demonstratng clearly the heavenly nature of its origin, and the eternal durability of its constitution.

ARRIVAL OF THE SIDDONS.

We are happy to learn that the Siddons has at length arrived with her company of Saints at Philadelphia.

We have been favored with the perusal of a private letter, dated, Ship Siddons, April 22. The company expected to leave Philadelphia on Monday the 23d inst., and may therefore be expected in St. Louis about the middle of next week, when we may be able to give the details of the voyage.

We have been favored by Elder F. D. Richards with a list of the passengers on board the Juventa, which we will publish in next week's issue.

The Juventa sailed from Liverpool on the 31st of March with 572 souls of Saints on board, under the presidency of Elder William Glover. This is the largest company of Saints that has ever crossed the ocean. We hope they will have a safe and quick passage.

Great excitement in Platt County, Mo.—Destruction of the Parkville Luminary by a Mob.

On the 14th inst., about two hundred men convened at Parkville, and by common consent proceeded to the office of the Parkville Luminary for the purpose of arresting the editors, Park and Patterson, and breaking up their printing establishment.

It appears that Park and Patterson are abolitionists, and their paper has been filled with violent denunciations of slavery and pro-slavery men. It is said moreover, that they have been supported by means from Abolition Aid Societies of the North; these things served to render them and their paper quite obnoxious to the great majority of the community, which has at length risen to such a pitch of excitement thai the pro-slavery advocates have unanimously resolved to take summary vengeance on their abolition adversaries.

Fortunately for Park, he was out of town; poor Patterson had to meet the storm alone. It had been pre-determined to tar, feather and ride the editors on a rail; but Park being absent, and the prayers and supplications of Patterson's wife being so urgent and pathetic her husband was set at liberty.

The press was then shouldered, carried through the town followed by a large crowd to the place of burial—the Missouri River. Three hearty cheers were given by the spectators when the press was deposited in its tomb—having a white cap drawn over its head—labelled Boston Aid.

We copy the resolutions that were passed on the occasion, which proves that the spirit of mobocracy is still popular in the upper country, we are not possessed of course with all the agrevating causes that have led to this deliberate outrage, nor can we say avec la croyance des jesuits, the end justifies the means, but we will venture to say if might establishes right, then of course they were justified.

Resolved 1. That the Parkville Industrial Luminary is a nuisance, which has been endured too long, and should now be abated.

2. That the editors, to-wit: G. S. Park and W. J. Patterson, are traitors to the State and county in which they live, and should be dealt with as such.

3. That we meet here again on this day three weeks, and if we find G. S. Park or W. J. Patterson in this town then, or at any subsequent time, we will throw them into the Missouri river, and if they go to Kansas to reside, "we pledge our honor as men," to follow and hang them wherever we can take them.

4. That at the suggestion of our Parkville friends, we will attend to some other free-soilers not far off.

5. That we will suffer no person belonging to the Northern Methodist Church to preach in Platte county after this date, under penalty of tar and feathers for the first offence and a hemp rope for the second.

6. That we earnestly call on our sister counties throughout the State to rise in their might and clean themselves of freesoilism.

7. That our peace, our property, and our safety requires us at this time to do our duty.

8. That we request every pro-slavery paper in Missouri and Kansas to publish the above resolutions.

We have been favored during the week with a visit from our esteemed friend and brother, the Hon. J. M. Bernhisel, Utah delegate to Congress. His stay in the city was very short, he being bound for Utah by the next mail, and will consequently leave Independence on the first of May, he left on Wednesday the 25th, on board the Lucas, and will have barely sufficient time to reach Independence by the first of the month.

The Dr. looks remarkably well, and appeared exceedingly happy, his countenance is generally radiant with the sun beams of happiness, but on this occasion particularly so, we suppose it is because he is homeward bound. We wish him a safe and agreeable transit across the plains to his much loved mountain home, which will doubtless be doubly dear to him after so long an absence.

THERE is no medicine against death.

Correspondence.

Letter from Wm. Cazier, Patriarch.

The following letter came to hand a few days ago by way of California, which will account for its late arrival. We hope to be honored with many similar favors from our brethren in Utah and elsewhere, whose correspondence will be duly appreciated, and orders faithfully honored:

NEPHI, Dec. 25, 1854.

DEAR BR. SNOW:—It was with pleasure I received your prospectus of the St Louis Luminary, which was great satisfaction unto us; showing that you had arrived at the place of your destination, and had engaged yourself in a good work; a work that I trust will be of great value to the Saints. May the Lord bless you, my brother, in so good an undertaking, and inspire thine heart, that thy pen may speak that comfort and consolation to the Saints, which will be a blessing to the kingdom of our God, for we are anxious to hear from thee and thy welfare. May the Luminary go with speed to all nations, and give great satisfaction to those who sit in darkness, and cause the honest-hearted to rejoice, and light their path to Zion, that thy virtues, thy love, and thine examples may be followed and imitated by the noble and worthy of the last days.

I did not receive your prospectus until the 7th of this month. I immediately went from house to house canvassing for subscribers, and I have obtained over sixty. You will please send us the paper. I think the brethren will be punctual to pay.

Nephi, since you was here, has prospered greatly. Our fortifications are almost complete, as you will see by the notice inserted in the Deseret News. Our fall and winter has been unusually fine; the highest peaks of the mountain are scarcely covered with snow, and now, while I am writing, it is comfortably warm. My boys are finishing up some thrashing to-day, and the brethren are laying up the adobies of the second story of our tithing house, and everything is going on with spirit and alacrity.

We are all well and enjoying good health, and the health of the city is generally good, and peace and union prevails. We have had three days of feasting, dancing, rejoicing, &c., for the favors we have received from a kind and bountiful Father. With this I conclude, praying that the choicest blessing of Heaven may be yours forever, Amen.

Progress of the Gospel in Texas—Interesting Prospects.

WASHINGTON Co., Texas, April 9.

BR. ERASTUS SNOW:

Dear Sir—I take up my pen to write you another letter. Since my last, I have preached several times. The interest felt in the truth I am proclaiming seems to increase every day, and the word appears to be taking deep root in the community.

Yesterday the number that turned out to hear me preach was much greater than on any former occasion. The spirit rested upon me mightily, and the people gave very great attention. One man and his whole family have already come forward for baptism. This man is a member of the County Court, and a Deacon in the Baptist church of more than thirty years standing. On Saturday and Sunday next, the Baptists hold a protracted meeting, when he intends meeting with his Baptist brethren, explain to them the reasons for the change in his religious sentiments, and bid them a final adieu. This done, he and his entire household will go down to the water, and by baptism and the laying on of hands, will become adopted citizens of the Kingdom of God.

This will be a heavy blow to the Baptist church here, and no doubt will cause immense excitement. Already, Slander, with her thousand tongues, is busy giving circulation to whole catalogues of old stories, that have been worn thread-bare this many a day; occasionally a new one is started, suited to the particular locality; but, generally, they are so devoid of any semblance of truth, that they are seldom circulated, only among those in whose craniums the bump of gullibility is immensely developed.

Thus you will see, dear brother, that the Lord is opening the way for the spread of the Gospel in Texas.

I think it altogether likely that I shall remain in this part of the country for some time. My Post-office is Brenham, where I should be glad to receive letters from my old friends; having traveled so much the past winter, and so recently arrived in these parts, I presume many of them have not been able to keep track of me.

Please to remember me in your prayers, and believe me ever to be, Yours, &c.

PRESTON THOMAS.

ST, LOUIS, April 24, 1855.

PRESIDENT SNOW:

Dear Brother—Thinking that a short account of my labors and travels since I last wrote you, would be interesting to you and your numerous readers, I avail myself of this opportunity of writing.

I have traveled and preached considerably in Alabama and Tennessee, and finally succeeded in organizing a small company from the Busy Creek Branch, Perry Co., Alabama.

On Saturday, the 17th of March, I left with my little company of Saints, on their way to Great Salt Lake City. We took the Tuscaloosa road, passed through the city of Tuscaloosa, which is situated on the south side of the Black Warrior, thence to Fayette Court house; at this place we took the Russellville road for Russellville, passed through the same, thence to Tuscumbia, six miles this side of Florence; at this place we crossed the Tennessee river in a horse boat, passed through Florence both north and south, thence to Lawrenceburg, and from there to Mt. Pleasant, in Maury Co., Tennessee. The next village that we passed through was Williamsport; this place is just three miles from my mother's residence, at which place we arrived March the 31st, and on the Sunday following, I held two meetings. On Monday, the 2nd of April, we left Gordon's ferry on our way to Nashville, the capital of the State of Tennessee. On Wednesday, the 4th of April, we arrived in the city of Nashville. A few days before our arrival, the Penitentiary was burned down. At 1 o'clock in the afternoon we went on board the steamboat G. J. Chide, Mr. Davis, Captain; at 6 o'clock we left the city of Nashville on our way to Cairo, were we arrived at about 3 o'clock on the 6th inst; that evening we went on board the steamboat Yateman, bound for St. Louis, at which place we arrived Sunday, the 8th of April, in pretty good health.

I find, on reviewing my journal, that I have traveled about 1200 miles, held 9 meetings, and through the blessing of the Great Jehovah, and by his Almighty power, was enabled to accomplish his will to a certain extent in gathering a small company of the Saints from the southern country.

In conclusion, I am happy to say that the blessing of the Lord has been with me in a marvellous manner ever since I have been on this mission, and to his name be all the glory, both now and forever more, Amen. H. W. CHURCH.

We have received the following note from Elder Andrus, dated April 21st, on board the Golden State near Boonville:

Pres. Snow—All is well. A good feeling prevails on board. We seem to hold control over the spirits of the officers of this boat. Much has been said and taught by the brethren on board, and I have confidence, that by faith and prudence, much good will be done.

We have had a meeting to exhort and instruct the Saints. To-morrow we shall have preaching, and if anything worthy of note takes place, we will communicate the same.

May Heaven's choice blessings be with you in all your labors, is my constant prayer.

My kind love to the brethren, and accept the same yourself. Yours, &c. MILO ANDRUS.

Extracts of Letters from Richard Ballantyne.

ATCHISON, Camp of Israel, April 14th, 1855.

MY DEAR PRES. SNOW:—I wrote you by return of the Golden State, and in that letter gave you a brief account of our passage up the river to Atchison, and as I expect a steamer down from St. Joseph today, I proceed to write you such things as our own experience and the Holy Spirit may suggest.

In the first place, I would say the town of Atchison is yet in its infancy, and does not number many inhabitants. The citizens who are interested in the welfare of the town, and who have invested capital for its improvement, are friendly towards us. The Town Committee are particularly disposed to favor us and our emmigration. Some of the mechanics are rather hostile in their feelings, but their influence is not extensive. They held a meeting two nights ago, for the purpose of regulating the prices of labor, but they got to quarrelling among themselves, and did not accomplish anything definate. We hope by minding our own business, and letting theirs alone, to gain favor in the estimation of all good men. The influential citizens warmly support us with their conversation and their means, according to their ability.

Labor is plenty, though not always of the right kind to suit our people. A great many men are wanted to make rails, but the English weavers and cotton spinners, &c., would not make great wages at such employment; neither can men who have been accustomed to more laborious labor, but who have never handled the axe, make much progress at such work. We intend, however, to get as many employed as is possible at some kind of work or other, so that the expenses of the camp may be fully met. Twenty-five of our men have been already employed at various kinds of labor for a few days. Twelve men will go to work on Monday making rails; as many more will be employed grading a street from the levee over the hill as soon as tools can be obtained. I have been under the necessity of sending to Weston for some spades, shovels, picks and wheelbarrows, with a small quantity of leather to mend the shoes of the camp. We have three shoe makers in camp that could be more profitably employed mending shoes than at anything else; so if you will send us a stock of leather, we could make a very economical use of it.

The Town Committee are willing to give us all the labor at their disposal. The store-house they intend building is not yet begun, though the foundation is nearly completed, and the committee manifest great anxiety to have it ready in a short time. I think it may be ready to receive goods in two or, at most, in three weeks.

Eight of our men have been working yesterday and to-day, and by this evening, the job will be completed, and a pretty good landing for goods made.

The boat is just at hand, so I must close this communication before I have well begun. I would say Br. Siler went up to Jackson's point this morning for six yoke of cattle and two wagons. Team work is good; demand and prices are high. Our health is generally good. The Danish brethren here are well.

From your Friend and Brother in the New and Everlasting Covenant,

RICHARD BALLANTYNE.

We have received a second letter from Br. Ballantyne, dated, Atchison, April 16th, from which we extract the following items:

We had three good meetings in camp yesterday. The brethren and sisters feel well; their fears are gone, and confidence, brotherly love, and much of the spirit of the Lord exists in our midst. This morning nearly all of the brethren are employed at various kinds of labor.

We have lost one child that has been sick a long time. Three or four aged people are much reduced, chiefly with diarrhea, and it may be that we shall soon have to part with some of them; nevertheless, the general health of the people is good, and for this I feel grateful to God, our Eternal Father.

The country around Atchison is high, and the land beautifully rolling, and rather inclined to be hilly in the immediate vicinity of the river, and I should judge this to be as healthy a point as any on the Missouri river, that I have seen. We are encamped on a beautiful slope, having an extensive and cheerful prospect in front, and a good spring of water close by, and timber immediately on our right.

Our camp is less than half a mile from the river, and is conveniently located for the brethren who work.

Yesterday I sent to Jackson's Point for twenty-two new milch cows for the benefit of the camp. A little grass is springing up in some of the moist bottoms, and I think by the time they arrive, they can be sustained, and our expenses will be considerably reduced.

No spring rains have yet come; the country is parched, and many of the farmers will not sell their grain till we have some refreshing showers; flour is consequently on the rise; so also is the price of corn and bacon.

I have not yet had leisure to visit other parts of the country, and have no reliable information upon which to base calculations concerning the future prices of provisions. We are now getting most of our provisions from the Town Committee. While we work for them they have agreed to furnish what we need at first cost and carriage. They are fair dealing men, and manifest a friendly and kind disposition.

I have not yet visited the claims of land which the brethren made prior to our arrival, but I intend going to see them in a few days; and when we get the cattle, any additional improvements that may be necessary to secure them, we will make. It may be necessary for a few families to go and occupy the cabins; it will probably the most effectually secure them, as many people are coming into the Territory and settling on the lands around.

The Danish brethren whom we found here—about sixteen in number—have moved into our encampment, and so also have the others whom we found here.

We need some saleratus or yeast powders to raise our bread. Soap also is needed; it can be shipped from St. Louis much cheaper than we can buy it here, and we cannot at present get it here at any price; please to send a few boxes, also some rope to tie our cattle and cows,

The river being now up, I suppose letters will reach you with more certainty.

Nothing else necessary to be written upon occurs to me at present, so may the Lord bless and prosper you. I remain yours truly, &c.

RICHARD BALLANTYNE.

Miscellaneous.

Published by request.

TO MY SISTERS.

Sisters, when the evening twilight
Gathers round your early home,
Then to you my spirit wanders—
Then what thronging memories come.

Thoughts of days long since departed,
When your hearts were all mine own,
When but e'en the thoughts of parting,
Caused the bitter tear to come.

Sisters, since our first sad parting,
Many weeks and months have fled;
Cherished ones have left our dwelling—
Numbered with the silent dead.

Oft while silent tears are falling,
I recall your look and tone,
Whilst fond memory brings before me
Visions of your distant home.

Now, though far away, I bless you,
Peace attend you all your days,
May an unseen power protect you,
Ever guide in wisdom's ways.

Then when earthly cares are ended—
Doubts and fears forever gone,
Oh! how sweet to meet in heaven,
Where farewells are all unknown.

J. N.

From the Millennial Star.

THE MORMONS AND THEIR DESTINY.

We publish elsewhere another singular Mormon sermon or lecture, delivered by Elder Orson Hyde, at Deseret, on the 6th of October last. It appears to contain nothing particularly new, but reiterates, almost in the same old language, the same old fallacies about the Bible and polygamy, which have been the stock in trade of the Mormon orators for some time past. Simultaneously with this discourse, a letter, genuine or spurious, we will not undertake to say which, appears in several of the papers, signed Sarah Young and Eliza Williams, in which one of these females announces that she intends to deliver lectures on Mormondom, and that she will expose Brigham Young and his friends thoroughly, having had ample opportunities for acquiring information on this subject while an inmate of the harem of that modern apostle. All this looks very much like the puff anticipatory. Mrs. Sarah Young may have been, as she says, the spiritual wife of a Mormon chief, and may have seen strange things in Utah, for aught we know to the contrary; but her way of announcing the fact reminds one so strongly of Joice Heth, and the Fejee mermaid, and the woolly horse and that order of humbugs, that her threatened expose of Mormon horrors will pass, in the minds of nine people out of ten, for a mere trick to draw audiences to her lectures.

It is pure folly to talk of the Mormons contemptuously and slightingly. They are a great fact; a living body, growing greater and more formidable day after day. While thoughtless people here are sneering at their polygamy, they are adding to their numbers by the thousands, and becoming more zealous in proportion to the slights put upon them.—Planted in the heart of the continent and acknowledging some sort of dependence upon the United States, they still regard themselves as a race apart, talk of the American people as they would of foreigners, and evidently look forward to a separate and distinct destiny of their own. We may laugh at them, rail at them, threaten them as we please; they are growing all the better for our ill-will, and gaining proselytes from all parts of the world. We cannot, either by contempt or violence, evade the solution of the problem which is every day drawing nearer and nearer, and which some day must be solved, if it cost the Union its existence; what is to be done with the Mormons?

The closer that problem comes, the more interesting grows the resemblance—so often noted—between the followers of Mahomet and those of Joe Smith. Events, we know, repeat themselves in a never varying cycle; and it does seem, on reading the lives of Mahomet and Joe Smith, as though the latter had been intended to play in the nineteenth century the part the former did in the seventh.—Both founders of new religions, a striking similarity in the times at which they flourished afforded both a favorable prospect of success. Sale, following Prideaux, says of the period at which Mahomet appeared—"What by the ambition of the clergy, and what by drawing the abstrusest niceties into controversy, and dividing and subdividing about them into endless schisms and contentions, men had destroyed that peace, love and charity from among them which the Gospel was given to promote, they had lost the whole substance of their religion while they thus eagerly contended for their own imaginations concerning it; and in a manner quite drove Christianity out of the world by those very controversies in which they disputed with each other about it." Would it be possible to paint the present state of the Christian world, with the myriads of sects and churches and various readings of the Bible, and countless hollow forms, in language more vivid than this? The coincidence continues—"Men of all conditions," says Sale, made it their sole business to get money by any means." This was said of Asia in the sixth, not America in the nineteenth century. "As the Roman and Persian empires were declining, so Arabia, at Mohammed's setting up was strong and flourishing; having been peopled at the expense of the Grecian empire, whence the violent proceedings of the domineering sects forced many to seek refuge in a free country, as Arabia then was, where they who could not enjoy tranquility and their conscience at home, found a secure retreat." Substitute "European" for "Roman, Persian and Grecian," and "America" for "Arabia" and this passage might find a fitting place in any history of the United States.

We are too near the days of Joe Smith to judge him fairly yet, and it is quite impossible to find out the truth concerning Brigham Young. But there is a striking analogy between their religion and that of Mahomet. The latter came at a period when men were distracted by discussions on subordinate points of theology and built his system on the simple formula "There is no God but God, and Mahomet is his prophet." Every one understood this at a glance. The Mormons, as will be seen by the sermon published elsewhere, aim at a similar simplicity. Mahomet appealed to the passions of the people, turned their vicious propensities to his own advantage by legalizing polygamy and setting the example himself. So did Joe Smith; and who shall say that the passions are less powerful to-day than they were twelve centuries ago, in the deserts of America than in those of Arabia?

There are many people, we know, who will smile at historical parallels of this character, perhaps think them singular, but bestow on them no lasting attention. This may be error. The time is at hand when we shall be bound, yes, be bound, in spite of ourselves, to dispose of the Mormons. How is it to be done? Shall we re-establish the intolerent laws of other ages, and abolish liberty of conscience? The spirit of the present time is opposed to anything of the kind. But shall we coalesce with the Mormons, give them the right hand of friendship, and sit down beside them as brothers? Impossible. If John Smith the Mormon has six wives, we cannot send John Brown the Christian to jail for having two. There must either be no Mormons among us, or we must all be Mormons. There is no way out of the labyrinth but over the corpse of Mormondom or over the corpse of Christianity.

Sooner or later the conflict must come. We must put them down or they must put us down. This may seem ridiculous at present when a company of infantry could on a pinch set Deseret to rights. But there are over two millions of Mormons in the world, all of whom have become Mormons within the past ten or fifteen years; any one can calculate at this rate of progress how many there will be in the year 1875. Who knows, too, that the contest may not come at a time when the slavery question is distracting the Union, and every man's hand turned against his neighbor? And when it does come, who will fight the best, think you, men who are fighting for their Church, their faith, their homes, their rights, their social existence, or men who are fighting for the maintenance of an abstract law, and the upholding of intolerance? 'Tis a subject for grave and anxious thought.—[N. Y. Herald, Feb. 14.

From the Deseret News.

CALIFORNIA CORRESPONDENCE.

[Extract of a Letter from Elder P. P. Pratt to Prest. Brigham Young.]

SANTA CLARA, CAL., Oct. 25, 1854.

PRESIDENT YOUNG.

Dear Brother—I am in good health and spirits. The Sandwich Islands missionaries have all sailed, except two or three, who have not the means as yet. The newspaper columns have been opened to us a little and we have laid some truth before the public through them. No door has opened as yet to procure lands for a stake in this country, nor have circumstances yet called for a stake here.

We have sent brother Merrick to Sacramento to preach; he has baptised one man, a Baptist student. We have baptised three new members in the city of San Francisco one in Union City, some twelve or fourteen in Santa Clara, and brother Horner has baptised two or three about his place, and of his kindred.

I have been twenty-five days on a mission, in connection with brother McBride, in Santa Clara, San Jose City, Santa Cruz, Panaro, &c. Court houses, school-houses, churches, and other buildings, have been kindly opened to us, and all our meetings have been well attended. Judges, lawyers, and leading spirits, and many others have listened with attention, and many are reading and inquiring with deep interest. The cry is—"Give us knowledge—we are weary with sectarian nonsense." The revolution of mind is tremendous in one who receives this work now—the truth sinks deep, the veil is rent, tradition flees away; new trains of thought expand the soul; and the whole man seems created anew. The past, the present, the future open to his astonished vision, and stretch away in an infinitude of light, and truth, and love.

It is not the work of a moment. Men come to a dead stand, stop, are amazed, overwhelmed, confounded; they ponder, search, expect every moment to run against a snag, or to find some bounds, some limits, some bottom, or top to the ocean of light; but it opens still. At length they settle down into the deep current of thought; the revolution progresses within them, and, ere they are aware, they open their mouths, and streams of light and truth rush forth to their gainsaying neighbors, or the ignorant around them. They exclaim afterwards, "Why, what ailes me? I had no idea that I knew anything, but everything is confounded which would gainsay the truth."

I think there are many souls here in California, who will one day be in the kingdom of God, but so great a revolution of mind is not the work of a moment. They see, and realize that Mormonism is everything—if it is anything at all.

We are so glad of your invitation to the Saints indeed, to come up to Utah. After searching diligently for a place for a city of holiness in this country, I have found it not as yet; but have, since receiving your letter, told the Saints that we would rendezvous in Santa Clara, and start for the mountain of the Lord's House from this point, on the first of May next. This news is hailed with a thrill of joy, and I think there will be a host of us—I feel it in my bones—at any rate, enough for a guard.

I think I can just slip home on a visit then, unless you order otherwise. There also will be brothers McBride, Tanner, Hawkins, Farrar, Bigler, Chancey West, Dewey, and the Lord knows how many others. We have six months to prepare, so we shall not go "in haste, nor by flight."

The old members in this country, who are alive, are rejoicing in spirit, and doing all they can, as well as the new ones. I think there are some fifty active members in this upper country; and there are many more candidates for membership. One man who speaks Spanish, and his wife, a Spanish lady, have become deeply interested on reading the books; they have sent for me, and feel bound for the Lake, if I will advise them to go there. I have sent an appointment to see them.

A learned Frenchman and his son, who also speak Spanish, have become convinced by reading the works, and hearing; they give up their Catholicism, and are now reading the French Book of Mormon. God bless you all. P. P. PRATT.

A CHALLENGE!

EDITORS CHRONICLE:—I perceive by the tone of the press, that politicians, moralists and religionists are in trouble about Utah and Polygamy. "War!" "war!" "blood" and "destruction," to the poor heathen Mormons! But—thanks to the pious Methodists—the Mormons are going to be converted first. Missionaries are a-going to be sent them.

It is the right of the President of the United States to appoint a Governor, and to send troops to Utah. The citizens of that territory know this, and have no objections. But suppose a Governor and troops went there, to interfere with the rights and liberties of the people, and trample on the laws, (of which, by the by, there is no danger,) why, then, of course, the aggressors, in common with all others are amenable to the civil courts, and are liable to fine, imprisonment, or execution, according to their crimes. Even if they only threaten, they might be bound over to keep the peace. The Courts of Utah have never yet been found remiss in the execution of the laws. What is the particular crime alleged against the Governor and citizens of Utah, for which they are threatened with destruction or conversion?

We will be told it is Polygamy. Well; "Sin" says the Apostle, "is the transgression of law." We should greatly prefer conversion to murder—And here, permit me to suggest a plan for a wholesale conversion, without a drop of blood, or even the trouble of a journey to Utah. I am here in California as an official member, and representative of the church in Utah, for which I can produce credentials. I am willing to meet a convention of the ablest lawyers and clergy to be found in our country. And I hereby pledge my honor that I will publicly renounce polygamy, and that the church I represent will do the same, on the following conditions, viz:

The Old and New Testaments, the constitution and laws of the United States, and the laws of Utah Territory, shall be the standard; and if, in all this wide range, one item of law can be found wherein God, angels, men, prophets, apostles, the Son of God, or the Holy Spirit, have made a plurality of wives a crime, a transgression of law, or an immorality, then, on these conditions, we will renounce polygamy. But till this is done, we shall hold the law of God on the subject of matrimony, including a plurality of wives, as a most sacred institution, binding on our consciences—in the free exercise of which we claim the protection so freely and fully guaranteed by the constitution of our common country.

If editors in general throughout the country will please publish this, it may tend to investigation and enlightenment, either of the "poor, ignorant Mormons," or of those who think them so much out of the way. PARLEY P. PRATT.

SANTA CLARA, Nov. 22, 1854.

RIOT IN CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, April 21.—A disgraceful row occurred here this morning, growing out of the prospective Maine Law and some license suits, now pending before the County Court. A small procession of some intoxicated Germans and Irish marched through the principal streets to the Court House square, where they proceeded to collect a crowd by means of a drum and fife and a few other musical instruments. Some members of the police ordered them to stop, but the order was disregarded, and signs of resistance were manifested. The police then knocked down the drummer and one or two of the ringleaders. This was the signal for a general fight, which immediately ensued. One man was killed and five or six were seriously wounded. A large crowd collected in the square, and the principals in the affray were arrested and put in jail, and the balance dispersed. There has been considerable excitement, and some demonstrations of hostility since the occurrence, but no more bloodshed is apprehended.

JEALOUSY often indicates a want of understanding.

HE that gives to a grateful man, puts his money at compound interest.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

REMOVAL.

MRS. J. VINCENT, MIDWIFE, East side of Fourth street, between Market and Walnut streets, St. Louis, Mo.
Mrs. J. Vincent wishes to inform her friends and the public, that she has removed from between 8th and 9th, on Market street, to the above place, and hopes by strict attention to her duties, to merit a further continuance of their patronage. [apr 14 21 3m

TO EMIGRANTS.

C. B. HUBBELL, Jr., 102 4th st., St. Louis
Informs persons travelling towards
SALT LAKE OR CALIFORNIA,
That they will find at his store, the largest stock of DRY GOODS in the city, comprising every variety of kinds adapted to their wants, which he will sell at prices fully TWENTY-FIVE per cent. lower than any other house in the trade, to which your attention is invited.
N. B. One price only ever asked, and no deviation. [apr 14 21 3m

GREAT ATTRACTION
AT
WILSON & COOPER'S NEW STORE!
The attention of Emigrant starting for
UTAH, CALIFORNIA, AND OREGON,
Is respectfully called to our IMMENSE STOCK of
FASHIONBLE DRY GOODS!
Comprising every article in the trade, from the plain substantial articles of every-day use, to the finest and most elegant fabrics of first class Dry Goods and LINEN DRAPERY.
Our goods are all marked in PLAIN FIGURES, from which no abatement is allowed under any circumstances.
N. B. A discount of FIVE per cent. will be allowed to parties going west, on all bills over $100. WILSON & COOPER,
apr 14 21] Cor. 4th and Locust sts., St. Louis.

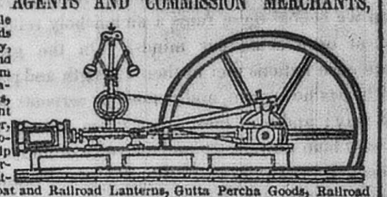
OUTFITS FOR CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE AND OREGON.

WM. C. WILSON,
DEALER IN
Groceries, Wines, Liquors, and Provisions,; Pilot Bread and Crackers,
No. 195 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
Is prepared to furnish everything in his line, at the lowest rates, and from past experience in the trade, feels assured, that parties intending to cross the plains, will find it to their interest to give him a call, and compare prices before purchasing elsewhere.
ON HAND AND FOR SALE LOW, THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES:
TEAS—A choice assortment of Imperial, Gun Powder, Young Hyson and Black.
COFFEE—Rio, Havana, Laguayra and Java—burnt and ground.
SUGAR—Crushed, Lump, Powdered, Clarified, New Orleans and Brown—all grades.
MOLASSES—Golden Syrup, Sugar House and Plantation.
LIQUORS—Best brands of Pure French Brandy, Holland Gin, Jamaica Rum, Irish, Scotch, Monongahela and Bourbon Whiskey, and all kinds of Domestic Liquors.
WINES—Pure Port, Maderia, Malaga, Sherry, Muscat, Champagne, Claret and White, Cordials, &c., &c.
BACON—Ham, Sides and Shoulders, Dried Beef and Beef Tongue.
FRUIT—Raisins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, Citron, Dried Apples and Peaches, &c., &c.
SUNDRIES—All kinds of Pickles, Sauce, Ketchups, Spice, Fancy Soaps, Candles, Oil, Gas, Fish, Mats, Cords, Buckets, Baskets, Brooms, Tubs, Lobsters, Oysters, Sardines, Cooking Extracts, Essences, Arrow Root, Farina, Sago, Corn Starch, Oat Meal, Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Maccaroni, Vermicelli, Honey, &c., &c. [apr 7 20 2m

GOODIN & TOOKER,
GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,
No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.
HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.
We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfilment.
Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand, Lamps repaired, reglided and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 19 6m

W. H. HUISH,
MACHINIST, Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as
PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERMLY.
mar 24] [18 3m

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MAIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.



N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.
Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,
Residence, No. 328 South Side Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets:
Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,
MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also, Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice.
All the above articles are warranted of the best American Iron.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.
TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by
ALFRED PERSEY,
St. Louis, Mo.
The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE and OREGON.
EMIGRANTS
Can be supplied with every variety of
PILOT BREAD & CRACKERS
Baked expressly for the overland Emigration, and WARRANTED to KEEP, at
J. B. WILLSON'S BAKERY,
No. 166 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
The trade supplied at the LOWEST RATES. [apr 7 20 2m

UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory.
EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L. K. & Co.

CATTLE.
THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all of which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. B. & J. H. FLEMING,
Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.
REFERENCE.
ISAAC HOCKADAY, Independence, O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HADUS & MULLEN, Wayne City.
N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon, and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood of Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!
M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Grocaries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WESTPORT, MO.
S. P. KELLER,
DEALER IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE,
Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,
Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot
No. 27 Commercial Street,
WESTPORT, MO.
Feb. 24, 14 3m*

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.
THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo. JAMES W. ELLIS.
Feb. 24, 14 3m*

C. E. KEARNEY. W. R. BERNARD.
KEARNEY & BERNARD,
METROPOLITAN STORE,
WESTPORT, MO.,
DEALERS IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WESTON, MO.
OUT-FITTING FOR THE PLAINS.
THOSE crossing the Plains this Spring, will find it to their interest to call on the undersigned, where they will find a general assortment of every thing necessary in out-fitting for such expeditions.
Goods received and stored upon liberal terms.
Feb. 24, 14 3m A. G. BOONE, Weston, Mo.

D. O. TUTT. J. F. BAKER.
TUTT & BAKER,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.
WESTON, MO.,
Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.
March 3, 1855. 15 3m

J. S. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.
EVANS & MITCHELL,
MERCHANTS,
At Weston, Missouri,
HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

TO EMIGRANTS.
J D HARPER. T J HARPER.
AT the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especialy of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we willl sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.
mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

NOTICE.
I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware, and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at
ST. LOUIS PRICES.
mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

LEAVENWORTH, K. T.
G. M. & A. FISHER,
Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,
ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as Andirons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.
They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 15 3m

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.
STORAGE AND OUTFITS.
LEWIS N. REES,
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,
IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pistols, Bowy-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.
Groceries and Provisions.
Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.
He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Hentingcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 15 3m

BLACKSMITHING.
T. S. ABURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommendation.
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb. 1855. [mar 3, 15 3m.

KANSAS, MO.
H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.
NORTHRUP & CHICK,
KANSAS, MISSOURI,
WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.
We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.
Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

PHIL. ROCHILD & CO.,
HAVE constantly on hand in Kansas, Mo., a full supply of Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Groceries, Gutta Percha Goods, Provisions, Tinware, &c., which they will sell on as liberal terms as they can be bought for in Upper Missouri. [mar 3, 15 3m.

OUT-FITTING.
R. CHARLES takes this method of informing the emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand a full supply of Groceries, Builder's Hardware, Cutlery, Boots and Shoes, and all grades of staple Dry Goods, which he will sell at wholesale and retail. Thankful for former patronage, he solicits a further trial on the levee Kansas, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

BLACKSMITHING AND GRAZING.
THE Subscriber has a Blacksmith Shop, lots on the prairie, and has Cattle for sale two miles from Westport, on the State line. His former business transactions with the Latter-day Saints and other Emigration having given general satisfaction, he solicits a trial in future.
Feb. 54, 14 3m* J. W. MARRION, Kansas, Mo.

JOEL WALKER. W. H. CHICK.
WALKER & CHICK,
Receiving, Forwarding, and Commission Merchants,
KANSAS, MO.
Feb. 24, 1855. [14 3m.

RIDDLESBARGER & CO.,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
Commission and Forwarding Merchants,
AT KANSAS, MO.,
HAVING done a heavy business in our line for the emigration of 1854, we would respectfully solicit further patronage. [Feb 24, 14 3m

PROVISIONS AND OUTFITTING.
J. H. COLE & CO., Corner of Main and Water streets, under the printing office, Kansas Mo., have constantly on hand a large supply of Provisions and Outfitting Goods, and having done business in their line at this place for some years with the Western Emigration, they earnestly solicit a share of their patronage this season. [Feb 24, 14 3m.

INDEPENDENDE, MO.
LEATHER of all descriptions, for Saddlery, Harness, and Shoemaking purposes to be had at O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

OUT-FITTING!
O. H. COGSWELL,
At his Old Stand in Independence, Mo.,
WILL have on hand at the commencement of the out-fitting season, a large and well selected stock of outfitting goods for the Plains to Great Salt Lake City, and will furnish them on reasonable terms. He will keep constantly on hand, Flour, Bacon, Sugar, Coffee, Rice, Dried Beef, Hard Bread, and in a word, every article necessary for crossing the Plains. He flatters himself from his knowledge in that department of his business, having been a trader for the last four years in Great Salt Lake City, and his frequent passing over the Plains, that he will be well prepared to give general satisfaction.
And to the Salt Lake emigration he would respectfully say that Independence possesses advantages in point of location for out let directly, and for procuring Wagons, Stock, Provisions, &c., that no other place above St. Louis possesses. O. H. COGSWELL.
REFFERENCES.
ERASTUS SNOW, St. Louis, ORSON SPENCER, Cincinnati, O.,
MILO ANDRUS, St. Louis, EL. JOHN TAYLOR, New York,
CHAS. BASSETT, Springdeid, O., JOHN HOW, St. Louis,
Feb. 24] WOODS, CHRISTY & CO., St. Louis. [14 3m.

BOOTS AND SHOES of every variety can be had at
O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

BENJ. CROWTHER,
DEALER in Hardware, Table and Pocket Cutlery, Mechanics' Tools of every description, consisting in part of Axes of all kinds, Augers do., Awls, patent, with bitts, Bench Screws, Chisels of every description, Auger and Chisel Handles. Also, Blacksmith's Tools of every description, together with a large stock of Miscellaneous articles, such as Brushes, Paints, Japanned Tin Ware, Spoons, Rifles, Guns, Pistols, and other articles too numerous to mention, in fact, everything used by Mechanics, Housekeepers and the public in general, all of which will be sold low for cash. A liberal discount made to mechanics buying by the quantity. Call and see. Store situated south side of the Court House.
BENJAMIN CROWTHER,
Feb. 24, 143m. Independence, Jackson Co., Mo.

ISAAC HOCKADAY,
DEALER in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps and Ready Made Clothing, together with a large and general assortment of out-fitting goods of every description, suitable for California, Salt Lake, and New Mexico outfits.
Store north side of Public Square, Independence, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

FLOUR AND MEAL.
THE Subscriber takes this method of saying to the Emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand large quantities of Flour and Meal, which he will sell at as reasonable rates as such articles can be bought for in the up country, at his mill, known as the Jackson Mills, near Independence. He will also have a large supply in Independence, Mo.
THOMAS PITCHER.
REFERENCES: WILSON & PARKER; JESSE H. NOWLAND.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WAGONS AND YOKES.
YOUNG & SMITH are prepared to fill orders for Wagons and Ox Yokes to the Western Emigration. They have on hand a large lot the best Wagons made in the Western Country, and can supply any number of Yokes that may be desired. They will deliver their Yokes or Wagons in lots at any point on the river from Independence to Leavenworth City.
Independence, Mo., 1855. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WM. & JOHN McCOY,
Independence, Mo.,
DEALERS in Staple and Fancy Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Camp Equippage and Outfitting Goods of every description.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

Poetical Department.

DEATH.

BY LAURA.

The spectre started forth,
At morning's calmest hour;
He entered in the poor man's cot,
To weild his deadly power.
He left two weeping parents,
With looks of anguish wild;
For they had seen the spectre come,
And breathe upon their child.

The spectre stalked abroad,
At noonday's brightest hour;
He entered in the rich man's door,
To wield his deadly power.
There stood an aged man,
With locks of snowy hue;
Wealth's caras had checked the streams of life,
But now, Death called him too.
But though his brow was furrowed,
And wrinkled was his cheek;
Although his voice had husky grown,
So that he scarce could speak,
Still, still he clung to life,
And prayed that Death would spare;
But no, the spectre stood unmoved,
Nor heard the suppliant's prayer.

The spectre coursed his way,
At evening's peaceful hour;
He entered in at pleasure's gates,
To wield his deadly power.
Amid a dancing group,
There whirled a maiden fair,
With rosy cheeks and sparkling eye,
And curls of golden hair;
Unseen by her Death came
And threw his arm around her her waist;
She stopped—she pressed her burning brow,
And fell in his embrace.

The spectre stayed him not,
Till midhight's silent hour;
Then entered he the halls of vice,
To wield his deadly power.
There sat a gay young man,
Within a crowded room,
Sipping the wine cup's ruddy glow,
Unconscious of his doom.
Death came and touched his arm,
And bade him raise his head,
And with a fearful, fearful awe.
He tremblingly obeyed.
He saw a hideous form,
With arms outstretched to clasp;
He writhed, he struggled to escape,
But perished in Death's grasp.

Thus faithful does Death work,
Among our fallen race,
To wild and grave, to young and old,
He shows his fearful face.
And all must go! No vain excuse
Can turn him from his path;
He comes, by God sent forth,
To appease avenging wrath.

AMERICA—A LAND OF ANTIQUITIES.

We copy the following article from the Minnesota Pioneer; which will be found full of interesting items concerning the ancient ruins of America.

To our readers who believe in the Book of Mormon it will afford additional evidence of the truth of that sacred Book. To the most skeptical and incredulous, it cannot fail to awaken curiosity and the spirit of enquiry concerning the origen and history of the mighty nations of antiquity who dwelt upon this land and who now speak from the mouldering ruins of these vast cities, gigantic monuments, superb palaces, gorgeous temples, and yet more plainly in the ancient records of their Prophets, which were translated by the Prophet Joseph and sent forth unto all the nations of the earth.

"Throughout the length and breadth of the entire country—washed, as it is, by the waters of two mighty oceans, and abounding in natural resources—enormous, beyond what is possible to conceive—we find much to admire in the aspect and beauty of nature, and whether we travel from the distant shores of Maine and New Brunswick to the golden sands of California, and the shores of the great Pacific, or from the bright, crystal lakes of Minnesota to the orange groves of Florida, we behold throughout this immense extent the features of nature, grand and beautiful in every form and aspect. The mineralogist, the geologist, the naturalist, the botanist, and even the antiquarian, have all a rich field there.

"Strange as it may appear, America abounds in antiquities so extensive, so beautiful, and so majestic, as to rival those of Thebes or Nineveh. Ruins of ancient cities, of immense extent; fortifications, mounds, and pyramids; temples with walls built of hewn stone, showing a refined taste in architecture—and adorned with human figures, beautifully executed; large altars, ornamented with hieroglyphics, probably giving a record of those who reared them, but which no man has been able to decypher; remains of ancient palaces, with beautiful specimens of sculpture and painting, with many other marks of ancient greatness, prove to us that it is not a new world, but that a powerful empire existed at a very remote period of time, teeming with population highly skilled in arts, and in a state of civilization far beyond anything we have been led to conceive of the aborigines, previous to the discovery of the continent by Europeans.

"The antiquities of America extend from the eastern shores of Maine and Massachusetts to the Pacific, and from the great lakes and British dominions, to Peru and La Plata, in South America; in fact, throughout the extent of both continents. Immense forests grow over the ruins of large cities, and the gigantic size of the trees, with indications that other generations of trees sprung up and grew before them, proves that the ruins were in existence before the Christian Era. In every portion of the United States, interesting ruins have been discovered. In the State of New York have been found sculptured figures of 100 animals of different species, executed in a style far superior to anything exhibited by any of the existing tribes of Indians. The State of Ohio abounds in ruins of towers, fortifications, with extensive mound and pyramids. At Marietta, in this State, beautiful pottery, silver and copper ornaments, and pearls of great beauty and lustre, have been dug up from the earth. In the caves of Tennessee and Kentucky, mummies have been found, in a high state of preservation, clothed with garments and skins of various texture inlaid with feathers; like discoveries have been made at Carrolton, near Milwaukee, in the State of Wisconsin—ruins of huge fortifications appear. Similar ruins appear in the State of Missouri. On the south side of Missouri river, in the western portion of this State, is an enclosure of some 500 acres, which includes the ruins of a building, (no doubt an ancient tower,) with walls 150 feet high, at 80 feet wide at the base, attached, to which are a redoubt and a citadel, with work much resembling the structure of a tower in Europe. But it is in the south of Mexico, that magnificent and beautiful ruins present themselves in abundance. Ruins of majestic cities, and magnificent temples and altars, with beautiful works of sculpture, tastefully wrought; and palaces adorned with painting—colors chiefly sky blue, and light green—which show by their richness and elegance, to be the work of highly cultivated people.

"These ruins majestic and beautiful in appearance, but overgrown with thick forests of mahogany and cedar of immense dimensions and great age, prove to the world that a great empire existed here at a very remote period of time, and that this empire teemed with an immense population of people highly skilled in the mechanical arts, and in an advanced state of civilization. The most extensive ruins are to be found at the Uxmal and Palenque, in the south-east of Mexico. At Uxmal are immense pyramids, coated with stone, and quadrangular stone edifices and terraces. The highest of these pyramids is 130 feet, and on the summit it supports a temple; on one facade of the temple are four human figures, cut in stone of great exactness and elegance. The hands are crossed upon the breast, the head is covered in something like helmet, about the neck is a garment of the skin of an alligator, and over each body is a figure of a death's head and bones.

"At Palenque are immense ruins of a city of great extent, with the remains of a royal palace. One temple, that of Corpan, was 520 feet by 650, and supposed to have been as large as St. Peter's at Rome. Another temple of great dimensions is here, having an entrance by a portico 100 feet long and 10 broad; it stands on an elevation of 60 feet. The pillars of the portico are adorned with hieroglyphics and other devices. Different objects of worship have been found, representations of the gods who were worshipped in this country. These temples, with fourteen large buildings, and many other objects of curiosity stand here as monuments of an ancient greatness, to remind us of the remote origin of a mighty empire. This city has been described as the Thebes of America, and travelers have supposed that it must have been sixty miles in circumference, and contained a population of 3,000,000 souls.

"Centuries must have elapsed and dynasties succeeded each other, before such orders of architecture were introduced, and a length of time must have passed before an empire would become sufficiently powerful to erect such temples, and possess a city of such vast extent. In looking back to the past, we feel interested in the imagination that this people was once in the noon-day of glory, enjoying all the fruits and luxuries of an advanced civilization, but when we behold these ruins a melancholy reflection must at once seize our minds. On the ground where once nations met in their strength and power, wild beasts now roam, and venomous serpents wend their way; and over these vast cities, where once the busy hum of industry and the voice of merriment resounded, grows the vast cedar, on whose branches the owl chatters his discordant notes, and the bat sleeps at meridian. In this country is exhibited the largest pyramid in the world—that of Cholula, near Puebla. It covers 45 acres, and is about 200 feet high; on its summit was a temple, and in the interior has been discovered a vault, roofed with beams of wood, containing skeletons and idols; several smaller pyramids surround this large one. It appears to have been formed by cutting a hill into artificial shape. Its dimensions are immense, being nearly 3 miles in circumference, and about 400 feet high. It is divided into terraces and slopes, covered with platforms, stages and bastions, elevated one above the other, and all formed with large stones skilfully cut and joined without any cement. In some respects the style of architecture resembles the Gothic, being massive and durable, in other respects it resembles the Egyptian—yet the general construction, manner, style of architecture is different from anything hitherto described in the word. As in Egypt, hieroglyphics on stones denote remarkable events, which man has yet been able to decipher. Dark shades rest on the antiquities of America, and few rays of light enliven the gloom. We have ancient history to inform us of the events of Egypt—how that empire was founded, and how it prospered and fell—we have the same on record of Babylon and Nineveh, of Greece, and Rome, and Carthage; but not the least information have we relative to those who erected these cities, what people and from whence they came; not a ray of light to dispel the dark gloom which seems to rest on the early history of America. Architecture, sculpture, painting, and all the arts that adorn civilized life, have flourished in this country, at a period far remote. There is evidence sufficient to prove that these cities were in ruins at sixteen or eighteen hundred years ago. In Palenque is the remains of an altar, over which grows an immense cedar, whose powerful roots enshrine it. The whole city is overgrown with mahogany and cedar trees, of enormous size. The concentric circles of some of these trees, the well known cycles for a year, have been counted, which showed they were indications of another generation of trees having sprung up before them. How few reflect on the fact that America is an old dominion, the seat of an ancient, mighty empire. These facts are opening themselves every day to the eyes of an astonished world, and it is hoped that the spirit of enquiry, which seems at present to animate all classes of learned men, may throw light on the early history of this remarkable region.

The Way of a Happy Life.—Lay nothing too much to heart; desire nothing to eagerly; rejoice not excessively, nor grieve too much for disasters; be not violently bent on any design; nor let any worldly cause hinder you from taking care of your soul.

DEATH ON JUDGE REID.

The Steuben Advocate of last week announces the death of the late Chief Justice of Utah, Judge Lazarus Reid, at his residence in Bath, in the 40th year of his age.

Judge Reid was highly esteemed by the people of Utah, for his upright, unprejudiced, frank and manly course pursued in his official capacity and courteous bearing as a citizen of the Territory, and also for the candor with which he expressed himself in publishing his sentiments concerning them, being in fact a complete refutation of the many slanderous reports, in circulation against the people over whose judiciary he so honorably presided.—[Mormon, 14th.

HINTS TO FARMERS.

Toads are the best protection of cabbage against lice.

Plants, when drooping, are revived by a few grains of camphor.

Pears are generally improved by grafting on mountain ash.

Sulphur is valuable in preserving grapes, &c., from insects.

Lard never spoils in warm weather, if it is cooked enough in frying out.

In feeding corn, sixty pounds ground goes as far as one hundred pounds in the kernel.

Corn meal should never be ground very fine—it injures the richness of it.

Turnips of small size have double the nutritious matter that large ones have.

Sweet olive oil is a certain cure for the bite of a rattlesnake. Apply it internally and externally.

Rats and other vermin are kept away from grain by a sprinkling of garlic, when picking sheaves.

Money skillfully expended in drying land by draining or otherwise, will be returned with ample interest.

To cure scratches on a horse, wash the legs with warm soap suds, and then with beef brine. The application will cure the worst case.

How a Remark Gets Twisted.—Mr. Smith meets Mr. Jones.

Mr. S.—Good morning. What news?

Mr. J.—Poor Higgins died very suddenly yesterday.

Mr. S.—Impossible! can't be! I met him only a few hours ago.

Mr. J.—You're mistaken. His neighbor, Mr. Johnson, told me, and he ought to know. Good morning.

Mr. S.—Well, it's a shocking affair. But here comes Johnson, and I'll ask him, anyhow. Good morning, Mr. Johnson. Sad news this about poor old Higgins.

Mr. Johnson—Sad news! What news?

Mr. S.—Jones says you told him Higgins died last night. Is it true?

Mr. J.—Nonsense! I told Jones casually in the street that Higgins' hair was dyed.

Mr. S.—Gracious powers! I breathe freer.

"Mr. Jones, don't you think marriage is a means of grace?" "Certainly anything is a means of grace that breaks up pride and leads to repentance." Scene closes with a broom handle.

Frugality may be termed the daughter of prudence, the sister of temperance, and the parent of liberty.

NOTICE.

We have received and have on sale the following books and pamphlets.

Book of Mormon,	$1 00
Book of Doctrine and Covenants,	95
Voice of Warning,	50
Spencer's Letters,	50
Hymn Books, Morocco gilt, ext.,	1 25
" " Calf "	80
" " Roan "	50
Government of God, by J. Taylor,	50
New Jerusalem, or the Fulfilment of Modern Prophecy,	15
Divine Authority of Joseph Smith,	10
Remarkable Visions,	10
Only Way to be Saved,	5
Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, by O. Pratt, 6 parts, 10cts. ea., or per sett,	40
Polygamy, by a Lady in Utah,	5
The Seer, by O. Pratt, vol. 1, to which is added 6 parts of Divine Authenticity of the book of Mormon, and Polygamy, by a Lady of Utah, elegantly bound, in one vol.	2 25
Orson Pratt's works, bound,	1 50
Times and Seasons, vols. 4, 5, and 6, well bound, ea.	1 50
Portraits of the First Presidency,	1 25

Route from England to Salt Lake may be expected in a few weeks.

We have a few numbers of the Millenial Star of vol. 17 on sale.

Those wishing any of the above books, or wishing to subscribe regularly for the Millenial Star, can apply to me every Sunday at the Church, or by post.

Apr, 14 21.] JAS. S. CANTWELL.

The Evidences Accumulate in proof of what we have long since asserted, viz: that the Mustang Liniment is the 'sine qua non' of all external remedies ever before offered to the afflicted.

We would call especial attention to the advertisement of this Liniment in our columns, and will take this occasion to say that this appears to be one of the few popular medicines that really possess all the virtues ascribed to them. In effectually curing the worst cases of Rheumatism, no matter how long standing, in an incredibly short time, and for sprains, bruises, sores, burns, or pains of any kind, it has no equal. We have heard of many cures that have been performed that really appear incredible, were they not vouched for by persons of responsibility and influence. It is said to be an infallible remedy for musquito bites.

See advertisement in another column. [17 2m

ADVERTISEMENTS.

H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.

NORTHRUP & CHICK,

KANSAS, MISSOURI,

WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.

We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.

Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

J. G. SIMPSON. D. CAMERON.

GREAT SALE.

"AUCTION GOODS"

FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THE Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time submitted to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,

No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.

Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

A. DAFT,

DEALER IN

NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.

139 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan.

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,

KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES

AT WHOLESALE PRICES,

Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,

OF THE BEST QUALITY,

At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at

NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,

St. Louis, Mo.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

NICHOLSON'S

TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,

GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,

NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.

Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

J. PARSON,

163 Morgan Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.

A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12tf.

R. TORR,

151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,

ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.

WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.

Families Supplied at their Residences.

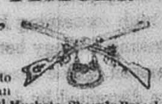
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.

T. J. ALBRIGHT,

NO. 27 MAIN STREET,

St. Louis, Mo.,



OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,

27 Main Street, East Side,

Sign of the Gilt Gun.

Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!

A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of

MAN OR ANIMALS,

Requiring an External Application.

Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of

RHEUMATISM

than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.

G. W. WESTBROOK:—

Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,

J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—

Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,

JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:

Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.

I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.

I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.

Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.

I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Oroton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.

GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS

have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:

Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.

The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.

G. W. WESTBROOK,

(Successor to A. G. BRAGG & CO.,)

Originator and Sole Proprietor.

Principal Offices, 24 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.

B. FORMON,

TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at 126 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House.

St. Louis, Missouri.

Jan. 13, 1855. [8 3m*

DR. WHITE,

HOMŒOPATHIST.

Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.

Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.

J. M'GREGOR,

WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,

75 MARKET STREET,

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article as as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.

N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

75 Market Street,

(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)

Feb. 17, 13 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

ELLISON & APPLETON,

DEALERS IN

NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,

CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.

Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,

Wholesale and Retail.

MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.

Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.

Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!

VAN, THE TEA MAN

RETAIL DEALER,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.

Dec. 23. [5 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their Interest to call on L. ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 19, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPRERE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.

Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPRERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:

50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 pockets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 26 barrels Languedoo Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPRERE.

Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,

IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS

IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY

NO. 147 MAIN STREET,

Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,

ST. LOUIS.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,

WAGON MANUFACTURER,

Corner of Broadway and Labeanme Steert,

OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.

NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MCLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. McLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your Volcanic Oil Liniment, according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.

Yours, respectfully, JOHN B. ALLRED.

Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere.

Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine how.

T. W. HOIT.

Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY

AND

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

Established A. D. 1840.

A. P. LADEW & CO.,

TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,

31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,

PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY.

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.

Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.

Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

Its fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,

OF CORINTHIAN HALL,

297 BROADWAY,

ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,

FOR THE SALE OF

FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,

FOR $4 EACH!

FOR A

LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR A

FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR A

FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

FOR AN

INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,

GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!

297 Broadway;

☞BIG HAT.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,

Practical Dyers and Scourers,

No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, south side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,

Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.

COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lakes, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 138 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.

Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.

Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,

LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,

No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set. Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired. Tailors' and Tinners' Shears, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

☞The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.

Nov. 18, '54.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, MAY 5, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XXIV.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Mailed to Subscribers at $2 per annum.
Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.
Advertisements inserted on accommodating terms.
All Communications relating to the LUMINARY should addressed to the Editor, Post-paid.

Discourse on the Prophecies, by Elder O. Pratt, Tabernacle, January 7th, 1855.

I have been requested by Br. Kimball to speak a few words upon the subject of the Ancient Prophecies. I will commence without any preliminaries, for we have not time in one short discourse to take up the prophecies systematically, and trace them down in their fulfillment to the present period; neither have we time to refer to a one hundredth part of the prophecies relating to the present period, or those that relate to the future; but we have time to say a few words, and glean up some few ideas, that have a bearing upon the present generation; and I shall endeavor to make my remarks as plain and as simple as possible.

The Latter-day Saints that are now sitting before me, and those who inhabit this Territory, are here in fulfillment of prophecy. We inhabit these mountains because the ancient prophets have predicted that such an event should take place, and we are fulfilling their predictions in this respect.

We believe in that sacred record called the Book of Mormon. Why? Because the ancient prophets have predicted that such a book should be revealed in the latter times, and it has come, accompanied with sufficient evidence to produce conviction in our minds; but if any person could persuade us that the Book of Mormon is not the book predicted by the ancient prophets, we have sufficient light and information in the prophecies to convince us that such a book must come, and we should, with one accord, look for a book of a similar description.

This latter day work that we have received, is considered a very strange work in the estimation of the world, but in the estimation of the Saints it does not appear strange. Why; Because it is the very thing that the Lord, by the mouth of his prophets, thousands of years ago, predicted should take place, and we are the very people that are enjoying the fulfilment of those predictions. We will, therefore, in the first place, bring up some prophetical evidences which prove the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon; not but that we have other proofs, that are clear and lucid and demonstrative in their nature, to establish its divine authenticity.

In regard to the prophetic evidences of the Old Testament in relation to this book, we will first turn to the 29th chapter of Isaiah, and see what he has said upon this subject. In the first verse, the prophet addresses himself to the city of Jerusalem called Ariel, "Woe to Ariel, to Ariel, the city where David dwelt! Add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices; yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow."

We will observe in relation to this prophecy that the Jews of the city where David dwelt were distressed; and notwithstanding they prolonged their sacrifices after they ought to have been done away, they were distressed, and brought down, and afflicted with heaviness and sorrow.

After having foretold the distress of the inhabitants of that city, the prophet commences concerning another people, and says, "And it shall be unto me as Ariel." Now here is something to be distressed, and to be brought down in heaviness and sorrow, and afflicted similar to the city of Ariel—it is some nation the prophet speaks of that were to meet with similar affliction to that which should come upon the people of Jerusalem, the city where David dwelt. "And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay seige against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee." Against whom? Against that people who should be afflicted similarly to what the inhabitants of Jerusalem were to be afflicted. "And thou shalt be brought down, and shall speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust."

This people, then, that the prophet here alludes to, were to meet with a similar destruction and affliction to that which should come upon Ariel, and they were to have forts raised against them, and fortifications. Now is not every year bringing to light ancient forts and fortifications upon this continent? It is well known, that within a very few years past, large and extensive volumes have been published, discribing the forts, fortifications, and ancient ruins that have been found in the midst of the United States. In the large volumes, published by the Smithsonian Institution, in Washington, one of the most learned institutions of our country, are found descriptions of a great number of these ancient ruins; they are situated in the States of New York and Ohio. These discoveries have been published within a few years past.

The ancient inhabitants of this country were eventually brought down, and their ruined cities, temples, and synagogues, proclaim in silent grandeur, that a great and mighty nation have fallen—they have been brought down and distressed like the Jews at old Jerusalem—like Ariel. But many antiquarians have supposed that they have been brought down and nothing left of their history but their old ruins, to proclaim their former greatness. It is not so; for the very people that were thus to be brought down were to speak out of the dust. What! were they to be resurrected to converse with us? Was this what the prophet had reference to? No, this is not what he has reference to in this passage, as you will find by reading the following in the same chapter; their whispering out of the dust, and speaking out of the ground, was a work to take place before the destruction of the nations of the wicked.

Now wherein has this prophecy been fulfilled if not in the coming forth of the Book of Mormon? That book has come out of the ground; it was found in the State of New York, in the midst of those forts and fortifications that are so plentiful there. That sacred record was found written upon plates that had the appearance of gold; out of the ground it was taken, and it contains the words of the ancient prophets that lived among this remnant of the house of Israel that were brought down, and whose speech should whisper low out of the dust; it whispers in the ears of mortal man; it proclaims repentance to the present generation, like the voice of one crying from the dead. "Moreover the multitude of thy strangers shall be like small dust, and the multitude of the terrible ones shall be as chaff that passeth away; yea, it shall be at an instant suddenly."

Any person that will take the trouble to read over that book that has come forth out of the ground, and that whispers to us out of the dust, will find that the multitude of the terrible ones among the ancient Nephites have passed away as chaff; they were destroyed upon this land by hundreds, and by thousands, by judgments and calamities and war. "Thou shall be visited of the Lord of hosts with thunder, and with earthquake, and great noise, with storm and tempest, and the flame of devouring fire." This verse has reference to what follows in the next: "And the multitude of all the nations that fight against Ariel, even all that fight against her and her munition, and that distress her, shall be as a dream of a night vision. It shall even be as when an hungry man dreameth, and behold he eateth; but he awaketh and his soul is empty; or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and behold he drinketh; but he awaketh, and behold, he is faint, and his soul hath appetite; so shall the multitude of all the nations be that fight against Mount Zion.

Here you perceive is another thing taken up by the prophet in connection with the whispering of the words of that nation out of the dust; immediately following that remarkable event there was to be a dreadful destruction—not upon Ariel—not upon Israel—but upon the multitude of all the nations of the earth that should fight against Mount Zion. Three things, then, are declared in succession; one is the destruction of a nation, another the speaking of their words out of the dust in the ears of the living, and the third, that which immediately follows, namely, the destruction of all the nations of the earth that should fight against Mount Zion; this latter event has not yet been fulfilled; but is just as sure to be fulfilled as the other portions of the prophecy that have taken place; just as sure as the Book of Mormon has whispered out of the dust and spoken in the ears of this generation in fulfillment of the words of the Prophet Isaiah, so sure will the Lord of hosts visit the multitude of all the nations of the earth, that fight against Mount Zion, with thunder and earthquake, and with the flame of devouring fire, and they shall be as a dream of a night vision, they shall pass away from the face of the earth and be as chaff blown to the four winds of heaven, and no place shall be found for them. But we pass on.

The prophet now comes back, after having foretold the destructions of the nations following the coming forth of this work, to the thing he was speaking of previously, and gives us more particulars on the subject, and informs us more particularly in what way the Lord shall accomplish this whispering out of the dust; he says to the multitude of those nations about to be destroyed, 'Stay yourselves and wonder, cry ye out, and cry they are drunken but not with wine; they stagger but not with strong drink.' He could not have used language to describe the present generation better than he has done; they are drunken as John the Revelator saw them, with the filthiness of the abominations of old Babylon; 'they stagger not with strong drink,' but with the traditions of men which they have inculcated from generation to generation, and which have become instilled into the minds of the people. 'For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes; the Prophets, and your rulers, the seers hath he covered.' He calls upon this people on whom the spirit of sleep was poured out, to stay themselves and wonder. Wonder! what about? Why, says he, 'And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I cannot, for it is sealed. And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, read this I pray thee; and he saith I am not learned. Wherefore the Lord said, forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men; therefore behold I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid."

See how clearly the prophet has illustrated the coming forth of this work. He describes a book, and the words of a book, and even goes on to particularize, and informs us that the words of that book should be sent to the learned. All who are acquainted with the history of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon know that it is a fact, that several of the words of that book were copied by Joseph Smith, and sent by the hands of Martin Harris from Ontario county to New York city, and he exhibited them to the most learned men that could be found, to see if they could translate them; among others he went to Professor Anthon, a professor of great celebrity. Mr. Anthon examined the characters, as he himself has published since that period. He states that there was an ignorant farmer came to him, and he had some ancient characters or writing that he could not understand; he supposes them to be characters selected from many alphabets, mixed together; he has published enough to prove that such a circumstance did transpire—that an unlearned man did come to him with words professing to be copied from a book. Mr. Smith did not know anything about this prophecy at that time, for he was unacquainted with the contents of the Bible; he was brought up to work. This part of the prophecy was fulfilled to the very letter—the "words of the book," not the book itself, were sent to the learned. If Mr. Smith had sent the plates to New York, the terms of this prophecy would not have been fulfilled.

The next verse says, "And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, read this I pray thee, and he saith, I am not learned." Now Mr. Smith was not a learned man, as acknowledged by all our opposers. It is true he had some of the common rudiments of an English education, he could read, and write a very bungling hand, and this was about the extent of his education. When the book was given to the unlearned man, he did not reply to the Lord as the learned Mr. Anthon did to Martin Harris, that it was a sealed language and he could not understand it, but said he, "I am not learned." What was the Lord's answer to this unlearned young man? He answered him in the words of Isaiah, which I have already quoted, "Wherefore the Lord said forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth," etc.

What should we naturally conclude the Lord intended to do, from this expression? He said that He would do a marvelous work and a wonder after that he had presented the book to the unlearned, and after that he, when he was told to read it, had made an excuse that he was unlearned. We should naturally suppose that the Lord intended to make this unlearned man read the book; that was indeed the fact, he was commanded of the Lord to read it, and he translated it by the means of a Urim and Thummim which is well known to be an instrument, used in ancient times, through which people inquired of the Lord. Aaron had one in the centre of his breast plate, and when anything came before him he could not understand by his own judgment, he inquired of the Lord by the Urim and Thummim, and that was the end of controversy. In this way the Lord made this unlearned man read the book; did this not cause the wisdom of the learned Mr. Anthon to perish, and the understanding of the wise of this world to come to nought; It required inspiration and power from on high—a marvelous work and a wonder to be wrought in order to translate this book of upwards of six hundred pages, and reveal the history of one half of our globe to the astonished nations of the earth.

Now to prove positively that the Lord did cause this book to be translated by the unlearned, and that it was read by somebody we will quote the 18th verse of this chapter. "And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness. The meek also shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the holy one of Israel." We see the fulfillment of this before us at the present time. Here are hundreds, and thousands of poor that were bound down with the curse of oppression, and tyranny in foreign lands, who, through the medium of this book that has been translated by an unlearned man, and through the medium of the proclamation of the glorious gospel contained in the same, have been made to rejoice in the holy one of Israel. The blind has seen out of obscurity, and the deaf has heard the words of the book, and they have come forth from the nations of the old world—from under the hand of tyrrany and oppression, and have been planted here in these rich valleys; and if you do not believe that they rejoice, get into some of their splendid parties, and stand in one corner, and look at them.

There will be a great deal of rejoicing, by and bye, when the time shall come that the multitude of all nations that shall fight against Mount Zion will be as a night vision, when they will be perfectly swept away from the earth. See what the prophet says in the next verse. "For the terrible one is brought to nought, and the scorner is consumed and all that watch for iniquity are cut off." This is one cause of their joy, "All that watch for iniquity are cut off," etc. "That make a man an offender for a word, and lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and turn aside the just for a thing of nought." No wonder, then, that the poor among men will rejoice in the Holy One of Israel, when those events take place.

But how is this book to effect the children of Israel? It is not only intended to make us rejoice but is going to effect the nations of Israel; if you do not believe it, see what the prophet says about it. "Therefore thus saith the Lord who redeemed Abraham concerning the house of Israel, Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale." When this book comes forth, when it is translated; when it is carried to Israel by the authority God has ordained and established upon the earth, and they publish its glorious principles in their ears, "Jacob shall not be ashamed;" though they have been for 1800 years past kicked and cuffed about, deprived of what is called citizenship among the various nations of the earth, and trampled down and destroyed by hundreds and thousands, and though they have wandered about without prophets and inspired men; without the Urim and Thummim; without visions and angels from heaven, and without the powers and manifestations of the glory of God that were among their fathers; yet, when the Lord sends this sacred book among them, they shall not be ashamed. What have they been waiting for? For the Lord to bring forth this book. And they never could be redeemed, but would remain trampled down by the gentiles thousands of years to come unless the Lord should bring forth this book, that is one of the principle means for the redemption of Jacob.

The prophet continues, "But when he seeth his children the work of mine hands, in the midst of him, they shall sanctify my name, and sanctify the holy one of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel." Yes; they shall be brought together, be assembled in one, and the covenants made with their fathers will be fulfilled. Another glorious effect this book will have with the honest among the nations of the earth. They also that erred in spirit shall come to understanding, and they that murmur shall learn doctrine." Every person that is now before me know very well that there have been many honest, candid, sincere individuals among all the various nations of Christendom who have erred in spirit; they wanted to learn the truth, as we have, but they erred in spirit, and murmured too. How often have my ears heard the murmerings of the honest heart in something like the following language: "I do not know what to do; it is strange there should be so much confusion, one teaching this, and another that. They would murmur because of the divisions, and contentions they saw among religious societies. But here is something that will do away with those errors, for the book will, not only cause the blind to see out of obscurity and darkness, but those that erred in spirit shall come to understanding. In what way? How can they come to understanding by this book? Because of the plainness of the doctrine of Christ contained in it. If any person will take the opportunity to inform themselves concerning the contents of that book, they will find the doctrine of salvation—the doctrine of the resurrection from the dead, and every principle pertaining to the redemption of man, set forth in such a plain, simple, convincing manner that it is almost impossible for any individual who believes in its divine authenticity, to err in doctrine it makes a people of one heart, and of one mind so far as their faith is concerned, if they can once be satisfied it is of God.

This is only one chapter of prophecy in relation to the great work of our God in the last days. We might refer you to many others. Indeed, there are some others I will refer you to, if time will permit.

This book professes to be a record written by a remnant of the house of Joseph; while the Bible is admitted to be a record of the Jews, containing a history of Palestine and the adjacent nations, interspersed with doctrine. The book of Mormon is the history of ancient America interspersed with the prophecies of numerous prophets who once lived on this continent. The Lord has confirmed this book by innumerable evidences which I shall not notice in my remarks in this short discourse. He has united the testimony of the ancient nations of America with the testimony of the Jews; we wish to know, if there is any indication in the prophecies, of the union of the testimony of these two books in the latter times.

We will refer your minds to the 37th chapter of the prophecies of Ezekiel, where we shall find something very definite on this subject, commencing at the 15th verse. "The word of the Lord came again unto me saying, moreover thou son of man, take the one stick and write upon it, for Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick and write upon it, for Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions: and join them one to another in one stick; and they shall become one in thine hands." Ezekiel went and did as the Lord told him and took two little sticks and wrote for Judah and Joseph; after he got through writing he put them together, and held them up before the house of Israel. "And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, wilt thou not show us what thou meanest by this?" It is a strange thing that you should write upon one stick for Judah, and upon one for Joseph, and hold them up before us, explain the mystery to us. "Say unto them, thus saith the Lord God; behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand." Just as these two sticks are one in your hand, so I will make the stick of Joseph and Judah one in mine hand, but "the sticks whereon thou writest shall be one in thine hand before their eyes."

Here then was a symbol represented before their eyes in language that could not be misunderstood; it was a symbol of two records; for it is well understood that records were kept in ancient times on parchment, rolled upon sticks the same as we keep our maps at this day. All the prophecies of Jeremiah for many years were written and rolled around a stick and were called a book; so in Ezekiel these sticks represented two records, one the record of the tribe of Joseph, and the other the tribe of Judah: and the Lord promises through that symbol that he himself would take the stick of Joseph, and put it with the stick of Judah, and make it one in his own hand, showing that it was to be a work he would accomplish himself in the last days.

'The sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hands before thine eyes. And say unto them,' now mark what follows these two stick, 'Behold I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land; and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king of them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all.' Has that ever been fulfilled? Does this have reference to their gathering from Babylon before Christ? No; they were scattered since that, and the ten tribes were taken away before that time and they have never been gathered. But here is a prediction that they should not be divided into two kingdoms any more, but that they should become one nation upon the mountains of Israel, never afterwards to be scattered. Notice, he declares to them that before he will do this, he will take the record of Joseph and put it with the record of Judah and make them one in his hand, and then accomplish this gathering of Israel.

Now my friends you may go to work with all your Christian benevolent societies, to gather the Jews from the nations; you may combine all the wisdom and learning of Christendom, and put all their exertions, and all the funds they can rake and scrape together from the two hemispheres of the earth, and after all, you never can accomplish the gathering and restitution of Israel, until the Lord does it in his own way, by uniting the record of Judah and Joseph to accomplish this work. Then, and not till then will the house of Jacob rejoice in the holy one of Israel, and no more be made ashamed.

Now is there any indication about the house of Joseph coming to America? Says one, 'If I really thought these American Indians were the decendants of Joseph, I should be inclined to think that the Book of Mormon was actually the record of Joseph.' He calls up the two sons of Joseph and pronounces a peculiar blessing upon them, laying his right hand upon the head of the youngest, and his left hand upon the head of the oldest, and he blessed them saying, 'God which fed me all my life long unto this day, the angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac; and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth.' When Joseph saw his father lay his right hand upon the head of the youngest of the lads it displeased him, and he held up his father's hand to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasseh's head saying, 'not so father for this is the first born; put thy right hand upon his head.' And his father refused, and said, 'I know it; he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great; but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations.'

To be Continued.

MORMONISM.

The Mormons have commenced in New York the publication of a paper, called The Mormon, devoted to the spread of their principles. It defends polygamy as an ordinance from God, and the Christian world having been laboring under a delusion on this subject for over eighteen hundred years.—[Exchange.

They may have been laboring under the delusion, yet they have not practised it. The only difference we can see on this question is, that the Mormon practises it in open day, and attempts to justify it by the Bible, while thousands upon thousands on the other hand deny that doctrine, yet practise it secretly. Of the two evils, we think the Mormon the least. There never can be such a thing as legalizing or christianizing a wrong.

How many men are there who belong to society, and those too who are looked upon as the lights and example of all, who are worse than the Mormon with his wives; and still society is so organized that all such are sustained. But, on the other hand, let even one of his victims be known, and how soon is she to be banished from society forever, to be sunken into the depths of want and misery, without one anxious thought for the memory of one who, a short time since, was considered equal to any in society. "She, poor, fallen human creature, ought to have done better, but must now submit to her fate." While the stronger party is still allowed, by the false organization of society, to occupy his several relations, and is excused if not lionized, though the other has been murdered, morally and physically.

How long will society tolerate such evils? To the female portion belongs the power to arrest it at any time—will they do it?—[Peru Chronicle, Ill.

FROM the fact that Jenny Lind cannot or does not sing as well as she did before she became a mother, the editor of the Lynn News, with malice aforethought, perpetrates the following:

"Jenny's become a mother, and no more
Can sing, 'tis said, as sweetly as before!
'Tis nothing strange; for higher stars they say
Lose their distinction in the milky way."

MANY men toil to obtain property, which, after their death, their children contend about and squander in idleness.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, MAY 5, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer, address box 488.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor, 102 Nassau st., cor. of Ann.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopain.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folsom, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.
Wm. Cazier, Nephi City.

"We are too near the days of Joseph Smith to judge him fairly yet, and it is quite impossible to find out the truth concerning Brigham Young," said a popular journal not long since.

It is passing strange that a civilized Christian nation should have sent a Prophet to prison, and to death, and still be unable fairly to judge him, even many years after it has committed the bloody deed; but this is modern Christianity.

It is well known that Joseph Smith was tried, upwards of thirty times by the tribunals of his country, and was honorably and fairly discharged, for no crime could be found in him; but after all this demonstration of innocence, he was foully judged, and condemned, and as foully was he murdered. His base and inhuman murderers exclaiming "the law won't touch him, but powder and ball shall," and still the press which is professedly the mouthpiece and arbiter of the nation, cannot "fairly judge him yet."

Will he ever be judged fairly by this nation? yes, when the wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God; they will then have an opportunity of judging him from another point of the compass; they may then be able to judge him fairly, and if not, he will certainly be able to judge them fairly. If you do not believe it, you had better go there and see.

Concerning Brigham Young, he has travelled throughout the length and breadth of these United States, and his labors have even been extended unto Europe. He has led the Latter-day Saints from the midst of their inhuman persecutors and planted them on the back-bone of the American continent—has made of them a great nation—has been their legal President and Governor for several years and still his character is unknown, and moreover, Philosophers, Lawyers, Judges and other officials have been commissioned to investigate and report, who have written volumes concerning him and the Latter-day Saints; and still the press assures us that "it is quite impossible to find out the truth concerning him," with regard to this subject and Mormonism in general, the national press is certainly deserving the appellation "Know-Nothing," and whether it will ever know anything this side its grave, remains a mystery. But will the people of this nation ever find out the truth concerning Mormonism? yes, if they will repent of their sins and obey the Gospel, they shall then know the truth concerning Mormonism in general and Brigham Young in particular, and if they don't choose to believe the truth when plainly and honestly told them, well, they must die and be damned in their ignorance, and thus fulfill the scriptures which say, "behold ye dispisers, and wonder and perish, for I will work a work in your day that ye will in no wise believe though a man declare it unto you." when these things shall be fulfilled, the people will then be able to judge fairly the character of the Prophet Joseph, they may then peradventure find out the truth concerning Brigham Young.

A Minister Flogged by Lady.

The Cleaveland Plaindealer contains a serious, but amusing article headed "The Church difficulty settled at last;" but we think it should have had some such caption as we have given it. Had the circumstance occurred in Mormondom, it would have been copied into all the religious papers in the Union, in this case we presume 'tis modesty or sympathy that causes them to refrain from publishing their brothers shame; it might indeed be fear, as they know not how soon their turn may come, for if this be among the women's rights, who can guarantee the pastor's safety.

For our own credit as faithful croniclers of passing events, we feel bound by a sense of duty to record things as they are, and to give every thing its proper name, and if the women assert their rights and cowhide their husbands or their parsons, and they are willing patienly to "grin and bear it," we of course hope they will enjoy it, and we will not fail to give the ladies credit for it, and particularly if we consider the recipients are deserving it; for as much as we love the ministerial fraternity in general, and much as we sympathize with the castigated Reverend in particular, we cannot sacrifice our duties for our feelings. We cannot, of course, say that he deserved it—we hope not—but there must have been some real cause for the wrath and indignation of an entire congregation against their beloved pastor; but we will leave the Cleaveland Plaindealer to speak upon the subject, which will give the details of the case:

"The Bolivar street Chuch and their pastor have been at law again about the flogging affair. Mr. Fuller has at last received full legal satisfaction for the cowhiding inflicted by the hands of a female parishioner. Judge Tilden had the case on trial all day yesterday. Last evening we dropped in and heard the testimony of a Reverend who was a witness of the affair. It appears that the church and the pastor have been grdually getting up a "muss" for the past year. On the Friday on which the flogging occurred, the trustees had come to the conclusion that "forbearance had ceased to be a virtue," and were determined to "have it out." The trustees appointed a class-meeting, and the minister appointed preaching. They both appeared—the Reverened took the pulpit, and the people formed for a "class." The friends of the trustees being in the majority, the class went on, and Reverend coolly surveyed the proceeding from his pulpit. Several members took the opportunity of class to speak out in relation to the Reverened in no flattering terms. In the benediction which the Reverend delivered, he gave the church a wipe, and then gave out, God willing, he would preach that afternoon and evening in spite of man or devil.

"One of the interested members, highly incensed, arose and made for the pulpit. He was stopped by some of the cooler members. The Reverend then stepped from his pulpit and said, "let him come on; I'm ready for him." But they held him fast. At that, one of the female members, Mrs. Primus Jones, started for the minister from the other aisle, with a cowhide upraised. On her appearance the Reverend retreated behind the pulpit. That was no go; the incensed Mrs. Primus Jones was bound to flog him, and she followed into it. He escaped through the opposite door, and she after him. Some fast running was accomplished around that place by the pursuer and the pursued. It soon became evident that Mrs. Jones had the "longest wind," and the Reverend took the aisle, calling for assistance. He was overtaken, however, and the cowhide applied vigorously to his back-

"The Church and Pastor have been in law for the past three months about it. Judge Tilden will probably decide the case to-day. The Judge says he has tried to find a bright side to this case, during the trial, but at last advices had not succeeded.

"P. S. Jude Tilden gave his decision this morning, acquitting the defendants on the charge of creating a riot, but finding Mrs. Primus Jones guilty of assault and battery, and was fined $5 and costs.

THE EMIGRATION.

We have given as promised in our last paper a list of the names of passengers on board the Juventa, to which is added those of the passengers on board the Chimborazo.

The Chimborazo left Liverpool for Philadelphia about the 14th of April, with 432 souls of Saints on board, under the Presidency of Elder Ed. Stevenson.

Who would have thought twenty-five years ago that the then despised and persecuted Prophet Joseph, would in so short a time if ever gather to his standard such an array of beauty and intelligence as is already gathered in the mountain Territory, and still they come.

It is estimated that there are at this time en route between Liverpool and St. Louis not fewer than two thousand Latter-day Saints, who are mostly from the British Isles, there are some from France and the Channel Islands, some from Italy, Switzerland, Malta, and Gibraltar and other nations, and Islands of the sea. Thus we see the work of the Lord increasing among the children of men and it will doubtless continue to increase until every honest hearted Latter-day Saint shall be gathered from the midst of the ungodly; then will the judgments of the Lord be fully poured out upon the nations, until they are wasted away and utterly destroyed.

Remarks of President E. Snow, Saturday afternoon, April 7th, 1855.

After having waited on the spirit so long, and indulging in the free expression of our feelings and in exhortations, since yesterday morning—all of which has been edifying to me and I believe to you—we shall now proceed to present before you, the general authorities of the church, and of this Stake of Zion.

I wish to see a free expression of your feelings. If you do not feel to sustain any one who may be presented before you, be sure and not lift up your hands, for the Lord will think better of you if you refuse to vote, than he will if you vote to sustain them and then fail to do so in your actions. When you lift your hands to the square, it means something more than you now understand. You will know more of this by and by. It is a covenant—a sign before the Lord, and he will hold you accountable for that which you engage to do. If you don't feel in your hearts to sustain these men don't agree to do so, for your covenant will be recorded in heaven as well as on earth. I know that the Lord has some of the feelings that I have, only a great deal more extended, and I dispise in my heart all hypocrits and those who do not follow out their agreements. "An honest man is the noblest work of God," and he delights in the honesty and sincerity of his people.

I do not know that I shall have a better opportunity than the present—while the subject presses on my mind—to give an explanation of the doctrines pertaining to the bishopric, in order that the servants of God who labor in connection with me, in building up the kingdom of God, and the stakes of Zion, may not remain in ignorance and darkness on this subject.

I refer to this more especially, because of late, it has been the theme and subject of talk among apostate spirits, and it is so frequently the case that the officers do not seek to inform themselves upon the duty of their calling.

There are some who profess to be good Latter-day Saints; they will talk about the beauties of Mormonism when they first knew it, they believe in Ancient Mormonism but all that has since been revealed they can in no wise receive; they talk about the revelations of Joseph Smith, of the book of Doctrine and Covenants and the book of Mormon, they believe in these revelations as they were believed when they first came into the church, but things have changed so much since that it is altogether beyond their reach, and instead of being in the train with other members, they fall asleep or stand gaping around until seeing the church ahead, they either complain because it is not where it first started from, or like the Irishman when the train had started, swing their hats and halloo for the engine to stop. They will take up the book of Doc. & Cov., perhaps having learned it from A to Z, to prove their position, and when they have done it, 'tis altogether false, because they know nothing of the spirit of the kingdom of God. They will argue that Brigham Young cannot be a Prophet of the Lord, and they will tell you that no one can ordain a bishop but the first Presidency of the church, and prove it from the book of Doc. & Cov.; but these revelations like all others ever given since the world began, were given at a certain time to a certain people and for a certain purpose, and suitable to the circumstances of the people to whom they were given just as you would give instructions about the planting of corn, at first it must be sown, then watered and the weeds plucked from about it, but as it grows up thick and strong you then hoe it and otherwise nourish and protect it, so with the revelations given to this people; they are given to suit their circumstances and are applicable to them at the time they are given, the culture that applies to the root must not be observed and followed out in refference to the branches.

There is a revelation in the book of Doc. & Cov., which says a bishop should be a litteral discendant of Aaron, of the first born. Now, if a litteral discendant of Aaron should obey the Gospel, and receive the Priesthood under the hands of the first Presidency of the church it is his privilege to preside over the lesser Priesthood without Counsellors. It must first be proved by his genealogy, or by revelation that he is a discendant of Aaron; if proved, and he is faithful, he can hold the keys of this Priesthood forever; but if a litteral discendant of Aaron cannot be found, a bishop may be set apart from the high Priesthood of the church under the hands of the first Presidency. There is another revelation that says a bishop cannot be tried and judged but before the first Presidency of the high Priesthood.

Many of you may be led to enquire if one of the twelve can ordain a bishop. Yes, I answer, and so can Brother Andrus, who is not one of the twelve. He is one of the presidents of seventies; but he has received his endowments and authority to act in any capacity throughout the world, wherever, by the first presidency, or by the twelve, he may be sent. He has been appointed to that authority through me, and by the voice and sanction of this conference he is president over this Stake of Zion. He has called and appointed two counsellors, who constitute the first presidency of this Stake of Zion. And Brother Andrus can ordain a bishop and bring him to judgement if he should transgress the laws of God.

This I venture to give as true doctrine, which you will bear in mind, and if you do not understand it now, you will understand it, and will find it to be true; although you Gladdenites, Bennemyites, Brewsterites, and all others who stand upon the revelations given twenty years ago may say this is false doctrine. These characters, instead of keeping up with the movements of the church, are away back beyond the place from which they started; they have made no progress whatever, but have retrograded all the time.

There is no officer in this Stake of Zion but the President may bring to judgement if he transgresses. If it be a Bishop, he must be tried before twelve High Priests; hence you have a High Council ordained for that purpose. There is authority to rule and regulate all things, and to move out all who transgress. The President here has authority and jurisdiction in this Stake of Zion just as the first presidency has rule and authority over all the Church. It is precisely the same pattern in miniature—it is a branch of the same tree.

But no one short of the First Presidency of the Church, or one of the twelve Apostles can organize a Stake of Zion; but when it is set in order, and when the presidency of a Stake is set apart, he can set in order everything else; just as Joseph could do everything in the first organization of the Church after he was appointed by Peter, James and John. Could either Peter, James or John have done this work singly? No; it was necessary for them to come together, that Joseph might receive the fulness of the higher priesthood. Not so with the Aaronic Priesthood; one man alone can rule and act in the lesser priesthood; hence, John the Baptist, being a littera! descendant of Aaron, had the right to ordain Joseph Smith to the fulness of the Aaronic Priesthood without council; but Peter, James and John, in the Higher Priesthood, could not act without each other—it required the quorum to commit the keys of the Melchisidec Priesthood to Joseph. So with a Stake of Zion; it the first presidency, or one of the twelve, set in order a Stake of Zion, and confirm power upon the president and his two counsellors, they can then go to work and set the whole machinery in motion. Why? Because the root is planted and the bud grafted in where it can get sap and nourishment, by which it may be imparted unto all the branches. Does not this commend itself to your conscience? It will as far as you are able to comprehend it, for it is the true order of the government of God.

What is the use of holding a conference, some might ask. We hereby assemble the different quorums, and concentrate them all together, and thus get the united action of all, that there may be a union of strength in carrying on all the measures necessary for the benefit of the people.

Are you to sustain the general authorities of Zion with all the bishops and individual authorities in all the Stakes of Zion? Yes; I would sustain them with my prayers and both my hands up, especially those over me. We are but branches of the same tree, and are connected with and sustained by the same roots; we have not so directly to do with the branches as with the roots. We have not much to do with the individual authorities in the branch or stake in Provo' City or San Pete Valley, but those who are there have to do with them; but our immediate concern is with the stake in St. Louis. All these stakes and branches have to do with the first presidency of the church, and with the twelve apostles, who are like flying comets—they are the Lord's right-hand men, to regulate and govern the Church, and gather Israel from all the nations of the earth, to unlock the Gospel unto all people, and concentrate all the branches into the roots of the tree—the first presidency and general authorities.

There is a Presiding Patriarch to preside over all the Patriarchs of the Church, and there is a Presiding Bishop to preside over all the Bishops; the Presiding Bishop holds all other Bishops accountable in regard to tithing.

I will tell you how I have done in St. Louis in matters of tithing; I have appointed the Bishop to take charge of the tithing, and have made him accountable to me instead of the Presiding Bishop of the Church, Bishop Hunter. The reason is because the first presidency require me to take charge of the tithing, as well as the P. E. Fund money. Why is this required of me? Does it belong to me to serve tables and look after the poor, and matters belonging to the bishopric? I feel about this as I feel about building up Gentile cities. Were it not a matter of expediency I would not touch it nor have anything to do with it, but it will stick to my fingers, and I shall have to do with it until I get the Presiding Bishop of this stake linked on to his Presiding Bishop in the Valley. The first presidency required me to act in this capacity, I therefore stepped in between Bishop Worley and Bishop Hunter. If Bishop Worley was in Utah, where he could make returns to the Presiding Bishop, he would be under his control, and I should have nothing to do with it or them, except sometimes, perhaps, to go among them and rub their ears and comb their hair a little; but I want to have nothing to do with their accounts only to see that they are correct.

I will now give way, that we may hear the Bishop's report.

Opinions of the Press concerning the Siddons' Company.

We clip the following items from the City Press, it affording the latest and most authentic information that we have concerning this company.

"A Mormon Colony.—The ship Siddons, which arrived at Philadelphia on Friday night from Liverpool, had on board 425 Mormon emigrants, destined, the marks upon their baggage indicated, for 'Salt Lake City.' The American says they were composed of British families, all appeared well dressed, healthy, and intelligent. The women, especially, had that fine, robust, rosy British look about them of which we hear so much. They were to proceed immediately, by railroad and steamboat, to the Western frontier, and there start overland for their new home in the Valley of the Salt Lake, where the leaders of the Mormons seem fast gathering a populous and flourishing community, mostly accumulated from the European hive of nations."

"Mormon Emigrants.—Yesterday a party of about two hundred Mormons—men, women and children—took passage on the steamer Monongahela for St. Louis, from whence they will wend their way toward Salt Lake City, to 'join those who have gone before.' They were under the care of Elder Alder, who had with him his wife and daughter, and the latter personage was really a handsome female, having eyes of much brightness and a countenance of much sweetness. Had she remained in the city, she would undoubtedly have turned the heads of many of our young gallants.

Correspondence.

Extracts of Letters from Elder Milo Andrus.

Fifteen Miles below Lexington, April 24th, 1955.

Dear Br. Snow:—I feel anxious to let you know all particulars concerning our whereabouts, as I know that any reliable information will be gladly received.

We have been at this point since yesterday at 3 o'clock discharging freight, because the river is so low we cannot get along. We are not alone in this matter; the Australia, Cateract, Arabia, and Admiral are all in the same fix. There are mountains of freight thrown off in the woods, and many that are on board with their freight feel cross and bad, and curse the officers of the boat because the river is not higher. You know how good it is to be blamed when you do the best you can, to be sure.

The men and women cling to me; they cannot consent to leave one of their shimmies or old stockings behind them; I consequently proclaimed a wedding, and engaged to marry them to all their old boxes and tin pans, &c.; but, awful to tell, they flew the track, and—no wedding; the result is, that we leave Br. John Burnside in charge of the luggage until the Lord is pleased to let us have a little more water.

Oh! how true the words of our beloved President Brigham Young, when he said it would continue to be more difficult to gather the people; yet there are some of the Saints, or at least professedly so, who will not go when they have a good chance.

A few words in regard to health. We have had four cases of cholera on board; one is dead, and two more I think will die, but not of our people, thank the Lord. The death was the carpenter of the boat. We have had some slight attacks among our people, but all are getting better. Br. Gregory has been in poor health since he started; I think nothing but the mountain air will cure him. There were two died on the Australia last night. She is loaded with Uncle Sam's boys.

Br. McGaw is a good companion and, as far as I have proved him, a wise counsellor. I feel the need of your prayers and blessings in these days of trial. The brethren join in love to you and all the Saints.

I remain, yours truly,
MILO ANDRUS.

Lexington, April 25.

There has been another death since I wrote you yesterday. One of our company is very sick. There is more sickness on board, but not among our folks. I feel as though I should be worn out if we are on the river many days longer, for I must be right at their side all the time. I hope we shall get along now, we got over the bar last night. M. A.

Kansas, April 26.

Feeling as though you would be anxious to hear from us often under existing circumstances, I feel to drop you a line from this place, and to commence, I have the unspeakable satisfaction of saying that we are all alive yet as far as the Saints are concerned, but not so with all on board. We have had one of the most malignant attacks of any on board, and all said she must die—that is, the Gentiles said so—and now they see her recovering, they say, "Well, you must be a skilful doctor," but they know not the ways of the Lord. But we feel to thank him, for unto him be all the glory. My strong heart almost failed me when she called me to still give her breath to breathe, and also to bring her Henry, that she might take a lasting look at him—Yes, to see sister Humphries, in the short space of three hours, so changed that no one would recognize her that didn't really know that it was her, and to think of meeting her husband first, and to say to him, "Your dear and well beloved Jane is gone, and her lifeless remains are mouldering on the lonely Missouri bottoms"—it was more than I could stand without giving vent to my feelings by a flood of tears.

We have several cases, but all bid fair to recover with the blessing of the Lord. I would suggest that men of strong nerve, filled with the Holy Spirit, be in charge on these waters.

I must now close, as the boat is almost ready to start. We shall get up to-morrow, I hope, alive and well. My kind love to you and the rest.

Yours, &c. MILO ANDRUS.

St. Louis, May 2nd, 1855.

Elder Snow, Editor of the Luminary:

Dear Brother—At the conference held in St. Louis, in October, 1854, Br. W. W. Rust and myself received a mission to travel in the northern and eastern States, to hunt up the lost sheep, and endeavor to gather them into the fold. Accordingly, we left St. Louis on or about the middle of the month on the Reindeer, stopped at Alton a few days visiting the Saints, and then passed on to Springfield, Ill., called on a Br. Palmer, when behold, Wm. Smith, brother of the prophet Joseph, had taken up his abode here for the time being. He grasped me by the hand, said it done him good to take an old Mormon by the hand. I inquired of him (in Yankee style) what his business was in Springfield. He said he was preaching the first principles of the Gospel. I wished to know whether he preached the gathering, and acknowledged the authorities of the Church as organised in Utah. His reply was rather evasive, said he and the authorities had had some misunderstanding, the same as Peter and Paul, that he had written to President Young, saying he was willing to abide his decision. He wished me to give him the hand of fellowship. I told him under existing circumstances I could not, and advised him, if he was honest-hearted, as he appeared to be, he had better repair immediately to the vallies of the mountains and report himself, and abide the decision of the First Presidency. He told me he had written, and he wrote a letter to Br. Brigham before we left; whether he sent it or not I know not. In answer to questions from a number in Springfield as to the authority of Wm. Smith, I replied that it was with him as it would be with a branch severed from the vine, it would wither and die and would be ready to be burned, receiving no nourishment from the vine.

From Springfield we went to Chicago, there I found an uncle that I had not seen in thirty years. I stopped a few days with him and partook of his hospitality, and in return I gave him an offer of salvation on Gospel terms, he said he would consider on it and give me an answer on my return.

We emptied our purses at the depot, and wished the agent to pass us as far as he felt justified in doing, as we were heralds of salvation, alias, Mormon Elders; he gave us tickets to Marshall, Mich., deducting about half the regular fare. No accident occurred until our arrival at Marshall. Partook of the hospitality of the landlord, i. e., supper, lodging and breakfast free of cost.

In the morning we left Marshall on foot, the snow being about six inches deep and storming. It was hard traveling, but we reached Parma, about thirty miles, stayed with a relation over Sunday, gave our testimony and passed on, traveled some two hundred miles through mud and mire, sometimes we could get shelter for the night, and occasionally a bowl of bread and milk.

We made it a rule to enquire for Saints and places to preach, but no sooner than we had informed them that we were ministers of the Gospel from Salt Lake their doors were closed against us; we traveled hundreds of miles in Michigan, but obtained but one house to preach in. The fact is, Strang, the Beaver Island Mormon, as he styles himself, is sending his emissaries out to rob, steal and plunder, preaching another Gospel, but styling themselves Mormons; hence the prejudice that exists in the minds of the people against the servants of God that are sent abroad by the authorities of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

We called at Kirtland, found a few that called themselves Saints, but very weak, many apostates, who have mostly joined the rappers. We had a lengthy interview with Martin Harris. At first he was down on polygamy, but before we left he informed me that he never should say a word against it. He confessed that he had lost confidence in Joseph Smith, consequently his mind became darkened, and he was left to himself; he tried the Shakers, but that would not do, then tried Gladden Bishop, but no satisfaction; had concluded he would wait until the Saints returned to Jackson Co., and then he would repair there. He gave us a history of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon; his going to New York and presenting the characters to Professor Anthon, etc.; concluded before we left that "Brigham was Governor," and that the authorities were there, and that he should go there as soon as he could get away. We traveled together until we arrived at New York City, preaching by the way wherever an opportunity offered. From thence Br. Rust went to Boston, and I went to Tom's River, N. J., found the Saints enjoying much of the spirit of God. They number nearly one hundred, and are calculating to emigrate next season. My labor has been in New Jersey and New York, with what success time will determine. I feel clear, and have obtained permission to return home, which I shall with joy, and not with grief. May God bless and sustain you, is my prayer, Amen.

Yours as ever, THOS. COLBURN.

There is a family in Ohio so lazy that it takes two of them to sneeze—one to throw the head back, and the other to make the noise.

SALEM, Mass., April 16, '55.

PRESIDENT ERASTUS SNOW:

Dear Brother—Passing in the cars through that portion of Canada traversed by the Great Western Railroad, the medley of faces around me, suggested no fitting theme for conversation, so I indulged in my own cogitations, the result of which I now give you.

In imagination, I pictured to myself the following scene; viz:

Brandy-faced gentleman, quite corpulent, with a lecherous expression of countenance—I've a mind to go to Salt Lake.

"Why?" says one, "to join the Mormons."

Brandy-face—Oh no! but the domestic arrangements there you know. (A smile on the countenance of the listeners.)

Your humble servant concluded here to interrupt them—You might do worse than joining the Mormons.

Incredulity—How can that be possible?

Your humble servant—If in no other way, by so thoroughly identifying yourself with the Gentiles, as to participate with them in their plagues and in the final destruction of the wicked.

Incredulity—What do you mean by the wicked and the Gentiles.

Your humble servant—I use the terms as synonymous, to express antagonism to the plans and purposes of the Most High God, either directly or indirectly; and when the earth is purified by fire, all abominations being thereby swept off, then this alternative of disobedience will be fully understood.

Brandy-face—About this fire; I should like to learn the intensity of it.

Your humble servant—You have reason to be concerned, as bodies surcharged with grease and alcohol, being of an inflammable nature are among the first to feel its influence.

"Hit him there," says one—"Mormons are hard to beat," says another.

Brandy-face—Well, what do you think about the plurality of wives? eh!

Your humble servant—When disposed to, I will give you my opinion in full; meantime I would advise persons of your temperament to keep away from Salt Lake; do you take?

"He'd better let the Mormons alone," says several.

Brandy-face—(Somewhat excited.) Mormonism is the offspring of knavery and humbug, and Brigham Young ought to be strung up between the heavens and earth.

Your humble servant—Thank you for this candid and unmasked avowal of the depth of your intellect. When the filthy waters of a stagnant pond are drained, we learn how shallow it is; meantime, allow me to inform you, that the Mormons do not believe in suspension, especially that kind which seems so emphatically to be the perquisite of yourself and kindred spisits, (Laughter and applause,) and, gentlemen and ladies, I would further remark, that the course of Brigham Young, like that of every true hearted Saint, is onward in the progresss af intelligence, with the assurance of a name among the just and an exaltation in the kingdon of his Father, beyond contact with slanderers, bogus patriots and reformers, traducers of virtue, and all who wilfully misrepresent and distort a pure principle in its righteous application.

An Infidel, who had been listening attentively, here remarked, "These principles are practically admitted all around us, but the Mormons are the only people to make a pure and virtuous ayplication of them. I've been to Salt Lake, and would suggest, that before the people suffer their virtuous indignation to usurp the throne of reason, they would appoint a committee of disinterested persons to visit Salt Lake (I'll ensure them kind treatment) and fully inform themselves of the practical workings of this peculiar institution."

Some one here suggested that this committee might become converts to the doctrine, which would have the effect to rule out their testimony as interested.

In view of this dilemma, it was unanimously agreed to let the Mormons attend to their own business without further interference, as they have proved themselves thus far equal to any emergency. Here a sudden jolting of the cars arroused me from my meditations, and announced a stopping place.

Yours in the covenant of peace,

EDWARD L. PAGE.

Miscellaneous.

From the Millennial Star.

DEPARTURE.

The ship Juventa sailed for Philadelphia on Saturday the 31st ultimo, with 573 souls of the Saints, under the presiding charge of Elder William Glover, late Pastor of the Hull, Newcastle, and Carlisle Conferences. Elders Benjamin Brown, Sylvester H. Earl, Elias Gardner, Charles Smith, William Pitt, John Mayer, Noah T. Guyman, Joseph Hall, well known among the Saints in the British Isles for their distinguished labors in the Conferences; also Elders George Mayer, in charge of a company of Saints from Switzerland; and Elder James F. Bell, late President of the Malta Mission, in charge of a company of the faithful from Piedmont in Italy, all sailed in this ship, and constitute the able counsel and immediate support of President Glover in the discharge of his important duties on shipboard.

Most of these brethren—Elders of Israel, are returning to Zion, after an absence of about three years on missions to this and other countries. It has never been our privilege to clear a ship load of Saints containing such an embodiment of faith, and with such an entire feeling of satisfaction both in Saints and officers of the ship. An unusual number of Pastors, Presidents, and Elders are gathering this year, and as the way to Zion becomes more difficult they will find ample occasion and scope for the exercise of their faith on the journey, that the sheaves which they bring with them may be safely delivered in the garner of the Lord, and they be found faithful laborers with the husbandman in the last time.

May the joy which was manifested by the shouts sent up as we bade them adieu be increased in purity and fervor till their arrival in Utah among the people of God, and worlds without end.

WONDERFUL INVENTION.

The Image made to speak with the mouth of the Beast and of the false Prophets.

The above machine being exhibited and experimented upon by Sir M. Faraday, of the Royal Society, January 18th, 1855, we will endeavor to give a general description of the same.

Suffice it to say, that Sir M. Faraday had been solicited to describe this machine, or their automatons, in the fall of 1854, by most of the scientific and literary gentlemen then residing in London.

This was done on condition that the same should be kept secret until the inventor should be ready to make it known publicly.

The audience before him was not only composed of the above named gentlemen, but also of the Queen, Prince Albert, and Cabinet, the Bishops of London, Canterbury, and Winchester, together with a large number of the aristocracy and clergy.

At a reading-desk near the upper end of the lecture-room, sat a figure, like a man, in a plain but fashionable dress, apparently in deep thought. In the orchestra sat four figures, two like females, and the other two like males.

Sir M. Faraday then gave the audience a minute description of these automatical machines, which would be tedious were I to give it in detail. As a basis for the wonderful phenomena he was about to explain to his hearers he should adopt the following new but simple theory of electricity:

That electricity is an elementary principle pervading all matter; that its various phenomena are produced by the various physically constituted agents in which it resides, actively and passively, and upon or through which it vibrates cynamically.

He then gave a concise history of electricity, galvanism, etc., etc., from the earliest ages down to the present time, and concluded the historical part by saying, that although much had been done by the aid of these sciences, it would appear as nothing when compared with the future. "I believe," said he, "the time will come that these chemical and these philosophical principles and agents will be so well understood in their application and operations upon the physical and mental properties of man, that by an electric and magnetic sympathy they will be able to converse with each other from one side of the Atlantic to the other, without the use of the present batteries or conducting wires. That I do not too highly color this picture, will be clearly shown by the experiments I now intend to perform before you."

He then described a small galvanic battery, about the size of a quart measure, with four compartments. To each compartment were two wires attached, called the positive and negative poles. These wires were continued under the floor to the feet of the automaton in the reading desk, who sat upon a chair, composed of copper and zinc, being perfectly insulated by four three-inch glass globes.

He then showed us a similar battery and similar wires, which he said were connected with the automatons in the orchestra; these he termed his choir, and the gentleman in the reading desk his lecturer or preacher. "The sciences," he observed, "had done much for the arts and manufactures, but little for the development of mind."

Continued on fourth page.

NEW YORK, May 1.—The Washington correspondent of the Evening Post, says that Fabens has resigned the Consulship at San Juan de Nicaragua, and that Captain Benjamin Mowry, a trader at that port, will probably receive the appointment.

The same paper publishes letters from Buenos Ayres, received by an arrival at Salem, giving another account of the firing into the U. States steamer Water Witch, from a Paraguaian port on the river Neut. It is stated that a boat from the port put off and tendered a Spanish document to the officers in command of the Water Witch, which was refused, and the boat ordered off. The firing then took place on both sides. The Water Witch retired badly damaged, and with her Quartermaster badly wounded. She proceeded to Buenos Ayres, and thence to Montevideo to await the arrival of the Commodore to inspect the state of affairs.

A negotiation is said to be on foot between the British and Argentine governments for the tract of country known as the Granchaco, for the supply of Cotton in case of difficulty with the U. S.

RUSSIA.

A letter from St. Petersburgh, of March 31, in the Borsenhalle of Hamburg, says:

"The Emperor Alexander intends to visit Finland, it is said, and in particular Helsingfors, with his brother Nicholas, before the commencement of operations in the Baltic. The militia of St. Petersburgh are to assemble shortly, under the command of Prince Schakowski, when the Emperor will pass them in review. To day an ordinance has been published concerning the beard of the soldiers. The Emperor has deigned to order—1st, that the soldiers who mount guard on week days, shall not be required to dye either their hair or whiskers; and 2d, on Sundays and feast days, they must mount guard with their hair and whiskers waxed and dressed."

The Hamburg News contains a letter from Warsaw, which states that, on April 1, the appeal of the Holy Synod, relative to the formation of the militia throughout the Russian empire, was read from the pulpit in all the churches in that city. At the cathedral in order to impart more solemnity to the act, the governor and principal functionaries, civil and military, were present."

THE LATEST FROM THE CRIMEA.

The latest report from the Crimea is as follows: "A 'navy' recently arrived was working on the Balaklava Railway, in company with Bill, an operative of the same persuasion, but of more experience in Crimean life, when the new-comer was astounded by the apparition of a vivandiere pricking at full speed across the plain. Invoking his optics in the national manner, Newcombe demanded of his companion, 'Bill, what's that?' 'A woman.' 'A woman! what kind of a woman?' Bill, with the superiority which camp experience gives, informs him 'them's the women the French calls hors de combat.

[From the Correspondence of the London Times.]

THE EMPRESS AND THE ARMY.

PARIS, April 8.—As the Empress, unaccompanied by the Emperor, was walking yesterday afternoon in the Bois de Boulogne, with the carriage in waiting, the drums of a battalion of the Valtigeurs of the guard, that happened to lie on its way from St. Cloud to Paris, were heard. Her majesty entered the carriage, which appeared to move out of the way, but the moment the troops saw the Empress, they drew up in a line, and she passed slowly in front amid the most enthusiastic shouts. The officer commanding the column approached the carriage door, took the Empress' hand, and pressed it to his lips. At this, the shouts were again renewed. The Empress appeared much affected at the manner in which she was received, for to all appearances the meeting was most unexpected.

Passengers Shipped on board the "Juventa," for Philadelphia, F. D. Richards, Liverpool, March 31, 1855.

Ordinary Passengers.

The figures denote the number in the family.

T & Betsey Beck	8 Wm. T Collins	Mary A Watts	1
Matilda Collin	Wm. & Anne Page	John Blakemore
Joseph Cobelz	James & A Danville	1 Peter & Elizabeth Moore
Thomas Wilson	F G & M S Dungee	1 James & M Mather	6
Wm & E Grundy	Ed & Allice Kendall	Wm & Allice Kendall
Elizabeth Kendall	John & Allice Holding	Jane Dickenson
Peter & M Rowbottom	T & Sarah Millard	5 Harriet Wanfer
James Clerk	Eliza Edwards	Joseph & A Marsh	3
William Rogers	John Rogers	Thomas Elliott
Robert & A Baines	2 Wm & Dinah Nutter	2 James & A Woodward	5
Joseph Forrester	Catharine Dougall	3 James Tyrer
Wm & E Woodburn	3 Thomas Gerard	Sarah G Gray	2
Elizabeth Simpson	1 Dorothy Ryan	Eliza Laurinson
Isaac Butter	A Butter	1 Charles A Harper
Susan Tyrel	James Taylor	Harriet Taylor
J & Jane Sewall	James Wilson	Emma Inilan
Ellen Inilan	Jane Johnson	Eliza Matthews
Isaac Richards	Chas Smith	A & Sarah Bosthwick	1
Wm Fenwick	H & Eliz Eccles	2 Sarah Spurr
R & Mary Hazon	1 Eliz Bambridge	Wm Bambridge
S & Marg Dales	Sarah Powdrell	2 Henry Jaques
Eliz Jaques	I & Hannah Smith	Wm Bumble
Phil Dack	H & Susanna Strange	2 James Golland
Eliz Golland	Wm Boyes	C & S A Kedgell
P & Mary Lynch	2 Cath Lynch	2 J & Biddy Thompson
R & Maria Horton	8 W & Han Morrison	1 H Randell
R Ellis	J & Ann Wall	Geo Cook
J & M A Martin	4 T Dickeson	J & Mary Aspey
Marg Aspey	Lucy Strudwick	2 C & C Weatherstons
J & Ellen Scott	2 Sarah Harrison	J & H Jones	4
Jane Mcbride	W & M E Shewan	2 Eliz Smith
J Busby	Charlotte West	W G Mcmullen
R & Marg Skelton	2 T and H Hunt	3 J Mayer
C Innes	R Blanch	M A Blanch
R and H Telford	J and M Gibson	E Gardner
E and H Hirst	J and M Oley	E and S Baldwin	4
E Turner	J Holt	N T Guyman
B Brown	J and J Bradley	1 R Wyllo
J McKie	J and J white	E Hood
J Newton	J S Bunting	B Spencer
J Hardy	A and A Eckford	3 T Sutherland
J and H Moller	2 J and H Betton	3 I Wilcox
J and A C Pasley	W and M Lyon	7 T Ball
T and D Humphreys	R and C Malden	1 Wm Walker
J and E Marsden	G and A Tomlinson	W and E Stewart
P and S Robinson	1 J Lawson	T Rimmer
J Nutton	S H Earl	E Shore	2
P and E Horticks	3 B Hansen	J Chisnell
D and A Horrocks	4 A Bent	J Horrarth
J and M Prescott	4 J Neilsen	Capt Stayner, wife & son

P. E. Fund Passengers.

J D & Pauline Malan	5 John Bertorch	James Bonnet
David Roman	1 A & Mary Guydon	1 Dominico Boders
Jacob Hug	John Hug	David Hug
Randolpg Hug	Kasper Bryner	John Mathers
Rugala Hug	1 Anna Benz	Jocob Henderman
Verna Fisher	C O Haldew	Barbary Bryner
Anna Hug	Catharine Whelin	Ann Loader
J & Anne M Hall	2 Samuel Ackerly	James & Mary Bell	1
Sarah Franks	2 Bonfield Thimbleby	Mory Beeby
Ann Holmes	Ann Finch	H T & Hannah Clegg	2
Ann Cash	W & Lucy Davies	11 Luke Ford
Mary A Lack, Mrs.	Mary A Lack, Mis.	G & Margaret Johnson	2
F H & E Congrifne	Harriet Handford	1 W & Char. Woodhead	1
Henry Porter	C & E L Barnes	John & L S Hardman	1
Jane Thompson	4 Ann Jenkins	Mary Clemence
George Custing	Henry Custing	Phillip & M A Hewitt	2
Sarah A Bean	T & Jane Stephenson	C & Mary Crawforth
D & Hannah Craven	4 Elias & H Hant	John & M Worwood	1
John & R Worwood	T & Mary A Joyce	2 Eliza Griffiths
Henry Humphries	Emma Lloyd	2 W & Mary Bishop	1
E H & Kindred	5 William Pitt	M & Ruth Teasdale	1
Jane Johnson	Margaret Thompson	1 Catharine Wolstenholme
Margaret Mockhead	George Medham	J & Mary Robinson	3
Martha English	1 Arthur & Eliza Harris	Susan Jones	3
H T & Caroline Jones	Thomas Williams	Joseph & Elizabeth Peat
James Hadley	Jane Hadley	J & Elizabeth Davies
R & Sarah Johnson	3 Emma Hodges	Edward & Mary Prosser
Betty Mollyneaux	1 Charles & Mary Read	Mary Restl	3
William Perks	1 George Mayer	Elizabeth Whitehead	3
Charles Whitehead	Ruth Greenway	Joseph & Isabela Race	5
John & Eliza Vest	4 Jacob Lawson	John R Sheldon
Hannah Crowther	Samuel Ostler	1 Thomas & M Wilson	6
G & Ann Pickering	2	David & M A Hilton	2

Recapitulation.

	Adults.	Children.	Infants.	Total.
Ordinary	240	76	20	336
P. E. Fund	172	55	5	232
	402	131	25	568
Cabin Passengers,	-	-	-	4
Grand Total,	-	-	-	572

ELDER WM. GLOVER, Prest. of Company.

—— Shore, Cook.

Passengers Shipped on Board the "Chimborazo" for Philadelphia, by F. D. Richards, Liverpool, April 13, '55.

Ordinary Passengers.

The figures denote the number in the family.

John & Phebe Limins	John & Mary R Marett	David & Jand Bowen	8
David Leaheme	Ann Howels	Thos. Jeremy
David & Mary Jeremy	Elizabeth Johns	Ann Walters
David Williams	Daniel Thomas	Mary Harris
Margaret Llewellyn	Catharine Rees	D W & C N Davies	1
Jane Jones	Sarah Jones	Elizabeth Jones
John & Nancy Vick	Elizabeth Jean	John & Sarah Jones	1
Julia Jean	W H Moulding	James & Mariah Elliot	5
Ann Langfield	H P & T Howell	L & C Moulding	3
David Rees	Martha Eymon	Andrew & Sarah Prior	2
Thos. Walker	Chas. & Eliz. Thomas	Jas. & Sarah Howell	5
James Smart	Eliza Rent	G W & Harriet Rogers	1
William Crook	Selina Hodgkins	John & Emma Names	1
Mary Parry	James Turnbull	John & Mary Williams	2
Wm. Thomas	Wm. Roderick	T & Eliz'bth Williams	1
Thos. Rasbridge	Frances Perkinks	Rich. & Ann Hopkins	2
Thos. & Jane Evans	7 W & Sarah Reynow	5 Jas. & Mary Hughes	6
Daniel & Mary Jones	1 Jno. & Eliza'h Beran	4 D & Martha Griffith	4
David Davies	1 Morgan Jones	Wm. & R Jones	2
Robt. & Jane Stokes	3 Mary A Hawkes	J A & Alice Williams	3
H T & Harriet Brookes	Wm. & Emma Hill	A & Jane S Birch	4
J T & M A Merritt	1 Josiah Knowlden	Ann Harris
John Gun	Mary A H Peters	Lewis B Gun
Ebenezer Woodford	Benjamin Gun	Alfred Gun
Caroline Gun	Wm. Kelson	Robt. T Purr
Thos. & Ann Gun	Frederock Houghton	Richard R & K Davies	1
Eliza Wickins	Ruth Wickins	Esther Sainsbury
Sarah A Williams	Mary A Osmand	1 Eliza Gorton
Richard Brett	Henry W Atley	Alfred Boram
Christine Stewart	H T D & Rebecc Dall	6 Jno. & Elizabeth Pill
Wm. J O Pill	Careoline Pill	Alfrd. & Mary Pill
James Slade	Wm. Watkins	Rd. Sutherland
Don. & Mary Caloret	Wm. Knapp	Wm. Janet Jones	3
Thomas Richards	David Richards	James Edwards
C G & Harriet Shell	1 Robt. Shell	Charlotte K Sainsbury
	Wm. B Sainsbury.

P. E. Fund Passengers.

A L Lamoreaux	Louis A Bertrand	F & R De St. George	3
Jno. & Carol. Lesner	5 J & Margaret Treise	1 R D & E M K Lesender	8
James & J Squires	1 Saml. & Cath. Burt.	Wm. G & Louisa Mills
Elizabeth Barry	Fancis & M Romerell	4 Elizabeth Hocquar
Elizabeth Hardy	Anna Hardy	Wm. Hardy
A V & Nancy Danin	Jno. & E F L Gresley	Saml. & M A Langlais	5
Abr. E Knouf	2 Susanna Dolbel	1 R W & Margt Davies	5
Thomas Hopkins	Rachael Bowen	R & Margt. Rowlands	2
Wm. & M Thomas	2 J N & Phebe Morris	1 Jno. & Ann Edwards	2
J R & Eliz'th Young	6 Mary A Williams	Jas. P Dufresne
Jane Contanche	Jane Walker	Ed. & Rachael Jones	1
S & Rachael Langfield	Jas. McCracken	J & Elizabeth Wall
Wm. J & S Kilburn	3 John Picket	Rosetta Stringer
Ann Rees	Wm. & Ann S Davies	Elizabeth Davies
Elizabeth Roberts	R & Ann Stephens	Jer'h & Jane Price	6
Jos. & Dorathy Birch	2 Mary Birch	Fred'k Knowles
G & M A Simmonds	2 T B & Rach'l Knowlden	Samuel Henriod
Martin & Eliza Slack	1 Elizabeth Saunders	A J & Ann Atkinson	5
Dan. & Mary Graves	7 Joseph Dunham	1 Mary Pierce
Wm. & Ann Jones	Margarett Jones	Mrry Hiles
Hester Birch	Ruth Woodward	Thos. & Martha Barton	4
Celina Williams	J & Margaret Perkins	1 Geo. & Eliza. George	1
Jenkin Williams	T R & Lydia Painter	3 Pricilla Williams
R & Margaret Parker	1 Henry J Powell	Wm. & Eliz. Richards	1

Recapitulation.

	Adults.	Children.	Infants.	Total.
Ordinary	173	53	11	237
P. E. Fund	132	58	10	195
	305	196	21	232

ELDER ED. STEVENSON, Prest. of Company.

Wm. H. Osmand, Cook.

SEDUCTION.—The Rev. Lewis Elgin will be tried during the April Term of the District Court in Monroe County, Iowa, on a charge of seducing a poor widow's daughter, and member of his church.

ONE scabbed sheep infects the flock.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

LOST.

ON Sunday, the 29th inst., in or about the Church, corner of Washington avenue and Fourth street, a HAIR BRACELET with a Gold Clasp. Any person finding the same and returning it to the owner, will be suitably rewarded. Apply to the Luminary office. [may 5

SCHEER & HACKMAN'S

WAGON MANUFACTORY,

Corner of Sixteenth and Market streets.

KEEP constantly on hand a large assortment of Wagons suitable for Traders and Travellers to Santa Fe, California, Oregon, etc., etc.; also, for Farmer's use. Persons in want of Wagons are requested to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere, as promise a first-rate article at reasonable prices. S. & H. [may 5 24 3m*

ST. LOUIS, MO.

INFORMATION WANTED.

John Mathew Green, from Bedford, England, left Liverpool, May 12, 1849, on board the ship EMBLEM, For New Orleans—has not since been heard of—is supposed to be in St. Louis, or in its vicinity. Please address any information concerning him, to Luminary office. [may 5] CALEB GREEN.

REMOVAL.

MRS. J. VINCENT, MIDWIFE, East side of Fourth street, between Market and Walnut streets, St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. J. Vincent wishes to inform her friends and the public, that she has removed from between 8th and 9th, on Market street, to the above place, and hopes by strict attention to her duties, to merit a further continuance of their patronage. [apr 14 21 3m

TO EMIGRANTS.

C. B. HUBBELL, Jr., 102 4th st., St. Louis

Informs persons travelling towards

SALT LAKE OR CALIFORNIA,

That they will find at his store, the largest stock of DRY GOODS in the city, comprising every variety of kinds adapted to their wants, which he will sell at prices fully TWENTY-FIVE per cent. lower than any other house in the trade, to which your attention is invited.

N. B. One price only ever asked, and no deviation. [apr 14 21 2m

GREAT ATTRACTION

AT

WILSON & COOPER'S NEW STORE!

The attention of Emigrant starting for

UTAH, CALIFORNIA, AND OREGON,

Is respectfully called to our IMMENSE STOCK of

FASHIONBLE DRY GOODS!

Comprising every article in the trade, from the plain substantial articles of every-day use, to the finest and most elegant fabrics of first class Dry Goods and LINEN DRAPERY.

Our goods are all marked in PLAIN FIGURES, from which no abatement is allowed under any circumstances.

N. B. A discount of FIVE per cent. will be allowed to parties going west, on all bills over $100. WILSON & COOPER,

apr 14 21] Cor. 4th and Locust sts., St. Louis.

OUTFITS FOR CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE AND OREGON.

WM. C. WILSON,

DEALER IN

Groceries, Wines, Liquors, and Provisions, ; Pilot Bread and Crackers,

No. 195 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.

Is prepared to furnish everything in his line, at the lowest rates, and from past experience in the trade, feels assured, that parties intending to cross the plains, will find it to their interest to give him a call, and compare prices before purchasing elsewhere.

ON HAND AND FOR SALE LOW, THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES:

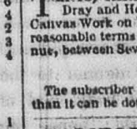
TEAS—A choice assortment of Imperial, Gun Powder, Young Hyson and Black.
COFFEE—Rio, Havana, Laguayra and Java—burnt and ground.
SUGAR—Crushed, Lump, Powdered, Clarified, New Orleans and Brown—all grades.
MOLASSES—Golden Syrup, Sugar House and Plantation.
LIQUORS—Best brands of Pure French Brandy, Holland Gin, Jamaica Rum, Irish, Scotch, Monongahela and Bourbon Whiskey, and all kinds of Domestic Liquors.
WINES—Pure Port, Maderia, Malaga, Sherry, Muscat, Champagne, Claret and White, Cordials, &c., &c.
BACON—Ham, Sides and Shoulders, Dried Beef and Beef Tongue.
FRUIT—Raisins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, Citron, Dried Apples and Peaches, &c., &c.
SUNDRIES—All kinds of Pickles, Sauce, Ketchups, Spice, Fancy Soaps, Candles, Oil, Gas, Fish, Mats, Cords, Buckets, Baskets, Brooms, Tubs, Lobsters, Oysters, Sardines, Cooking Extracts, Essences, Arrow Root, Farina, Sago, Corn Starch, Oat Meal, Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Macearoni, Vermicelli, Honey, &c., &c. [apr 7 20 2m

GOODIN & TOOKER,

GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,

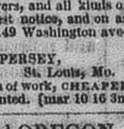
AND

BRASS FOUNDERS,



No. 125 North 3d street,

Between Washington av. & Vine st.



HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.

We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfilment.

Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand. Lamps repaired, reglided and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 19 6m

W. H. HUISH,

MACHINIST, Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as

PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERMLY.

mar 24] [18 3m

M. C. MOIES & CO.,

NO. 16 MAIN STREET,

GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Mechinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutters, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.

N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.

Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,

Residence, No. 328 South Side Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets:

Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,

MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also, Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice.

All the above articles are warranted of the best American iron.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by

ALFRED PERSEY,

St. Louis, Mo.

The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE and OREGON.

EMIGRANTS

Can be supplied with every variety of

PILOT BREAD & CRACKERS

Baked expressly for the overland Emigration, and WARRANTED to KEEP, at

J. B. WILLSON'S BAKERY,

No. 186 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.

The trade supplied at the LOWEST RATES. [apr 7 20 2m

UTAH TERRITORY.

Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,

DEALERS IN

GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L K & Co.

CATTLE.

THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all of which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. B. & J. H. FLEMING,

Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.

REFERENCE.

ISAAC HOCKADAY, Independence, O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HADUS & MULLEN, Wayne City.

N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon, and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood of Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!

M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Groceries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WESTPORT, MO.

S. P. KELLER,

DEALER IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,

HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE,

Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,

Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot

No. 27 Commercial Street,

WESTPORT, MO.

Feb. 24, 14 3m*

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.

THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo.

Feb. 24, 14 3m* JAMES W. BELIS.

C. E. KEARNEY. W. R. BERNARD.

KEARNEY & BERNARD,

METROPOLITAN STORE,

WESTPORT, MO.,

DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,

Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware.

Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WESTON, MO.

OUT-FITTING FOR THE PLAINS.

THOSE crossing the Plains this Spring, will find it to their interest to call on the undersigned, where they will find a general assortment of every thing necessary in out-fitting for such expeditions.

Goods received and stored upon liberal terms.

Feb. 24, 14 3m A. G. BOONE, Weston, Mo.

D. G. TUTT. J. F. BAKER.

TUTT & BAKER,

WHOLESALE GROCERS,

FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.

WESTON, MO.

Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.

March 3, 1855. 15 3m

J. B. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.

EVANS & MITCHELL,

MERCHANTS,

At Weston, Missouri,

HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

TO EMIGRANTS.

J D HARPER. T J HARPER.

AT the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especially of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we will sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.

mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

NOTICE.

I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at

ST. LOUIS PRICES.

mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

LEAVENWORTH, K. T.

G. M. & A. FISHER,

Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,

ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as And-irons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.

They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 16 3m

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.

STORAGE AND OUTFITS.

LEWIS N. REES,

Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,

IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pistols, Buoy-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.

Groceries and Provisions.

Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.

He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Hemingcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 16 3m

BLACKSMITHING.

T. S. ABURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommendation.

Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb. 1855. [mar 3, 16 3m.

KANSAS, MO.

H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.

NORTHRUP & CHICK,

KANSAS, MISSOURI,

WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.

We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.

Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

PHIL. ROCHILD & CO.,

HAVE const

Poetical Department.

ZION.

BY JOHN HYDE, JR.

The world may boast its pompous pow'r and pride,
And humble poverty in scorn deride;
Its unbounded credit, and heaps untold
Of hoarded wealth, and ill acquired gold,
For ah! too much of all its glittering show,
Wrung from the sweat that pearls the poor man's brow;
Its towers, towns and palaces parade,
Like Rome to vaunt the splendid things it's made.
The mighty millions of its martial host
May for it form another theme for boast;
Its statesmen, heroes, orators, divines,
Around whose brows a wreath of laurel twines;
Assembled thousands who assume to claim
A potent portion of a worldly fame.
Mankind may vaunt their talents or their lore,
And boast like Greece the noble sons she bore;
But lost's the glory all the ancients gave,
For Rome's a tyrant and the Greek's a slave.
But grander subjects claim the poet's pen,
And richer blessings for the sons of men,
For from the skies a glorious angel's flown,
And light celestial to mankind has shown;
And Zion's cities have began to rise
In smiling beauty to propitious skies—
Small in commencement—but the sturdy oak
That braves the storm and dares the thunder stroke
Was once an acorn—thus shall Zion rest
Unmoved by fear, till tyrany's redrest—
And Time, the monarch whose unsparing blade
Sweeps towns and towers into oblivion's shade,
In vain shall whet his ruthless scythe to mow,
Or lay thy cities or thy temples low;
For e'er old age can whiten on thy brow
Thy Lord shall come whom thou obeyest now.
Oh, Zion! oh! thou land of hope and peace,
Where all contention may for ever cease;
Where paltry feuds and puny strife may end,
And every man become his fellow's friend;
Where every shackle shall unfettered be,
And all thy children fearless and the free;
The pompous titles of the world unknown,
Its tinsel glory shall be charmless grown,
Its transient pleasures uncared for and unsought,
Its paltry pomp and panoply be naught;
When purity and worth shall wield that sway
That fraud and vice too often rob to-day.
When Christ shall come with messengers of flame,
And take the kingdom and the scepter claim;
When o'er each dwelling as returns the night
Shall rest in glory piles of lustrous light,
Like lofty pillars of a diamond made,
Where thousand beams each radiant ray repaid.
'Twere wildest folly to essay to paint.
The brightest picture were at best but faint,
As single grains 'mong Afric's burning sands,
As single pebbles on the ocean's strands,
As single leaves that in a forest grow,
As single breaths in wildest tempests blow,
So shall the glory all this world can boast
Be midst thy light immeasurably lost.
Golconda's suns project a brilliant ray
Dart dazzling diamonds into undimmed day,
But lost like dew drops in the ocean's swell
Is all conception that man's tongue can tell.
Then oh! for one may I myself unite,
Among thy sons participate thy light,
Partake thy labors and myself prepare
To join thy kingdom, and thy sceptor share.

WONDERFUL INVENTION.

The Image made to speak with the mouth of the Beast and of the false Prophets.

(Concluded.)

Placing his batteries before him on a small insulated table, he then asked the audience what kind of performance his automaton should give—they were at liberty to choose for themselves; by so doing they would be better satisfied in relation to the truth and real merits of the invention.

The three bishops then present now suggested that, if it were practicable, the Church service might be performed. After some general conversation this was adopted.

The prayer-book, the Bible, a sermon by the Bishop of Winchester, and some notices relating to the clergy were, by the Bishop of London, placed upon the four seperate wires, one upon each wire. The same process was observed with the automatons in the orchestra, only the music and hymn books were laid upon the conductors instead of the Bible, etc.

"Now," says Sir M. Faraday, "we are ready. When I lay my hand upon the prayer book, the figure in the reading-desk will rise and read the necessary portion of the service, or such portions that I may will to be performed. And when I remove my hand, by which means the circuit will be broken, the reading will cease. Again; when I lay my hand upon the music-book, etc., the automatons in the orchestra will rise and sing. And when my hand is removed from the music book, etc., the music will cease. So with the services throughout." Here the curiosity of the brilliant audience was almost intense. Never in my life have I seen anything to compare with it, neither can I in any way describe such.

I presume the feast of Belshazzar, when Mene, Tekel, Upharsin was written over against him on the wall, by an isolated hand, must have been similar to the consternation here manifested. His hand is now laid upon the prayer book, and behold! the metalic preacher rises with a solemn gravity, and, putting on a pair of gold spectacles, in a distinct and mellow voice pronounced the service: "When a wicked man turneth from his wickedness," etc.

Sir M. Faraday now removes his hand and lays it on the music book. Now you see the four automatons in the orchestra rise, and each one sounding his own note, produce a prelude of harmony by thirds, fifths, and sevenths that thrilled to the very soul. Oh, that I was able to portray this harmony, this sublimity!

After the prelude the Venite, Exultemus Domino was chanted. The rest of the services were then proceeded with, but an unfortunate circumstance occurred that marred the harmony for a time. By some accident, or by some wilful design of some wicked wag, or wags, the sermon had been removed from the conducting wires, and Tom Paine's "Age of Reason" placed there instead thereof. This being rectified, the remainder of the services were concluded, and this, too, in the most precise and mechanical manner; still, I think, not more so than the present and popular mode.

Sir M. Faraday then proceeded to show how and in what manner the thoughts of persons, sitting in the various parts of the room, could be described by the automaton in the reading desk; holding up two ends of separate wires, positive and negative poles, which he said encircled the room, and being connected with the head of the figure in the reading-desk, whose head he described as having inside two powerful magnets, placed at right angles to each other, and to which the negative and positive wires were attached.

The former circuits being broken, he connected these wires to a small oblong battery. Seating himself calmly in the insulated chair, he then asked the audience, or any one of them, to think or write upon any subject they chose.

After some little talk, a committee of six gentlemen were selected by the audience to retire and write on some subject, seal it, and keep it so, until the thinking powers, etc., of the mysterious gentleman in the reading-desk had been thoroughly tested. This was strictly complied with. After the committee returned and became seated about fifty feet from the automaton, they were asked to join hands. The two outside gentlemen each taking the end of the separate wire, the other ends being then attached to the small oblong battery, the automaton rose, bowed to the audience, and proceeded to read or speak the following in a clear and distinct voice, viz: "Man is a being compounded of three great principles, matter, mind, and spirit, in whom is concentrated magnetic and electric forces that, when fully developed, will create a new state of things in the moral world."

Now the most intense silence prevailed, and the greatest anxiety was depicted upon every countenance.

The sealed paper was opened and read by one of the committee, and behold! it was the same, word for word, that had just been delivered by the automatical figure in the reading-desk.

Squads or circles were now formed in various parts of the room, and, by the aid of the batteries and conducting wires, thoughts and writings were reciprocated to the entire satisfaction of all concerned.

Sir M. Faraday spoke of electric and magnetic forces as connected with the human mind, and he thought by his automatical machines that he would be able to reform both church and state.

First, by one automaton as reader, and four in the orchestra, the same services might be performed in several parishes at one time, the automatons in the other churches being connected with those in the principal church, or, if the Rector, Bishop, etc., thought proper, the batteries may be fixed in their Studies, and then they need not expose themselves to the inclemency of the weather. It would also save them much time in writing or copying from various authors, as they would only have to mark such and such passages in any particular author, and then lay the book upon the positive pole of the battery—willing at the same time that the automaton read such; so with the rest of the services, including the singing.

Besides these advantages there is another, viz., many of the curates may be dispensed with, the automatons being substituted instead thereof.

Statesmen, lecturers, lawyers, etc., etc., will also find much advantage from the same source.

The great philosophers then concluded by referring to the magnetic currents traversing the earth, parallel and at right angles to its poles—their connection with the animal and vegetable worlds, etc.

Secondly, on the Spirit phenomena, so prevalent on the North American continent, etc. He would in his next lecture show that such were only performed by the same principles and same agencies that he had exhibited here to-night; that nothing could be more fallacious than to conclude that such were communications of Spirits.

Thirdly, in connection with those phenomena, he had associated the decomposition of light—namely, that light being a compound, and modified by electricity, it is decomposed by matter in the vegetable, mineral, metallic, and animal worlds, in accordance with the physical construction of those bodies.—Hence each material structure connects the one and the same light that falls upon itself to its own use, and reflects back a light peculiar to its own physical constitution. And this in a similar manner to the decomposition of air by the animal body, and of carbonic acid by the vegetable world; hence the great variety of colors in the landscape and all material objects.

Finally, that light does not travel, as stated in many theories. Such theories were in accordance with the age of their invention and adoption, and were in approximations to the truth in a certain degree. But, in the present age of simple and progressive truths, they are not adequate to explain the peculiar simplicity manifested throughout the material creation and the present known phenomena of its Laws.—[Morning Herald.

The Judge's big Shirt—Practical Joking.

The story goes that, on a certain occasion, Judge A——, then on a visit to Raleigh, in North Carolina, left home without the necessary precaution of carrying along a second shirt. While at Raleigh he was invited to attend a gay and fashionable party, to be given the following evening at the residence of Judge B. The visiting Judge was terribly perplexed about a clean shirt for the occasion; and while revolving in his mind how he should possess himself of the desired article, (in those days ready-made shirts were not, as now, articles of merchandise,) he was called on at his room by Mr. C., another limb of the law, but not a judge. After passing the usual compliments Judge A. remarked—"See here, C., I have been invited to attend a party to-morrow night, and I havn't a clean shirt for the occasion"—hoping, no doubt, that his friend would proffer the loan of one of his. But being a bit of a wag, and relishing a good joke amazingly, he concluded to have a little fun, and at the same time learn his friend a lesson concerning his negligent custom. "Oh!" said he, "there's no difficulty about that. I can have you one made."

"But do you think it can be finished in time?" said Judge A.

"No doubt about it. I have a shirt-maker who is perfectly prompt and reliable, and I can vouch for it being ready."

"All right, then, if you will be sure and attend to it."

"You may depend on it," said the Judge's friend. "It shall be here by half-past six o'clock to-morrow evening."

C., in going home that night, called at the lady's and ordered her to go to a store, get nine yards of bleached domestics and three yards of linen, and make a shirt of it for Judge A., and deliver it at his room on the following evening, at half-past six precisely, and charging her particularly there was to be no disappointment, and not to deliver sooner or later than half-past six.

"But, Mr. C.," expostulated the woman, "you mean three shirts, don't you, out of nine yards?"

"Do as I tell you, madam. Don't you suppose I know what size shirt is required by my friend?"

Early next morning the cloth was procured and the making of the shirt entered upon. About six o'clock in the evening, C., all attired and ready for the party, called on the Judge, when he was saluted on his entrance with—

"See here, that shirt has not been sent yet!"

"Oh!" says C., pulling out his watch; "it is not time yet—lacks a quarter of the time; for I told her to have it here by half-past six."

The couple chatted away for a while, when presently a timid knock at the door was heard. The judge jumped to open it, when a little girl asked if that was Judge A.'s room?

Being answered in the affirmative, she continued—"Here is a shirt Mr. C. told my mother to make for you."

"All right, my nice little miss." And straightway he began to prepare for donning the much coveted garment, remarking—"It is well made and handsomely done up, too. Smart woman that, Mr. C."

"Oh, yes! I knew she would not disappoint you in any respect."

By this time the Judge had commenced pulling it over him. He pulled, and pulled, as yard after yard passed, and still his head was enveloped in the shirt. He complained of its size, but his friend told him he had got it twisted, and urged him to hurry on, as 'twas time they were at the party.—Again he set himself to the task, and by hard struggling got through, finding himself enshrouded in a shirt five yards long and two yards broad, covering the floor with its ample drapery!

"In God's name," said the Judge in astonishment, "what is this the woman has sent me?" looking with consternation upon the monstrous shirt around and beneath him. "What is it, I say?"

It was with much difficulty that C. could restrain his laughter; but, approaching his enshirted friend and pulling the huge collar down so that he could see his face, he gazed with apparent wonder, and observed:

"What a silly, stupid woman! I told her to get just enough to make three shirts; instead of making three, she has put the whole nine yards into one shirt! But we must hurry up and make the best of a bad bargain, for it is high time we were at the party this minute. You can push it down your trowsers, and nobody will be the wiser." So at it the Judge went, his friend assisting him, as yard after yard was piled away in his unmentionables, (they didn't wear tights in those days,) and thus he went to Judge B.'s party, if not the finest dressed, at least the largest shirted gentleman in the crowd.

C. promised never to "blow" on his judicial friend, and kept his word until he learned that the Judge was compelled to tell it on himself, for unfortunately he carried the big shirt home, and Mrs. Judge wanted to know what tremendous big woman's s—ft that was in his trunk? He had to out with it; and it being told by the Judge himself, Mr. C. felt at liberty to tell it also, which he does sometimes to the infinite merriment of all who hear him.

NOTICE.

We have received and have on sale the following books and pamphlets.

Book of Mormon,	$1 00
Book of Doctrine and Covenants,	95
Voice of Warning,	50
Spencer's Letters,	50
Hymn Books, Morocco gilt, ext.,	1 25
" " Calf "	80
" " Roan "	50
Government of God, by J. Taylor,	50
New Jerusalem, or the Fulfilment of Modern Prophecy,	15
Divine Authority of Joseph Smith,	10
Remarkable Visions,	10
Only Way to be Saved,	5
Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, by O. Pratt, 6 parts, 10cts. ea., or per sett,	40
Polygamy, by a Lady in Utah,	5
The Seer, by O. Pratt, vol. 1, to which is added 6 parts of Divine Authenticity of the book of Mormon, and Polygamy, by a Lady of Utah, elegantly bound, in one vol.	2 25
Orson Pratt's works, bound,	1 50
Times and Seasons, vols. 4, 5, and 6, well bound, ea.	1 50
Portraits of the First Presidency,	1 25

Route from England to Salt Lake may be expected in a few weeks.

We have a few numbers of the Millenial Star of vol. 17 on sale.

Those wishing any of the above books, or wishing to subscribe regularly for the Millenial Star, can apply to me every Sunday at the Church, or by post.

Apr, 14 21.] JAS. S. CANTWELL.

The Evidences Accumulate in proof of what we have long since asserted, viz: that the Mustang Liniment is the 'sine qua non' of all external remedies ever before offered to the afflicted.

We would call especial attention to the advertisement of this Liniment in our columns, and will take this occasion to say that this appears to be one of the few popular medicines that really possess all the virtues ascribed to them. In effectually curing the worst cases of Rheumatism, no matter how long standing, in an incredibly short time, and for sprains, bruises, sores, burns, or pains of any kind, it has no equal. We have heard of many cures that have been performed that really appear incredible, were they not vouched for by persons of responsibility and influence. It is said to be an infallible remedy for musquito bites.

See advertisement in another column. [17 2m

ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. G. SIMPSON. D. CAMERON.

GREAT SALE.
"AUCTION GOODS"
FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THE Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time submitted to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞ The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below Manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,
No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES,
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

BOOTS AND SHOES.
J. PARSON,
163 Morgan Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.
A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12tf.

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of
RHEUMATISM
than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.

G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,
J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:
Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.
I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.
I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.
Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.
I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Croton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS
have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:
Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.
The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.
G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG & CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.
Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.
B. FORMON,
TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at 126 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House.

St. Louis, Missouri.
Jan. 13, 1855. [8 3m*

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST.
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.
Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
75 MARKET STREET,

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.

N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

75 Market Street,
(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)
Feb. 17, 12 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11tf*

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. 23. [5 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their Interest to call on ALMA HOLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 19, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store-rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 packets old government Java;
130 lf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
6 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
20 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes M.R. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERE.
Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 1f*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Lubeanme Street,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS,
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MCLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. McLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLARD.
Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞ For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.
T. W. HOIT.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PARER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.
A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co. have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.

Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant Hat!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

Its fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,
OF CORINTHIAN HALL,
397 BROADWAY,
ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,
FOR THE SALE OF
FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,
FOR $4 EACH!
FOR A
LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,
GO TO CORINTIAN HALL!
FOR AN
INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
297 Broadway;
☞ BIG HAT.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tr.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tr.

ALEXANDER DOW,
Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOWS MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.

COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light travelling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 136 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.

Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tr.

S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set. Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired. Tailors' and Tinners' Sheats, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tr.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, MAY 12, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XXV.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.
Mailed to Subscribers in the U. States at $2 per annum.
To Foreign Subscribers, (American Postage prepaid,) at $3 per annum.
To contiguous British Provinces, at $2.50 per annum.
No Subscription received without the money, though a specimen copy will be sent when required.
Any person forwarding us nine new Subscribers and remitting any current money in payment, will be entitled to the tenth copy gratis.
To avoid mistakes, particular pains must be taken, to send us all names of Suascribers, Post-offices and States, plainly written.
United States postage on the Luminary to British American Provinces, is one cent each—to Foreign countries two cents—within the U. States, one-half cent; provided, each subscriber notifies his Post-master, and pays the postage quarterly in advance, otherwise it will be two cts.
All letters requiring an answer, should, to ensure attention, enclose a Postage Stamp.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

One square (eight lines or less,) one insertion,	$ 50
do. do. each additional insertion,	25
One square one month without alteration - -	1.00
do. two months - - - - - -	2.00
do. three months, - - - - - -	2.75
do. six months, - - - - - -	5.00
no. one year without alteration, - -	8.00
For each alteration, - - - - - -	25

Extensive advertisements as per contract.
Quarterly and yearly advertisements to be paid at the end of each quarter.
Prepayment required for any term less than a quarter.

From the Deseret News.

Discourse on the Prophecies, by Elder O. Pratt, Tabernacle, January 7th, 1855.

(Concluded.)

Turn over to the next chapter, and you will find a remarkable prophecy concerning Joseph. After having blessed the two sons of Joseph, he calls up his twelve sons before him, and commences to bless them, beginning with Reuben; when he comes to Joseph he pronounces upon him a peculiar blessing; "Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall," etc. As much as to say that all the branches that descended from Joseph would not remain in one country connected with the parent tree, but they should be so fruitful and numerous, in order to fulfill the prediction uttered in the 48th chapter, as to become a multitude of nations in the midst of the earth, that they would have to leave the parent tree, and the place of their first inheritance; they would have to "run over the wall," over the great wall of waters that intervened between them and this great western hemisphere.

In order to show that they were to inherit a land greater than that which they possessed by Jacob's forefathers, the old gentleman continues in this blessing and says, "The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills; they shall be upon the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was seperate from his brethren." That is, the blessing of Jacob prevailed above that of Abraham and Isaac. The Lord promised Abraham and Isaac they should have the land of Canaan, and their seed after them for an everlasting possession. That you know is not a large country, but says Jacob, "I have a greater blessing than that, I prevail above that of my progenitors and I will confer this blessing upon you Joseph, "The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors." How much above? "Unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills." That is as much as to say, that my blessings are, not only to inherit this small country, called the land of Canaan, but they extend unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills; I have a larger country than this conferred upon me, and because you have been a good son, and because your children are good, and because you have taken care of your brethren in the land of Egypt I will give it unto you; "These blessings shall be on the head of Joseph and on the crown of the head of him that was seperate from his brethren."

In order that Joseph might become a multitude of nations his branches had to run over the wall; he had to come to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills; he had to be located in a large country where his seed could have room to grow into a multitude of nations. Where can you find a multitude of nations who descended from Joseph? You may go through England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Europe, Asia and Africa, but they are not to be found in any of those lands. The origin of those nations can mostly be traced, and it can be proved that they are not the descendants of Joseph. When you have passed through all those countries, and cannot find a multitude of nations from Joseph, cross the great waters that intervene, like a wall, between the land of Palestine or the eastern hemisphere, and the American continent, and what do you discover? A multitude of nations evidently having sprung from the same origin as is indicated by very many striking characteristics.

Here then is the only land on which that prophecy has been fulfilled. If it is not fulfilled here, it cannot have been fulfilled on any other portions of the earth with which we are acquainted. Moses speaks of this land of Joseph, in particular, when he was about to be taken out of the midst of the children of Israel. He pronounced a blessing on the twelve tribes, beginning with Reuben. When he blessed Joseph, his blessing was peculiar, indeed. "And of Joseph he said blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath, and for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon, and for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills, and for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren." If Joseph only inherited a small portion of the land of Canaan with the rest of the tribes, why does Moses bless his land more particularly than the adjacent inheritances of the other tribes? There could not be much difference in the qualities of lands that lay side by side.

Here we get a clue to a land that was to be blessed above all other lands,—a distant land from Canaan as is expressed by the "The utmost bound of the everlasting hills," and sufficiently large to hold a multitude of nations springing from Joseph. Remember that they were to be blessed not only with the precious things of the earth, and the fullness thereof, but with the precious things of heaven.—What are the precious things of heaven? Are they anything else but revelations? Can you think of anything else that could be called the precious things of heaven? After the children of Joseph came to this land, they were blessed, as Moses predicted, with the precious things of heaven; the Lord opened to them things past, present, and future, unfolding His great purposes that were to take place in the latter times; He unfolded to them mysteries and things too great to be uttered by man. Many of these things were written, they kept their records, and they were handed down from prophet to prophet; at last the people fell into great wickedness and the principal nation was destroyed; and one of their last prophets was commanded to deposit the records where they were found by Mr. Smith. Their words have "whispered from the dust," and they have come forth among the nations, accompanied by an abundance of evidences.

Before this was offered to the world, the Lord confirmed it by opening the heavens in broad daylight, and sending down an holy angel who descended in the presence of four individuals, three besides Mr. Smith, and the angel took the plates, and turned them over leaf after leaf, while, at the same time, the voice of the Lord out of the heavens told them it had been translated correctly, commanding them to send forth their testimony to all nations, kingdoms, tongues, and people. They accordingly attached their printed testimony in connection with the Book of Mormon. This was done before they were permitted to go forth and build up the church. The Lord was determined that this generation should not only have the sure word of prophecy to convince them of the truth of this work, but living witnesses to bear testimony to what their eyes had seen, their ears had heard, and their hands had handled in relation to this matter that they might have evidences so great as to leave them without any excuse.

We will now pass on to some other prophecies in relation to the gathering of the people together. You know we have already referred you to prophecies relating to the gathering of Israel when this record should be brought forth. But Israel are not the only ones to be gathered, but many of the gentiles will be gathered also and numbered with Israel.—We might first refer you to some prophecies to show you that this work is not to commence among Israel first, but among the gentiles; that the gentiles are the ones to whom the standard should be first raised. This is what the Apostle Paul says in the 11th chapter of Romans, "For as ye (gentiles) in times past have not believed, yet have now obtained mercy through their (the Jews) unbelief: even so have these also now not believed; that through your mercy they also may obtain mercy." Through whom? Through the gentiles; for it is through their instrumentality that the Lord is bringing forth the record of Joseph to the world in the last days, as a standard of doctrine, a plan of salvation raising it up in the midst of the gentile nations, that we as instruments in his hands might go forth and gather the house of Israel, that through our mercy they also might believe, and be brought to the knowledge of the truth. Isaiah in his 49th chapter has informed us that this work should commence, not among the Jews first, but among the gentiles.

We will read a portion of that chapter. "Thus saith the Lord God, behold I will lift up mine hand to the gentiles, and set up my standard to the people; and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders." That is the sons and daughters of the house of Israel. "And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers; they shall bow down to thee with their face towards the earth, and lick up the dust of thy feet; and thou shalt know that I am the Lord; for they shall not be ashamed that wait for me." Here we perceive, that when the great day shall come for the house of Israel to be restored to their own lands, the very first work he accomplishes in relation to that restoration will be to lift up his hand to the gentiles and set up a standard among them. This shows plainly that it will not be some man among the gentiles that will rise up uninspired, like the old reformers, setting up his own doctrines and opinions; it is not a work of that description, but it is a work which the Lord himself has to perform: "But I will lift up mine hand to the gentiles, and I will set up my standard to the people, and then after I have done this they (the Gentiles) shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders, kings shall be thy nursing fathers and their queens thy nursing mothers, etc." The same things are predicted, also, in the 11th chapter of this prophecy "And it shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt," etc.

Now the Lord will not accomplish this by getting the people together in the capacity of missionary societies, without Prophets, Apostles, and the word of the Lord direct to them; but it is the Lord who says "I will set up my hand the second time," etc. How did he set his hand the first time to gather Israel out of Egypt? Did he do it by a company of uninspired men, without miracles, angels, signs, and wonders? No; but he set his hand the first time by signs, wonders, prophets, miracles, sending angels from heaven, by dividing the waters and causing Israel to walk through the midst of the sea without suffering harm, and by coming upon the Mount, and proclaiming the law in the ears of all Israel; when he undertakes to gather them from the nations of the earth, you will find a work of still greater magnitude highly necessary to accomplish that great gathering. To take a nation from the midst of another single nation where they were all collected, and lead them off eleven days journey to another land, is a small work compared with the gathering them from all the nations of the earth and assembling them in one. When he sets his hand again the second time, he says, "He shall set up an ensign for the nations;" which is the same thing as spoken of in the 49th chapter. The standard that I have proved should be lifted up to the gentiles, is the same thing as the ensign, mentioned in this place. "He shall set up an ensign to the nations and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth," etc.

Do you believe they can be assembled before that standard—that ensign is raised? Can they be assembled in some other way and the prophecies be fulfilled? In vain would it be for the nations to undertake to accomplish this thing in any other way than the one the Lord has pointed out by prophecy. Mark what he says in the 15th verse, "And the Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian Sea, and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river, and shall smite it in the seven streams, and make men go over dry shod. And there shall be an high way for the remnant of his people, which shall be left from Assyria, like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt." Do you believe the words of the prophet? Do you believe that when the Lord sets his hand the second time to gather Israel from the four quarters of the earth, and lifts up a standard and ensign among the gentiles to accomplish it, that they will go through the sea dry shod as they did through the Red sea anciently? If you do not, you do not believe this prophecy. I am now speaking to a people that do believe it; they believe it shall be "Like as it was in the day that Israel came up out of the land of Egypt;" not spiritually, but literally as then.

We, as gentiles have cause to rejoice, that is, we who are numbered with the gentile nations, (for there may be many of the blood of Israel among us,) I say, we have cause to rejoice that the Lord has lifted up his hand, and set up his standard, and raised his ensign, and called upon us to bear this ensign—this standard—to the nations of the earth and to proclaim it in the ears of the gentiles first; what for? That the times of the gentiles may be fulfilled, that the fulness may come in, and then all Israel are to be saved, as it is written "there shall come out of Zion a deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." Therefore, we are the people, identified with the gentiles, to whom this standard has been raised; and it has been raised too on the mountains, for the Prophet Isaiah has told us that it should be accomplished on the mountains. We refer you to the 18th chapter of his prophecy. In it is a proclamation to all the world. They are commanded in that day to both see and hear. "All ye inhabitants of the world and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifts up an ensign upon the mountains, and when he bloweth a trumpet hear ye. For so the Lord said unto me I will take my rest, and I will consider in my dwelling place like a clear heat upon herbs, and like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest. For afore the harvest when the bud is perfect, and the sour grape is ripening in the flower, he shall both cut off the sprigs with pruning hooks, and take away and cut down the branches." What becomes of them after they are cut down? "They shall be left together unto the fowls of the mountains, and to the beasts of the earth; and the fowls shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them." What an awful destruction, the multitude of all the nations will become like the dream of a night vision, they will pass away. All the nations are here called upon to see and hear at the time the ensign is lifted up; will they see? No. The spirit of deep sleep is poured upon them; the prophets and seers, and rulers are covered.

In order to show still more clearly that the gentiles are to be the characters that are to carry this ensign to the nations we will refer you to the last chapter of Isaiah. "For I know their works and their thoughts; and it shall come to pass, that I will gather all nations and tongues and they shall see my glory." How is he going to do this work? He says, "I will set a sign among them." The same thing as spoken of in the passages already referred to; "And I will send those that escape of them unto the nations;" (here go the missionaries "To the isles afar off; that have not heard my fame;" they will go among the idolaterous nations, to Hindostan, Siam, China, to the Sandwich Islands, etc." "And they shall declare my glory among the gentiles." The Lord did not send these messengers to declare his glory among Israel first, why? Because a certain work had to be done among the gentiles first; they were to carry this sign, ensign, or standard, proclaiming the doctrines of Jesus Christ so as not to be misunderstood; they have to carry it to the isles afar off, and declare his glory first among the gentiles.

What next? A mission to Israel; and these same missionaries "Shall bring all your brethren (Israel) for an offering unto the Lord from all nations, upon horses, and in chariots, and upon litters, and upon mules, and upon swift beasts to my holy mountain Jerusalem saith the Lord, as the children of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel unto the house of the Lord." The children of Israel will be gathered just as literally as they formerly brought an offering into the house of the Lord. In the last days when the Lord shall set a sign among the gentiles he will as literally bring all Israel back to their holy mountain in Jerusalem, as he brought them from Egypt anciently. After that his people have been gathered out from the nations, they will have the privilege of going to look upon the carcasses of those that transgressed against the Lord, their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched.

Now, we have a great work before us; we are a little handful in the mountains, but you know what Isaiah said, "A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation." However little we may be, we must become a thousand; though we are a small one, it will be but a little while before we shall be a strong nation, not a weak one; and we will have missionaries in every part of the nations of the earth afar off, and we will declare his glory among every nation, people, kindred, and tongue; and as fast as we get the people to believe in the standard the Lord has raised up, we will introduce them into the kingdom, baptize them for the remission of sins, and lay our hands upon them in the name of Jesus Christ, as he has commanded us, and they will receive the Holy Ghost, and be filled with mighty faith, and they will be armed with the power of God, in great glory, and will come from different nations with songs of everlasting joy upon their heads, and nothing will be able to compete with the work of the Lord; but it will progress and continue to roll on, until every nation hears, and every heart is penetrated, and the heavens and the earth shall come together.

That is what we look for, for the union of the heavens and the earth; we are dwelling here separate from our brethren in heaven; we want to get back to them, and they to us, and we want to be united, and accomplish what the Lord intends to be accomplished in the last days; and before we get through with it, we shall see greater wonders and signs, than that little transaction of bringing Israel out of Egypt; that will almost be entirely forgotten among the great displays of his power in the last days.

There is to be a house of the Lord built in the last days. "What! are there not plenty houses of the Lord?" Go into New York, and many other great cities, and you will find St. John's Church and St. Peter's and the Church of Jesus and many houses which profess to be houses of the Lord; and yet you tell us that there is to be a house of the Lord built in the last days. Will it not be a wonderful thing when the Lord gets a house upon the earth? Yes—he has been so long without one.—People have been building houses to him, the same as Israel built sepulchres for the prophets whom their fathers had killed; so it is with the good Christians in the nineteenth century. Did he tell them to build houses unto him? Did he give them the pattern to work by? Did he point out the location upon which they should be built? No; the Lord had no hand in their works. But, what says the prophet Isaiah in the second chapter of his prophecy? He predicts, "And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it." What can there be so attractive about the house of the Lord, as to cause all nations to flow unto it, and to cause the prophet to notice the very spot on which it should be built? It is not to be built in the city of New York, or in Boston; those are comparatively level countries, almost on a level with the sea; but "in the last days it shall come to pass that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains."

We have got up here over four thousand feet high, and we are going to build him a house by the word of the Lord, and by the inspiration of the Almighty, according to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, commanding us to build one to his name; and it will be a house different from all others, that will attract the attention of the nations; and all nations shall flow into it. What for? Isaiah tells us, "And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." In two places the Lord is going to give revelations; the one is in Mount Zion, and the other in Jerusalem. What shall follow this? "And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks.—Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." What a happy, peaceable time! But before the Lord can introduce such a joyful time, he has got to cut down the branches of the wicked with pruning-hooks, and let the fowls and beasts of the earth have a good supper; "and the fowls shall summer upon them, and the beasts shall winter upon them." When he has got the rebellious eaten up, the rest of the nations will come flocking unto the mountain of the Lord's house, to be taught in his ways, and instructed in his paths; and they will get so perfectly instructed, that they will not wish to learn war any more, and will convert their weapons into farming utensils.

That happy, peaceable time, so often predicted by prophets, will come; that is the reason, my hearers, we want to build a house of the Lord in the top of the mountains; it is in order to fulfill ancient and modern prophecy, and the commandments which the Lord our God has given to us. There must be something wonderful, indeed, to attract the attention of all nations; unless there is to be a very great power manifested, it would not attract the attention of the people afar off; if only some few sick people were healed, it might, perhaps, not be heard of only for a few miles from the place where it happened. It must be some tremendous power among that people that build the house of the Lord. What kind of a city will this Zion be, and how will the dwellings of the people be lighted up? Isaiah has told us in the fourth chapter, "And the Lord will create upon every dwelling-place of Mount Zion, and upon her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night; for upon all the glory shall be a defence." No wonder that the nations afar off flow to Zion. Did you ever hear tell of a whole city lighted up in that manner? You have heard of the invention of gas-lights, but this does not attract the attention of the nations; but there is to be a city called Zion, and a house of the Lord in the top of the mountains that are not to be lighted up with gas, but by the glory of the God of Israel, "I will create upon every dwelling-place of Mount Zion, &c.; not on one house alone, but upon every dwelling-place, "A cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night." The nations will be struck with wonder, and will say, "If that people have such great power, let us leave our own lands and countries, for it must be that those people are the people of God, for their houses are enveloped in a flame of fire every night, because of his glory; let us go up there, and know what his will is concerning us."

But the prophecies are so full upon these subjects, and the time so far expired, that I will stop where I am, without saying any more.

A SHREWD DOCTOR.

The Philadelphia Sunday Mercury tells a good story to the effect that a white man named Jennings undertook a few nights ago to give a colored physician from St. Domingo, named Dr. Cailes Le Brun, residing in that city, a severe drubbing for malpractice. It seems that Jennings had been troubled with dyspepsia, and had applied to Dr. Le Brun for a cure; but after taking the doctor's physic for a month he found himself much worse, told the doctor so, and then a quarrel and the assault just spoken of followed.

"Monsieur le Mayor," said the doctor, "I no pretend to be ze wizard, but I cure anybody dat do vat I say. I tell dis dat he must take two of my pills to-morrow, four next day, and den go on an double ze dose for forty day, and if he no cure den, I tell him he come to me and I give him back his money tout suit. Sare, dat is ze bargaine vat I make wid him, and he no do dat, so it is no vundare he get worse."

Jennings replied to this: "I took his pills, sir, according to directions, for five days, doubling every day as he told me, and found on the fifth day that the dose amounted to thirty-two pills; and then I began to figure up what it would come to in forty days, and I found that I should have taken at least half a peck."

"No mattare if it was a bushel," said Dr. Le Brun, "ze pill is vegitabeel, just same as von turneep, and he might live on zem all ze time and zey not hurt. But if he no give ze pills a fair trial, vat for I give him back his money?"

It was plain enough that Jennings did not go according to contract, and so he had no pretence for asking Dr. Le Brun to refund. The doctor promised to say nothing about the assault and battery, if Jennings would persevere in the purchase and use of the medicine; but Jennings in his extreme case preferred the operation of law to that of physic, and was accordingly bound over to answer for the outrage he had committed.

"It is creditable to the good taste and good feelings of England, that there has been little sign of exultation over the fall Emperor Nicholas. Even in the mixed and excitable throng of a theatrical audience, the announcement from the stage of the death of the great enemy of England was received without any expression of feeling beyond a profound sensation. There has been nothing in the shape of triumph in the tone of the public or the press; but the awfully sudden event has been received with a consciousness of a divine interposition."—[Illustrated News.

The English know how to be generous as well as just and brave.

Daring Rescue.—A little girl belonging to a deck passenger on board of the steamer Altoona, fell overboard on Monday evening, when one of the deck hands, named Harry Boested, jumped overboard at the risk of his own life and saved her.

We gain stength by unanimity.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, MAY 12, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer, address box 488.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor, 102 Nassau st., cor. of Ann.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.
Wm. Cazier, Nephi City.

Cholera, &c.—A few Hints to the Wise.

The summer is now near upon us, and with it has come the fell destroyer of the nations—the Cholera. Many a stiff neck is made to bend, and many a bold heart is made to faint. We have visited several families where the insidious and terrible monster has made his unwelcome but successful visits—aged mothers we have seen mourning distractedly for their death-stricken children, until they themselves have been seized by the dread grasp of the destroyer, and have fallen with their children in his cold and icy arms.

It is not for lack of medical advice and medical skill that so many fall by this unaccountable malady. In cases we have lately witnessed, the best advice that could be given was received by the frightened victims, and assiduously and faithfully followed by the anxious attendants, but all to no purpose. Pills, powders, and the numerous etceteras of a doctor's practice, were freely used, but the disease still raged unabated, until it had seized and secured as its victims, brothers and sisters, mothers and daughters, with their robust medical attendants; and in one case, one who had laughed and scoffed and jeered at the gift of healing by the laying on of hands, and the prayer of faith; but in a few hours even he also lay numbered with those he had so faithfully attended—among the silent dead.

The cholera is undoubtedly one of the direful scourges of the last days, that will flourish and prosper in their destructive career, until they lay waste and utterly destroy the ungodly from the earth. It is for this reason that the Lord has called unto his Saints by the voice of his prophets, saying, "Come out from among the nations, oh, my people, that ye be not partakers of their sins—that ye receive not of their plagues, get you up into the high mountains for salvation, until my indignation be overpast, for I have decreed a consumption upon the whole earth, and I will lay waste and desolate the nations by pestilence, famine, and wars, until but few men are left."

Now, while we continue to live amongst the Gentiles, we are exposed to the judgments that are coming upon them, but if our position amongst them be a necessary and unavoidable evil, we then have a positive claim upon the mercy and salvation of our God, and if we urge our claim with clean hands and pure hearts, and in the way God ordains, be assured that our prayers will be heard, and our claims will not be disregarded, but every righteous demand will be favorably regarded and faithfully granted.

We do not condemn or blame our brethren for calling to their aid medical skill, but some among them might be blamed for putting their whole trust and confidence in the profession, as we have occasionally witnessed, for it is written, "Cursed is man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and who trusteth not in the Lord his God." It is written, moreover, that a certain king of Israel was slain by the Angel of God, because that when he was sick he sought not unto the Lord, but unto a physician. These things should be an effectual warning unto the sick and afflicted of the house of Israel, which should lead them to put their faith and confidence in the Lord. We have been called to administer to the sick when no faith has been exercised in the healing ordinance of the Lord's house, nor in the Lord himself; but all their faith, hope, and confidence has been placed in the physician; in such cases we have seen the Priesthood of God insulted, and the Holy Spirit grieved, and take its departure from that habitation or household which has thus been left to ruin and desolation.

We do not object to our brethren and sisters calling to their assistance the medical fraternity in cases of necessity—for there are many circumstances and occasions wherein it is wisdom in the Saints to do so—but when it is done let us be assured that it is done in wisdom, and in accordance with the will of our Father and our God, and if we do thus, the spirit of God will rest upon us, and those who administer unto us, whether they be Elders of Israel or sons of Esculapius, and if we are not appointed unto death, we shall be healed, and our Father in Heaven will be glorified.

It is the privilege and duty of every Latter-day Saint when sick to call for the Elders of the Church to lay hands upon him, as it is written by the Apostle James, 5, 14, "If any among you are sick, let them call for the Elders of the Church, who shall anoint them with oil, and lay hands upon them in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick." It is not necessary that the sick should call upon us whenever they need the healing ordinance administered.

The bishops, who are also elders, who are appointed presidents over the several wards of this city, have the authority and power to minister unto the afflicted, and the elders also whom they have called to their assistance. If, therefore, our brethren are afflicted, let them call upon the bishop of their ward or president of the section, or any other faithful Saint, and let them anoint the sick with pure consecrated oil, and lay hands upon them, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick.

The bishops have published for the brethren scattered through the city, particularly for the benefit of the new comers, a complete list of each ward and section in the city, also the name and residence of each bishop and president of section. This we feel will be of great service to the brethren, inasmuch as they will search out the presiding authorities of their several wards, and listen to their counsel and instructions, and exercise faith and confidence in their administrations. The list referred to may be had gratuitously of the bishops, or at the Church office.

If our brethren and sisters, after calling for the elders of the church, still feel that they would like to have the advice, counsel, and perscriptions of a practical physician, then call for one of the household of faith, if one can anywhere be found, for his prayers and administrations will be favored and blessed of the Lord, and the calm and peaceful influence of the Holy Spirit will be imparted, instead of the spirit of opposition and confusion so frequently mixed with la practique du medicin.

In connection with this subject, we make honorable mention of Dr. White—whose advertisement will be found in our paper—who has, from the time he embraced the Gospel, faithfully devoted his services to the sick and afflicted among us. He has been ever willing and ready to respond to the calls of the poor and distressed, as well as the oppulent; with a spirit of pure devotion to the interests and welfare of the afflicted Saints, he has gained our esteem and confidence, and we recommend our brethren and sisters who may need medical attendance to call upon and consult him in preference to any physician in the city, believing he may be safely trusted in any case whatever; and we feel assured if he does not succeed in saving those who are appointed unto death, that he will not hasten to an untimely grave those who are not so appointed, which is frequently done by other members of the honorable faculty.

In conclusion, we suggest to those who would escape the fatal grasp of the destroyer, that they keep the commandments of God in all things, and faithfully observe the counsels of the spirit and the words of wisdom; and if they do these things they shall have health in their navel and strength in their bones; the treasures of wisdom shall be opened unto them, and the Angel of Death shall pass by them as he passed by the children of Israel, for the Lord hath promised it, Then put your trust in the Lord, all ye people, for he is mighty to save, and will save to the uttermost, all those who put their trust in him.

SALT LAKE MAIL.

We feel happy in being able to inform our readers that the Salt Lake Mail for April has arrived. We received the announcement on the 8th inst., by a dispatch from our worthy friend T. S. Williams.—We may consequently expect the delivery of the Utah Mails at the close of this, or early in the ensuing week.

The following information has been received by Mr. Magraw, Mail agent in private letters from Leavenworth, Kansas Territory. We copy from the Republican:

MORE INDIAN DEPREDATIONS.

INDEPENDENCE, May 9.—The Salt Lake mail is here. It was brought by Mr. Williams of Salt Lake City.

The Indians had driven off the mules from the mail station at Devil's Gate. They had also driven off all the animals of the traders there.

All the people of Sweetwater had left for safety.

These depredations were committed by the Sioux Indians.

All is quiet on this side of Fort Laramie, but the Indians are making threats.

The party of Mr. Williams was not interrupted; it consisted of fifteen, and they traveled only in the night time.

Mr. Magraw is taking energetic steps to have the mail carried with regularity. He will accomplish it unless prevented by the Indians.

The April and May outward mails were met in good condition.

DEPARTURE FOR THE PLAINS.

On Tuesday, the 8th inst., we shipped a goodly number of Saints on the Golden State, bound for Atchison, under the Presidency of Elder John Clegg, to be assisted by Elders Worley and Burgess.—Isaiah Coombs was appointed clerk of the company. This company was composed, principally, of old members of the St. Louis branch, who have labored dilligently and faithfully to roll forward the cause of righteousness during our acquaintence with them, and we feel to bless them in the name of the Lord.

We shipped the same day, on the Polar Star, about one hundred and fifty of the Siddon's company, under the Presidency of Elders Parson and Ferguson. Both companies are bound, this season, for the Valley. We trust they will be blessed and preserved, that they may escape the power of the destroyer, and arrive safely at the great gathering place of the last days.

Arrival of the Siddons' Company at St. Louis.

About two hundred of the Siddon's company arrived at this city on Monday morning the 7th inst., under the Presidency of Elder Isaac Alred, whose letter, which will be found in another column of our paper, will furnish additional particulars concerning the voyage, which will doubtless be interesting to our readers.

This is the first company of Saints that has been sent by way of Philadelphia, which constitutes the movement in some sort, an experiment, the particular items, therefore, concerning this company are associated with more than ordinary interest.

It will be seen that the Siddon's had an unusually long voyage to Philadelphia in consequence of contrary winds. The average time employed in making the passage from Liverpool to Philadelphia, is thirty-five days according to the judgment of experienced seamen, which is a decided advantage in point of time, compared with the former route from England, by way of Orleans.

The price of passage from Liverpool to Orleans, or Philadelphia, does not differ materially, but the price of passage from Philadelphia, is about fifty per cent more than passage from New Orleans to St. Louis. The price charged for adult passengers from Philadelphia to St. Louis, including about one hundred pounds of baggage, was seven dollars and fifty cents. One dollar and seventy-five cents per hundred, was charged for passengers luggage exceeding eighty pounds, on the railroad to Pitsburg, and thirty-five cents per hundred upon all over one hundred pounds on the rivers to St. Louis, which should serve as a caution to our brethren against overloading themselves with a mass of useless rubbish, which is so frequently the case with Emigrants to this country.

The principle advantages which we expect our Emigrants will derive by taking this route, are of a sanatory character. The great mortality of our brethren on the Southern route, and the sickness engendered whilst passing West India Islands and N. Orleans have been truly distressing, and the fact that but one death has occured in this company, en route from Philadelphia to this city, and that an infant born on the Siddons, that could scarcely be said to have ever lived, is certainly a presumptive evidence in favor of this route, and shows the wisdom of President Young, in directing by his counsels, this very necessary and salutary change.

WE have been favored with a brief report of a Conference held at Council Bluffs City, April 8th, 1855; Wm. H. Fulsom, President, Francis A. Brown, Clerk. Present of officers, one High Priest, four Seventies, five Elders, one Teacher and one Deacon.

The general authorities of the Church were presented and unanimously sustained by the vote of Conference.

The Indian Creek branch was represented by James McAlester, contains sixteen members, including officers. We have not been furnished with the representation of other branches, and we are consequently unable to give a more extended representation of the Conference. Much good and useful instructions were interspersed with the general business of the Conference, from which we extract the following remarks from Eld. F. A. Brown:

"I feel to acquiasce in the remarks of President Fulsom, and I rejoice that we still wish to preserve that union and perseverence in the great work we have enlisted in. I feel my own weakness and incompetency to fill the high station I have been called to; but I have done the best I could since I became acquainted with the gospel of Jesus Christ. Any one holding an office in this Church, has a great responsibility upon him, and it should be his chief aim to magnify his calling, for the gospel is calculated to benefit and save mankind, and exalt them in the presence of God.

"It is this that stimulates me to action, and enables me to bear a faithful testimony to the great work of God in the last days. What was it that inspired our beloved Prophet Joseph Smith to action and fired his bosom? It was that the whole human family might be redeemed and brought back to a state of happiness and perfection. It is the same spirit that now burns in the heart of brother Brigham, and inspires him to send Elders to different nations of the earth to disseminate truth, and establish them in righteousness, that they may emerge from the thick darkness and dubity of mind, with which they have been overshadowed for so many generations.

"It was said that we could not sustain an organisation here, but thus far it has been kept from snags and shoals, and we have been blessed, and our most sanguine expectations have been more than realized and my prayer is, that we may keep that peaceable spirit in our midst to the end of our days, and keep all the commandments of God, in the name Jesus Christ. Amen."

Interesting correspondence relating to the Saints—Their number, condition, system of preaching, Emigration and bearing toward the U. States Government.

Not having yet seen the following correspondence or any part thereof in print, we take the liberty at this late date, to present the same to our readers, being unwilling to allow it to slumber after the labor that has been bestowed upon it:

"PADDOCKS GROVE, ILL., Feb. 21, '55.

"Dear Sir—Being engaged in writing an article for Putnam, on the country, history, religion and policy of the Mormons, and being desirous of having as correct information as possible, I take the liberty of addressing to you the following questions, which, if you will answer, you will confer a great favor upon myself and do somewhat towards getting a fairer hearing of your own side of the question.

"What are your present numbers?

"What are your numbers in the Valley?

"What are your numbers without the Valley?

"Of what nations and of what classes?

"How many of each?

"What is your system of preaching among the nations; and of emigration?

"What policy will be held towards the U. States?

"Any other information which you could give me, or any directions to authorities, would be very thankfully received. You will pardon the freedom I take, I hope, in consideration that it is a necessary evil of your position.

"Yours very respectfully, W. C. FLAGG."

"To ERASTUS SNOW."

"LATTER-DAY SAINTS EMIGRATION OFFICE,
St. LOUIS, Mo., 21st of March, 1855.

"DEAR SIR:—Your note of the 21st ult., was received by due course of mail, and it would have afforded me pleasure to have furnished an earlier reply to your questions; but a press of business compelled me to postpone it until now, nor have I been able to bestow that degree of attention upon its preparation, which the nature of your questions and the importance of the subject demands.

"You ask to be informed of our numbers; first, within the Valley, and second, without the Valley, and what nations and classes. In answer to this enquiry, I am able to furnish only an approximate estimate, for, although we have statistics of each particular mission, yet we have no general system of representation, by which accurate statistics may be gathered, of our numerical strength and various casts throughout the earth. Our strength in Utah, may be set down in round numbers, at 40,000; in California, 3,000; in the Sandwich Islands, 4,000, one-eighth natives; in the Society Islands, 1,000, nine-tenths natives; in British America and the United States, east of the mountains, 10,000.

"There were in Great Britain, December 1, 1855, 51 Conferences, 702 Branches or Congregations, and 29,441 communicants; of these England furnishes 73 per cent., Scotland 10 per cent., Wales 14 per cent., and Ireland 3 per cent.

"In Scandinavia, which includes Denmark, Sweden, Norway, and Iceland, there were 10 Conferences, 69 Branches, and 2,457 Communicants—Switzerland, 9 Branches, 299 Members—France, 326 Members—Germany, 4 Branches, 69 Communicants—Malta, 3 Branches and 40 Members—Gibraltar, 1 Branch of 18 Members. Total in Europe, 32;-672. There are in Australia, about 1,000. There are also congregations established, and active Missionary operations in South Africa, and in the principal towns along the Southern coast of Asia, and on several Islands of the Indian Ocean; but I have not at my command at this time, statistical information of the precise condition of these various missions.

"To the best of my knowledge, I should not set down more than about 1,000 Communicants in all these latter Missions; about one-fourth natives, and the rest Foreigners of different Christian countries.

"Our Missionary labors have recently been extended into the West Indies, and into several countries of South America, but as yet only small results appear in those countries.

"As to our system of preaching among the nations, 'tis the same as that which our Savior appointed unto His disciples; viz: We go and teach all nations, baptising those who believe and repent, teaching them to observe all things which Jesus taught His disciples.

"No man among the Latter-day Saints, of whatever grade, has any salary appointed him for Missionary labors or other religioue services, either at home or abroad. Like the disciples of old, they are made to rely upon Him 'who feeds the fowls and clothes the lillies,' and when any are appointed (which is usually done at the General Conferences) for Missions, they leave their mechanical pursuits or other business, and usually, from their own resources, provide for the support of their families during their absence; and their own necessities are ever supplied by the free-will offerings of such friends as the Lord raises up unto them among the nations.

"With reference to our system of Emigration, I would remark, that, in crossing the Plains to Utah, either from the east or west, our people journey in large companies. properly organized under captains of tens, and of fifties and of hundreds, and pitch their tents by the way, as did the children of Israel, and none who abide in these organisations are ever abandoned on the Plains, or left in distress.

"Our Foreign Emigration has attained but little system or regularity, except from the European states, whence our emigrants, since 1840, have generally been shipped under a general agency at Liverpool.

"There have been since that period 15,642 shipped by the Agents, from Great Britain; 1,538 from Scandinavia, and 50 from Germany, besides many who have emigrated through other channels.

"The usual method adopted with our European Emigration, is to charter vessels and fill them exclusively with our own people This is easily effected by the concerted movement of the presiding Elders over the various Conferences, in connection with the Agent at Liverpool. An experienced and trustworthy man is appointed President over each ship's company for the journey, and he subdivides the company on shipboard, into convenient classes and appoints a man over each subdivision to preserve unity, order and cleanliness, and promote the comfort and happiness of all.

"As to the classes of our converts and emigrants, they may be set down at about two per cent. professional men, and the balance farmers and mechanics of every trade; and of what usually are denominated 'middling classes'—men of integrity and industrious habits.

"There is a small excess of females over the males, which possibly may reach ten per cent.

"The census returns of 1850, show an excess of males in Utah at that time, but the settlements were then only two years old, and as usual, the male population had pioneered the way.

"Your last question is, 'What policy will be held towards the United States?' It may be answered in short, we shall continue to do as we have done—mind our own business and trust that the Government and people of the United States will do the same. We have no interests to oppose against the people and Government of the United States, but our interests and sympathies are in favor of the institutions of our common country. We wish to preach the gospel to them, and warn them to flee the wrath to come; but further than that we neither wish to interrupt the peace and harmony of the United States or any other government on the earth, and only ask what we are willing to give—the privilege of serving our God in peace; and as to our religious institutions, so long as we are satisfied and molest no others in the enjoyment of theirs. Our policy will be to exact the same from our fellow men. In conclusion, I have one request to make of you, that is, if you make use of my statements, you will give them in my own language entire, and if practicable, favor me with a perusal of your article when published. I am, dear sir, very respectfully yours.

"ERASTUS SNOW."

"To W. C. FLAGG, Paddock's Grove, Ills."

WE intended furnishing our readers this week, with a summary of news from our interesting correspondence of the brethren, but other matter has accumulated on our hands, which has crowded it out of this number. We are happy to acknowledge the receipt of letters from Elders Martindale and Alpline, who are laboring in Texas, and we are glad to learn of their faith and zeal, and success in preaching the Everlasting Gospel to the people. We shall notice ther communications, more fully, in our next paper.

Arrival of the Juventa at Philadelphia.

We have been favored with a letter from Elder John S. Fulmer, under date of Philadelphia, May 5th. He says, "I have to report the arrival of the Juventa. She was published this morning as having entered the bay yesterday. She is expected up to-night." We may therefore, expect this company in St. Louis, in about a week or ten days.

THE NICARAGUA EXPEDITION.

The arrest of Col. Kinney—ordered to give bail in the sum of $10,000.

The arrest of Col. Kinney, on Friday night the 27th ult., has created considerable sensation and interest not only in the city of Gotham but throughout the States. The Colonel is warmly supported by numerous friends, who are of course deeply interested in the expedition, which involves a new principle in the history of the United States; the result of the trial is consequently invested with immense importance.

Col. Kinney, accompanied by several friends, proceeded to the United States District Court, before Judge Hall.

The District Attorney, Mr. McKeon, interrupting some proceedings going on before the court, said that in the case of the United States against Henry L. Kinney, the defendant has been brought into court by the Marshal, and I now move that he be committed. I suppose that application will be made to bail Col. Kinney.

Messrs. E. L. Fancher and J. M. Eager appeared as counsel for the defendant.

The District Attorney—The defendant has been indicted by the laws of the United States, under the act of 1818, section 6, which provides that if any one shall set on foot a military enterprise, within the United States, against any foreign power with which the United States are at peace, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor. In a case of this moment, I would suggest that bail be set at an amount which will secure the attendance of the defendant. I would suggest bail to the amount of $10,000.

Mr. Francher—We are prepared to give the amount of bail required by the District Attorney, and have already had the bail bonds signed before Commissioner Morton. The only thing is that we wish as early a day as possible set down for the trial.

The District Attorney—The present term will end on Monday. I have no desire to delay the trial, and will fix as early a day as possible.

The Court suggested that application should be made at the beginning of next term, (which commences on Tuesday,) or the counsel could arrange with the District Attorney to name a day.

The District Attorney—I must state that I fear that I shall not be able to try it before the 7th of May, on which day the vessel (the steamer United States) is advertised to sail.

The Court made an order that the defendant be bailed in the sum of $10,000, two sureties justifying in $20,000 each. Bail was given.

The New York Post publishes the following in regard to the objects of Col. Kinney's expedition.

The steamship United States has been chartered to sail on the seventh of May next with a party of perhaps five hundred colonists, under the guidance of Col. Kinney, to the port of San Juan. After a passage of probably about eight days and a voyage of forty-eight hours ride up the river San Juan, the adventurers will find themselves among the luxuriant forests and grassy plains which bound the North-eastern shores of Lake Nicaragua.

According to the statements which we derive from Mr. Fabens, the United States Consul at San Juan, the "Nicaragua Land and Mining Company" have a valid title to one and a half million acres of land, principally in the mountainous district of Chontales, bordering on the large and beautiful lake of Nicaragua. Some of these lands have been purchased from the Government and the Church of Nicaragua, both of which, by reason of the incessant wars to which they are parties, frequently feel the want of ready money, and are, consequently, willing to sell their possessions cheap. The title to others rests in certain wealthy land owners connected with the company, who are desirous of inviting settlers to their vicinity. Within the domains of the company is the fine island known at St. George's Key, at the mouth of Great River, where the most extensive mahogany tracts, and where the sarasparilla, the india rubber and the ebo, from the fruit of which a valuable oil is extracted, are found in great abundance.

Among the valuable woods in the main land districts of Chontales, are mahogany, rosewood, satinwood, black cedar, Brazilletto, and the costly dyewood known in commerce as the Lima or Nicaragua wood. In some localities the ceiba or wild cotton-tree flourishes, growing in a few years to such a size that a dozen men can hardly embrace it with their arms. Three crops of corn are easily obtained yearly, and tropical fruits of all kinds exist in profusion. Chontales is famous as a grazing country, having the best pasture lands in Central America. The traveler never loses sight of herds of cattle, with troops of wild deer frolicking on their skirts. Other game such as wild turkey, quail and woodcock, are also plentiful, and the mountain streams furnish trout of a delicate flavor.

Besides these, there exists mines of gold, silver, coal, and other minerals, of which promising specimens have been exhibited in this city. When these sources of wealth are once fairly opened and developed we may look forward to another California in this now neglected and tainly peopled region.

The climate of Chontales, we are told, is delightful, the temperature on the mountains being cool and invigorating, while upon the plains, where the thermometer ranges from 64 to 78 degrees, owing to the refreshing breezes from the great lake of Nicaragua, it is never oppressively hot. Such is the testimony of Squier, who says of Nicaragua that "its climate is so favorably modified by a variety of causes as to be rendered not only agreeable, but quite as salubrious as that of any equal extent of country under the tropics."

NOTICE—PHONOGRAPHY.

Under this caption may be found the advertisement of Elder S. J. Lees, who intends opening a class on Wednesday evening, next, to teach this very excellent system of writing. We wish him success.

See advertisement in another column.

FROM THE HIGH COUNCIL.

ST. LOUIS, May 10th, 1855.

We wish to call the attention of the Saints scattered abroad to a resolution passed in our Semi-Annual Conference, held in this city, on the 16th day of April, which has been omitted in the published minutes. The spirit of the Lord rested down upon us in conference assembled, joy and gladness beamed from the countenances of the Saints, gratitude and praise was on the tongues of the servants of God, In partaking of the light of the Holy Spirit, our hearts were opened and expanded, and our views enlarged—we felt above narrowness and intolerance. In partaking of the mercies of the Lord, we felt merciful. Our religion, instead of leading us to breathe extermination and damnation to our fellows, and denunciation to our brethren, who for a long time have not taken part with us in forwarding the interest of God's kingdom, who, being engrossed with the cares of this life, have forgot their duty and their God—instead of "dealing damnation round the land," we felt full of blessings, full of the good will of God, full of joyful anticipation. And when the elders, who had traveled among the Saints, related the coldness, negligence, and short-comings of many of the brethren and sisters, we felt to pity them that they were so bound and blinded by the powers of darkness. Oh! how we wished that you could feel as we felt, enjoy as we enjoyed, then would you arouse yourselves and act differently.

As God, in his wisdom, mercy, and compassion, has once more sent the message of life and salvation to this nation, and privileged us with the blessings and ministration of the apostleship. We also feel in behalf of our brethren who have not as yet participated with these glorious blessings and privileges. Therefore we resolved in conference.

That the influence of darkness and coldness that hangs over our brethren scattered abroad through this country be broken, and that they be warmed and aroused to receive the light and blessings of the Gospel that God has again sent to them through his servants.

The feelings of the Saints spontaneously accorded with this, and with prayerful hearts in gladness and cheerfulness, lifted up their hands, giving the hearty Amen. Quite a sensation was felt when this motion was passed.

Now, brethren and sisters, you who are scattered abroad, you who know the truth, yet have separated yourselves from it, you who know the light of revelation has dawned, but walk not in its light, will not you respond to this motion? When the servants of God come in your neighborhood, will not you seek them out, welcome them to your midst, and receive the life-giving power from their lips, that shall save you from the manacles of death? Their hearts are full of blessings to you. When you hear of our interest toward you, remember how you formerly felt in the days of your first love, call to mind the many happy hours and blessings you have enjoyed among the Saints, and how highly you once prized the blessings of life, and what you once endured for the Gospel's sake. Will not you let the good spirit work in your bosoms to your redemption and deliverance? Will not you renew your covenants afresh before the Lord, and seek to establish a communication with the servants of God, and with the church office in this place, and receive instructions from the printed word, as well as orally from those in your midst.

Yea, brethren, for many of you we have hope, for all of you who ever had the root of the matter in you before. Return, return, O! ye of Israel, to the fold of your God. The voice of the servants of God say come, the spirit says come, the angels in heaven who watch over the interests of the kingdom say come, the judgments and discord among the nations say, delay not, but come.

What we ask of you is to listen to the still but persuasive voice of the good spirit, to repent of your past sins and short-comings before God, to be re-baptised, to openly confess your religion, and le your life proclaim how holy a religion it is, and daret to be Saints, to be true to God, to conscience, to the voice of the spirit, to your own interest. If there is no one qualified to re-baptize you, seek council from the church office in this city.

Is there any elder, priest, preacher, deacon, or member amongst the Saints scattered abroad, who feels he wants to do right, yet cannot, who feels the need of help—to you we say here is our hand to render you the necessary assistance, to help to release you from the damning influence of this generation. Who among the Saints scattered abroad will take hold with us in this matter, and be the honored instruments in the hands of God of helping to build up his kingdom, and these brethren and sisters, and restore them to the light, joy, and blessings of the Gospel. Blessed are ye that shall do it, it is an honored privilege. Ye shall see the hand of the Lord in your deliverance, and have your way open to Zion. You shall run and not be weary, you shall walk and not faint. you shall see the hand of the Lord over you for good, and shall be a savior on Mt. Zion when the kingdom shall be the Lord's. May the prayers of the servants of God for the deliverance of his people be heard and answered with blessings on their heads. Amen.

Signed in behalf of the Council.

CHAS. EDWARDS, Pres.

J. CANTWELL, Cl'k.

THE NEWS BY THE ATLANTIC.

The New York Courier, of the 4th, gives the following epitome of the news by the Atlantic.

We give our reading columns this morning almost entirely to the details of the intelligence from Europe. They exhibit five features of great importance:

The failure of the Vienna Conference.

The secession of Austria from the Alliance.

The unsuccessful bombardment of Sebastopol.

The enthusiastic reception of the French Emperor in England.

The negotiation of a British loan of sixteen millions of pounds sterling.

It is known that the Conference has broken up, and that all chances of pacification from it have entirely disappeared. The precise issue on which this disruption occurred is not yet known, though it doubtless had to do with the occupation of the Black Sea. It appears that instructions were received from St. Petersburg under which the Russian plenipotentiary proposed that Russia and Turkey should maintain an equal number of ships in the Black Sea, and that all other powers should be excluded. This project, strange as it would seem, the other plenipotentiaries deemed "worthy of consideration;" but this intelligence is speedily followed by the marked telegraphic announcement that the Conference had come to an end, and that the English and French plenipotentiaries are on their way home. It is to be presumed that it took but very short "consideration" to show that the acceptance of the Russian proposals would be a total relinquishment of the principles of the third point, and an insufferable humiliation.

Austria has manifested her intention to act with the Alliance no longer, unless the propositions of Russia are accepted. This is only the fit termination of the fast and loose game all Germany has been playing for the last eighteen months. We do not consider her defection any great loss to the Alliance, for an open enemy is at all times preferable to a faithless friend.

Sebastopol has been bombarded for nine days with a violence never before demonstrated, no less than 500 guns and mortars maintaining the fire. Previous to the bombardment, Sir John Burgoyne, who is considered the first artillery officer in the British service, expressed a belief that the place could not hold out against such a fire, but at the last accounts there was not much probability that this opinion would be verified. Some of the Russian guns in front have been silenced, and some of their advanced ramparts have been taken by the French, but no decided impression has been made upon the place.

The reception of Napoleon was all that his heartiest supporter could desire. The people turned out in immense masses, and greeted him with an applause which abundantly proved that they were not impelled by mere curiosity. Napoleon sustained his part to perfection, as on such occasions he is always sure to do. The speech he made in reply to that of the Lord Mayor is a model of its kind.—Consummate tact is displayed through the whole of it; every word was adapted to strengthen him in the good opinion of the English people. The Imperial visit, distasteful as it was in many quarters at first, will prove eminently serviceable in cementing the alliance between the two great Western Powers, and certainly there never was greater need of it than now.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has presented his budget, in which he sets down the expenses of the war for the year at thirty million pounds sterling and proposes a loan of sixteen millions. There being a superabundance of capital, this loan was quickly responded to; and thus we see that with a debt of seven hundred and seventy millions sterling or upwards, Government can borrow, for its immediate wants, at three to three and a quarter per cent, while the United States, with a bebt in course of rapid liquidation, are paying five to six per cent.

SWITZERLAND.

The Swiss Government was officially notified by Austria, on the 5th inst., that the blockade maintained for the last two years along the frontiers of Lombardy, had been raised on that day, in consequence of the ratification by the Cabinet of Vienna of the Convention concluded at Milan, on the 18th March last, between Austria and the Canton of Ticino.

ITALY.

The flooring of a room in the Convent of St. Agnes, where the Pope had assembled a number of guests, gave way, and precipitated all the company into the apartment between. The Pope escaped with but slight injury. Cardinal Antonelli, Cardinal Patrizi and Gen. de Montreal received some hurts. A similar accident occurred (says history) to Pope Alexander VI.

Cardinal Wiseman is to be librarian of the Vatican in room of the deceased Cardinal Mai.

AUSTRIA.

All hopes of Austria taking the field against Russia appear to be at an end, at the present. Among the conflicting rumors that which appeared to bear the most consistency was, that Austria refuses to demand from Russia any concessions further than these three:

Firstly, the Russian fleet in the Black Sea to remain in statu quo. It is said at present to consist of three ships of the line and four steam frigates.

Secondly, the Western powers to have consuls at Sebastopol, who are to be under the immediate protection of their ministers residing at St. Petersburg.

Thirdly, the Allies to have the right to construct war ports on some part of the Turkish coast.

Mehemet Ali notifies the Turkish Government that he has put down the Kurdish insurrection; has killed 1400, and taken 500 prisoners.

Rhodes and Sinope are to be fortified.

A private letter gives an account of the trouble at Krajova, already announced by telegraph.

An Austrian officer, on the 11th March, saw at a window a lady whose beauty attracted him, and he forthwith entered the house and demanded admittance to her apartment. The lady called for assistance to expel the intruder. Her husband came and addressed the Austrian but too civilly: "What do you want here? I do not know you. You are not billeted in my house and the lady you are insulting is my wife." Without a word the Austrian drew his sword, and stabbed the husband to the heart.—Much excitement ensued. Some of the bystanders went to lodge a formal complaint with the police; others sent intelligence to the Turkish commandant at Kalafat, who lost no time in sending to Krajova a battalion of infantry and squadron of cavalry and artillery. A crowd proceeded to the Austrian General to demand the arrest of the offender.

The General's reply was brief, but to the point: "Go to the devil! I won't punish my soldiers for such fellows as you!" This brutal reply roused the indignation of the people. All the stores were closed, and the citizens assembled in the streets crying "Death to the Austrians! they are but one against four! we won't submit to be slaughtered like the people of Bucharest!" A general riot ensued, and the citizens, armed with sticks, iron bars and axes, attacked and put to death every Austrian they met. The Austrians, on their side, turned out and attacked the people, killing forty persons in the first charge. At this juncture, the National gens d' armes and the Roman soldiers attacked the Austrians, and after a fierce fight drove them at the point of the bayonet out of the city, where they yet remain encamped in the fields. Official statements return 247 killed on both sides. The excitement continues, and the citizens have not re-opened their stores. They demand justice, and are about to send a deputation to Constantinople to seek it from the Sultan.

Correspondence.

LETTER FROM F. B. WOOLLEY.

WAYNESVILLE, Warren Co., O.,
Monday, April 13, 1855.

BR. SNOW:—Dear Sir—By request of brother H. Jennings, I address you a few lines and enclose two dollars to be placed to his credit on subscription for the Luminary.

The brethren feel tolerably well, and are beginning to feel like coming up to the work once more, especially brother Jennings. He says he knows he has been on the back ground, but is now willing to commence anew, and endeavor to profit by the things he has suffered. I think he will go to the valleys next spring, as he is making preparations now. There have been several apostates, and some are now here, who have done considerable damage to the cause, and given the people a distaste to Mormonism, hard to overcome. Besides being prejudiced against it, there seems to be an indifference and carelessness in regard to the doctrine, which prevents them from investigating, and is more difficult to overcome than their prejudices. But they think they know all about it, and almost imagine they have been surfeited already with the "monstrous delusion!" Polygamy, here, as elsewhere, is the great stumbling stone and rock of offence, upon which they all are broken to pieces. Individuals, one-fifth Ham and four-fifths Japhet, and even their pious and virtuous progenitors curl their lips in derision of Pariarchial institutions. Some of the "culled indiwiduals" here, would like to join the church if it was not for polygamy; that is, if the Gospel could be changed from time to time, to suit their whims and allow them all to go to heaven at last—each one his own way—they would like it exceedingly, and no doubt if you could pursuade the President to make a few changes, we might procure crowds of proselytes.

I have been here (or at least in the country about a mile from town) ten days—we have had five meetings and a tolerable turn out, considering the circumstances. Yesterday afternoon the "Old Gentleman" began to show the cloven foot. He took the similitude of a Reverend Methodist, and endeavored to disturb the meeting by asking questions and calling out "Prove that! There's doubt on that point!" I requested him to wait until I had finished, when I would answer his questions; but I was obliged to repeat that I would not be interrupted before the gentleman would desist. I have raised a slight breeze, and the waters are beginning to be troubled. They have found out my history, and discovered that I was egged at Springfield, which has given them peculiar satisfaction; although, the first information I had of having been in such a pleasant situation, was communicated to me yesterday after meeting. I suppose it is quite current in the neighborhood. Many are highly gratified, however, and extol the prowess of the Springfielders, in egging one defenceless individual.

I expect I shall leave here in a day or two, to attend our Conference at Cincinnatti. I suppose they will say they run me off, and add that to their list of "noble exploits" and "daring achievements."

They sneer and laugh at me as I pass in the streets now. I pity the poor deluded creatures, and lament for the blindness which cause them to do so. I suppose we are each equally satisfied in the choice we have made, at least for myself I can say I am very well pleased with it. To be sneered at by such individuals, is quite an honor, much more than their approbation could possibly be.

I am alone, and I find it not as pleasant as to have company, but I try to do the best I can, and pray the Lord will bless my labors, that in the harvest I may have a few sheaves. It is quite discouraging to travel about for months and find no fruit, but the Lord's will be done. not mine.

Remember me to brother Bassett and the rest of the brethren and Saints.

I remain yours in the Gospel.

FRANKLIN B. WOOLLEY.

Extracts of a Letter from Elder Andrus.

CAMP OF ISRAEL, near Atchison, K.T.
Sunday, April 29, 1855.

DEAR BRO. SNOW.—Through the tender mercies of our Father that is in Heaven, I am spared to address you once more upon the subject of the common salvation, that relates to the gathering of the people of God.

We arrived here at 12 o'clock P. M., Friday, 27th ult., with the same number that we left St. Louis with, so far as the Latter-day Saints are concerned, although many others, through fear, left the boat. Three deaths occurred on board, and several were put off on account of sickness. We have three cases of sickness in camp that are still very bad, and we are not fully prepared to say how they will terminate, but we hope and pray for the best. We found on our arrival, Br. Ballantyne out at the Grove; Br. Fletcher, his counsellor, and Br. Siler were working with teams, who readily responded to our wishes, and hauled us and our luggage from the levee to our first camping ground, where we pitched our tents, and when night came on, we had a peaceable and quiet place to lay down; the green grass around us, the rolling prairies in the distance, clad in their mantles of green, was a change from the muddy Missouri that all ssemed to enjoy with much delight. To add to our happiness, we met with Br. Ballantyne and the members of his little camp, under the open canopy of Heaven, and the shining beauties that the delightful moon gave to these prairie fields, and the singing of the sweet singers of Israel, as they died away in the distance, under Heaven's high-arched halls that were spread above our heads, caused all hearts that were not past feeling to rejoice, while we returned thanks unto the Lord for all past blessings.

We found Br. Ballantyne's camp in good health. Four or five families had moved out to Mormon Grove, and commenced putting in early garden seeds early on the morning of the 28th. In company with Elders Ballantyne and McGaw, I started for Mormon Grove and vicinity, to search further in regard to water for stock, and to make further preparations concerning the opening of a farm, and also to systematise something that we could submit to you for your approval or disapproval, as the spirit may lead you. * * * * * * * * We found, in our travels out, that there was plenty of grass to sustain our stock, which made all feel, whose faces are set Zionward, as though they would like to be off, and I came to the conclusion that I would start after the stock on Monday morning, the 30th, and see to the getting down the flour and bacon, hoping by that time that the balance of the company that we left in St. Louis and our freight will be ready, and according to the spirit that is working in us, we should like to see them on the road.

Any suggestions you may feel to make or counsel, will be gladly received and cheerfully complied with. I am in hopes that we shall be able to get this letter into the hands of the clerk of the Polar Star, if not, I hope it will get to you without delay.

In council with Elders Ballantyne and McGaw, it was resolved that we would fence in one hundred and sixty acres, to be called the P. E. Fund Farm; that the entire farm and its interests be under the immediate control of the P. E. Fund Company. Any sugguestions or instructions will be gladly received.

I remain your brother and servant in the Gospel of peace. MILO ANDRUS.

We clip the following from the Squatter Sovereign of the 1st inst.

The Golden State arrived at our wharf last Friday, and put off a large number of Salt Lake emigrants. This is the third detachment that has arrived at Atchison this season, and others are soon to follow. The camps of the emigrants, just back of town, presents a city-like appearance, their tents leaving streets, alleys, &c., between them. The health of the emigrants is good, with but little or no sickness among them. Those who were indisposed when first landed have regained their accustomed health, and are now congratulating themselves on being landed at so healthy a point. All speak well of this place, and endorse it as a most desirable outfitting and starting point.

ST. LOUIS, May 10th, 1855.

PRES. E. SNOW:

Dear Sir—Having just arrived in this city from a mission to Europe, in company with the Saints on the ship Siddons, I have thought that a brief discription of our voyage would not be altogether uninteresting to you and your numerous readers.

We left Liverpool on the 27th of Feb., on the ship Siddons, under command of Captain John Taylor, who manifested great respect for our company during the voyage, for which he has the good feelings and blessings of a faithful people. Captain Taylor is a gentleman, and his equals are but rarely met with among the sons of Neptune, his gallant ship also is a splendid vessel, and well deserving of her noble commander.

Our voyage was very long and tedious in consequence of contrary winds; we were fifty three days on the passage, which is ordinarily made in thirty-five days. The company numbered over 400 Saints under the presidency of J. S. Fulmer. They are gathered from various parts of England and Scotland. They were a little sea sick for the first week, but upon the whole they appeared to enjoy the trip exceedingly well. There was no disease on board, and the spirit of the people was generally good. There were three deaths, three marriages, and four births; one died on the river before sailing, another was born at sea, and only lived six hours, and the other was about two years of age.

We arrived at Philadelphia on the 20th of April, and stayed on the Siddons till the 23d, and then took the railroad to Pittsburgh. We paid $4 50 per head for adult passengers, and $1 25 per hundred for extra baggage, allowing eighty pounds free.

Elder Fulmer stayed in Philadelphia to settle up the unfinished business. We were two days and nights in the cars, during which time an infant child of James Jordan died which was sick before leaving Philadelphia. We expected to meet Elder Fulmer at Pittsburgh, but in consequence of the train stopping by the way he was detained en route, and sent me a dispatch with orders to make arrangements with a boat to convey us to St. Louis. On our arrival at Pittsburgh, I succeeded in engaging the new steamer Monongehala, for St. Louis direct; we paid $3 per head for our passage, 100lbs of baggage free, 35cts per hundred pounds extra. We left about two hundred of our passengers in Philadelphia, and three families in Cincinnati.

I am sorry to say that the accommodations on the Monongahela was not so good as I expected, or as had been promised. There were no suitable places for the passengers to sleep, which caused some to complain considerably, and not without some reason.

The weather was very warm on leaving Pittsburg, and having to drink the river water, many were attacked with the diarrhœa. Nearly all the passengers were effected by it, which caused some to feel low in spirits for a few days, but it was soon over, and by the time we arrived here, nearly all were perfectly well, and the health of the company may be considered good.

We were detained at Louisville a day and night before we could get through the canal, which made our journey on the river longer than was anticipated. We arrived at this city, on Monday 7th, at about 4 o'clock, A. M., and reshipped most of our luggage the same day, on the Polar Star, bound for Atchison on the Missouri river.

I am, dear sir, as ever, your fellow laborer in the New Covenant. ISAAC ALRED.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

NOTICE.
PHONOGRAPHY.

S. J. LEES respectfully announces to his friends and brethren who are desirous of learning this beautiful, easy and philosopqic method of WRITING BY SOUND, that he will open his second class for instruction, on Wednesday evening, May 16, at his residence No. 81 Morgan street, between 2nd and 3rd. To commence 1-2 past 7 o'clock. By diligent application, the system is deadily acquired in about TEN Lessons. Terms for the course, $2.50, invariably in advance.
N. B. Phonographic books can be purchased at the class-room. [m12

IMPORTANT.—A small House to rent on Morgan street, with Furniture for sale—has been used as a boarding house—may be had on reasonable terms.
Apply to Mrs. Ann Simpson, 158 Morgan street, or Luminary Office.

SCHEER & HACKMAN'S
WAGON MANUFACTORY,
Corner of Sixteenth and Market streets.

KEEP constantly on hand a large assortment of Wagons suitable for Traders and Travellers to Santa Fe, California, Oregon, etc., etc.; also, for Farmer's use. Persons in want of Wagons are requested to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere, as promise a first-rate article at reasonable prices. S. & H. [may 5 24 6m*

REMOVAL.

MRS. J. VINCENT, MIDWIFE, East side of Fourth street, between Market and Walnut streets, St. Louis, Mo.
Mrs. J. Vincent wishes to inform her friends and the public, that she has removed from between 8th and 9th, on Market street, to the above place, and hopes by strict attention to her duties, to merit a further continuance of their patronage. [apr 14 21 3m

TO EMIGRANTS.
C. B. HUBBELL, Jr., 102 4th st., St. Louis
Informs persons travelling towards
SALT LAKE OR CALIFORNIA,
That they will find at his store, the largest stock of DRY GOODS in the city, comprising every variety of kinds adapted to their wants, which he will sell at prices fully TWENTY-FIVE per cent. lower than any other house in the trade, to which your attention is invited.
N. B. One price only ever asked, and no deviation. [apr 14 21 2m

GREAT ATTRACTION
AT
WILSON & COOPER'S NEW STORE!
The attention of Emigrant starting for
UTAH, CALIFORNIA, AND OREGON,
Is respectfully called to our IMMENSE STOCK of
FASHIONBLE DRY GOODS!
Comprising every article in the trade, from the plain substantial articles of every-day use, to the finest and most elegant fabrics of first class Dry Goods and LINEN DRAPERY.
Our goods are all marked in PLAIN FIGURES, from which no abatement is allowed under any circumstances.
N. B. A discount of FIVE per cent. will be allowed to parties going west, on all bills over $100. WILSON & COOPER,
apr 14 21] Cor. 4th and Locust sts., St. Louis.

OUTFITS FOR CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE AND OREGON.
WM. C. WILSON,
DEALER IN
Groceries, Wines, Liquors, and Provisions,; Pilot Bread and Crackers,
No. 195 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
☞ Is prepared to furnish everything in his line, at the lowest rates, and from past experience in the trade, feels assured, that parties intending to cross the plains, will find it to their interest to give him a call, and compare prices before purchasing elsewhere.
ON HAND AND FOR SALE LOW, THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES:
TEAS—A choice assortment of Imperial, Gun Powder, Young Hyson and Black.
COFFEE—Rio, Havana, Laguayra and Java—burnt and ground.
SUGAR—Crushed, Lump, Powdered, Clarified, New Orleans and Brown—all grades.
MOLASSES—Golden Syrup, Sugar House and Plantation.
LIQUORS—Best brands of Pure French Brandy, Holland Gin, Jamaica Rum, Irish, Scotch, Monongahela and Bourbon Whiskey, and all kinds of Domestic Liquors.
WINES—Pure Port, Maderia, Malaga, Sherry, Muscat, Champagne, Claret and White, Cordials, &c., &c.
BACON—Ham, Sides and Shoulders, Dried Beef and Beef Tongue.
FRUIT—Raisins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, Citron, Dried Apples and Peaches, &c., &c.
SUNDRIES—All kinds of Pickles, Sauce, Ketchups, Spice, Fancy Soaps, Candles, Oil, Gas, Fish, Mats, Cords, Buckets, Baskets, Brooms, Tubs, Lobsters, Oysters, Sardines, Cooking Extracts, Essences, Arrow-Root, Farina, Sago, Corn Starch, Oat Meal, Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Maccaroni, Vermicelli, Honey, &c., &c. [apr 7 20 2m

WESTON, MO.
OUT-FITTING FOR THE PLAINS.
THOSE crossing the Plains this Spring, will find it to their interest to call on the undersigned, where they will find a general assortment of every thing necessary to out-fitting for such expeditions.
Goods received and stored upon liberal terms.
Feb. 24, 14 3m A. G. BOONE, Weston, Mo.

D. G. TUTT. J. F. BAKER.
TUTT & BAKER,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
WESTON, MO.,
Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.
March 3, 1855. 16 3m

J. B. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.
EVANS & MITCHELL,
MERCHANTS,
At Weston, Missouri,
HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

TO EMIGRANTS.
J D HARPER. T J HARPER.
AT the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especialy of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we will sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.
mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

NOTICE.
I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at
ST. LOUIS PRICES.
mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

LEAVENWORTH, K. T.
G. M. & A. FISHER,
Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,
ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as And-Irons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.
They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 15 3m

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.
STORAGE AND OUTFITS.
LEWIS N. REES,
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,
IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Blastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pirtols, Buoy-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.
Groceries and Provisions.
Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.
He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Henlingcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homar & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 15 3m

BLACKSMITHING.
T. S. AHURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommendation.
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb, 1855. [mar 3, 15 3m.

KANSAS, MO.
H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.
NORTHRUP & CHICK,
KANSAS, MISSOURI,
WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.
We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.
Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

PHIL. ROCHILD& CO.,
HAVE constantly on hand in Kansas, Mo., a full supply of Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Groceries, Gutta Percha Goods, Provisions, Tinware, &c., which they will sell on as liberal terms as they can be bought for in Upper Missouri. [mar 3, 15 3m.

OUT-FITTING.
R. CHARLES takes this method of informing the emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand a full supply of Groceries, Builder's Hardware, Cutlery, Boots and Shoes, and all grades of staple Dry Goods, which he will sell at wholesale and retail. Thankful for former patronage, he solicits a further trial on the levee Kansas, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

BLACKSMITHING AND GRAZING.
THE Subscriber has a Blacksmith Shop, lots on the prairie, and has Cattle for sale two miles from Westport, on the State line. His former business transactions with the Latter-day Saints and other Emigration having given general satisfaction, he solicits a trial in future.
Feb. 24, 14 3m* J. W. MARRION, Kansas, Mo.

JOEL WALKER. W. H. CHICK.
WALKER & CHICK,
Receiving, Forwarding, and Commission Merchants,
KANSAS, MO.
Feb. 24, 1855. [14 3m.

RIDDLESBARGER & CO.,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
Commission and Forwarding Merchants,
AT KANSAS, MO.,
HAVING done a heavy business in our line for the emigration of 1854, we would respectfully solicit further patronage. [Feb 24, 14 3m

PROVISIONS AND OUTFITTING.
J. H. COLE & CO., Corner of Main and Water streets, under the printing office, Kansas Mo., have constantly on hand a large supply of Provisions and Outfitting Goods, and having done business in their line at this place for some years with the Western Emigration, they earnestly solicit a share of their patronage this season. [Feb 24, 14 3m.

INDEPENDENDE, MO.
LEATHER of all descriptions, &c Saddlery, Harness, and Shoemaking purposes to be had at O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

OUT-FITTING!
O. H. COGSWELL,
At his Old Stand in Independence, Mo.,
WILL have on hand at the commencement of the out-fitting season, a large and well selected stock of outfitting goods for the Plains to Great Salt Lake City, and will furnish them on reasonable terms. He will keep constantly on hand, Flour, Bacon, Sugar, Coffee, Rice, Dried Beef, Hard Bread, and in a word, every article necessary for crossing the Plains. He flatters himself his knowledge in that department of his business, having been a trader for the last four years in Great Salt Lake City, and his frequent passing over the Plains, that he will be well prepared to give general satisfaction.
And to the Salt Lake emigration he would respectfully say that Independence possesses advantages in point of location for out let directly, and for procuring Wagons, Stock, Provisions, &c., that no other place above St. Louis possesses.
REFFERENCES.
ERASTUS SNOW, St. Louis, ORSON SPENCER, Cincinnati, O.,
MILO ANDRUS, St. Louis, EL. JOHN TAYLOR, New York,
CHAS. BASSETT, Springfield, O., JOHN HOW, St. Louis,
Feb. 24] WOODS, CHRISTY & CO., St. Louis. [14 3m.

BOOTS AND SHOES of every variety can be had at
O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24, 14 3m. Main street, Independence, Mo.

BENJ. CROWTHER,
DEALER in Hardware, Table and Pocket Cutlery, Mechanics' Tools of every description, consisting in part of Axes of all kinds, Augers do., Awls, patent, with bitts, Bench Screws, Chisels of every description, Auger and Chisel Handles. Also, Blacksmith's Tools of every description, together with a large stock of Miscellaneous articles, such as Brushes, Paints, Japanned Tin Ware, Spoons, Rifles, Guns, Pistols, and other articles too numerous to mention, in fact, everything used by Mechanics, Housekeepers and the public in general, all of which will be sold low for cash. A liberal discount made to mechanics buying by the quantity. Call and see. Store situated south side of the Court House.
BENJAMIN CROWTHER,
Feb. 24, 143m. Independence, Jackson Co., Mo.

ISAAC HOCKADAY.
DEALER in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps and Ready Made Clothing, together with a large and general assortment of out-fitting goods of every description, suitable for California, Salt Lake, and New Mexico outfits.
Store north side of Public Square, Independence, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

FLOUR AND MEAL.
THE Subscriber takes this method of saying to the Emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand large quantities of Flour and Meal, which he will sell at as reasonable rates as such articles can be bought for in the up country, at his mill, known as the Jackson Mills, near Independence. He will also have a large supply in Independence, Mo.
THOMAS PITCHER.
REFERENCES: WILSON & PARKER; JESSE H. NOWLAND.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WAGONS AND YOKES.
YOUNG & SMITH are prepared to fill orders for Wagons and Ox Yokes to the Western Emigration. They have on hand a large lot the best Wagons made in the Western Country, and can supply any number of Yokes that may be desired. They will deliver their Yokes or Wagons in lots at any point on the river from Independence to Leavenworth City.
Independence, Mo., 1855. Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WM. & JOHN McCOY,
Independence, Mo.,
DEALERS in Staple and Fancy Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Camp Equippage and Outfitting Goods of every description.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

Poetical Department.

SPRING WATER.

Let others sing the joys of wine,
In drunken revelry,
But be the cup of water mine,
Of water fresh and free.
Oh, water bright! what pure delight,
From fountains gushing clear,
It gives us joy without alloy,
A smile without a tear.

When in the sultry moontide hour,
And heat's meridian glow,
We'll oft recline beneath the bower,
Where wandering streamlets flow.
Then from the spring how sweet to bring
The pitcher mantling cool;
'Twill health impart—'twill cheer the heart,
And tranquilize the soul.

No widow's grief, no orphan's cries,
No anguish or dispair;
No father's groans, no mother's sighs,
Are ever mingled there;
But friendship pure that shall endure,
Till life's bright dream is o'er,
Till called away to endless day,
Where we shall sigh no more.

Then fill the healthy goblet high,
No danger lurks unseen;
The rosy cheek, the sparkling eye,
Bespeak the joy within.
It gives us health, it gives us wealth,
It purifies the mind;
It gives us peace and happiness,
Nor leaves a sting behind.

From the Mormon.

THE MORMONS.

Why are the Mormons not like other people, is a question that is often asked. We might with as much propriety turn round upon our interrogators and ask, why are not other people like the Mormons? The last would be possible, the first impossible; for that strange personage, "other people," is a being of such singular mould, is so diverse, variegated, dissimilar, disunited, and is such a conglomeration of contrarieties, that you may as well attempt to catch an ignus fateus, describe the color of a cameleon, lock up a shadow, or eat moonshine, as to attempt anything like a description of this evanescent personage. Other people! who are they? Turks, Indians, Chinamen, Hindoos, Greeks, French, English, Hottentots or Americans? Philosophers—are they Materialists or Immaterialists? Do they believe in the doctrines of Confucius, Plato, or Bacon? Are they Etherial or Transcendentalists? Or do they believe in plain matter-of-fact demonstration? Politicians—do they believe in Despotic, Monarchical, Aristocratic, Republican, or Theocratic government? Are they Whigs, Tories, Democrats, Hard or Soft Shells, Abolition or Pro-Slavery, Nullifiers, or Know-Nothings? Religionists—are they Mohammedan, Christian, Budhist, Pagan, Jew, or Greek? Christians—hold they to the Greek, Catholic, Jumper, Methodist, Dunker, Presbyterian, Antinomian, Baptist, Universalist, or Church of England faith? Do they have a parson to preach for them, and a clerk to assist and say amen, or have they to "work out their own salvation." Must they wait "till the spirit moves them," or thunder in season and out of season?" Must they have the falling down power, or conduct themselves like good respectable Christians? Must jumping form a part of their religion, or shall they "approach the Lord with reverend song?" Shall they believe or disbelieve in the Trinity? Shall they send infants a span long to Hell, or will they pack of everybody to Heaven? Or will they separate "the sheep from the goats?" Are people to be roasted on gridirons tossed by fiends with pitchforks, and stung with scorpions in sulphureous flames, forever? Or will they be judged according to deeds done in the body?

Without describing the minutæ of the political, moral, and philosophical absurdities of this singular personage, "other people," perhaps we have said enough to show that he would be a most difficult person to follow, his course is so erratic, his system so absurd and contradictory, that take him either morally, religiously, philosophically, or politically, he is changeable as the forms in a kaleidoscope, as deceitful as a jack-a-lantern, and as uncertain a guide as a blind man in a desert.

Why are not the Mormons like other people? Impossible! The moment they embrace any particular moral, religious, political, or philosophical creed, they disagree with a thousand others. And yet "somebody," who is first cousin to "other people" and next-door neighbor to "they," is continually complaining that the Mormons are not like other people. Now if "they," "somebody," and "other people," only knew how ridiculous they look in the the eyes of intelligent men, and what a motley, ricketty, vacillating, confused mass of contrarieties, corruptions and follies they are wallowing among, they would shrink from the exposed, indefensible position that they occupy, hide their heads in shame, or seek to take the "beam out of their own eye, in order that they might see more clearly the mote that is in their brother's."

Who are the Mormons? Men! Americans! Patriots! They believe in God, and in all constitutional laws, and they are at the defiance of politicians to prove that they have taken one unconstitutional step; and they are as much at the defiance of religionists, of any denomination, to prove that they believe, or practise one principle, doctrine or ordinance that is not taught and sustained by the Scriptures of truth; and they are equally at the defiance of moralists or philosophers, to prove that they are less moral than any other people, or that their system is less reasonable, scientific, intelligent, less conducive to the wants of man in time and eternity, and that it is not based on as sound philosophy as any other system extant. We are not straightened or pent up in our feelings, we believe in research and investigation, we believe in "shaking all things that can be shaken," in testing severely every principle, "in proving all things, and holding fast that which is good." We believe in good sound healthy morals, in matter-of-fact philosophy, in politics uncorrupted, and that secure the greatest good to all. We believe in the God of Heaven, and certainty in religion. We believe in a religion that will make a man go down to the grave with a clear conscience and an unfaltering step, and meet his God as a father and friend without fear. Our religion teaches us to do good to man, to obey law, to love God, to work righteousness, and to progress in all truth, intelligence, virtue, faith, purity, knowledge, and everything good pertaining to this world, and that which is to come. We have no craven fear of death—we are looking for life eternal, and an association with the Gods in celestial mansions. We are not ashamed of our religion, and we believe God is not ashamed of us. And concerning this nondescript, "other people," we are quite as indifferent about their opinions as they can be about ours.

Politically, we conceive we have rights as men, and as Americans, the opinions of slabsided, contracted, exclusive, anti-American political and religious bigots to the contrary notwithstanding. There are two or three things that we assuredly shall do: one is, to worship God as we please, according to our conscience; another, we calculate to vote as we please; and further, we shall assuredly contend for our constitutional rights, and those we shall have in spite of all the cant and croaking of knaves, hypocrites, and bigots. Honesty has not all left the nation, nor are there lacking many noble souls who will battle for the strong bulwarks and constitutional privileges of the nation; and while virtue, patriotism, and intelligence triumph, Mormonism is safe. When the Goddess of Liberty falls, God will take care of his people. Mormonism is present and future; it meets all contingences, surmounts all difficulties, will outride time, and triumph in eternity. It is the offspring of Heaven; is sustained by the Almighty, and will lead its faithful followers back into his presence.

The Snake-bitten Dutchman.

Some years ago, near the town of Reading, Berks county, Pennsylvania, there lived a cosy old farmer named Sweighooffer, of German descent—and accent too, as his speech will indicate. Old man Sweighooffer had once served as a member of the legislature, and was no fool, and as he had long commanded a volunteer corps of rustic militia, he could hardly be supposed to incline to cowardice. His boy peter was his only son, a strapping lad of seventeen; and upon young Peter and old Peter devolved the principal cares and toils of the old gentleman's farm, now and then assisted by the old lady and her two bouncing daughters—it is very common in that State to see the women and girls in the field—and upon extra occasions, by some hired hands. Well, one warm day, in haying time, old Peter and young Peter were hard at it in the meadow, when the old man drops his scythe and bawls out:

"Oh! mine gott, Peter!"

"What's the matter, fader?" answered the son, straightening up, and looking towards his sire.

"Oh! mine gott!" again cries the old man.

"Dunder," echoes young Peter, hurrying up to the old man. "Fader, what's de matter?"

"Oh! mine gott, Peter, de shnake bite mine leg off?"

If anything in particular was capable of frightening young Peter, it was snakes, for he once crippled himself for life by tramping on a crooked stick which broke his ankle, and so horrified the youngster that he liked to have fallen through himself.

At the word snake, young Peter fell back nimbly as a wire dancer, and bawled in turn.

"Where is de shnake?"

"Aup mine trowsis, Peter—Oh, mine Gott!"

"Oh, mine Gott," echoed Peter, junior, "kill him fader."

"No-a-no-a, he kill me, Peter; come quick."

But Peter, the youngster's cowardice overcame his filial love, while his fears gave strength to his legs, and he started like a scared locomotive, to call the old, burly Dutchman, who was in a distant part of the field, to give his father a lift with the snake. Old Jake, the farmer's assistant, came bungling along, as soon as he heard the news, and passing by the fence whereon Peter and his boy had hung up their "linsey-woolsey" vests, Jake grabbed one of the garments, and hurried to the old man, who still managed to keep on his pins, although he was quaking and fluttering like an aspen leaf in a June gale of wind.

"Oh, mine Gott! Come quick, Yacob!"

"Vat you get, eh? shnake?"

"Yaw, yaw. Come, come, Yacob! he bites me all to pieces—here, aup mine leg."

Old Jake was not particularly sensitive to fear, but few people, young or old, are dead to alarm when a "pizen" reptile is making a levy. Gathering up a stiff, dry stalk of stalworth weed, old Jake told the boss to stand ready, and he would at least stun the snake by a rap or two, if he did not kill him stone dead; and old man Peter, less loth to have his leg broken than to be bitten to death by the viper, designated the spot to strike, and old Jake let him have it.

The first blow broke the weed, and also knocked old Peter off his pegs on a haycock.

"Oh!" roared Peter, "you have broke mine leg, and te tam shnake's got away."

"Vere? vere?" cried old Jake, moving briskly about and scanning very narrowly the earth he stood upon.

"Never mind him, Yacob; help me up; I'll go home!"

"Put on your vhest den, here it is," said the old krout eater, gathering up his boss, and trying to get the garment upon his humpy back. The moment old Peter made the effort, he grew livid in the face—his hair stood on end, "like quills upon a frightful porcupine," as Mrs. Partington observes, he shivered; he shook, his teeth chattered, and his knees knocked a staccatto accompaniment.

"Oh, Yacob, carry me home! I'm so dead as nits!"

"Vat? Ish nodder shnake in your trowsis?"

"No, a—look! I'm swelt all aup! Mine vhest won't go on mine pack. Oh, mine Gott!"

"Tonder and blixen!" cried old Jake as he took the same conclusion, and with might and main lugged and carried the boss some quarter of a mile to the house.

Young Peter had shinned it for home at the earliest stage of the dire proceedings, and so alarmed the girls that they were in high strikes when they saw the approach of poor old dad and his assistant.

Old Peter was carried in, and began to die, as natural as life, when in cometh the old lady, in a great bustle, and wanted to know what was going on. Old Peter, in the last gasp of agony and weakness, pointed to his leg. The old lady rapped upon his pantaloons; and out fell a thistle-top, and at the same time considerable of a scratch was visible.

"Call dish a shnake? Boh!" says the old woman.

"Oh, but I'm pizened to death, Molly. See, I'm all pizen, mine vhest not come over mine body at all."

"Haw! haw! haw!" roared the old woman, "Vat a fool. You got Peter's vhest on."

"Kosh!" roars old Peter, shaking off death's icy fetters at one surge, and jumping up. "Yacob what an old fool you must be, to say I was shnake bit. Go 'bout your business, gals. Peter pring me some beer."

The old woman saved Peter's life.

AMUSING SCENE.

The Pittsburg Intelligencer states that on Thursday evening a scene occurred at the Phœnix Hall which was not on the bills, and which was as ridiculous as it was amusing. During the progress of the play of Othello, (Mr. Taylor,) in one of the most affecting parts of the tragedy, when Desdemonia (Miss Wyette) with her arms resting on Othello's shoulders and looking with grave countenance steadfastly in his face was interceeding with him to reinstate Cassio in the office from which he had been dismissed, an enormous Newfoundland dog deliberately trotted from the audience and ascended to the stage as if he was desirous of taking a part in the play. Suddenly the whole audience was convulsed in laughter, and the actors on the stage losing their equanimity joined in the mirth with a hearty good will. Desdemona, whose countenance before the appearance of the canine was solemn and beseeching, threw aside her gravity and laughed outright, and even stern Othello could not resist the temptation to laugh at the ridiculousness of the scene. Iago, who alone, we believe, preserved his wonted gravity, led the Newfoundland from the stage and the play proceeded.

THE ERICSSON FAILURE.—We learn from the New York correspondence of the Boston Journal that the Ericsson experiment is at an end. The invention is conceded to be a failure, and poor Ericsson is a ruined man. He has spent all his fortune in building his caloric ship and in the experiments he has made on the vessel. He has done more, he has spent all his wife's fortune, which was great, and she too, is beggared. But the worst of all is that it has led to such recrimination and alienation, that they have separated, never to be united again, perhaps. Had he been successful, his name would have been enrolled with that of Columbus, Newton, Fulton, and other men of illustrious renown. But he has failed; he has lost his all; he has introduced ruin into a once loving and happy home; and the world coldly looks on, and says, "I told you so."

COL. MANYPENNY CASTIGATED.—Lieut. Beale, formerly Indian Agent at California, whose accounts have just been allowed by the Treasury Department, inflicted a severe castigation with his fists upon Col Manypenny, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, at Willard's Hotel, in Washington, on the afternoon of the 20th. Lieut. Beale attributes the temporary disallowance of his accounts to the personal hostility of the Commissioner, and hence the assault.

TRUTH needs no embellishment.

NOTICE.

We have received and have on sale the following books and pamphlets.

Book of Mormon,	$1 00
Book of Doctrine and Covenants,	95
Voice of Warning,	50
Spencer's Letters,	50
Hymn Books, Morocco gilt, ext.,	1 25
" " Calf "	80
" " Roan "	50
Government of God, by J. Taylor,	50
New Jerusalem, or the Fulfilment of Modern Prophecy,	15
Divine Authority of Joseph Smith,	10
Remarkable Visions,	10
Only Way to be Saved,	5
Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, by O. Pratt, 6 parts, 10cts. ea., or per sett,	40
Polygamy, by a Lady in Utah,	5
The Seer, by O. Pratt, vol. 1, to which is added 6 parts of Divine Authenticity of the book of Mormon, and Polygamy, by a Lady of Utah, elegantly bound, in one vol.	2 25
Orson Pratt's works, bound,	1 50
Times and Seasons, vols. 4, 5, and 6, well bound, ea.	1 50
Portraits of the First Presidency,	1 25

Route from England to Salt Lake may be expected in a few weeks.

We have a few numbers of the Millenial Star of vol. 17 on sale.

Those wishing any of the above books, or wishing to subscribe regularly for the Millenial Star, can apply to me every Sunday at the Church, or by post.

Apr, 14 21.] JAS. S. CANTWELL.

The Evidences Accumulate in proof of what we have long since asserted, viz: that the Mustang Liniment is the 'sine qua non' of all external remedies ever before offered to the afflicted.

We would call especial attention to the advertisement of this Liniment in our columns, and will take this occasion to say that this appears to be one of the few popular medicines that really possess all the virtues ascribed to them. In effectually curing the worst cases of Rheumatism, no matter how long standing, in an incredibly short time, and for sprains, bruises, sores, burns, or pains of any kind, it has no equal. We have heard of many cures that have been performed that really appear incredible, were they not vouched for by persons of responsibility and influence. It is said to be an infallible remedy for musquito bites.

See advertisement in another column. [17 2m

ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. G. SIMPSON. D. CAMERON.

GREAT SALE.
"AUCTION GOODS"
FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THE Subscribers take pleasure in soliciting attention to the largest, most varied, and best assorted stock they have at any time submitted to the public. It comprises winter Dress Goods, of the newest and most beautiful designs and texture.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MERINOS

of every shade and color.

In the Shawl and Cloak Department will be found several elegant designs in Long and Square Broche and Bay State Shawls. Their stock of Satin, Velvet and Cloth Cloaks, cannot be surpassed by any other house in the city for novelties in shape and material.

The largest and cheapest assortment of British and French RIBBONS ever shown in this city. BLANKETS, which are of a better value than those goods have lately been.

Bajou's Kid Gloves, 75 Cents.

☞ The above goods were purchased at the Auction Sales in New York this season, which enable them to sell below Manufacturer's prices, and considerably below any other house in this city.

JOHN G. SIMPSON & CO.,
No. 74 Fourth street, between Olive and Locust.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m.

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 0m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES,
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.

JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.

Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

BOOTS AND SHOES.
J. PARSON,
163 Morgan Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

BEGS to inform his friends and the public that he has commenced business in the above line, and is prepared to supply every description of ladies and gentlemen's Boots and Shoes at prices which will compete with any house in the city—quality and price considered.

A good fit warranted. Lasts made to the feet. [Feb. 10, 12tf.

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.

Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by

T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indispatable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.

It has cured more cases of
RHEUMATISM
than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.

G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,
J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.

MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:
Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.
I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.
I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.
Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.

I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Croton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS

have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:

Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.

The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.

G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.

Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

CHARTER OAK AND PREMIUM STOVE STORE.
B. FORMON,
TIN, COPPER, AND SHEET IRON WORKER,

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Emigrants and new settlers to his stock of Air Tight Cooking Stoves; also Tin, Copper, and Sheet Iron Ware.

Superior Air Tight Lamps for mining purposes, kept constantly on hand, which will be sold at the lowest cash prices. Tin and Copper Gutters, Valleys, and Spouting made to order. Light Traveling Stoves made expressly for Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, at

196 Market St., bet. 4th and 5th, opposite Court House,
St. Louis, Missouri.
Jan. 13, 1855. [8 3m*

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST.
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.

Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1856. [7 tf.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
75 MARKET STREET,

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.

N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

75 Market Street,
(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)
Feb. 17, 13 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED,
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. '28. [5 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 pockets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins.
Dec. 9. FRANCIS LEPERE. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Labeaume Steert,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

M'CLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.

One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.

Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.

Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.

Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.
Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.

We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.

☞ For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.

☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.
T. W. HOYT.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PARER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.

A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY.

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.

A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.

They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.

They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.

Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.

WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.

☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.
Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

Its fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,
OF CORINTHIAN HALL,
297 BROADWAY,
ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,
FOR THE SALE OF
FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,
FOR $4 EACH!
FOR A
LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,
GO TO CORINTIAN HALL!
FOR AN
INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
297 Broadway;
☞ BIG HAT.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment, Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,

Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.

COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 133 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.

Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set, Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tanners' Shears, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.

☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.

☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XXVI.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.
Mailed to Subscribers in the U. States at $2 per annum.
To Foreign Subscribers, (American Postage prepaid,) at $3 per annum.
To contiguous British Provinces, at $2.50 per annum.
No Subscription received without the money, though a specimen copy will be sent when required.
Any person forwarding us nine new Subscribers and remitting any current money in payment, will be entitled to the tenth copy gratis.
To avoid mistakes, particular pains must be taken, to send us all names of Subscribers, Post-offices and States, plainly written.
United States postage on the Luminary to British American Provinces, is one cent each—to Foreign countries two cents—within the U. States, one-half cent; provided, each subscriber notifies his Post-master, and pays the postage quarterly in advance, otherwise it will be two cts.
All letters requiring an answer, should, to ensure attention, enclose a Postage Stamp.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

One square (eight lines or less,) one insertion,		$ 50
do.	do. each additional insertion,	25
One square one month without alteration	- -	1.00
do.	two months - - - - -	2.00
do.	three months, - - - - -	2.75
do.	six months, - - - - -	5.00
no.	one year without alteration, - -	8.00
For each alteration,	- - - - -	25

Extensive advertisements as per contract.
Quarterly and yearly advertisements to be paid at the end of each quarter.
Prepayment required for any term less than a quarter.

Extracts of a Dicourse by President Brigham Young, February 18, 1855.

The following discourse by President Young has been very extensively published by our cotemporaries. It first appeared in the New York Herald, from which it has been copied by nearly all the leading journals in the Union. We copy from the St. Louis Intelligencer and give its comments upon each several subject omitting nothing but the caption, "Brigham's last discourse," which we considered rather equivocal, as 'tis known that "each discourse of his" doth whisper aft another's deeds.

Any comment by us would be superfluous. We therefore present it to our readers as we find it, and leave it to speak for, and commend itself:

"The New York Herald, of the 30th, contains a long and characteristic speech, delivered by Brigham Young at Salt Lake, in the Tabernacle, on the 18th of February last. It is the latest exposition of Mormonism we have seen, and we give its salient features for the edification of our readers. Brigham commences by declaring that the political creed of Mormons is perfectly consistent with republican institutions and the constitution of the Union, and infers that if the Church of Latter-day Saints does not constitute the kingdom of God on earth, that kingdom is nowhere to be found. Brigham thinks it is the 'sanctified hypocrites and old sectarians who are stirring up the devil all the time," and then tells the feelings of the Mormons in regard to the Government in these words:"

"'Brethren and sisters, our friends wish to know our feelings towards the government. I answer, they are first-rate, and we will prove it too, as you will see if you only live long enough, for that we shall live to prove it is certain; and when the constitution of the United States hangs, as it were, upon a single thread, they will have to call for the Mormon Elders to save it from utter destruction; and they will step forth and do it.

"'We love the constitution of our country; it is all we could ask; though in some few instances there might be some amendments made which would better it. We love the federal government, and the laws of Congress. There is nothing in those laws that in the least militates against us, not even to our excluding common law from this territory. I can inform our lawyers who plead at the bar here, that the Congress of the United States have passed laws giving us the privilege of excluding common law at our pleasure, and that too without any violation of the constitution, or general statutes. They have also given us privilege to stop drunkenness, swearing and gambling, and to prevent horse-racing, and to punish men for hurting and robbing each other.—The constitution of the United States, and the whole federal government, in their acts, have given us this privilege.

"'Now, I will tell you one thing that I am opposed to, and that this people are opposed to, it is to a man's coming here as an officer, with a bit of sheepskin in his pocket, having some great man's name to it, and beginning to set up his rules of discipline for the people, and saying, 'I am a gentleman; I am a high-minded gentleman;' and setting up gambling shops, and drinking, and carousing and stirring up strife, and hatching up lawsuits; hunting out disaffected spirits, and then lecturing the people on morality, wishing them to become like other communities, and saying to Mrs. Such-a-one, or Miss Such-a-one, 'Won't you ride with me—won't you take a sleigh ride to-night with me? I am a high-minded gentleman.' I am opposed to such a man, and am after them with the barbed arrows of the Almighty. To what extent? Let them intrude upon the chastity of my family, and, so help me God, I will use them up. (All the congregation said, 'Amen.') Such characters may cry 'Aliens, aliens; the Mormons are all hostile to the Government,' and they may cry it until they are in hell.

"'As I have already stated, the President of the United States should be a perfect pattern for all the people to walk after; so also should the Vice President, the members of the cabinet, and of Congress, the Governors of States and Territories, and, in fine, all the officers of the government be patterns for the people to imitate. But what do you find among the leaders of the people? Almost everything but an upright example.

"'Corrupt men cannot walk these streets with impunity, and if that is alienism to the government, amen to it. The Constitution of the United States we sustain all the day long, and it will sustain and shield us, while the men who say we are aliens, and cry out 'Mormon disturbance,' will go to hell. There have been officers here who were not fit to live in our midst, and they ran home and raised the cry, 'Mormon disturbances,' 'Mormon rebellion,' 'Mormon war,' and 'treasoners;' but their day is over.'"

"He then defines his position on the slavery question:"

"'Formerly the rumor was that 'they we were going to tamper with the slaves,' when we had never thought of such a thing. The seed of Ham, which is the seed of Cain, descending through Ham, will, according to the curse put upon him, serve his brethren and be a 'servant of servants' to his fellow creatures, until God removes the curse, and no power can hinder it. Those are my views upon slavery. I will here say a little more upon this point. The conduct of the whites towards the slaves will, in many cases, send both slave and master to hell.—This statement comprises much in a few words. The blacks should be used like servants, and not like brutes, but they must serve. It is their privilege to live so as to enjoy many of the blessings which attend obedience to the first principles of the gospel, though they are not entitled to the priesthood.'"

"Thinking the relation of the Mormons to the Government not sufficiently well defined, Brigham expatiates thereon further, and illustrates by a parable:"

"'The relation between us and the government may be likened to a man having twelve sons, and all the elder sons pitch upon the younger one, as Joseph's brethren of old did upon him. They persecuted him, and lied to their father about him, and tried to alienate the feelings of the old man from him, and succeeded in a measure in estranging the feelings of the father from the young child. So it is with the general government and us. We have pleaded time and again, and will plead, saying, "Spare us, love us; we mean to be one of the best boys you have got; be kind to us, and if you chasten us, it may be said that we have kissed the rod and reverenced the hand that gave it, and tried again: but be merciful to us, for do you not see that we are a dutiful child?' But no, Tom, Bill, Dick, Harry, and the rest of the boys are eternally running to the old man with lies in their mouths, and he will chastise little Joseph. And though the old fellow has not come out in open war against him, and arrayed the force and arms of the government to kill the boy, yet he sleeps in his chair, and dreams it over, and talks in his sleep, saying, 'Go it, boys; go it, boys—we will not say anything here.' And Tom, Bill, Dick, &c., commence pounding on to little Joseph; and the old man is dozing in his chair, saying 'Go it, boys.' What will become of this little Joseph? I will tell you. We are a child of the government, one of the youngest children, and we cling to our parent, and desire to be reckoned in the family, and to hail our brethren as brethren, and be numbered among them either in a Territorial or State capacity. What next? The cry is raised by the older boys that 'it never will do to admit this younger child into the Union; he is an alien, and we must exclude him.' I will tell you what this will amount to; they will pound and abuse little Joseph until his affections are entirely weaned from his parent, and from his brethren, and he becomes an independent boy. Who will cause this? The Mormons? No; the elder brethren will do it. They will urge on their hostility against little Joseph until he is driven into Egypt for succor. Well, if this is not Egypt enough, where will you find it?

"'What is agoing to be done with these turbulent Mormons, these outrageous Mormons?' I will tell you what might be done, and what ought to be done. The government of the United States, and the President of the United States, ought to treat the religion of the Latter-day Saints as they do Methodism, Presbyterianism, Quakerism, Shakerism, and many other isms, and say, 'Here, I wish you to hold your tongues about the Mormons, for they have just as good a right to their religion as you have to yours.' And when the people petition for this, or that, (as the right of petition should never be denied,) it is the duty of those who are addressed to hearken to the petitions of the people, and to let them have officers of their own choice; for the appointing power is elected by the voice of the people, and the mass of people hold the reins of government in their hands. Then, let the people carry out those principles they have adopted and profess to abide by, and when we wish for a Governor or a Judge, or any other appointed officer, let us have the men we prefer, and not those who will run away and report falsehoods about us.

"'Many of the Battalion boys are here to-day, who walked over the plains and deserts; they know what they have endured. They left their fathers, mothers, and children on the prairie, and some of them they have never since seen, and will not in this time, for they sleep in the silent grave. They suffered all this in fighting for the country that had cast them out.

"'Do I love murderers and mobocrats as I do good men? No. Do I pray for them? Yes; that the Lord would judge them out of their own mouths, and that speedily.

"'We plead all the time to be let alone, and be permitted to live in peace, and not to be whipped and abused without cause, for we are 'flesh of your flesh, and bone of your bone;' then why not let us enjoy our piece of cake as we let you enjoy yours? For this we plead, and plead, and plead continually; but no, say they, 'We will chastise you, because we have the power to do it; we will whip you, because we are stronger than you.'"

"He is not so hostile to Col. Steptoe as was, at first, reported, but comes down with a vim on some of the officers of Government, as the following shows:"

"'Are the officers of the government the judges of our religion? It is none of their business whether it is true or false. I know whether it is true or not and that is enough for me; you know, brethren and sisters, and that is enough for you. If they do not believe it, we do not trouble them with it. We say that we will meet you as friends, as neighbors, as 'flesh of our flesh and bone of our bone,' but not, as the world meet you, upon the platform of corruption and iniquity. We are not there, neither will we meet you there; but we will hail you as friends, and as brethren, pertaining to the citizenship of the government; so we hail the officers who are now with us. And if the gallant gentleman who is now in our midst had received the commission of Governor of this Territory, as was reported, and had accepted it, I would have taken off my hat and honored the appointment; and this people would have been just as passive and submissive to him as ever they could be to me. That I will warrant and vouch for. If they wish to send a Governor here, and he is a gentleman, like the one I have referred to, every heart would say, 'thank God, we have a man to stand at our head in a gubernatorial capacity; a man who has got a good heart, and is willing that we should enjoy the federal rights of the constitution as well as himself.' I am with all such men heart and hand. But for a man to come here and infringe upon my individual rights and privileges, and upon those of my brethren, will never meet my sanction, and I will scourge such an one until he leave; I am after him. But I will say, to the praise of the gallant gentleman referred to, if there was a going to be a gentleman called upon to be our Governor, there is not a man, out of the kingdom of God, that I would listen to sooner, and feel more confidence and cordiality towards than to him; I wish this meed of praise could be awarded to every officer in the government, but it cannot. We have some of the most corrupt, damnable, mean curses here that ever disgraced the earth; some who even wish to carry the holy sanctuary in one hand and a jug full of whisky in the other, and have a saint trail behind them to hold up their garments to prevent their drabbling.'"

"Brigham next tells an anecdote:"

"'Every one must bow to the Saviour, and acknowledge and confess him with their mouths. Can they still be Methodists? Yes. Presbyterians? Yes. And I some expect that many will be brought into close places, as the Jew was by the Catholic priest. The Jew fell through the ice, and was about to drown, and implored the Catholic priest to pull him out. 'I cannot,' said the priest, 'except you repent, and become a Christian.' Said the Jew, 'Pull me out this once.' 'Do you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Holy Catholic Church?' asked the priest. The Jew answered, 'No, I do not.' 'Then you must stay there,' and the priest held him under the water a while. 'Do you believe in Jesus Christ now?' 'O yes, take me out.' 'Well,' remarked the priest, 'thank God that another sinner has repented; you are safe now, and while you are safe I will send you right to heaven's gate,' and he gave the Jew a push under the ice.'"

"Finally, he winds up with the following peroration:"

"'I most assuredly expect that the time will come when every tongue shall confess, and every knee shall bow to the Savior, though the people may believe what they will with regard to religion. The kingdom that Daniel saw will actually make laws to protect every man in his rights, as our government does now, whether the religions of the people are true or false. We believe this as sincerely as we believe anything else; and I think that the course of this people has proved it as far as the acts of the children of men are concerned. All creation could ask for no more witnesses than they have that the New Testament is true, that Jesus is the Christ, that the holy prophets are true, that the Book of Mormon is true, and that Joseph Smith was a prophet and revelator. But the Lord has so ordained that no man shall receive the benefits of the everlasting priesthood without humbling himself before him, and giving him the glory for teaching him, that he may be able to witness to every man of truth, and not depend upon the words of any individual on the earth, but know for himself, live 'by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God,' love the Lord Jesus Christ, and the institutions of his kingdom, and finally enter into his glory. Every man and woman may be a revelator, and have the testimony of Jesus, which is the spirit of prophecy, and foresee the mind and will of God concerning them, eschew evil, and choose that which is good.

"'There are thousands of things I would like to name with regard to ourselves and our Government. Our whole interest is in it; we cling to it as a suckling child to its mother's breast, and we will hang to it until they beat us off, until we can hang no longer; and this will never happen, unless they drive us from it under the pretext of what Mormonism is a going to do. What is the Kingdom of God a going to accomplish on the earth? It will revolutionize not only the United States, but the whole world, and will go forth from the morning to the evening, from the rising of the sun to the going down of the same, so shall be the ushering forth of the Gospel, until the whole earth is deluged with it, and the righteous are gathered.'

"'The sinner will slay the sinner, the wicked will fall upon the wicked, until there is an utter overthrow and consumption upon the face of the whole earth, until God reigns, whose right it is. As it was said in the days of the Saviour, 'If we let this man alone, you may depend upon it that through his influence he will take away our place and nation.' If you let Mormonism alone, I will promise that every honest man and woman in the United States will be in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and be governed by the Law of God.

"'Let them take the counsel of the late Captain Gunnison, who was massacred by the Indians; he was convinced that it would not do to persecute the Mormons, for every time we were driven we have succeeded beyond our most sanguine anticipations. It has happened to us as it did to the old man's stone wall which was five feet high and six feet thick. The boys could not get his apples, and said among themselves we will turn over the old wall; they turned it over and it was higher than before. So with us, every time the Mormons have been driven they have enlarged their borders. Look out, drive us again and we will take the kingdom before you are aware of it.

"'We certainly shall gather out all the good as fast as we can; for the people who love truth will hear sound argument, which is our rule of battle, and it is a scientific one. Now come on to war, whenever you think best, and we will gather out the honest until the last seed of Israel is gathered, and there is hardly enough left to elect a President, even among the Know-Nothings.

"'Only persecute us and we will grow the faster. Say they, 'What shall we do? do tell us which way we shall go, for we do not know what to do, nor what to say; if we persecute them they will grow the faster, and take away our place and nation, and will get all the good people to follow them and what shall we do?' It is a hard case I know.

"'When strangers come among us they often feel diffident, for we keep to ourselves here in these distant parts, and do not always immediately know whether we are about to receive friends or enemies into our community. We have been persecuted and driven, and been a scoff and a by-word, and when strangers come among us they feel a delicacy in making our acquaintance. I say, brethren and sisters, be frank with strangers, and when you talk with them or are in their presence, live your religion, and do not vary one particle from the truth.

"'You say, 'I love my God and my religion.' Then manifest to them what your religion is, and if they are honest, ere long they will fall in with it; if not they will take up their line of march and leave us; and my prayer is that we may be delivered from every inbred corruption.

"'Let us live our religion, and show the world that we love the Lord Jesus Christ better than anything else. Though the world persecute you, yet cling to the Lord and the Holy Gospel, even if you lay down your lives for the truth's sake. May God bless you. Amen.'"

Archæological Discoveries in Sidon.

A correspondent of the Journal of Commerce writes an interesting letter from Beirut in Syria, descriptive of some important archæological discoveries which have recently been made in the ancient city of Sidon; and it is believed that further investigations will reveal to the eyes of the searchers, monuments and other relics of the past, which, although perhaps not equal in magnificence to those of Nineveh, will possess greater value in the history of letters and the disposal of certain questions of archæology. Sidon is thirty miles South from Beirut, and contains a population of about ten thousand persons. In the winter of 1853-'4, some Mussulmen who were digging for treasures in the old graveyards of the city, uncovered three copper pots, each containing eight hundred pieces of gold. The whole value of the treasure was about $12,000.—After this discovery, excavations were commenced upon a larger scale, and it has turned out, with more important results. The correspondent of the Journal of Commerce says:

"On the 19th of January last, some men were digging for more hid treasure in an ancient cemetery on the plain of Sidon, called Mughorat Tubloon, when, at the depth of about twelve feet below the surface, and near the walls of an ancient edifice, they uncovered a sarcophayus, upon the lid of which there is a long Phœnician inscription. The lid is of a blue, black marble, intensely hard, and taking a very fine polish. The lid is about eight feet long, by four feet wide. The upper end is wrought into the figure of a female head and shoulders, of almost giant size. The features are Egyptian, with large, full, almond shaped eyes, the nose flattened, and lips remarkably thick, and somewhat after the negro mould. The whole countenance is smiling, agreeable and expressive, beyond anything I have ever seen in the disinterred monuments of Egypt or Nineveh. The head dress resembles that which appears in Egyptian figures, while on each shoulder there is the head of some bird—a dove or pigeon—and the bosom is covered by what appears to be a sort of cape, with a deep fringe, as of lace.

On the lid, below the figure-head, is the inscription, consisting of twenty-two long lines, closely written. The letters are in perfect preservation, and can be read with the utmost ease and accuracy, and the whole forms by far the longest and most perfect inscription yet discovered in this most ancient language and character. It appears to be mainly a genealogical history of the person buried in the sarcophagus, who, it appears, was a King of Sidon. The names of Baal and Ashtoreth, the well-known gods of the Sidonians, occur repeatedly in these inscriptions. Some of the words are Hebrew, as melek, king; while the forms of some letters are so much like those of the ancient Greek as at once to indicate the relationship. Letters were invented by the Phœnicians. Here we see them dropping from their hands in the first casting. I have a copy of the inscription before me, with the figure-head, taken with great accuracy by the pen of a young Arab, which could hardly be exceeded by photography or lithography. I wish I could forward it to you to be used in your paper. It was sent to me by a friend in Sidon, and it is the more valuable from the fact that, at present, additional copies cannot be taken."

The inscription was not perfectly deciphered at last accounts. The Rev. Mr. Thompson, an American missionary at Sidon, and the Rev. Dr. Smith at Beirut, had, however, translated a large part of it with little difficulty, and expected soon to complete their work. In the meantime a controversy had arisen between the English and French Consuls at Beirut, respecting the ownership of the sarcophagus. One had made a contract with the owner of the land, by which he was entitled to whatever he should discover in it; and the workmen of the other had discovered the relic within the claim of the first. Both were extremely anxious to obtain it at any cost, with the intention of sending it to London or Paris, and for the purpose of preventing any serious trouble, the Turkish governor of Sidon had closed up the ground and surrounded it by a guard of soldiers, while the question of ownership was being decided by the courts.

A WHITE INDIAN VILLAGE.

A writer in the Mariposa Chronicle, furnishes the following description of the village and surrounding country inhabited by the tribe of white Indians beyond the Sierra Nevadas, about which so much has been formerly said by other writers:

"This village is pleasantly and romantically situated in a beautiful and rich valley, guarded on either side by lofty and precipitous bluffs, which from the evergreens growing upon their borders in variegated colors, present a singular picturesque appearance. The mountains and table land adjacent, are thickly studded with magnificent lofty pines, cedars, and oaks; while in the valley, dressed in her richest and rarest colors, Flora reigns supreme. We were surprised upon entering the village, to observe the taste and utility displayed in its construction. The streets were very regularly laid out in a circle form, shaded by trees resembling in appearance the Magnolia. The houses are partly Grecian in style, and of very good workmanship. That occupied by the Chief or King, certainly would reflect honor upon a more enlightened people. It is a gigantic structure, built in form of a pyramid, and surrounded by a succession of corridors rising one above the other. Upon the railing of each corrider—which is grooved for the admission of earth—are cultivated the most beautiful and fragrans flowers, so arranged that at a short distance the palace resembles an immense boquet. The people seem to have great respect for their Chief, who is a venerable man of about sixty. We were received and entertained by him during our stay in the village, with the warmest and most profuse hospitality. A part of his suite was delegated to accompany us in our inspection of the village and surrounding scenery. In truth so much attention was lavished upon us, that at times I was almost induced that a surveillance was placed upon our movements.

We were told that the valley extended nearly to the desert, but that a view of its entrance was obscured by hills of sand. Of the origin of this people I could learn but little reliable. They have a tradition, however, which may shed some light upon the subject. It is that their fathers came from across the great waters; they were visiting as was their custom annually, a neighboring nation, when they were driven by a gale from the land. The gale continued with terrible force for a number of days, driving them rapidly to the east. After enduring fear, hunger and thirst, until they were driven to despair, they came in sight of land. This land proved to be inhabited by savages, by whom they were taken into the interior and held as slaves. Soon after, a plague appeared among the Indians, which made fearful ravages. The Indians were made to believe that it was a judgment upon them for enslaving the white men, and they were accordingly liberated. Their fathers then established themselves in the valley which they now occupy. They were evidently of the Asiatic origin; in statue, they very much resemble the Hungarians, and talk a language very similar. I have thought it possible that they have sprung from the nation mentioned by Kossuth as inhabiting the interior of Asia."

BARNUM writes to the Tribune that his Baby Show business is beautifully going ahead. He thinks there is a strong probability that the full number of one hundred cradles will be occupied.—He will have at least one litter of four babies, and divers twins and triplets. He has decided to exclude negro babies, which will probably cause a rupture between him and his organ, the Tribune. He has the impudence to pronounce his baby exhibition a perfectly "legitimate business." How does he know that?—[Mirror.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer, address box 488.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor, 102 Nassau st., cor. of Ann.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.
Wm. Cazier, Nephi City.
S. B. Hoyt, Fillmore City, U. Territory.

IMPORTANT TO SUBSCRIBERS.

We beg to call the attention of our subscribers to the first chapter of the. Luminary, beginning at the prospectus, where will be found these important words, "Subscriptions to be paid in advance." As this number concludes the first six months of our paper, we request those concerned in the above reading, to send in their subscriptions as soon as possible that our exchequer may be duly replenished.

INTERESTING FROM TEXAS.

You have all heard we doubt not, the song of the shirt,—the chapeau—and other vetements utile; but we doubt very much whether you have ever heard or seen in poetry or prose, the interesting subject of our theme. 'Tis not the scarlet robe or the costly mitre, but simply a Lawyers stocking, and not the most perfect one at that; as the twine coiled around the lower extremity would imply, still we are bound to admit from the nature of its history and the character of its mission, that 'tis the most honored and distinguished among its fellows.

We have arrived at the conclusion from the fact, that when the United States Attorney for Utah turned preacher and travelled in his beloved Texas to preach the gospel, it kept his foot that it slipped not, except at the small aperture above referred to, and has finally fallen into our hands, with sixteen hundred dollars tithing, on account of the Texas company of Saints, now in the Chickasaw country en route for the lovely valleys of the mountains.

This is certainly something new under the sun, and worthy of honorable mention among other interesting occurrences of the age. Our readers will recognise the Honorable Lawyer, when we mention his cognomen, which begins with SETH M. BLAIR. We had the pleasure, on Sunday last, of listening to a bold and energetic discourse delivered by him in our large church, in his own characteristic style, which was listend to with profound interest. By request of a number of merchants of this city, he has engaged to preach again on Sunday next, when we hope to see a large attendance.

Arrival of the Utah Mails.

The Utah April mail has at length arrived bringing news to the first of April. Among other interesting correspondence, we have received two letters from our excellent correspondent George A. Smith, for which favor he will please accept our thanks.

We have received by this mail five copies of the Deseret News, which presents itself with more than ordinary attractions; instead of four large pages as formerly, it now contains eight small ones, and the page being but half the original size, it assumes a form and style well adapted for binding, by which means it may be easily preserved, and if handed down to our children, will be one of the richest boons they can inherit.

We recommend our brethren to secure if possible every number of the News, for it contains the history of one of the greatest and noblest among the sons of men, whose history will be more sought after and cherished by the rising generation than that of any prince, potentate or prophet, that ever trod the earth.

Col. Steptoe is reported to have declined the Gubernatorial chair of Utah. The News speaks of the Colonel's refusal to accept the office of Governor in the following language:

We have found him to be in every particular an intelligent, honorable, and upright officer, citizen and gentleman. It was this fact, coupled with his knowlege of the unanimous wishes of all our population for the reappointment of Governor Young, with his having signed a petition to the President and Congress to that effect, with his familiarity with the illiberality of such appointments, and with the certainty of having to resign an elevated and highly honorable position in the army to serve but two years as a Governor, where the united voice preferred Governor Young to all others, which doubtless moved him to refuse to accept the appointment.

THE KINNEY EXPEDITION.

This scheme, be its policy, peace or plunder, will soon leave our shores for the "promised land" of Nicaragua. Col. Kinney now discharged on straw bail is free to prosecute his mission. The New York Mirror publishes the "card" of the steam-ship United States, as to sail on the 19th inst., having been fitted up at a great expense to convey the expedition to Central America. The Mirror speaks of the matter as follows:

"As will be seen by a card in another column, Col. Kinney and Consul Fabens will sail from this port in the steamer United States, on the 19th inst. The "Colonists" are determined to go at all hazards. Between 400 and 500 men are shipped, and more "passengers" are invited. Touching the tract to be settled, a citizen of Nicaragua, named Ferrer, is the owner, by title from his government, of a large quantity of agricultural and mineral lands in Nicaragua, which, in their present condition, are of but little value. He has entered into contract with Mr. Fabens to give him an interest in those lands, upon the consideration that Mr. Fabens will introduce settlers upon them for the purpose of developing their mineral and agricultural capabilities. To this end Mr. Ferrer has empowered Mr. Fabens to make all necessary arrangements for introducing colonists. To carry out the contract, Mr. Fabens has given Colonel Kinney an interest, on the consideration that he will raise and carry to the lands in question the colonists needed for developing their resources. The Herald says of Col. Kinney:

"'He has taken prisoner a young, beautiful and accomplished belle of the Fifth avenue, a flesh and blood angel, said to be literally worth her weight in gold, to say nothing of diamonds, stocks and real estate, and she has agreed, 'for better or for worse,' to try the name and fortunes of Col. Kinney, expedition and all."'

Arrival of the Juventa's Company in St. Louis.

The Steamboat Equinox arrived at this city on Thursday morning, the 17th inst., with about two hundred of the Juventa's company in charge of Eld. William Glover; about one hundred and fifty on the Washington city, under the Presidency of Eld. Guyman will doubtless be here before this goes to press.

Elder Glover's Company has come through from Liverpool to this city, in forty-six days. The entire company of Saints numbered five hundred and seventy-two souls on leaving Liverpool, and not one soul was lost, although the measels prevailed to some extent among the children; yet every soul of the company was saved, and those that have arrived appear full of health and vigor, and full of praise and thanksgiving to the God of Israel, for His mercy and salvation extended towards them, and those who are left behind, as far as we are informed, are all healthy and strong.

These things argue strongly in favor of the new route, and we doubt not but every company will furnish additional evidence, and confirm our predilections. As demonstrative evidence of the superior advantages of this route, Elder Glover says he had three more in his company, and $50 more in his pocket on arriving than when he started, which constitute the most conclusive and tangible arguments that can be adduced.

These facts are interesting and important, for they prove indubitably the advantages of this route. The first advantage is the saving of life---the second is the saving of time, and we can neither afford to waste the one, nor sacrifice the other. We therefore reiterate our praises to God, and thanks to his servants for the superior wisdom displayed in this years Emigration.

Correspondence.

HISTORIAN'S OFFICE, G. S. L. City, February 27th, 1855.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LUMINARY:

Sir—In addition to the sacrifices which I informed you were offered on the death of Walker, the Utah Chief, I am told that a Piede boy, a prisoner, was put alive into a large hole in the earth, and covered in, leaving an aperture or two for air, and there left to die of starvation. This was ordered by Walker himself before he died, and shows how lamentably tradition and superstition have enslaved the human mind, and how difficult it is to set it free, even though brought into contact with the glorious Gospel of the Son of God.

Col. Steptoe has sent out a detachment of U. S. soldiers to arrest the indians who murdered Capt. Gunnison, Kanosha, the Pahvante Chief, having engaged to give them up.

I am full of business connected with my office as Historian of the Church. I have succeeded in extracting several splendid discourses by our martyred Prophet from various journals—principally from those of Dr. Willard Richards and Elder Wilford Woodruff—which will appear in the News in the chain of history.

The works on the foundation of the Temple were suspended for about a fortnight for want of lime, but they are now in full blast again.

President Brigham Young delivered a discourse on Sunday the 18th inst., on the relations which the Latter-day Saints as a people sustain towards the General Government, which you will find in this week's paper.

Day schools have been opened in connection with the Polysophical Institution at Elder Lorenzo Snow's for the teaching of all branches of education. The library of this Institution is continually receiving additions of books, and the evening scientific classes are well attended, as also one meeting in the week for a kind of recreation, at which essays and addresses are delivered, anecdotes related, and original and other peotry recited, interspersed with music, chemical experiments, &c.

Since I last wrote you, another association has sprung into existence in this city, entitled the Deseret Philoharmonic Society, whose object is the cultivation of vocal and instrumental music. Eld. James Smithies is their President, and their meetings for the present, are held in Elder T. D. Brown's large room. I see by a letter addressed to the editor of the News, they are counselling our musical brethren who are coming here, and who wish to promote the object of the Society, as to what kind of music to select and bring with them.

A Music Hall is about to be erected by the members of Capt. Ballo's band, aided by liberal subscriptions from their friends.

I am informed a meeting is appointed by the President, for to-morrow evening at the Social Hall, to organize or arrange for the organi zation of a theological institution.

The weather has been very changeable during this month. The President's health has been but poor this winter, which has kept him mostly within doors; but it is improving daily.

Two immense ditches have been cut across the swamps north of the city as a commencement to making the road mentioned in my last. The hot spring has been lowered two feet, and a good road made across its outlet. A large quantity of earth fencing has been thrown up this winter, preparatory to farming operations in the spring and for pasturage. The draining ditch on North Temple street is still progressing.

The Utah Indians have not as yet elected their new Chief; but it is generally believed that Arrapeen will be the man of their choice, as according to their law he has the most right, he being Walker's eldest brother. Dr. Garland Hurt, the present Indian Agent has been out amongst them along with Elder Dimick B. Huntington, and found them very friendly. Yours truly, GEO. A. SMITH.

ST. LOUIS, May 16th, 1855.

PRES. SNOW:—I have just arrived from my mission to Texas, to which I was appointed by the General Conference of the authorities of the Church in April, '54, during which mission I have baptised and gathered out of Texas between fifty-five and sixty souls. I organised the people into an emigration company at Camp Jeddy, called the Snow Branch, and left Texas 25th April, and traveled with them to the Chickasaw Nation, and there I left them and came here to prepare to outfit them at Atchison by 1st of June.

My mission has been I presume like unto all other Elders', filled with novel and interesting, as well as vexatious cares; but I have passed through, and feel to say I have a good people under my care bound for the valleys. My health has been very feeble for months past, but still I feel well. Many, truly, are the wonderful dispensations of God's providence. I have been called to pass through too many to write of at this time, and which can only be seen by passing through them, as myself and others have done.

One word for all Israel—listen to and keep general counsels, if you would be saved. I have seen but one rain this year—a general drouth covers all the land I have traveled through; the fountains are dried up! truly so. I could only realize the fact by beholding it with my eyes, and feeling keenly the want of water to drink and food to eat.

A word on the Gospel in Texas. A well regulated organization in that country I feel would prove a blessing to the souls of many. A colporteur system I would recommend; the people are truly ignorant of Mormonism, and books is the cry.

I left to preside over my company Elder O. Tyler and M. C. Greer. The Saints enjoy good health, and have been and are blessed with truly wonderful gifts and powers through the Gospel ordinances.

I will close by presenting my love to brother Andrus, his council, and the Saints of St. Louis, in connection with yourself and brother Hart, and pray God to bless and grant you power to become heirs jointly of all the powers and blessings of the Holy Spirit.

Your brother and friend, S. M. BLAIR.

ST. LOUIS, May 2nd, 1855.

DEAR BR. SNOW:—With feelings of gratitude to God, my Heavenly Father, I am led at this time to write you by way of instruction to myself. I praise His high and holy name for the privilege of the same, and for my existence upon the earth in this day and age of the world, when the gospel plan of salvation is again revealed to man through his well beloved son, Jesus Christ, and his living priesthood on the earth, now raised up for the salvation of the world, in which you have been called to take an active part. I have endeavored to remember you before that God whose work is in onward progress among the nations of the earth.

I have been reading lately the discourse given by our beloved President Brigham Young—for whose existence upon earth the Lord be praised—on "Adam, our Father and our God." This discourse, when I read it, led me on to conceive of ideas strange and inconclusive; still, it appeared to me something worthy of note and study, so much so, that I was led to pray to my Father in Heaven that I might read with the spirit and understand the above named discourse, The workings of my mind were such as led me to converse freely on the subject. In my conversation I found I had different ideas to some others; Br. Milo Andrus gave me some very good instructions relative to the same, for which I feel to praise the all-wise God. I question him as to whether I was to consider it was to Adam my prayers ascended. I have now concluded my prayers do not ascend even as high as Adam at all times. By way of illustrating these things plain and easy to my mind, Br. Milo—God bless him with multiphed blessings of heaven and earth—reasoned with me so kindly and so fatherly, that love towards him increased in me since that time, and continues to increase, and my prayer is that it may still increase, not only towards him, but towards all who hold the Priesthood of God on the earth.

In reading that part of his discourse—that is, Br. Brigham's—which is as follows: "The earth was organised by three distinct characters; namely, Eloheim, Yahovah, and Michael; these three forming a quorum, as in all heavenly bodies and organising elements, perfectly represented in the deity as Father, Son, and Holy Ghost." To make this portion easy to my mind, I brought before my view the organization of the living priesthood of God now upon the earth, consisting of three as the first grand council or organised power of priesthood on the earth, consisting of Br. Brigham, Br. Heber, and Br. Jedediah, which seemed to open a view of things to my mind too far off for me in my present situation to get at; nevertheless, if the brethren and sisters in whose hands that discourse has fallen, read and would adopt the plan whereby they might understand, if they understand not, they should ask of Him who giveth understanding in faith, and they shall receive without being upbraided, if they ask not amiss.

In reading that portion of the same discourse which follows, "Our Father in Heaven begat all the spirits that ever was or ever will be upon this earth," simply advances the truth according to the workings of my mind, and according to which appears reason in me that he made us first spiritual, according to the laws which were in existence with him before the world was; as it is now, and as we now are his offspring temporal, no one will or can deny who believes in the existence of such a being as Adam, or the "ancient of days." Who can be more ancient than our father Adam, the first of all the human family.

I now quote from brother Brigham's discourse as follows: "Could we view our first parent in his true position, we should find him acting in a similar capacity to the whole family of man, as each father does to his individual family, controlling at his pleasure all things which relate to the great object of their being—their exaltation to thrones and Godlike powers. We can conceive from Scripture, principles and analogy, that Adam's watchcare is ever over mankind; that by his own approbation and direction Gospel dispensations have been revealed from heaven to earth in different ages of the world; that he was the first that ever held the keys of Gospel power upon the earth, and by his supervision they have been handed down from age to age, whenever they have been among men; that under his direction a deluge once swept the earth of the wickedness which was upon it, and laws were given to Israel as a nation to lead them to Christ, and that he will in the end call men to judgement for the privileges which have been extended to them in this world." With these undeniable facts, who wants to have to do with any other God than the God which immediately concerns him. For my own part, I feel to give heed to all information given by our Futher and our God, through his servant Brigham, and all in authority under him upon the earth.

Your brother in Christ. J. P. GUY.

P. S. Beloved Brother Snow—As I stated, I have written for my own instruction and improvement, it being my first attempt at anything of this kind, therefore, you may dispose of it as you please, and if I have given expression to anything which is not according to truth, I am open for reproof, as I am of belief it is the best way of attaining knowledge of the things pertaining to life and salvation. Praying God, the Eternal Father, that you may have always resting and abiding with you the spirit and power of your Holy Apostleship, I ascribe myself your brother by the laws of adoption. J. P. G.

LETTER FROM GEO. A. SMITH.

HISTORIAN'S OFFICE, G. S. L. CITY, 29th of March, 1855.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LUMINARY:

Dear Sir—I am glad to inform you that our brethren in Iron county, have succeeded in making bar Iron in the puddle furnace, direct from the ore, and the quality is such, that good horse nails are made from it. The only drawback is the difficulty of obtaining fire-clay of proper quality.

The six Indians under arrest for being concerned in the murder of Capt. Gunnison, have been tried before the Hon. Chief Justice Kinney of the second Judicial district at Nephi, and three of them found guilty of manslaughter, and sentenced to the Penitentiary for three years. A detatchment of U. S. Military accompanied the Court, and the Indians report that certain Civil and Military U. S. Officers undertook to teach some Squaws the principles of virtue.(?)

We are having splendid weather here, and farming operations are going on very extensively. There is also a time of general health.

It is intended to have the new Council house finished by Conference, but the large Bowery cannot be finished by that time, for want of suitable lumber. However it is arranged to hold meetings there at Conference, if the weather is suitable.

The Nauvoo Brass Band gave two grand concerts of vocal and instrumental music, yesterday, at the Social Hall—one in the afternoon, for the Presidency and Twelve with their families, and one in the evening for the public. The music evinced great taste in the selection, was well performed, and conducted with admirable order. Some think there is nothing of the Nauvoo Brass Band left but the name; there are however, about a dozen active members still in the band, who were in it at Nauvoo when organized by request of our martyred Prophet; and it is constantly recieving an accesion of talent, by almost every emigration. Joseph blessed this band and it is bound to ride over all prejudice. I attended the afternoon concert, and thought to have staid only a few minutes, but I became so interested that I could not leave until all was through.

A new bridge, now building by Col. Steptoe over the Provo river at the expense of Uncle Sam, is nearly ready for crossing, and appears to be pretty substantial. It is one hundred and twenty feet in length.

Cedar city, in Iron county, is gradually improving with the times; the brethren there are about building a Seventies Hall, the shares being $25 dollars each, and mostly taken up. They are also building a Store house for the tithing grain, &c.

The members of Elder Orson Hyde's Grammar Class were examined last evening, and were found to have made great progress for the time spent with them, (thirty evenings) the majority being new beginners.

The brethren are working hard at the road through the hot springs, making it good and permanent.

The health of the President is improving as the weather grows warm.

Yours faithfully, GEO. A. SMITH.

From the Millennial Star.

CRIMEA.

Death of Elder Ross and Priest Brodlie—Other Brethren wounded—Interest in the Work.

Before Sebastopol, March 30, 1855.

Dear Brother F. D. Richards—Since I last wrote I have had many, many severe trials to undergo, but I am happy to say God in His goodness and mercy has been my protector, and I have passed them with health and comfort of the Holy Spirit.—My news at this time is not so pleasant as I could wish, but God's will is my will, and I can only say, "Thy will be done, O Lord."

About two weeks ago I wrote to sister Ross an answer to a letter that she sent to Teacher W. Walker; stating in it that Elder Ross had been obliged to leave the Crimea and go to Scutari, on account of his health. This week I have learned that Elder Ross has departed from this sinful world, dying in the full faith of a glorious resurrection.—Poor brother Ross has left a wife and two or three children unprovided for, but I know God will protect the widow and her orphans. In a few days, or, in other words, as soon as the brethren receive any money, I will remit you some for our sister's relief. I have not sent her word of our brother's death, as I do not as yet know the date, but in my next letter to you I will send you and her all the particulars I can get. When I see my brethren called away from me—those whom I have so often held sweet converse with, I often feel very lonely, and wish the time was come for me to return from this Babylon.

Our labors in this part of the vineyard have been productive of much good, but we have no time nor place to baptize, or our number would be increased. I live in hopes that the time is not far distant when many who have heard our voices will have the opportunity, if not by us, by some other servants of God, to be adopted as heirs to the kingdom of God.

Since I commenced writing, I received a letter from Elder Bell, who stated he was going to the Valley. May God our Father bless him and his, and may he have a quick and pleasant passage. O, how I wish I could but see him! by him it was I learned the truths of heaven. My prayers are and always will be for his welfare. If you should be writing after the Saints, please to give him my love, and say it is all right, we will meet again in this world or the world to come. In his letter he told me that brother Thomas was returning to England in the same ship as Elder Burridge. Brother Thomas, 41st Depot, was wounded in the hand at the battle of Inkerman. I have likewise to inform you that brother Corporal Peter Hay, 55th Depot, left for England with loss of an arm. Both were in good standing, but had no certificates, as I could not see them after they were wounded. Priest Brodlie died on the field of battle, 5th November. He was noted for his calmness when dying on the field, by his comrades.

Brothers McLean, Spurr, Higgins, indeed all the Branch, send their love, and ask for the interest of the prayers of the Saints, that we may be protected, and that we may return to unite ourselves with them in thanksgivings to our Heavenly Father for His goodness to us.

Please to excuse this scrawl; but the fact is, I have not the convenience nor time to write much. It has not been in my power to hold any public meetings, but I have done all I could by privately speaking to any who would listen to me.

It is now half-past ten o'clock, P. M. I came off the trenches at eight o'clock, after having been there twenty-eight hours, and shall have to go again to-morrow at four P. M. for forty-eight hours more. Our duty is very hard, so please to excuse me. May God bless you. Amen.

I remain yours in the new covenant,

HENRY RUSSELL.

P. S.—A few lines whenever you may have a few minutes to spare would be received with love and gratitude. Love to all the Saints in England, &c.

From the Deseret News.

"MILITARY."

"The gentlemanly bearing of Col. Steptoe appears to be endorsed by Orson Hyde in the Salt Lake News. Wonder what the Elder will say now, since his prophet Brigham, is deposed and the Col. appointed in his stead?"

Editor of News:—Among the numerous slips cut from eastern papers and forwarded here by Hon. J. M. Bernhisel per last mail, the foregoing seems to call for a word of reply from me at the present juncture of affairs when a change, in the administration of the government of Utah is on the tapis.

During my first acquaintance with Col. Steptoe, I formed a very favorable and high opinion of that gentleman. He appeared to me to be a noble-minded and honorable man. And since that time, I have seen no cause to change that opinion. I might speak in like terms of some others of the command whose acquaintance I have made to a limited extent.

So far as I am acquainted, there is no man in the Territory, outside the church, who shares, more liberally, the respect and confidence of her citizens than the Col. There are those, however, that are equally well respected.

Col. S. is not obliged to accept his appointment; and it remains to be seen whether he entertain a similar respect for popular sovereignty and the known wishes of the great mass of the citizens of the Territory to that which they entertain for him.

If he accept the appointment, I shall obey him as our governor. If he remain in his distinguished and elevated rank as a military officer, I shall respect and honor him.

Respectfully, ORSON HYDE.

From the Deseret News.

CHINA MISSION.

PAROWAN, Feb. 16, 1855.

Bro. Geo. A. Smith:—After having visited the people, and, as far as possible, introduced the subject of our mission, we were politely informed, in most instances, that they did not wish to hear of our religion, and desired no reference to the subject.—Upon other topics they were free and sociable, but felt to wonder at our presumption in endeavoring to establish our doctrines in Asia under the circumstances in which we placed ourselves; for they looked upon any person in a dependent position as worthy of no regard whatever, and beneath their notice.—The other missionaries presented themselves backed by the God of this world, and were received with courtesy and respect, as desirable acquisitions to society; but the servants of the Lord were despised, their company not desired, and their doctrine unheeded even by the lowest caste of the English and American population.

China contains a population of 367 millions, and connect Japan and other countries contiguous to China, and though they have different dialects, about 500 millions of the human race have the same written language. The government of China is Patriarchal, and the religion of their leaders or officers of government is observed by all classes, and the presumption is, that when their leaders change the lower classes will change also. The religion of China is Buddhism, and was introduced by the Tartars at the time the Dynasty was changed, and they became masters of the country, and required the Chinese to wear "tails" as a token of submission; this transpired about 180 years ago. The present revolution is to throw off the Tartar yoke, and return to the religion of their Fathers, (however upon this point there is much speculation.) Yet it is confidently asserted that the present leader of the rebel party claims to be inspired by his Father, (the Almighty,) with revelation to rid his country of the Tarters; and it is reported by the missionaries that he believes in visions, dreams, &c. They hold that we are of the same family of spirits, are brethren and sisters, and that Jesus Christ was our brother, and was sent forth to do good to his brethren, and to do what his Father commanded him; so they believe that the present leader is sent forth by his Father to do a great work. They are far from being an ignorant people; the arts and sciences flourish in their way, and their paintings, and mechanical ingenuity in the manufacture of articles more various perhaps than any other country will rank them not behind many nations who boast of their superiority. Their great skill is displayed in imitation which they can accomplish to perfection. The country is not of greater extent than the United States, and to support such a vast population farming must be admirably conducted. They have a mountainous country, and the surface is tilled to their very tops. Much of the soil is irrigated, and produces in great abundance. The principal diet is rice, and other vegetables. They are a quiet and harmless people, and do not interfere with their neighbors. A short time ago the ruins of a church, or synagoge, were discovered near the centre of the empire, in which the books of Moses were found, and sent to England by the missionaries. Chinese history shows that their religion was formerly so much like that of the Jews, that they say the Jews took the form of religion from them.

When I reflect that this vast portion of the human race have the same characters for a language, with a history for so many years back, and comparatively so little known, I am led to wonder, and acknowledge the hand of God in this for some wise purpose.

Respectfully, JAMES LEWIS.

Miscellaneous.

THE SAINTS HOME.

BY CONSTANCE.

There's many a home of brightness,
That lies in valleys fair;
And many a heart of lightness,
Is bounding gaily there.
But I've a home far in the West,
Where Saints may flee when sore oppressed—
By favoring gales of heaven caressed—
O, that's the home for me.

There's many a home of splendor,
Where all seems glad and free;
But who, O, who would enter,
Where hate and strife may be.
But I've a home toward setting sun,
Whose hopes and fears and faith are one—
A Paradise on earth begun—
O that's the home for me.

There's many a home unlighted
By virtue's heavenly ray;
Where faith and hope are blighted,
And fathers never pray.
But I've a home where virtue's ray,
And faith and hope make bright the way!
Where old and young devoutly pray—
O that's the home for me.

DEPARTURE OF THE "S. CURLING."

The ship S. Curling cleared on the 21st of May, and put to sea on the 22nd, with 581 souls of the Saints on board, of whom 385 were P. E. Fund emigrants, all under the Presidency of Elder Israel Barlow, formerly Pastor of the Birmingham and Warwickshire Conferences. He is accompanied by Elder John Barker, late Pastor; Elders John Robinson, Matthew Rowan, George W. Bramwell, Joseph Westwood, Thomas Caffall, Joseph Boath, John Perry, formerly Presidents of Conferences; Moses Thurston, Travelling Elder; also Elder William W. Willes, who is on his way home from an arduous mission in the East Indies; and Elder G. W. Burridge from Malta. These brethren leave these lands with our confidence and faith that they will live to realize the blessings in Zion which they so fondly anticipate.

The sailing of the S. Curling closes up the through emigration from hence to Utah this season. —[Millennial Star.

The Terrible Calamity in Germany.

The New York Staats Zeitung contains among the news brought by the steamer Nashville, a most heart rending tale from Dantzic, dated the 31st of March last.

The breaking up and floating down of the ice on the Vistula, which has been so often the source of great damage to the surrounding low lands, has this spring taken place with such terrible violence as to surpass anything of the kind within the last fifty years.

The strong dykes, constructed at an immense cost along the banks of the river have been swept away in many places by the infuriated element, and four hundred square miles of the most fertile plains, the best wheat producing district in the world, are covered by water, and have the appearance of a lake.

One hundred human corpses have already been picked up near a single place, (Tiegenhoff,) when the above report was sent off.

The loss of life and property must have been terrible. The scenes of misery, anguish, and sorrow so suddenly created by this awful calamity, beggar description, and the depth of the existing distress can be fully fathomed only by persons actually present or intimately acquainted with the peculiarities of the country.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

A company of adventurers, under the notorious Col. Walker, had gone down the coast under the pretence of establishing a colony.

The affairs of Adams & Co. are reported to be in a perplexed condition, and suits have been commenced against the retiring partners in the East.

Great complaint is made in San Francisco of the financial management of her municipal officers.

Sandwich Island dates are to the 2d ult. The building of the Sailors' Home was about to be commenced at Honolulu.

The Islands were quiet, and the king popular.

POPULAR opinion is deceitful.

A Creed for Know-Nothings.

American is the noblest national name which any man can wear; it has more good associations than any other name; but it takes much to make an American. All are not Americans who so call themselves, now-a-days. It takes more than "one idea" to make an American- He is not an American who spurns adopted citizens; for adopted citizens are as much Americans as those of the "manor born." They are not Americans, who obstruct the migration of men from despotic lands to our asylum for the oppressed; for one charge against the King, in the declaration of Independence, was his "obstruction against the naturalization of foreigners."

No American favors the foundation of "castes," for American heart and mind extend from the rivers to the end of the earth. None are true Americans, unless they support the Union and the Constitution. They are defamers, even if they call themselves Americans, who go for anything less than our country. So then, acts and not words merely, prove who and who are not Americans; they are known by their works—by their good works.—[New Haven Register.

Woman's Duty to Look Pretty.

"A French author has recently written a book on 'The duty of a Pretty Woman is to look Pretty.' Such a work, doubtless, has uses; but it is of limited application. We should have rejoiced in a title of more extended significance, with contents corresponding to the title. The subject should have been, in effect—word it as you may—the duty of every woman to look as pretty as she can. Some woman are unfortunately not pretty; but there are few women, who cannot impart something of comeliness even to an ill-favored face and a misshapen figure, if they will only take the trouble.

"We speak very gravely when we say that there are few relations in life, or rather that there are few relationless conditions, in which this is not a duty. That cleanliness is a virtue is seldom denied. A pretty woman, doubtless, looks prettier when clean, and an ugly uglier when dirty. And there are duties beyond personal cleanliness. Neatness and tidiness follow close upon it. But something more may still be needed; and something more clearly seen and properly described, is the least possible spice of coquetry.

"A well dressed woman, however little she may be favored by nature, ceases to be plain. It is difficult, indeed, to limit the extent to which a woman, by due attention to dress, may improve her natural attractions, or obviate the disadvantages with which she was born. And that it is her duty to do this, whether she be well or ill favored, is more than a maxim of mere worldliness. To endeavor to the utmost to please those with whom we live is unquestionably a duty.

"A man marries, indeed, for the sake of the domus et placens uxor. He does not take woman to his hearth because she is a philosopher, or an arithmetician, but because, in homely language, there is 'something nice about her.' It was, doubtless, the design of the Almighty, in giving man a helpmate, that she should satisfy his natural cravings after the beautiful, the graceful, and the gentle. For this was woman formed:

"For softness she and sweet attractive grace."

The woman who forgets this, ignores one of the great object of her creation. The wife who forgets this, violates one of the primeval conditions of the connubial contract.

"That some women are naturally more beautiful and graceful than others, is a fact which makes not against, but for our argument. Dress is common to all. It is a consolation to those not naturally gifted, that there is a point at which nature yields to art, and the work of men's hands is potent to supply the adornment not vouchsafed by Providence.—It is surprising what a very little way mere personal beauty goes.

"We may confidently appeal to the experience of men of the world in support of the assertion that the efforts of art are often more pleasing and attractive than the gifts of nature—in other words, that well-dressed women are more admired than merely beautiful ones. Accident is beaten by effort in the great Olympics of society.

"It may be agreed that taste in dress is scarcely less a natural gift than personal beauty. And, to some extent, at least, the fact must be admitted. One woman has naturally an eye for color and form, whilst the other has neither the one nor the other. But there are few women who have not, or cannot acquire, a sufficient knowledge of the becoming in costume for all domestic purposes. It may be doubted, indeed, whether the plea of incompetency is ever set up. The real secret of inattention to dress is carelessness—indifference—idleness. It is not worth the trouble. Women do not always consider that what is worth their while to gain, it is worth their while to keep. It is no uncommon thing for women to become slatternly after marriage.—They say they have other things to attend to, and dress is habitually neglected—except, perhaps, on great occasions, where there is a display of finery and bad taste abroad, to be followed by greater negligence at home. Great respect is shown to what is called 'company;' but apart from this there is a sort of cui bono abandonment, and the compliment which is paid to strangers is witheld from those who have the best right to claim, and are most likely to appreciate it. This is a fatal, but too common error. When a woman, with reference to the question of personal adornment, begins to say to herself, 'It is only my husband,' she must prepare herself for consequences which, perhaps, she may rue to the latest day of her life.

"The effect, indeed, of attention or inattention to dress—and we include in the little word whatever contributes to personal comeliness and attractiveness—upon the domestic happiness, especially of the lower or middle classes, cannot easily be overstated. The placens uxor, as we have said, is no small part of the totality of home. If a man finds that he has not secured what he believed he had married, he has a right to feel disappointed. We do not say that he has a right to retaliate. The obligations of the connubial contract are not conditional but absolute. Negligence on the one side does not excuse negligence on the other; but it will very soon induce it. When there is nothing attractive at home, a man, however inexcusable such conduct may be, will seek it abroad, whether at the ale house, the club, the theatre, the gaming table, or only what is called 'society.' We do not mean to say that dress alone is the agency by which the erratic propensities of husbands are to be restrained, but that it is a highly important part of it. Indeed, it may be asserted that the abscence of attention to this matter pre-supposes the absence of almost all other gentle, kindly, and attractive qualities."

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

The dates from the Sandwich Islands are to the 2d April. On the 8th of March the United States sloop-of-war Decatur, commander Sterrett, reached Honolulu, forty-one days from Valparaiso. On the 9th, the British sloop-of-war Dido arrived from Valparaiso. On the 21st the officers of both ships were presented to the King.

The Polynesian says that no King ever ascended a throne with a more universal approval of his subjects than his Majesty, King Kamehameha IV.—Many of the foreign, as well as native citizens, had sent in their congratulations and expressions of loyalty.

The whaleship Garland, of New Bedford, arrived at Honolulu, March 22, leaking badly. We learn she would be obliged to discharge and heave down for repairs. She had 2,000 barrels of oil on board, which was offered for sale.

LIST OF PASSENGERS

Shipped on board the "S. Curling" for New York, by F. D. Richards, Liverpool, April 22, 1855.

☞The figures denote the number in the family.☜

Wm Willes	Ann Overend	Ellen Pilling
Mary Ward	Isabella Barton 7	Wm Hawkinson
Ellen Hawkinson	Mary Hawkinson	Samuel Rushforth
Peter Renter	Rebecca Wood	John & Mary Harkes
John Rigby	Wm & Eliz. Kingdon 2	Isaac & Jane Jones 1
Jabez R Com	Wm Herd	John Tummell
R E Charlotte Young 5	Mary Hazlewood	John & Ann Acomb
Hanah Acomb	Elizabeth Acomb	Edward Allison
Anna Ennis	Jane Smith 3	D & Janett L Moffatt
Jessie McDonald	James Smith 6	J & Janet C Watson 5
John Rankine	Wm Simpson	Thos & Eliza Law 3
B & Chris. B Collins 1	J & Christ'a Sneddon 3	A & Marg't Bennett
J & M E Johnson 1	A & Jane Neilson 4	J & Sarah Hendry 1
H & Eliz. Clucas 3	J & Agnice Jardine 1	J & Elizabeth Morton 2
A & Agnes Morton 3	J & Isabella Jardine 4	Mary A Spence 2
J & Mary Mather 1	G & Margery Mather 1	Diana Davidson
J & Eliz. Boyack 11	Margery Waterhouse	wm J & J Anderson 4
Mary Robertson	R & Mary Meikeljohn 3	Margaret Taylor
G & Jane Crookstone 7	Peter Reid	Janet Bland
D & Ann Meikeljohn 4	J McFaulds	James & A Hughes 6
S & Sarah H Bryson 4	Elizabeth Hogg 2	Elizabeth Thomas
Arch'd M Kinnoro	Mary Thomson	David Thomson
Robert Thomson	Joseph Thomson	Martha Ward 5
Alice Faulkner	Catharine McLean 3	J & Isabella Shanks 3
J & Agnes Allan	Arch'd Anderson	Alexander Calderwood
A & Ann Gowans 3	Alex G Fraser	Susan James
Louisa King	Sarah Pugh	Sylvester Low
J & Ann Rees 1	J & Phebe Malben	Elizabeth Richards
Wm Bumet	J & Farry Weed 6	J H & Louisa Giles 2
Thos & Martha Cuery	S & Sarah Parkes 4	Sarah Smith
Charlotte Smith	Elizabeth Smith 6	George Anderson
Helen Mitchell	Mary Mitchell	Ann Bailey 3
G W & M Bramwell 1	Wm & M A Lapworth	Jane Price
J & Maria Smith 3	Lettice Stampford	Thomas Floyd
J & S Blackburn 2	Sarah Howlett	David & Eliz'th Lant
Susan M Harding	Sam Brewerton	Ann Brewerton
Kitty Brampton	Mathew & J Rowan 1	Mary A Smith
Ann Dove 4	Susan Lurersidge 4	Joseph D Reynolds
John Brownlow	Zacobina W O Parten 2	John Lees
J & Martha Lees	Harriet Knott 3	J & Mary Parkin 3
Ann Robins 4	Mary Robins	Charles Lilly
J & Eliz. Jenkins 3	Wm Turner 2	W & Ann Turnar 2
J & Eliz. Cook 4	J & Christ. Drysdale 1	Thos & E E Caffall 3
Robert Beck	J & Agnes Strong 8	Ruth Shaw
Richard Jenkins	Francis Manering	J & Catharine Cotton
Ellen Pilling 2	Catharine White 1	Thos & Ellenor James 2
Wm Schofield	Hanah Daniel	Ed & Sarah Bradbent
Mary Price 3	J & Julia Memmot 5	Mary Brainwick 3
H & Sarah A Morris 4	Lucy Lumby	J & Grace Cotton
Ellen Midgely 5	Ann Kloop	J & Maria Booth 2
John Perry	James Robinson	Eliza A Bunting
Archi & A Erskine 1	Janet Cochrane	James Graham
R & Isabella Murdoch	Elizabeth Wilson 2	J & Betsey Christie 1
R & Marg't Money	G & Jessie Stevwright 1	David Hamilton
J & Eliz. Routledge 5	G & Susan Williams 1	T & Mary Needham 5
Ann Milner	w & Sarah Stocks	Ann Smith
J & Mar. Westwood 3	H & Hanah Goddard 1	Sam & Mary Brown 1
Moses Thurston	John Wild	Charles Harris
S & Leah Eckersley	George Watson	Francis & A White 5
Chas Butterfield	John & A Robinson 2	Thomas Peck
Wm Horsley	Sarah Broadbridge	J & Allice Stout
Mariah Walsh	T & Morg't Lee	Joseph Shaw
Harriett Greyson	Christina Greyson	W & Elizabeth Jones 1
Andrew Robertson	Geo Wiseman	Wm & Hannah Vest 1
W & Fanny Gorring 4	Mary Stewart 5	John Miller
Russel Archibald	Cornelius & A Green	J W & Mary Hain
Catharine Maddox 5	Ann M Kay	E M Primmore
Lucy Heap	G & H J Burridge 2	David McLelland
J & Eliz. Meyrick 4	T & Allice Taysun 2	Mary A Meers
G & Betsey Fox 4	Geeorge Boume	S & Harriet Sully 21
Elizabeth Taylor		Susanna Eaton.

SUMMARY.

	Adults.	Children.	Infants.	Total.
ORDINARY,	117	62	17	196
P. E. FUND,	264	110	11	385
	381	172	28	581

ELDER ISRAEL BARLOW, President of Company.
MARTIN FENN, Steward.

LIST OF PASSENGERS

Shipped on board the "Wm. Stetson" for New York, by F. D. Richards, Liverpool, April 26, 1855.

☞The figures denote the number in the family.☜

S & Eliz. Haywood 7	John Forbes	Thomas Wignall
T & Ann Matthias 5	Joseph Wilson	Hannah Hancox
J & Mary Horrocks 5	John Buckley	Sarah Wood
Mathew Wood 3	Mary Dorney 1	F & Robina Speoule 7
T & Mary Hill 7	Isabella Hendry 7	C & Hannah Hayton 3
Jo & Dorothy Collins 3	Francis Snelling	James Harris 3
J & Amy Low 2	J & Run Baugh 6	J & Sarah Cherington 6
Wm Wilkes	Wm Roberts	J & Edith Sallis
Esther Walters	Phebe Booth	Elizabeth Holmes 2
Emma Sharp	Hasriet Green	Sarah Green
Wm Showell	Chas Lashbrook	Elizabeth Allen 5
R & Ann White	Mary Hewitt	J & Ellen Callon 1
D & Sarah Walwork 2	J & Mary Gaskill	A & Cath Smithers 3
Wm Smith	Edward Smith	R & Ann Haywood 1
Geo Yapp	A & Anna Ogden 1	Eliza Fenn 2
Mary Christian	Wm Kay	J & Mary Dutton
Henry Sutcliffe	T & Allice Mills 5	Sarah Channing
Elizabeth Morris 1	Margt Christie	T & Mary Wasden 7
J P & Charl. Smith 3	John Coxford	J B & Eliz. Archer 4
J & Ann Hodges 3	Wm & Sarah Stone	Wm & Emma Wright 1
J & Amelia Meadows	Matthew Moore	James Ashman
S & Martha Rowley 1	James Griffen 2	Mary Preece 1
J & Mary whitehead 1	Thomas Hall	Thomas Laynd
Elizabeth Rigg 4	P & Ann Anshead 1	Wm & Mary Thornton 7
Wm Williams 1	Anna Jones	Chas & E Davies 3
Thos & E Jones 2	S & Mary Briley 2	J & Mary A Price 1
T & Sarah Harrald 1	Jabez Augur	Elias Yates
Wm & Jane Panter 1	Emily Haygard 5	D & Harriet Birch
Thomas Giles	D & Emma Stepney 2	Elma Taylor 2
Wm Stradling	J & Mary Whitehead 4	G & Sophia Blood 1
W & Caroline Meadows	James Howard	Georgianna Huckvale
J & Margt Salloway 2	Ralph Worthing	Elizabeth Robinson
Samuel Jones		Ellen Peck 2

SUMMARY.

Adults over 14 years of age	188
Children over 1 year and under 14 years	85
Infants under 1 year	20
Total,	293

None of the above intend going through to the Valley this season.
ELDER AARON SMETHURST, President.
ELDER FRANCIS SPROUL, } Counsellors.
" WM. WRIGHT. }

The reason why it succeeds.—THE Mustang Liniment has attained its enormous popularity, and almost universal use, simply because it gives better satisfaction, accomplishes more good, relieves more pain, and heals more wounds and sores than any other preparation ever defore offered to the afflicted. Every bottle that is used, speaks for itself—tells its own tale in the relief it gives, and the cure it effects. And then one who has suffered, pehaps, long years with pain, without hope of relief, and finds in this Liniment an almost instantaneous remedy, cannot help but speak in its praise, and recommend it in the best terms to all he sees suffering. It needs no other recommendation than a trial.

☞See advertisement in another columu. [may 19 26 3m.

NOTICE.

The members of the Priests Quorum are hereby notified that their Quorum meetings will be held in the room occupied by brother Erting, No. 12 St Charles st., formerly occupied as the Church Office.

INFORMATION WANTED.

CATHERINE GODARD and her daughter left England in the spring of 1854, on board the ship Marshfield. They started across the plains in Elder Empy's Company. A letter was received from her, by her sister, Mary Perks, when on the plains, stating that her husband had died—no tidings has been heard of since. Any information relating to them will be thankfully received. Address to MRS. MARY PARKS, or Luminary Office.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
UTAH TERRITORY.
HOOPER & WILLIAMS,

ARE transporting to Utah, this season, one of the largest and best assorted stock of GOODS ever taken to that region.

The purchases being made from the best houses in New York, Baltimore and St. Louis, and the long experience they have had in the trade, enables them to offer inducements in prices, style and kind, which will insure satisfaction.

Emigrants passing over the plains to California, will find it to their advantage to refit at Great Salt Lake, as produc can always be had for less than transportation from the States.

Persons wishing to remit or intend taking money with them, can avoid risk and save money by depositing with Messrs. ROBERTSON, and HOOPER & WILLIAMS, No. 29 Murray st., New York, or WATERMAN & RYAN, St. Louis, who are authorized to draw on us. Interest will be allowed at the rate of 7 per cent. from date of draft till payment.

HOOPER & WILLIAMS,
may 19 26 3m] Great Salt Lake City, 1855.

GOODIN & TOOKER,

GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,
No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.

HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.

We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfillment.

Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand. Lamps repaired, regilded and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 19 6m

SCHEER & HACKMAN'S
WAGON MANUFACTORY,
Corner of Sixteenth and Market streets.

KEEP constantly on hand a large assortment of Wagons suitable for Traders and Travellers to Santa Fe, California, Oregon, etc., etc.; also, for Farmer's use. Persons in want of Wagons are requested to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere, as promise a first-rate article at reasonable prices. S. & H. [may 5 24 6m*

REMOVAL.

MRS. J. VINCENT, MIDWIFE, East side of Fourth street, between Market and Walnut streets, St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. J. Vincent wishes to inform her friends and the public, that she has removed from between 8th and 9th, on Market street, to the above place, and hopes by strict attention to her duties, to merit a further continuance of their patronage. [apr 14 21 3m

TO EMIGRANTS.
C. B. HUBBELL, Jr., 102 4th st., St. Louis
Informs persons travelling towards
SALT LAKE OR CALIFORNIA,

That they will find at his store, the largest stock of DRY GOODS in the city, comprising every variety of kinds adapted to their wants, which he will sell at prices fully TWENTY-FIVE per cent. lower than any other house in the trade, to which your attention is invited.

N. B. One price only ever asked, and no deviation. [apr 14 21 2m

GREAT ATTRACTION
AT
WILSON & COOPER'S NEW STORE!

The attention of Emigrant starting for
UTAH, CALIFORNIA, AND OREGON,
Is respectfully called to our IMMENSE STOCK of
FASHIONBLE DRY GOODS!

Comprising every article in the trade, from the plain substantial articles of every-day use, to the finest and most elegant fabrics of first class Dry Goods and LINEN DRAPERY.

Our goods are all marked in PLAIN FIGURES, from which no abatement is allowed under any circumstances.

N. B. A discount of FIVE per cent. will be allowed to parties going west, on all bills over $100. WILSON & COOPER.
apr 14 21] Cor. 4th and Locust sts., St. Louis.

OUTFITS FOR CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE AND OREGON.
WM. C. WILSON,
DEALER IN
Groceries, Wines, Liquors, and Provisions,; Pilot Bread and Crackers,
No. 195 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.

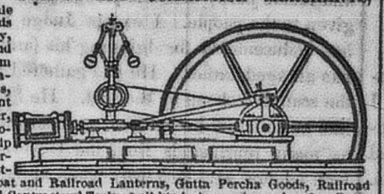
☞Is prepared to furnish everything in his line, at the lowest rates, and from past experience in the trade, feels assured, that parties intending to cross the plains, will find it to their interest to give him a call, and compare prices before purchasing elsewhere.

ON HAND AND FOR SALE LOW, THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES:

TEAS—A choice assortment of Imperial, Gun Powder, Young Hyson and Black.
COPPER—Rio, Havana, Laguayra and Java—burnt and ground.
SUGAR—Crushed, Lump, Powdered, Clarified, New Orleans and Brown—all grades.
MOLASSES—Golden Syrup, Sugar House and Plantation.
LIQUORS—Best brands of Pure French Brandy, Holland Gin, Jamaica Rum, Irish, Scotch, Monongahela and Bourbon Whiskey, and all kinds of Domestic Liquors.
WINES—Pure Port, Maderia, Malaga, Sherry, Muscat, Champagne, Claret and White, Cordials, &c., &c.
BACON—Ham, Sides and Shoulders, Dried Beef and Beef Tongue.
FRUIT—Raisins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, Citron, Dried Apples and Peaches, &c., &c.
SUNDRIES—All kinds of Pickles, Sauce, Ketchups, Spice, Fancy Soaps, Candles, Oil, Gas, Fish, Mats, Cords, Buckets, Baskets, Brooms, Tubs, Lobsters, Oysters, Sardines, Cooking Extracts, Essences, Arrow Root, Farina, Sago, Corn Starch, Oat Meal, Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Maccaroni, Vermicelli, Honey, &c., &c. [apr 7 20 2m

W. H. HUISH,
MACHINIST, Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as
PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERMLY.
mar 24] [18 3m

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MAIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,



FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, Iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.

N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.
Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,
Residence, No. 328 South Side Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets:
Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,

MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also, Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice.

All the above articles are warranted of the best American Iron.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by
ALFRED PERSEY,
St. Louis, Mo.

The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE and OREGON.
EMIGRANTS
Can be supplied with every variety of
PILOT BREAD & CRACKERS
Baked expressly for the overland Emigration, and WARRANTED to KEEP, at
J. B. WILLSON'S BAKERY,
No. 186 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
☞The trade supplied at the LOWEST RATES. [apr 7 20 2m

UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L K & Co.

CATTLE.

THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all of which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. R. & J. H. FLEMING,
Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.
REFERENCE.
ISAAC HOCKADAY, Independence, O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HADUS & MULLEN, Wayne City.

N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon, and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood of Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!

M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Groceries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WESTPORT, MO.
S. P. KELLER,
DEALER IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE,
Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,
Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot
No. 27 Commercial Street,
WESTPORT, MO.
Feb. 24, 14 3m*

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.
THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m* JAMES W. ELLIS.

C. E. KEARNEY. W. H. BERNARD.
KEARNEY & BERNARD,
METROPOLITAN STORE,
WESTPORT, MO.,
DEALERS IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WESTON, MO.
OUT-FITTING FOR THE PLAINS.
THOSE crossing the Plains this Spring, will find it to their interest to call on the undersigned, where they will find a general assortment of every thing necessary in out-fitting for such expeditions.
Goods received and stored upon liberal terms.
Feb. 24, 14 3m A. G. BOONE, Weston, Mo.

D. G. TUTT. J. P. BAKER.
TUTT & BAKER,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.
WESTON, MO.,
Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.
March 3, 1855. 15 3m

J. S. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.
EVANS & MITCHELL,
MERCHANTS,
At Weston, Missouri,

HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

TO EMIGRANTS.
J D HARPER. T J HARPER.

AT the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especially of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we will sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.
mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

NOTICE.
I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at ST. LOUIS PRICES.
mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

LEAVENWORTH, K. T.
G. M. & A. FISHER,
Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,

ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as Sad-Irons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.

They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 15 3m

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.
STORAGE AND OUTFITS.
LEWIS N. REES,
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,

IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pirtols, Buoy-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.

Groceries and Provisions.

Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.

He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Huntingcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 15 3m

BLACKSMITHING.

T. S. ABURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommendation.
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb. 1855. [mar 3, 15 3m.

KANSAS, MO.
H. M. NORTHRUP. JOSEPH S. CHICK.
NORTHRUP & CHICK,
KANSAS, MISSOURI,

WHOLESALE and Retail dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Hardware, Cutlery, Guns, Pistols, Plows, Farming Implements, Groceries, Wines, Liquors, Boots and shoes, Clothing, Indian Goods, Fresh Family Flour, Bacon, Lard, Tallow, Buffalo Robes, &c.

We also keep all kinds of Outfitting Goods suited to the emigrant crossing the Plains. Also, Work Oxen, well broke, Milk Cows, Horses, Mules and Indian Ponies.

Emigrants for Salt Lake, California, New Mexico, and Oregon, will find this the most suitable starting point, with full supplies for Emigrants.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

PHIL. ROCHILD & CO.,

HAVE constantly on hand in Kansas, Mo., a full supply of Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Groceries, Gutta Percha Goods, Provisions, Tinware, &c., which they will sell on as liberal terms as they can be bought for in Upper Missouri. [mar 3, 15 3m.

OUT-FITTING.

R. CHARLES takes this method of informing the emigration to Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, that he keeps constantly on hand a full supply of Groceries, Builder's Hardware, Cutlery, Boots and Shoes, and all grades of staple Dry Goods, which he will sell at wholesale and retail. Thankful for former patronage, he solicits a further trial on the levee Kansas, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

BLACKSMITHING AND GRAZING.

THE Subscriber has a Blacksmith Shop, lots on the prairie, and has Cattle for sale two miles from Westport, on the State line. His former business transactions with the Latter-day Saints and other Emigration having given general satisfaction, he solicits a trial in future.
Feb. 24, 14 3m* J. W. MARRION, Kansas, Mo.

JOEL WALKER. W. H. CHICK.
WALKER & CHICK,
Receiving, Forwarding, and Commission Merchants,
KANSAS, MO.
Feb. 24, 1855. [14 3m.

RIDDLESBARGER & CO.,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
Commission and Forwarding Merchants,
AT KANSAS, MO.,

HAVING done a heavy business in our line for the emigration of 1854, we would respectfully solicit further patronage. [Feb 24, 14 3m

PROVISIONS AND OUTFITTING.

J. H. COLE & CO., Corner of Main and Water streets, under the printing office, Kansas Mo., have constantly on hand a large supply of Provisions and Outfitting Goods, and having done business in their line at this place for some years with the Western Emigration, they earnestly solicit a share of their patronage this season. [Feb 24, 14 3m.

INDEPENDENDE, MO.

LEATHER of all descriptions, for Saddlery, Harness, and Shoemaking purposes to be had at O. H. COGWELL'S,
Feb. 24,

Poetical Department.

JOHN LITTLEJOHN.

BY CHARLES MACKAY.

John Littlejohn was staunch and strong,
Upright and downright—scorning wrong;
He gave good weight and paid his way,
He thought for himself and he said his say.
Whenever a rascal strove to pass,
Instead of silver, money, or brass,
He took his hammer and said, with a frown,
The coin is spurious—nail it down.

John Littlejohn was firm and true;
You could not cheat him in two-and-two,
When foolish argues might and main,
Darkened and twisted the clear and plain,
He saw through the mazes of their speech—
The simple thought beyond their reach—
And brushing their logic, said with a frown,
The coin is spurious—nail it down.

John Littlejohn maintained the right,
Through storm and sunshine, in the world's despite,
When fools or quacks desired his vote,
'Dorsed with arguments learned by rote,
Or by coaxing, threats, or promise tried
To gain his support to the wrongful side,
"Nay, nay!" said John, with angry frown,
The coin is spurious—nail it down.

When told that events might justify
A false and crooked policy—
That a decent hope of future good
Might excuse departure from rectitude,
And a lie, if white, was a small offense,
To be forgiven by men of sense,
"Nay, nay!" said John, with a sigh and a frown,
The coin is spurious—nail it down.

Whenever the world our eyes would blind
With false pretense of such a kind—
With humbug, cant, and bigotry—
Or a spurious sham philosophy—
With wrong dressed up in guise of right
And darkness passing itself for light,
Let us imitate John, and exclaim with a frown,
The coin is spurious—nail it down.

From the Deseret News.

ASSEMBLY COLLATION REMARKS.

The following remarks from the United States Judges in Utah Territory, made before the Legislative Assembly on the evening of their adjournment, Jan. 19th, '55, will be found exceedingly interesting to the Saints; and may, peradventure, serve to disabuse the minds of some persons, who have imaginen the people of Utah to be a rebellious, lawless and immoral people. If these remarks do not actually demonstrate that the inhabitants of the Mountain Territory are more enterprising, intelligent and virtuous than any other people, they do prove most conclusively, that the United States Judges believe them to be so, and they certainly have a better opportunity of arriving at a correct knowledge of facts concerning them, than the lying editors who write against them, or those very convenient tools, their dirty scribblers, who, for paltry pelf, are ever ready to feed the public maw with the foul productions of their putrid hearts, which appears indeed the most savory aliment, the most easily digested, and commands the highest price, and has the most gormandizers, of anything that can be offered to this corrupt and adulterous generation.

REMARKS BY CHIEF JUSTICE J. F. KINNEY.

I do not rise to tell a story, to offer a toast, or propose a conundrum, but to express my feelings. I have watched the doings of the Legislative Assembly during the past session. I see you have adopted the wise policy of enacting few and simple laws. Those governments are accounted the most wise, which have enacted the fewest and simplest laws, and as you claim superior wisdom, it will no doubt be made manifest in the framing of your laws. You do not wish to rule your people by law; you try to rule them by love. I speak this not merely to eulogize Governor Young, or his Council. Everything in this valley bespeaks the enterprise, the industry, the refinement, and the intelligence of this people. Your fine settlements, unsurpassed in loveliness and beauty, your public buildings, your machinery, and the union and good feelings prevailing throughout your territory, are all monuments of the wisdom and power that influences and controls every department. No stranger coming into this territory but will be struck at the luxury, magnificence, symmetry, and ingenuity that exist throughout this valley. This cannot be ascribed to the wisdom of man—it cometh from the Almighty Creator of Heaven and Earth; I can account for it on no other principle.

I shall continue to observe with interest the progress and development of the Territory, while I may be with you; and that may be for all my life, for ought I know; and it is food for the mind. Although the inhabitants of this Territory are from so many nations, governments, and kingdoms, still there is no people more happy, more free and prosperous, than this people. These are the words of truth, and it gives my soul delight to express them.

REMARKS BY HIS EXCELLENCY GOV. YOUNG.

Judge Kinney will please accept the hearty compliments of the Assembly and myself. His remarks are true. What you behold, I attribute to the God whom we serve. I give no credit to myself or to any man. In coming to this place we were led from day to day. What we were going to meet was as unknown to us as what would befall Abraham was to him, when the Lord said to him, "Get thee out of thy country." The God of our Father has revealed himself to us, and what you observe in this city and our settlements, is the result, under Providence, of the labors and doings of this people. The first officers sent here by the General Government took exceptions to our course and left us. So far as I am concerned, I never gave them occasion; but, the Lord being my helper, I am bold for truth. I did chastise those officers for insulting this people, and I would do so again. If they had submitted themselves to their offices, and performed the duties assigned them by the parent government, and minded their own business, there would have been no trouble. But when they would rise up in the midst of our congregation, and pour contumely and insult upon this people, I was like the lion in their path. On the other hand, if they had wished peace and righteousness, and treated us with respect, I was like the babe, to be approached without reserve or fear. I loved Judge Reid; I regretted the day he left this valley. I put my hands upon his head unwittingly, and blessed him, and he thanked me. I am equally pleased with Judge Kinney; and I know that the righteous will prevail, while the unrighteous will sink, and the cup of the iniquity of the nations of the earth is well nigh filled to the brim.

The most of these brethren with whom I am surrounded this evening, were never members of a legislature previous to their coming here, and are unacquainted with the customary phraseology of law. They are from the axe, the hammer, the anvil, and the plough, and they meet here to make our laws, and what is the result? As justly observed by Judge Kinney, plain and simple laws for the benefit of the people.

If this people are not altogether what they should be at the present time, I trust we shall be at war with every carnal propensity, that we may have power to reign triumphantly over ourselves, and then we can reign over others with honor and dignity. Can there be another body of men like these gathered together to legislate for a nation's prosperity? When the master spirit points out the way, every voice cries "aye," and every heart says, "Amen—that is our course." Every requirement which the people know emanates from us, is sanctioned and sustained; and if there are refractory spirits who do not like to be controlled, one word when they come here hushes them into silence, because the Almighty is here, and his spirit is in the hearts of this people. That is the reason of it, Judge Kinney. It is not the wisdom of Brigham, it is not the wisdom of Heber, it is not the wisdom of Willard, nor of the Twelve, but it is the wisdom of Him who rules and guides in the midst of the nations of the earth, and they know it not, neither can they see his goings forth. Blessed is the man who sees and acknowledges the dealings of Providence with the human family, from the highest to the lowest, in all their gradations, including legislators, princes and rulers; and may our feelings chime in unison with his ways while we are here upon the earth, that we may at last reign with our Master and Saviour.

REMARKS BY HON. A. W. BABBIT.

I rise to express my feelings, as Judge Kinney has been relating his change of mind. I was left in Nauvoo in charge of the Temple and other property, to adopt the best manner of disposing of it, to help the people to get westward, and to flee myself. We had poverty, wars, and everything else to contend with. I brought up the rear. When I came here, I was chosen their humble servant to go back and ask for admission into the Union. I went and done so; I labored faithfully. I went back with all the prejudices of this people against me. I stood between wind and water and combatted the opposition. I said God was at the helm. I returned again and again. I received a letter from the Chief Justice now before you, and I answered it. He wanted to know whether it was best to bring his family. He can now tell whether I answered that letter correctly or not. He knew but little of our situation, country and institution. I told him the truth; I disguised nothing. I brought my family here. I am happy to meet with you here this night. The highest offering, and the best integrity that can be given by officers, is to bring their families to this Territory, and reside here; and this pledge has Judge Kinney given to the people. I except Judge Stiles, for he had inducements for bringing his family here; he has an aged father. He has gathered up as one of the scattered sheep of the fold. He has come here like myself, and he will feel at home when he gets as many reprimands from the Governor as I have had. I saw Mr. Holeman when he talked of leaving every day; I told him if he ran to Fort Bridger he would get killed. If you keep running away from the Lord, the devil will kill you. I never felt better than I do to-night with my brethren. As to Judge Shaver, he is a gentleman and a lawyer, is quiet, minds his own business, and when court is over, goes home. He meddles not with institutions which are peculiar to us; if you hear him say anything, it is to unite and strengthen; and to him I say, live in peace, die in peace, and if you earn salvation, go to heaven and enjoy it.

REMARKS BY ASSOCIATE JUSTICE G. P. STILES.

The honorable allusion made to myself prompts me to make a few remarks. I am not going to tell an anecdote—say anything about the devils on the post and rail fence. I have been known among this people ever since I was a stripling. My whole character has been before the most of this assembly. I have been alluded to as a lost or scattered sheep. I wish to say I am happy in this meeting to-night. This is a primary meeting; we have present the first of characters in our territory. I can bear record to the feelings of Chief Justice Kinney. I know the sentiments in his breast. I know that he is a high-minded gentleman. The sentiments he has advanced here are no sycophantic expressions, but are the ebullitions of an honest heart, made by circumstances in an honest man. He did not give credit to such a man as stirred up the first excitement; he told me what he thought of him, when he heard his statements from his own mouth; that he considered him a man who had become dissatisfied by his own corrupt principles. He was appointed by a previous administration, and was ding-donging every department, and to get rid of him, they gave him an appointment to Mexico. I came here unexpectedly. I would have been here two weeks sooner, if I had not have received my appointment. I am grateful for my appointment; it enabled me to come more comfortably. I came, and mean to do as much good as I can, and as little harm. I have been to Iron County. I organized a grand jury with all the requirements and paraphernalia of law. I gave them a solemn charge. My advice to them was, that they never should have Iron County tarnished with a lawsuit. There was no case for me to adjudicate. [Thank the Lord, said the Governor.] I do not know that there is a man there but what would come up to Great Salt Lake City, and sue me, if I called him a lawyer; that is my legal opinion. If any difficulties exist, they go to friends, and get the matter amicably settled. Let a difficulty be settled by law, and it makes a wider breach in the feelings of the parties. The third Judicial District is that to which I am assigned, and I feel grateful that Elder Orson Hyde is appointed the Probate Judge in Carson County. We are going to hold a court there, and if no lawyer go there, there will be no lawsuits. I hope, if friend Babbitt takes it into his head to go there, you will send him on a mission forthwith; for as sure as he ever gets there, there will be ten lawsuits the first day. I hope no lawyer will go there from Great Salt Lake City. We will have nothing to control us there, but the law of right, that liberality and generosity may prevail unobstructed from the highest to the lowest. We can there spread ourselves. The Chief Justice remarked that he may live and die here. I trust his heart and feelings will get so entwined around this people, so that if he goes away, he may be compelled to come back. He never was in a place where he could act out the feelings of his heart, as he can here. I have heard him talk before in deliberate, studied, measured terms; but I never heard him get up and talk about God, or him who rules and controls in the heavens. Here he has the spirit of freedom, because he comes right in, and partakes of the spirit that surrounds us; and when a man has the spirit of truth, he will talk the truth. He has said that God brought about what he beholds around him in this territory. Who told him this? It was the spirit of truth. Let him drink of it, and imbibe it. It may not be amiss in me to relate an anecdote. My heart is with you all the day long, and all I am sorry for is, that I have not been with you longer, but circumstances have prevented. It may be, however, that some of my good brethren will get a little slow; and I may, by stretching a little, have a pretty good crowd to go along with.

Judge Stiles then related the anecdote of the Methodist preaching a charity sermon in Iowa, and after preaching, going to the table where the money was deposited, and saying, Let us close by singing,

"This is the God that I adore,
My everlasting friend;
I love him now and evermore,
And will till time shall end."

And during the singing, fixed his eyes intensely on the money, and moving his hands to the tune, he deposited all the cash in his own pocket.

JUDGE KINNEY ROSE AGAIN, AND SAID:

Mr. President and friends:—I am certainly under great obligations for such frequent use of my name. I have been spoken of by Col. Babbit as an enquirer after your people, your institutions, and country. I was one of the Judges of the Supreme Court in Iowa for seven years; my salary was $1,000 per year; the salary of Chief Justice in Utah was then $1,800. I had a delightful home in Iowa, as many of you have here. My appointment to Utah was soon rumored, and my friends the members of the bar expostulated with me on the propriety of leaving Iowa; my post was flooded with letters from my friends on the subject; my old friend in New York, with whom I studied law four years, informed me that I could not live here, and discharge the official duties assigned me. You will agree with me that it required some decision of character to pursue the course I did. Allusion has been made to the originator of the first excitement; I heard his report: his own statements condemn him. I saw him in Washington, and told him to his teeth, in the lobby of the House of Representatives, that when they chastised him in Utah, it was because he deserved it. If I examine my own feelings in relation to coming to this place, I was actuated by one feeling, which was to show to the world that a man could occupy my present position, and discharge the duties thereof faithfully. I was actuated more by a desire to disabuse the public mind, and to show to the world the slanders that had been perpetrated upon this people, than by any other motive. It could not be for wealth, or honor. I have a wife and five children, a daughter grown to womanhood; and I can say there is less immorality, less drunkenness, less licentiousness here, than any where I have ever been. I turned my back on the advice of my friends; I have never regretted the steps I took. They tried to stay my family, but I controlled them; though I left it to their choice to come, or stay. If you call this a compliment to your territory, you are welcome to it, and I am proud of it.

REMARKS BY ELDER ORSON HYDE:

While the Hon. Secretary was relating our position in Nauvoo, some striking incidents were presented fresh to my mind. I was also left when all the rest of my quorum were gone. My instructions were for all to follow whenever their way opened, and to string out on the route to California. Mr. Edmonds wished me to leave a good many to protect the agents left to take care of, and dispose of the property; but I was warned by the Lord to tell the people to leave. The angel of God stood by my bed side, and told me to counsel the people to go west. Who can be a better legislator than a man who has a portion of the mind of God in him? God says, I will pour out my Spirit upon you. Now, if a portion of the light of God dwells in me, I can see in part as he sees; and if a portion of God's mind, or Spirit, be upon you, then you can comprehend partly as he comprehends. If I had the power to throw my mind into you, you would think as I do. May God grant that his Spirit may be poured out upon us to a fulness, until we shall all see eye to eye, and in due time possess a fulness of the glory of God.

YOUNG ladies are like arrows—they can't be got off without a BEAU.

NOTICE.

We have received and have on sale the following books and pamphlets.

Book of Mormon,	$1 00
Book of Doctrine and Covenants,	95
Voice of Warning,	50
Spencer's Letters,	50
Hymn Books, Morocco gilt, ext.,	1 25
" " Calf "	80
" " Roan "	50
Government of God, by J. Taylor,	50
New Jerusalem, or the Fulfilment of Modern Prophecy,	15
Divine Authority of Joseph Smith,	10
Remarkable Visions,	10
Only Way to be Saved,	5
Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, by O. Pratt, 8 parts, 10cts. ea., or per sett,	40
Polygamy, by a Lady in Utah,	5
The Seer, by O. Pratt, vol. 1, to which is added 6 parts of Divine Authenticity of the book of Mormon, and Polygamy, by a Lady of Utah, elegantly bound, in one vol.	2 25
Orson Pratt's works, bound,	1 50
Times and Seasons, vols. 4, 5, and 6, well bound, ea.	1 50
Portraits of the First Presidency,	1 25

Route from England to Salt Lake may be expected in a few weeks.

We have a few numbers of the Millenial Star of vol. 17 on sale.

Those wishing any of the above books, or wishing to subscribe regularly for the Millenial Star, can apply to me every Sunday at the Church, or by post.

Apr. 14, 21.] JAS. S. CANTWELL.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan.

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES,
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deserets,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.
JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.
Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.
N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.
Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.
It has cured more cases of
RHEUMATISM
than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.
G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours, J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.
MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.
MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:
Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.
I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.
I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.
Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

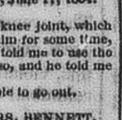
Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.
I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Groton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS
have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:
Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweeny, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.
The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.
G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.
Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST,
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.
Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
75 MARKET STREET,

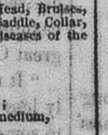


CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.
N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.
75 Market Street,
(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)
Feb. 17, 13 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 3, 1855. [11 3m*

GOODIN & TOOKER,
GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,

No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.



HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.
We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfilment.
Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly on hand. Lamps repaired, regilded and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 12 6m

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. 22. [5 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past years, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 packets old government Java;
180 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Lanquedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERE.
Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Labeaume Steert,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MCLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.
One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.
Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.
Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.
Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Parmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.
Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.
We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.
☞ For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.
☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.
T. W. HOIT.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PARER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.
A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.
A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.
They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.
They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.
Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.
Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.
WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.
☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.
N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.
Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall;
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

His fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,
☞ OF CORINTHIAN HALL, ☜
297 BROADWAY,
ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,
FOR THE SALE OF
FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,
FOR $4 EACH!
FOR A
LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,
GO TO CORINTIAN HALL!
FOR AN
INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
297 Broadway,
☞ BIG HAT. ☜
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.
☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,
Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT
No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.
COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 133 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.
Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set, Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tinners' Sheats, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.
☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.
☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels, will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1855. VOLUME I---NUMBER XXVII.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.
Mailed to Subscribers in the U. States at $2 per annum.
To Foreign Subscribers, (American Postage prepaid,) at $3 per annum.
To contiguous British Provinces, at $2.50 per annum.
No Subscription received without the money, though a specimen copy will be sent when required.
Any person forwarding us nine new Subscribers and remitting any current money in payment, will be entitled to the tenth copy gratis.
To avoid mistakes, particular pains must be taken, to send us all names of Subscribers, Post-offices and States, plainly written.
United States postage on the Luminary to British American Provinces, is one cent each—to Foreign countries two cents—within the U. States, one-half cent; provided, each subscriber notifies his Post-master, and pays the postage quarterly in advance, otherwise it will be two cts.
All letters requiring an answer, should, to ensure attention, enclose a Postage Stamp.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

One square (eight lines or less,) one insertion,	$ 50
do. do. each additional insertion,	25
One square one month without alteration	1.00
do. two months	2.00
do. three months,	2.75
do. six months,	5.00
no. one year without alteration,	8.00
For each alteration,	25

Extensive advertisements as per contract.
Quarterly and yearly advertisements to be paid at the end of each quarter.
Prepayment required for any term less than a quarter.

From the Deseret News.

Discourse by President Brigham Young, Tabernacle, February 18th, 1855.

READ BY ELDER THOMAS BULLOCK.

BRETHREN, SISTERS AND FRIENDS:

We are a people believing in the providences of God, and acknowledging his hand, in his dealings with us, from day to day.

We are a people whose rise, and progress from the beginning, has been the work of God our Heavenly Father, which in his wisdom he has seen proper to commence, for the re-establishment of his kingdom upon the earth.

Still further, we believe that the Lord has been preparing, that when he should bring forth his work, that when the set time should fully come, there might be a place upon his footstool where sufficient liberty of conscience should exist, that his saints might dwell in peace under the broad panoply of constitutional law and equal rights. In this view we consider that the men of the Revolution were inspired by the Almighty to throw off the shackles of the mother government, with her established religion. For this cause were Adams, Jefferson, Franklin, Washington, and a host of others inspired to deeds of resistance to the acts of the King of Great Britain, who might also have been led to those aggressive acts, for aught we know, to bring to pass the purposes of God in thus establishing a new government, upon a principle of greater freedom, a basis of self-government allowing the free exercise of religious worship.

It was the voice of the Lord inspiring all those worthy men who bore influence in those trying times, not only to go forth in battle, but to exercise wisdom in council, fortitude, courage and endurance in the tented field, as well as subsequently to form and adopt those wise and efficient measures which secured to themselves and succeeding generations the blessing of a free and independent government.

This government, so formed, has been blessed by the Almighty until she spreads her sails in every sea, and her power is felt in every land.

The American Government is second to none in the world in influence and power, and far before all others in liberal and free institutions. Under its benign influence the poor, down-trodden masses of the old world can find an asylum where they can enjoy the blessings of peace and freedom, no matter to what caste or religious sect they belong, or are disposed to favor, or whether they are disposed to favor any, or none at all. It was in this government, formed by men inspired of God, although at the time they knew it not, after it was firmly established in the seat of power and influence, where liberty of conscience and the free exercise of religious worship were a fundamental principle guaranteed in the Constitution, and interwoven with all the feelings, traditions and sympathies of the people, that the Lord sent forth his angel to reveal the truths of heaven as in times past, even as in ancient days. This should have been hailed as the greatest blessing which could have been bestowed upon any nation, kindred, tongue, or people. It should have been received with hearts of gratitude and gladness, praise and thanksgiving.

But as it was in the days of our Saviour, so was it in the advent of this new dispensation. It was not in accordance with the notions, traditions and preconceived ideas of the American people. The messenger did not come to an eminent divine of any of the so-called orthodoxy—he did not adopt their interpretation of the Holy Scriptures. The Lord did not come with the armies of heaven, in power and great glory nor send his messengers panoplied with aught else than the truth of heaven, to communicate to the meek, the lowly, the youth of humble origin, the sincere inquirer after the knowledge of God. But he did send his angel to this same obscure person, Joseph Smith, Jr., who afterwards became a Prophet, Seer and Revelator, and informed him that he should not join any of the religious sects of the day, for they were all wrong; that they were following the precepts of men instead of the Lord Jesus; that he had a work for him to perform, inasmuch as he should prove faithful before him.

No sooner was this made known and published abroad, and people began to listen and obey the heavenly summons, than opposition began to rage, and the people, even in this favored land, began to persecute their neighbors and friends for entertaining religious opinions differing from their own.

I pause now to ask, had not Joseph Smith a right to promulgate and establish a different, a new religion and form of worship in this government? Every one must admit he had. This right was always held sacred, for upon it was based the religious liberty of every citizen of the Republic. It was a privilege held sacred in the bosom of every class of people; no judge dared invade its holy precincts; no legislator nor governor ventured to obstruct the free exercise thereof. How then should it be esteemed an object worthy of persecution that Joseph Smith, the man called of God to perform a work in restoring the gospel of salvation unto the children of men and his followers, true believers in his divine mission, should attempt to exercise the same privilege held sacred by all others, of every name, nature and description, and equally so by them? Why should he and his followers be debarred the privilege of worshiping God according to the dictates of their consciences? Legally they cannot, and I will further state, that legally they have not. No! whenever the iron hand of oppression and persecution has fallen upon this people, our opposers have broken their own laws, set at defiance and trampled underfoot every principle of equal rights, justice and liberty found written in that rich legacy of our fathers, THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Whenever popular fury has been directed against us, no power in the government has been found potent enough to afford protection, and, what is still more astonishing, honorable enough to yield redress, nor has any effort succeeded in bringing to justice those individuals who had perpetrated such fearful crimes. No! The murderer, the assassin, the mid-day plunderer and highway robber roam unmolested, and mingle unquestioned in the society of the rulers of the land; they pass and re-pass as current coin, producing no jar in the sensibilities of refinement—no odium in the atmosphere in which they move.

I ask you, friends, how is this? Are not our religious sentiments as sacred to us as to any other portion of the community? And should it not be the duty, as well as the pride, of every American citizen to extend that provision of the Constitution to us which he claims for himself? And is not that sacred instrument invaded and broken as much in debarring and excluding this people from its privileges, rights and blessings, as it would be if your rights and privileges were thus invaded? No, gentlemen, we have broken no laws; our glorious Constitution guarantees unto us all that we claim.—Under its broad folds, in its obvious meaning and intents, we are safe, and can always rejoice in peace. All that we have ever claimed, or wish to, on the part of the government, is the just administration of the powers and privileges of the National Compact.

It is not our acts, neither our intentions, that the people or the government are afraid or complain of; but their own evil surmisings concerning us.

In our first settlement in Missouri, it was said by our enemies that we intended to tamper with the slaves, not that we had any idea of the kind, for such a thing never entered our minds. We knew that the children of Ham were to be the "servants of servants," and no power under heaven could hinder it, so long as the Lord should permit them to welter under the curse, and those were known to be our religious views concerning them. Yet the misrepresentation of our enemies found willing ears in those prejudiced against us, and we were driven from our homes in consequence of the fears of the people, and the prejudice which had been raised against us in consequence thereof.

Again, in Missouri, in the early part of our history, the fears of the people and government were aroused, because they, not we, said that it was our intention to tamper with the Indians, therefore we must not be allowed to exist in their vicinity; and again the alarm was sounded, and we were driven from our homes, plundered, mobbed, some killed, and all this not for any crime which we had committed, but for fear we might commit one.

Again, it was industriously circulated that we were going to declare our "independence," not that we had or intended to do so absurd a thing; yet anything, no matter how absurd, seemed sufficient excuse to startle the fears of the community, and they began to drive, plunder, rob, burn our houses and lay waste our fields, and this was called "Mormon disturbances," and the aid of the government was invoked to quell "Mormon insurrection," "Mormon troubles," and "Turbulent Mormons." And although it was found necessary, as they state, to drive us from Missouri and the frontiers, to prevent us from tampering with the slaves and Indians, yet it was found equally necessary, ten years afterwards, when we were a hundred to one at that time, to drive us from Nauvoo into the very midst of the Indians, as unworthy of any other society.

Fears of what we might do with the Indians had by this time subsided, and fears of something else that we might hereafter do, if left to remain in peace, and a desire to plunder accomplished our exodus from Illinois. Perhaps, however, in this last case our enemies might have entertained some fears that, if we were permitted to remain unmolested, the blood-thirsty assassins who killed our Beloved Prophet and Patriarch, Joseph and Hyrum, who were inhumanly massacred while reposing under the pledged faith of the State for their protection and safety, might not be permitted to remain undisturbed in their guilt.

As in the case of the Indians upon the frontier, this also was a false conclusion, for if ever a people would have been justified in redressing their own wrongs, and could have done so with impunity, it was at the time of this horrible murder. But they proved to the world, by their quiet and peaceable demeanor, that they had no such intention, but this was forgotten, and in less then a year and a half we were again assailed, our houses and grain stacks burned, and our brethren shot down in the glare of the light thereof, while attempting to save a pittance to drive starvation not from the doors, nor the tents, for there were none of either, but from the famishing hearts of their social circle—of their wives and children.

And again was the aid of the government invoked to quell the so-called "Mormon disturbances," and still we see the newspapers teeming with these and the like epithets, "Turbulent Mormons," "What shall be done with these turbulent Mormons?" is the cry from one end of the Union to the other. In the name of Heaven, what have we done to excite the fears of any people or government, that the sound of war and blood must eternally be kept ringing in our ears? I answer, nothing. It is the same as before, in the case of tampering with the slaves and Indians, a certain fearfulness that if we are not looked to, driven, plundered of our homes and possessions, slain and massacred as before, that we may do something, they have not yet, to my knowledge, defined precisely what.

Have not this people invariably evinced their friendly feelings, disposition and patriotism toward the government by every act and proof which can be given by any people?

Permit me to draw your attention, for a moment, to a few facts in relation to raising the battalion for the Mexican war. When the storm cloud of persecution lowered down upon us on every side, when every avenue was closed against us, our leaders treacherously betrayed and slain by the authorities of the government in which we lived, and no hope of relief could penetrate through the thick darkness and gloom which surrounded us on every side, no voice was raised in our behalf, and the General Government was silent to our appeals. When we had been insulted and abused all the day long by those in authority requiring us to give up our arms, and by every other act of insult and abuse which the prolific imagination of our enemies could devise to test, as they said, our patriotism, which requisitions, be it known, were always complied with on our part; and when we were finally compelled to flee for the preservation of our lives and the lives of our wives and children, to the wilderness, I ask had we not reason to feel that our enemies were in the ascendant? That even the government, by their silent acquiescence, were also in favor of our destruction? Had we not, I ask, some reason to consider them all, both the people and the government, alike our enemies?

And when, in addition to all this, and while fleeing from our enemies, another test of fidelity and patriotism was contrived by them for our destruction, and acquiesced in by the government (through the agency of a distinguished politician, who evidently sought and thought he had planned our overthrow and total annihilation), consisting of a requisition from the War Department to furnish a battalion of five hundred men to fight under their officers, and for them, in the war then existing with Mexico, I ask again, could we refrain from considering both people and government our most deadly foes? Look a moment at our situation, and the circumstances under which the requisition was made. We were migrating, we knew not whither, except that it was our intention to go beyond the reach of our enemies. We had no homes, save our wagons and tents, and no stores of provisions and clothing; but had to earn our daily bread by leaving our families in isolated locations for safety, and going among our enemies to labor. Were we not, even before this cruel requisition was made, unmercifully borne down by oppression and persecution past endurance by any other community? But under these trying circumstances we were required to turn out of our traveling camps five hundred of our most efficient men, leaving the old, the young, the women, upon the hands of the residue to take care of and support; and in case we refused to comply with so unreasonable a requirement, we were to be deemed enemies to the government, and fit only for the slaughter.

Look also at the proportion of the number required of us, compared with that of any other portion of the Republic. A requisition of only thirty thousand from a population of more than twenty millions was all that was wanted, and more than was furnished, amounting to only one person and a half to a thousand inhabitants. If all other circumstances had been equal, if we could have left our families in the enjoyment of peace, quietness and security in the houses from which we had been driven, our quota of an equitable requisition would not have exceeded four persons. Instead of this, five hundred must go, thirteen thousand per cent. above an equal ratio, even if all other things had been equal, but under the peculiar circumstances in which it was made comparison fails to demonstrate and reason itself totters beneath its enormity. And for whom were we to fight? As I have already shown, for those that we had every reason to believe were our most deadly foes. Could the government have expected our compliance therewith? Did they expect it? Did not our enemies believe that we would spurn, with becoming resentment and indignation, such an unhallowed proposition? And were they not prepared to make our rejection of it a pretext to inflame the government still more against us, and thereby accomplish their hellish purposes upon an innocent people, in their utter extinction? And how was this proposition received, and how was it responded to by this people? I went myself, in company with a few of my brethren, between one and two hundred miles along the several routes of travel, stopping at every little camp, using our influence to obtain volunteers, and on the day appointed for the rendezvous the required complement was made up; and this was all accomplished in about twenty days from the time that the requisition was made known.

To be Continued.

TERRA DEL FUEGO.

The N. O. Picayune publishes a very interesting letter, from an officer of the U. S. sloop of war Decatur, dated off the Straits of Majellan, February 16th, giving an account of some of his rambles while the ship was wind-bound there. His description of the island of Terra del Fuego contains some facts not generally known, which we subjoin:

With great labor and difficulty we scrambled up the mountain sides, which line the whole southern shore of these straits, and after ascending 3,500 feet, we came upon a plain of surpassing richness and beauty. Fertile fields, the greatest variety of fruit trees in full bearing, and signs of civilization and refinement meeting us on every side. We had never read any account of these people, and thinking this island was wholly deserted, except by a few miserable cannibalists and wild beasts, we had come well armed, and you can judge of our surprise. The inhabitants were utterly astonished at our appearance, but exhibited no signs of fear, nor any unfriendliness. Our dress amused them, and being the first white men ever seen by them, they imagined that we had come from their God, the Sun, on some peculiar errand of good. They are the noblest race I ever saw, the men all ranging from 6 feet to 6 3-4, well proportioned, very athletic, and straight as an arrow. The women were among the most perfect models for beauty ever formed, averaging five feet high, very plump, with small feet and hands, and with jet black eyes that take you by storm. We surrendered at discretion and remained two weeks with this strange people.

They number about three thousand men, women and children, and I was assured the population had not varied two hundred, as they prove by their traditions, for immemorable ages. As the aged grow feeble, they are left to die, and if the children multiply too rapidly, they are sacrificed by the priests. This order comprises about one-tenth of the population, and what the ancient Grecians called "Gymnosophists." They are all of one peculiar race; neither will they admit a stranger into their order. They live, for the most part, near the beautiful stream called Tanuhan, which takes its rise in the mountains, passes through the magnificent valley of Leuvu, and empties into the Atlantic at the extreme southwestern point of the island.

This residence is chosen for the sake of their frequent purifications. Their diet consists of milk curdled with sour herbs. They eat apples, rice, and all fruits and vegetables, esteeming it the height of impiety to taste anything that has life. They live in little huts or cottages, each one by himself, avoiding company and discourse, employing all their time in contemplation, and their religious duties.—They esteem this life but a necessary dispensation of nature, which they voluntarily undergo as a penance, evidently thirsting after the dissolution of their bodies, and firmly believing that the soul, at death, is released from its prison, and launches forth into perfect liberty and happiness. Therefore, they are always cheerfully disposed to die, bewailing those that are alive, and celebrating the funerals of the dead with joyful solemnities and triumph.

FROM SALT LAKE.

Correspondence of the Missouri Republican.

GREAT S. L. CITY, March 1, 1855.

MR. EDITOR:—Presuming that a letter from these distant regions and interesting sections of our country, from a disinterested, unprejudiced and extensive traveler, would afford gratification to some of your many readers, I am induced to give the impression on my mind during a sojourn of five months in this city.

As is the case with nine-tenths of the citizens in the States, I was unaquainted with the true character of the people who made these vallies their home, and arrived here unprejudiced, 'tis true, but in total ignorance of them, socially and politically. Five months' observation and close study, have, however, enabled me to form an opinion highly favorable to them, and gratifying to myself.

As a community they are a peaceable and law abiding people, sound to the core on all constitutional questions, and would spend the last drop of blood in their veins to sustain the constitution of their country, for which their fathers bled and died, for they hold it to be the bulwark of their temporal salvation.

Through persecution they were driven from the protection of the flag of their country into this far off wilderness, where no other people would have dreamed of settling, and they naturally think it hard, that people, who would not let them live in peace among them, should intrude themselves here, and introduce habits of dissipation and licentiousness to corrupt their youth. Their firm determination to prevent this, has offended certain individuals and officials who are here only for a season, and in their correspondence they will, no doubt, make representations calculated to prejudice the people at home still more against them, for some of them have felt themselves alluded to when a certain class have been chastised from the pulpit, for offences against morality. On the subject of one of their "peculiar institutions," I have nothing to say, for I do not conceive it concerns me or the world at large. I refer to polygamy.

Now for a political paragraph. I premise that a Territory, as is admitted in the case of Oregon and now claimed by Nebraska has a right to select its own rulers among its own citizens, and that this privelege ought to be granted to them by the parent government.

Convinced of the justice of this principle, I deem it impolitic for the Executive to appoint an individual to an office in a Territory so far distant and isolated as Utah is, in opposition to the petition and expressed wishes of its citizens. Nevertheless, if the President is determined to senn out rulers selected from a host of aspirants for office, and they will conform to the constitution, laws and regulations adopted by the people for the government of their Territory, which all must admit they have a right to adopt, and to be good and virtuous citizens, they will be sustained in all their constitutional acts by the authorities of the church.

The nomination of Col. Steptoe for Governor of Utah is the most judicious one the Executive could have made, without selecting the man of the people's choice. He is in all the relations of life a gentleman, of retiring habits, and does not conceive that he, nor any other temporary sojourner, has a right to interfere with the domestic regulations which a community of people choose to adopt; and should he accept the nomination, he will be sustained by Brigham Young and the heads of the church in the execution of all his constitutional duties.

The selection of Judge Kinney for Chief Justice is also a good one. He possesses an amiable and kind heart, and his upright conduct and high-toned character have gained for him the respect and regard of all; and he avails himself of every suitable occasion to bear his testimony to the virtue and purity of these people as a community, even to declaring that there is less immorality, drunkenness, and licentiousness prevailing here than in any other place he has ever lived, and it is true. The idea advanced by the editors of some of the Eastern papers, that these people are to be governed only by military force, is ridiculous and farcical in the extreme, and no one deprecates such newspaper paragraphs more than Col. Steptoe. They go to prove the prejudice and ignorance of these writers in every thing connected with these people, and to excite feelings of animosity in the minds of the community at large against them. VOYAGEUR.

Area of the States and Territories.

Very few of our people, we suspect, have any definite idea of the extent of our country—especially of the new territories which have been recently organized. In order to place before our readers a condensed view of the size of the States and Territories which at present compose this mighty confederacy, we give the following statement from the last census report. The area of the United States and Territories is 2,036,166 square miles. The following table, taken from that document, but transposed so as to give each its proper rank, shows the area of each State and Territory:

Nebraska Territory	335,882
Utah Territory	209,170
Texas	237,504
New Mexico Territory	207,000
Oregon Territory	185,030
Minnesota Territory	166,025
California	155,980
Washington Territory	123,022
Kansas	114,798
Indian Territory, Kansas	71,127
Missouri	67,380
Virginia	61,352
Florida	59,268
Georgia	58,000
Michigan	56,243
Illinois	55,405
Wisconsin	53,925
Arkansas	52,196
Iowa	50,915
Alabama	50,722
North Carolina	40,704
Mississippi	47,156
New York	47,000
Pennsylvania	46,000
Tennessee	46,600
Ohio	39,944
Kentucky	37,680
Indiana	33,809
Maine	21,756
South Carolina	29,385
Maryland	11,124
Vermont	10,212
New Hampshire	9,280
New Jersey	8,310
Massachusetts	7,800
Connecticut	4,674
Delaware	2,120
Rhode Island	1,306
District of Columbia	60

The Nebraska Territory is large enough to cut up into seven States of the size of New York, and leave a surplus of territory large enough for a State the size of Connecticut. Kansas Territory has an area sufficient to make two States the size of Ohio, and one the size of Indiana. Texas will make four States the size of Alabama, and one the size of Indiana; and California has sufficient area to convert into sixteen States the size of New Hampshire, and have a surplus to make one about the size of the State of Massachusetts.

VAIN glory blossoms, but never bears.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,

SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer, address box 488.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor, 102 Nassau st., cor. of Ann.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.
Wm. Cazier, Nephi City.
S. B Hoyt, Fillmore City, U. Territory.

DEMON OF THE BLACK POWER.

Our readers will find an article on the fourth page of this paper under the above caption, which we copy from the "Herald of Freedom." We do not endorse it en tout, but we consider it worthy of some consideration, as an illustration of the spirit of the times; being neither Abolitionists nor pro-Slavery men we have no interest in the subject whatever except in its bearing upon the general interests of our great Confederation, and the kingdom of God. We leave it to our readers for their own judgment.

Of all the damning delusions that have disgraced the earth and its inhabitants, none has exerted so great an influence, or produced so many melancholy and disastrous consequences, as the mania for the blood of Prophets and Saints; no matter how exalted the real character and mission of the Prophet, nor how great the consequences involved in his predictions. It has always been sufficient reason for a deranged world, that a man be a Prophet, and that he dares to denounce the corruptions and iniquity of the kingdoms of this world, and dares, moreover, to advocate the principles, administer the ordinances, and otherwise labor to establish the kingdom of God. If the prince of this world be but sure a Prophet is born, and is ordained of heaven to preach righteousness, and establish the kingdom of God upon the earth, he ceases not to labor day nor night until all the hireling priests, editors, judges, magistrates, and other dignitaries in his kingdom are fully inspired with the importance of closing the Prophet's mouth and of sheding his blood, and of all those who dare receive his revelations.

By this policy his Satanic Majesty has succeeded in enlisting the sympathies and services of the rulers, govenors, judges, lawyers, parsons, and Christians of the 19th century, against the Prophet Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum, and the Latter-day Saints. This spirit, indeed, has reigned in the bosoms of mankind in all ages; no species of delusion and fanaticism has been so generally imbibed and universally developed as this. 'Tis a foul blot on every page of the worlds history. It has filled the earth with blood and the heavens with tears, and has caused even the sun to clothe itself with blackness, and all creation to groan and mourn because of it.

No sooner did the Prophet Abel commence his ministry, by officiating in the ordinances of the kingdom of God, and by prophecying in the name of the Lord, than the accursed fury of his rebellious brother was developed, which robbed our illustrious father of a son, and deprived the young world of a Prophet, and brought an everlasting curse upon the head of the base murderer.

Cain had no precedent to control or govern him in his execution of the tragic deed, he had therefore to do it at hazard and risk the consequences, the earth was still in its virginity, it still bloomed in all its pristine loveliness and beauty, when with heart inspired by hellish hate and deadly malice, the murderous arm was raised against the Lord's anointed, whose righteous blood was shed to appease the morbid appetite of his rebel brother, and to satisfy the demands of his liege master, the devil.

The same spirit of unqualified hatred towards Prophets and the spirit of revelation then displayed, and the deadly policy then adopted to rid the world of their presence, has prevailed with the same reckless fury in every subsequent generation, when Prophets have trod the earth. If the old Prophets could be individually questioned upon the subject, they would all bear the same testimony concerning the damning spirit of popular delusion of which we write. It stoned Stephen, beheaded John, crucified Jesus, murdered Joseph and Hyrum, and one of the last damning acts was the expatriation of the Prophets and Saints from Nauvoo.

They could not climb up unto heaven and hurl God from his throne, and thus stop the stream of revelation, or they would have done it; neither could they tar and feather, mob or murder the angelic messengers and stop its course through their agency; neither could they seize and destroy the holy spirit, and by this means cut off the communication from God to man. The holy spirit is so ductile they cannot hold it, and it is so exclusive they cannot purchase it. They have assayed to climb up to Heaven, mob the angels, purchase the Holy Ghost, and blot out of existence the kingdom of God; but they have only succeeded in manifesting their pusillanimity, stupidity and folly.

It seems strange and marvellous that men apparently intelligent, in consideration of every other subject, should be so infatuated, duped and gulled by false and specious appearances upon so important a subject as the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the kingdom of God; but so it is, and no sooner is the devil's tocsin sounded than they shoulder arms, join his ranks, and under his commands rush madly forward against the Lord's anointed, and are overwhelmed by flood, consumed by fire, emaciated with disease, or otherwise arrested by the messenger of death, and sent down to hell, and those who see them will narrowly look upon them and will say how are the mighty fallen! These are they who controled societies, armies and nations, who cried crucify him, crucify him, blasphemy, false Prophet, Mormonism, polygamy, but alas they are brought low even to the sides of the pit—their glory has departed from them, and they now lay in torment, and must perish in their shame.

DEPARTURE FOR THE PLAINS.

On Monday evening, the 21st inst., about three hundred and fifty souls of Saints, left this city on board the Equinox bound for Atchison, in charge of Elder William Glover. Elders' William Pitt, Chas. Smith, Benjamin Brown, Elias Gardner, N. T. Guyman, M. G. McMullen, John Mayer, S. H. Earl, O. M. Duell, James F. Bell, J. W. Coward, Joseph Hall, and Daniel Cavern, have all left by this boat. These brethren have held important and responsible Missions in Europe under the Presidency of Elder F. D. Richards, having faithfully executed their duties, and honored the trust imposed in them. They are returning home to Zion with Bro. Richard's approbation, counsel and blessing, and the blessings of many thousands of faithful Saints upon their heads. We may mention also Elders' Alred, Pace, Secrist, Colburn, and Riser, who also share liberally in the good feelings, confidence and blessings of their brethren; and are now wending their way with joyful hearts, to their peaceful homes in the west.

It is a source of unbounded pleasure to us, to shake hands with our faithful brethren, after their long absence on missions, to the dark and benighted nations of the earth; where they have suffered bonds and imprisonments, and every indignity that could be offerred them, because of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. We hail their return with pleasure and satisfaction and pray God the Eternal Father to conduct them in safety to the blest home of the Saints, with all those who love truth and righteousness.

Elder Seth M. Blair has recently returned from Texas with a faithful band of brethren. He has been out on his mission about twelve months—has done a good work and is returning home to Zion with our approval and blessing, and has the satisfaction and honor of taking many of his sheaves with him. He has been engaged for several days purchasing goods for himself and company, and is now preparing to join his brethren at Atchison, and will there make arrangements to lead them home to Zion.

Health of the Camp—Elder Gregory's Death.

By letters received from Elder Richard Ballantyne dated Atchison May 13th we learn that general good health prevails in the camp of Zion, and although a few have been taken off by cholera, the health of the camp in general is said to be excellent for which we feel truly greatful to our Father and our God.

Among those few who have fallen in the destroyers embrace at the camp is Elder Gregory from Salt Lake City who was returning from the Eastern States, where he had been to transact some private business, having counsel from the Presidency to preach the gospel by the way. He passed through this city a few weeks ago, spent a few days with us, when we learned that his health had been poor from the time he left his mountain home. He died at Atchison on Sunday, 7 o'clock P. M. 13th May 1855, about one week previous he had a severe attack of cholera, but was recovering from it, until the day preceding his death when he grew worse, and was soon taken from us. He felt from the beginning of his illness that he would not recover, and committed the care of his carriage and other property to Elder James McGaw with a request that his body should be carried to the Valley.

Brother Gregory was a true friend and a faithful Saint, his career was not so dashing and brilliant as that of some of the Elders, but his course was undeviating, and his faith unwavering, and he died with a sure and certain hope of a resurrection to eternal life. This will be a severe despensation of providence to his family in the mountains with whose bereavement we sincerely sympathise.

EQUINOX.—The steamer Equinox arrived from Pittsburgh yesterday, loaded with nails, lumber and Mormons. Of the latter she had about 300 packages.—[Republican.

It is thought from the sturdy appearance and inflexible character of the latter, that they will prove the hardest kind of nails to drive, and it might prove a dangerous experiment even to strike them, for it is found by past observation, that every blow struck, rebounds with redoubled force upon the head of the striker. We therefore consider it, tout ensemble, a rich cargo, and have forwarded the most valuable portion of it direct to Salt Lake City where such material is said to be in constant demand.

THE S. Curling arrived at New York on Tuesday May 22nd with about 580 souls of Saints and may be expected at this city the latter end of next week.

The company of the spip Chimborazo will probably arrive about the same time.

On Sunday last religious worship was conducted at our Church on Washington avenue in four different Languages, English, French, German and Danish. Three services were held at the same time in seperate departments.

A cotemporary puts the tobacco question into the following shape:

"Suppose a tobacco chewer is addicted to the habit of chewing tobacco fifty years of his life, and that each day of that time he consumes two inches solid plug, it amounts to six thousand four hundred and seventy-five feet, making nearly one mile and a quarter in length of solid tobacco, half an inch thick and two inches broad. Now, what would the young beginner think if he had the whole amount stretched out before him, and were told that to chew it would be one of the exercises of his life, and also it would tax his income to the amount of two thousand and ninety-four dollars.

Correspondence.

Interesting Correspondence from F. D. Richards.

Amount of the last five months emigration—The prospective difficulties in the Shipping department—Dedication of the new office—Review of the Foreign Mission—A new German Representative by Elder Tyler, in Switzerland—The severe weather and its effects upon the Markets.

36 ISLINGTON, LIVERPOOL, May, 4, 1855.

ELDER ERASTUS SNOW:

Dear Brother—Having got through the thickest of our emigration business for the present, I embrace this opportunity to drop you a line, about matters on this hemisphere.

Between November 24, 1854, and April 26, '55, I shipped about 3,650 souls of Saints from the European missions, of whom 1,126 were emigrated wholly, or in part, by the perpetual emigrantig fund, about 600 intended to go through to the Valley on their own means, the remainder purposed to stay at New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, St. Louis, or what other point might seem most desirable, till they could realize sufficient means to prosecute their pilgrimage to the favored valley of the west, at present the only satisfactory resting place for the pure in heart. The "Star," gives the names of the vessels, and the dates of sailing. Elder J. W. Coward sailed on the Atlantic, for New York, April 23. Up to the present, I have heard nothing of the Siddons, which left Liverpool for Philadelphia, February 27.

Although the entire number of Saints named is something considerable, yet it is but half a tithe of the souls pertaining to the Saints in Europe, who are crying to the Lord night and day, with tears and supplications, for the high privilege of quitting their native lands with their faces Zionwards, and who see not the means whereby they may escape, though their faith is strong, that the desire of their hearts will be given in due time of the Lord. The present aspect of national affairs tends to stir the Saints up to a realization of their position, urging them to feel more closely after the Lord, that peradventure the time of their deliverance may not be delayed.

The new American emigration act, requiring superior accommodation for emigrants, and imposing greater responsibilities on captains, coming into operation about this time in British ports, will tend to increase the rate of passage, across the Atlantic henceforth, Should the Bill now before the British Parliament, which is to come up this month for its final reading, become law, still greater difficulties will be raised in the emigration of the poor. The consequence will naturally be that the power and wisdom of the Almighty will be manifested more in the gathering of the Saints, and the power of the Priesthood, and the institutions of Zion will be magnified in the eyes of the nations, whilst their own weakness will become daily more apparent.

On April 28, I removed to my present address. It is a pleasant place, and all about the office feel in the best spirits about the removal. On April 18, about twenty of the Valley Elders happening to be in Liverpool, through emigration or other business, they assembled with me at the office, to dedicate it to the service of the Lord, as a place in which to transact the general business of the European missions, and to ask Him to bless and sanctify it for that purpose. All felt well during the meeting, the Spirit of the Lord being richly bestowed upon us.

The work throughout the British Isles seems to be moving vigorously, in many places taking a fresh start. The energy and wisdom of Elders Ferguson and McAlister, under the blessing of the Lord, are causing things to look up in the Emerald Isle.—In the French mission the work takes its time, but I trust that under energetic direction of Elder W. C. Dunbar, a new impetus will be given. About seventy souls have emigrated from the Channel Islands this season, and are now en route for Utah. In Scandinavia the truth moves along with increasing power. In switzerland a good work is being done. In the French cantons matters are rather dull, but in four German Cantons the work has attained a cheering hold, though the foreign elders experience much difficulty and danger in spreading the truth. The native Elders are doing all they can to roll the work, and the Lord blesses them abundantly with the Holy Spirit, which falls also on the people, and causes them to hang on the lips of the elders as for words of life. Elder William Budge arrived at Liverpool from his mission April 28. Elder Daniel Tyler, at Geneva, has commenced a monthly periodical in German, entitled Der Darstellen der Heiligen der letzten Tage, (The Latter-day-Saints' Representer.) It is the same size as the Zions Panier. It is cheering to hear of the press getting into active operation, in the various parts of the globe, for the publication of the principles of righteousness and eternal life. With Elder P. P. Pratt's Mormon Herald in California, there are now issuing four periodicals of the church in the western world, and seven in the eastern. May their number continue to increase from henceforth, until the spiritual horizon of the whole world is lighted up with one resplendant blaze of celestial light, which shall brighten the path of the pure, and compel the vile to seek refuge in the remote dens and caves of the earth, as noxious insects flee in all directions when a ray of daylight penetrates their dark abodes.

In India the work moves slowly, but the Saints are filled with the spirit of the gathering. In Australasia and at the Cape of Good Hope the gathering moves powerfully on the Saints, and things are onward. I expect that Elder Jesse Haven, from the last named mission, is on his way to England.

Till yesterday morning we had a lengthy spell of fine dry weather, but yesterday was a very dull wet day, with a little snow and sleet about midday.—This morning we had a hoar frost, very severe for this time of year, the roads being like iron notwithstanding the amount of wet that fell yesterday. Today, about noon, the snow for a few minutes was fighting as furiously in the air as though it was midwinter. Altogether we have had a very cold and late spring, which makes the markets rise, and vegetables scarce and dear, all telling with serious effect on the poor. The trees and hedges are but just putting on their liveries of green, they will be some time before they appear in full dress. This is a very cold day.

I have just returned with Elder Spencer, from a call at brother Tennants at Hawkswitch. His health is very feeble, and has been most of the past winter. I think he intends to emigrate next season.

I must close wishing you the aid of the Holy Spirit, and of the angels in performing your arduous duties, in presiding, publishing, and in emigrating the Saints, that you may have joy in all your labors and be satisfied with the goodness of God unto you.

Wishing you may soon feel the burden of emigration roll off from yon as I now do from me, I continue to share with you the care responsibility, and sympathy for our poor brethren as,

Your Fellow Servant,

F. D. RICHARDS.

The 'Juventa's' Company of Saints—Interesting Items of Voyage from Liverpool to St. Louis.

May the 10th, 1855.

MR. ERASTUS SNOW:

Dear Brother—It is deemed wisdom that I should give you a synopsis of our voyage from Liverpool to this place. On the evening of the 29th of March, President F. D. Richards called a Council of the Pastors and Presidents of Conferences, at 15 Wilton street, and after some necessary and useful instructions, appointed Elder Wm. Glover to preside over the company; the Pastors and Presidents were likewise appointed as his counsellors.

We weighed anchor on the 31st, and put out into the river, when President Richards came on board and addressed the Saints, and blessed us in the name of the Lord, and promised that inasmuch as we would be faithful, we should have a safe and speedy passage across the sea. He then left the vessel with the prayers and gratitude of his brethren and sisters. As he departed the Saints gave three hearty cheers.

On Sunday, April 1st, a council was called, and on motion of Elder Glover, it was resolved that the company should be divided into 12 wards, and the following brethren to preside over them: Elders, N. T. Guyman, Wm. Pitt, Chas. Smith, Benj. Brown, Daniel Cavern, W. G. McMullen, John Mayer, S. H. Earl, Joseph Hall, James F. Bell, Charles A. Harper, and Geo. Morgan. These brethrens' duties were to see that prayer meetings were held morning and evening in each ward—that the deck of the ship were cleaned each day—that the Saints in each ward get their provisions and water daily, and to attend to the wants of the Saints—their good health, &c.

On the 6th of April, a Conference was held and all the authorities of the Church were presented and sustained in their order. Eld. E. Gardner was appointed Captain of the guard, and Patrick Lynch, Clerk of the Conference. There were represented twelve branches, including nine Seventies, one High Priest, sixty-one Elders, thirty-one Priests, twenty-one Teachers, and fourteen Deacons; a total of three hundred and seventy-five. Much instructiou was given by President Glover and other Elders upon all that concerned the comfort of the Saints. It was a day of rejoicing to us, in commemorating the anniversary of the organization of the kingdom of God in the last days. We held meetings twice each Sabbath, when the weather permitted, and administered the sacrament to all the Saints, who assembled for the purpose on the main deck. If any were sick it was carried to them in their births. No discord marred the peace of the Elders; all were united to a man; and when counsel was given upon any subject by President Glover, each man sought to his utermost to carry it out. The result was, that general peace good order, and good health prevailed amongst the Saints. The sickness was so little that it is scarcely worth naming. We had no deaths. We had four marriages and two births on board. The watchfullness and the paternal solicitude of Elder Glover, both by day and night for the happiness of the Saints is beyond all commendation. The provisions served out to us, were abundant and of a superior quality which calls forth our gratitude to our God, and to brother F. D. Richards.

One circumstace which caused a little excitement, took place on the 15th of April. There were two cooks in the passengers galley, who were appointed by the Captain. One of them, without provocation, but because he was full of spite and malice, took up some boilng water and threw it around, which scalded Elder Thomas Hunt in the face severely. It also scalded the other cook. Elder H. was led to his birth—the doctor was prompt in his attendance—the ordinance of the church was administered and our brother in a short time was healed. The offender received from the mate, a sound thrashing, and was then put in irons. Both he and the other cook was afterwards dismissed from the galley, and the Saints, as they should do, had it all their own way. On the 21st and 22nd we encountered a very severe gale—all sail that could be was reefed, and the rest was cut into shreds; but while our good ship was tossing and rolling upon the mighty deep, peace reigned in the hearts of the Saints, and songs of praise and prayer ascended from them to their heavenly Father. At this stage of our journey a child was born, and was named Juventa Tempest.

The hand of God has been over us for good, ever since we left England, in fulfilment of the promises of of the servant of the Lord, and after a splenid passage of thirty-four days, we all landed safe and in good health in Philadelphia, May 6th. The Dr. who inspected, said our decks smelled as sweet as his sitting room. A vote of thanks was given to Capt. Alfred Watts, the officers and surgeon for their kindnes to us. On our arrival at Philadelphia, we were kindly recieved by Elders John Taylor and J. S. Fulmer, and provided with food and lodgings. On May 8th we were furnished with a train of cars and started for Pittsburgh, and arrived there on the 10th. At Columbia through the carelessness of the brakeman, two trains came in collision, shattering to atoms several cars; but through the mercy of God the Saints all escaped from the danger. On the 10th we embarked on board the Steamer Equinox, and arrived in St. Louis in good health, on the 17th instant.

We are thankful to our Father in heaven for all mercies towards us, and solicit a continuation of His spirit to enable us to do His will, till the redemption of Zion is fully wrought out, and the way of righteousness established in the earth.

I remain your brother in the Gospel.

WILLIAM GLOVER.

Per JOSEPH HALL.

From the Deseret News.

DESERET PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

MR. EDITOR:—Sir—I have the pleasure to inform you that a society by the above name has been organized in this city, consisting already of upwards of fifty members, whose object is, the cultivation of all kinds of VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

By the counsel of President Brigham Young, Br. James Smithers, the respected leader of the Tabernacle Choir is appointed President of the society, and Conductor of the music. He will be assisted by Br. John M. Jones as leader of the instrumental department.

It is needless for me to expatiate on the advantages of such an organization, confined as it is to no band or party but intended to combine the musical talent of the city, and to promote the love and study of harmony throughout the Territory.

I wish through you to inform our brethren and sisters preparing to come from Europe and the Eastern States and who feel an interest in the objects of this society, as to what kind of music we are most in want of, so that it may be a little guide to them in their selection, which they can either donate or loan to the society on their arrival here.

We are much in want of the Oratorios of Handel, Haydn, Mendelssohn, &c.; the Masses of Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven &c., and new works of merit; the whole with full orchestral accompaniments in seperate parts, and as much as possible with singing copies in seperate parts. We also want the best Overtures, Simphonies, and Dancing Music for a full orchestra; together with Quartets, Trios, Duets, Solos, Glees, Songs, &c.

We shall also be glad if our musical brethren and sisters will report themselves to this society on their arrival here. I remain your brother in the kingdom,

JONATHAN GRIMSHAW,
Secretary of Des. Phil. Society.

FOR THE LUMINARY.

THE MORMONS AND THEIR DESTINY.

There must either be no Mormons among us or we must all be Mormons. There is no way out of the labyrinth but over the corpse of Mormondom, or over the corpse of Christianity. Sooner or later the conflict must come. We must put them down or they must put us down. This may seem ridiculous at present, when a company of infantry could on a pinch set Deseret to rights."—N. Y. Herald, Feb. 14. Passing strange is such language, as the foregoing, coming from one of the most popular Editors of the 19th century, and avowing himself to be on the side of Christianity as appears from the phrase put us down. Now Mr. Bennett, a few words for your consideration. You call yourself a Christian in the forgoing article. Well, you sir, are such a christian as often straddles the throne of tyrants and despots. Mormonism has risen from poverty and obloquy with countless thousands to one against it. Editors have pounced upon it. Priests have fulminated their unsparing wrath against it. The allies of all christendom have barked and hooted and snapped and bit at it. Still it has triumphed through faith and passive endurance. Such is the grandeur and purity of its doctrines, that it conquers without the use of a particle of Christian armor.—Poor christianity is becoming desperate—very sick like Ammon was because he couldn't defile his sister, Tamar—don't know what to do—her long rifles and dreadful shells don't accomplish anything. Occasionally, she vomits awfully black-looking matter, and when she purges, few can stomach her. At length Joseph says, I know what will cure this dysentery, gripes and black vomit, that is destroying christianity—poor creature! what a pity to see her die, and become a foul corpse, when a company of infantry could upon a pinch, provide an ample remedy, by killing off the Mormons in Deseret. Aye, Mr. Bennett, the old adage is true, that murder will out. The murder that is in your heart has come out in several articles and not least on the 14th of Feb. last, then, it came to light through your paper. Quite bold! Quite inventive! A company of Infantry could set Deseret to rights! Aye, we see! But Mr. Bennett let me tell you, that you are not the original discoverer and inventor of such signal remedy, against the diseases of christianity, viz: killing the Saints of God. Don't lay any claim to a patent right yet, till older claimants have filed their plea of priority of invention. Go, now Mr. Bennett to the records of one Shushan, the Palace in the days of one king Ahasuerus, and you will find that a certain ingenius man by the name of Haman, invented the same sort of instrument that you speak of. Read it in the Book of Esther. It was a convenient instrument for committing murder, precisely like the one named in your article, not difference enough to authorise you to get a new patent. But you need not go so far back to search records; stop in Palestine a bit, look over the inventions of one Herod Agrippa, a very notable christian king of your own denomination and belief. He, sir, has a much better claim to originality of discovery than you, (a pusillanimous impostor) can even pretend to have. He, sir, suggested long before you was born, that the only way to stop the progress of righteousness, was not to use the lame weapons of argument and moral suasion in order to effect the object; but a much more summary way—nip them in the bud. Kill every male child under two years old, so that you make sure that the Mormon Jesus is among the number. But these inventions are not confined to your own denomination of Christians.—One Nero, an artful and daring king who did not cloak his black heart and hellish designs in any such garb of Christian profession as you hypocritically wear; he, sir, used the same sort of instrumentality that you recommend, when he set fire to the City of Rome, in order to burn the same sort of people that your company of Infantry would destroy. He did under the garb of a heathen, what you would do under the cloak of Christianity. He did under the bold front of civil despotism what you would do by the same spirit under the mask of Republicanism. He indeed was a despot, and so are you. He acted boldly, but you are both a coward and a hypocrite. He used no mask, but you skulk behind christianity and even pretend to republican toleration and freedom of conscience, and freedom of worship. You profess the same spirit of murder, which dwelt in the bosom of Herod, Haman, and Boggs, and your article proves that you would exert it too, if you possessed the power. Your ambition seems to lead you to aspire to a blood relationship with Pharaoh of Egypt, and to gain notoriety by endeavoring to egg on a war of extermination against an innocent law abiding and God-serving people. Peradventure you may live to see your bloody designs attempted to be carried out, by sending a company of Infantry to destroy the peaceful citizens of Utah. If so, you will make sure of signal notoriety, because your widely circulated paper will contribute many shares to the murderous stock, raised in order to effect the butchery.

You may also find a good yoke fellow of considerable capital in your line, in the Editor of the Charleston Mercury, and a few other distinguished Pharisees, but let me tell you that if you think to destroy the young child, Mormonism, it may soon be said of you and your fellow murderers, that they are dead who sought the young child's life, and Ichabod will be written upon your glory, and shame and everlasting contempt will inscribe the frontlet of your habitation. Once put your hand upon Utah in order to destroy Mormonism, and lo! it has fled into Egypt. When haughty Pharaoh put forth his hand against the Hebrews' to destroy their male issue, lo! the germ of Iserael was not there. The ark among the bulrushes secreted the germ of Mormonism. Mormonism is not confined to Utah. — Utah contains but a handful of the precious seed. Many other lands contain faithful branches of the same great root. Will you compel us to turn to other lands for a home. Then after one short month's notice that great gathering that now swarms the Eastern and Western States, as well as Utah and the Pacific coast, resembling clouds and doves in their flight, may be made to converge to the wilderness of the Amazon or some other equally inviting region where the oppressor's rod has never lacerated the honest fugitive from oppression. The few that a company of Infantry would murder in Utah, would not impede the progress of Mormonism so much as one day, no, not an hour even. It would grow with accelerated strength and freshness. Mormonism may commit suicide but its gentile enemies alone can never destroy it. So, Mr. Bennett, do thyself no harm, if the earth does quake and prison walls totter, and poor culprits like yourself are afraid that you will have to see your idol Christianity a doleful corpse, do thyself no harm. Mormons are all calm and ready to baptize even you into repentance, if you don't go too far and shed innocent blood, for which there is no forgiveness in this world, nor the world to come. Cease your fillibustering against Mormonism and lay out no money to hire a company of Infantry, to kill Saints in Utah, better use expense to buy a mourning weed to wear to the funeral of your Christianity. Its wounds are mortal, and die she must. Don't disturb her dying groans by offering to her a vain hope, arising from a company of Infantry. And stand by your own testimony in the same article, that she killed herself by her own criminations, and family feuds. Any rational Jury of inquest would revive your testimony in this case and render a verdict accordingly. "Chistianity found dead on the night of the 19th century. Come to its end by suicide. J. G. Bennett, and other Pharisean Editors, duly sworn."

You say that you must put Mormonism down or it will put you down. You must make a corpse of it or it will make a corpse of you. You accidentally tell us how and what way Mormonism is to be put down. It is at the point of the bayonet and with powder and ball. (You shouldn't have blabbed it yet, however,) so, said your blood relations when they murdered Joseph and Hiram Smith in Carthage jail. Your Chistianity, Mr. Bennett, begins to show its nativism. It was conceived in hell and bor murder. Cain was the first Patriarch in the earthly line of your Christianity. From him it made a bloody trail, through every generation of prophets, and spent the acme of its fury upon the Son of God, and the Apostles of Palestine; and from that time to the present its history is a round of suicidel acts against itself, criminations, and massacres between Catholics and Protestants, Jews and Barbarians. Now, you propose to unite Herod and Pilate for a momentary and specific purpose, and accordingly to cease for a season all your family feuds and murders in order to make one desperate deathhug against Mormonism — the infant kingdom spoken of by Daniel the Prophet. You say the conflict must come. Don't you perceive, Sir, that the very spirit of your article, and that of kindred Editors and preachers is the spirit of rank unblushing murder; and has its parents in no better men than Cain, Herod, and Thomas Ford. If a tree is known by its fruits, then we know perfectly well what tree you sprung from, and also all other men who give the silent nod of approbation to your murderous scheme of sending troops to murder Mormons. If the mormons had ever violated the first law of the Bible or the law of the United States or of the Constitution of the United States, you would then not have been so destitute of a shadow of a pretext for your bloody article. Now, sir, if the public journals of the United States are not sufficiently blotted with accounts of murders, in order to satisfy your tragic propensities, then raise up and organize a band of soldiers for the special purpose of murdering the people of Utah — the most loyal, patriotic, and peaceable citizens that ever trod the soil of Columbia. No doubt your feelings are intense, when you see Mormonism outshining in wisdom, righteousness and unity all your scabby marred up Christendom that is dying like an old pimp from the natural effects of her lewd and abominable conduct, with the blood of the Saints on her raiment. No doubt you feel bad—you feel a little of all ways as any other criminal naturally would, who can't help himself. Your feelings may be summed up in the expression of a certain other personage in a very awkward fix, who could only give vent by saying he felt — damn it. But, sir, if the principles of your christianity necessitate you to commit murder as a matter of long habit, or an article of Church discipline, in order to take rank with the leaders of St. Bartholomew and other eminent Christians. Perhaps you will take a more circutious aim than to avow openly your murderous designs. First, provoke a quarrel if possible — send a needless soldiery in time of peace to debauch virtuous women — or take Brigham Young to Washington under pretext of treason, and while in the officers charge on the way to trial, let him be very unexpectedly assassinated — or if his friends rescue him from such an anticipated doom, then raise a hue and cry, and get every lying Editor, to publish, and every bigot to swallow the excitement and fan the flame, and order some Quixotic General to recruit some two hundred thousand troops with Napoleon speed and repair to Utah forthwith and write Mene, Tekel, &c., over the whole great Basin. Don't despair of finding some expedient by which you can kick up a row with the Mormons. — Familiar Spirits and wizzards are becoming accessible, seeing you don't believe in the revelations of the one Great Eternal Spirit, through the prophets. Kick up a row fairly or plausible if you can — but kick up a row.

O. S.

To his Excellency Franklin Pierce, President of the United States.

Your Petitioners would respectfully represent that, whereas, Gov. Brigham Young possesses the entire confidence of the people of this Territory, without distinction of party or sect; and from personal acquaintance and social intercourse, we find him to be a firm supporter of the Constitution, and laws of the United States, and a tried pillar of Republican Institutions; and having repeatedly listened to his remarks, in private as well as in public assemblies, do know he is the warm friend, and able supporter of Constitutional liberty—the rumors published in the States to the contrary notwithstanding—and having canvassed to our satisfaction, his doings as Governor and Superintendent of Indian affairs, and also the disposition of the appropriation for public buildings for the Territory. We do most cordially and cheerfully represent that the same has been expended to the best interests of the Nation; and

Whereas, his re-appointment would better subserve the Territorial interest than the appointment of any other man, and would meet with the gratitude of the entire inhabitants of the Territory, and his removal would cause the deepest feeling of sorrow and regret, and it being our unqualified opinion, based upon our personal acquaintance, which we have formed with Governor Young, and from our observation of the results of his influence and administration, in this Territory; that he possesses in an eminent degree, every qualification necessary for the discharge of his official duties; and unquestioned integrity and ability; that he is decidedly the most suitable person that can be selected for that office.

We therefore take great pleasure in recommending him to your favorable consideration, and do earnestly request his re-appointment as Governor and Superintendent of Indian affairs for this Territory.

GREAT S. L. CITY, U. T., Dec. 30, '54.

Signed: J. F. KINNEY, Chief Justice U. S. Supreme Court, Utah Territory.
E. J. STEPTOE, Lieutenant Colonel U. S. Army.
GEO. P. STILES, Associate Justice S. C. of U. S. for Utah Territory.
LEO. SHAVER, Assistant Justice for Territory of Utah.
HORACE R. WIRTZ, Medical Staff U. S. Army.
A. W. BABBIT, Secretary of Utah Territory.
STEPHEN B. ROSE, Sub Ind. Agt. for Utah Territory.

The petition was supported by the names of all the chief officers in the Territory, both Civil and Military, as also by the principal Merchants and residents, whose names we omit for the sake of brevity.

DOUBTLESS, IT IS STRANGE

To those who do not discern the signs of the times, that Utah scarcely furnishes the minutest noticeable item towards swelling the vast catalogue of crimes which are cursing every other portion of the earth. It is for this reason, we presume, that the world's papers so often read, "the news from Utah is unimportant." It does not seem to be spicy enough for the morbid appetite of this fast generation. Independent of having no extensive catalogue of revolting crimes that would even make devils blush, and independent of bowing down with the whole soul to gaining notoriety, amassing wealth, and giving loose rein to every sinful indulgence of passion, is there no beauty, nor interest in the chronicle of the even tenor of the righteous course of a mighty community? Is there nothing enticing and instructing in the history of Joseph Smith, the man through whom the Almighty restored the Priesthood and the everlasting gospel to the children of men in our day? Is there no discernment of the hand writing of the Lord upon the historic scroll of the 19th century in the movement of a noble people from under the immediate grasp of priestcraft and tyranny, and their peaceful and prosperous settlement in a savage and desolate region? Then indeed, in fulfilment of prophecy, does darkness reign, and "gross darkness covers the people," and "as with the priest so with the people," and the whisperings of priest and people are, "our works are in the dark," "who seeth us? and who knoweth us?" The cunning and power of the devil is not obviously manifested at present in but few cases, if any, more plainly than it is in his so successfully hoodwinking the world in regard to the true character of the Latter-day Saints. In a great variety of ways the facts are before the world, but they will not heed them, simply because they are blinded by the god of this world.

Utah is a portion of America that no white people, except the "Mormons," had, have, or would have settled. It has been settled by people from almost every clime, and, amid disadvantages and forbidding prospects that appalled and still appall all others, the desert has been made the peaceful and delightful abode of the most loyal, law-abiding, virtuous, and upright population to be found in the United States, or in the world.

And notwithstanding her residents have been raised under so many diverse traditions and forms of government, the majority are made one by the spirit of truth, and her escutcheon shines with a clearness and brilliancy that delights the eyes and rejoices the heart of every lover of truth. It is not denied that there are some within her borders who are not as good as might be desired, and we will frankly admit that a few professed lawyers have found their way here, most unfortunately for all persons who are so unwise and short sighted as to employ them.

An individual who understands the broad principles of civil polity, is familiar with those enactments of his country which are a "rule of order founded in justice," and tempered with mercy, as all laws should be, and as Utah's are, can benefit his fellow beings, by using that knowledge as it should be used.

But it is passing strange that several, who otherwise appear to be men of sense and judgment, do not appear to be able to keep away from that class of lawyers who are as ready, or more so, to defend the wrong as the right, and always watching to hire on the side that will pay the most. Is it not obvious that a client is better off without such a lawyer than with? unless indeed he is also corrupt, and wishes to escape from justice through the infernal technicalities and quibbles of corrupt lawyers who are a disgrace to the profession.

To avoid supporting such a nuisance, be wise, and arbitrate all differences, and in this way compel the itching palmed gentry to go to raising potatoes, to engaging in some other useful occupation, or to leave the country, and thus rid the community of a serious source of annoyance to all who love righteousness.—[Deseret News.

TORNADO IN MICHIGAN.

A correspondent of the Detroit Times writing from Dexter states that on Tuesday evening, 15th instant, about six o'clock, the towns of Linden and Waterloo, the former in Washtenaw, and the latter an adjoining town in Jackson, were visited by one of the most destructive tornadoes that was ever experienced in this section of the country. "It seemed to come from the west, and though I have probably heard but of part of its ravages, it has undoubtedly been rife with great destruction. The house and barn of Hon. M. Gordon, on the edge of Jackson county, were completely levelled with the ground, as were also those of John K. Youcum, of Linden, in this county, whose family were severely injured and many of whose cattle were killed. The residences of Mr. Cowen and Washington Bemen were destroyed in its wake, having passed on the edge of the dwelling of John McGinns, but only destroying a portion of his timbered land. These are only a few instances in one locality of the destruction of the tornado, and probably a tithe has not yet been learned. So powerful was the wind that on the farm of Patrick McCumes, it took a large oak stump out of the ground and carried it at least sixty rods. Logs were carried at an immense distance, and the water of a small lake blown entirely out of its bed. Fences and standing timber were completely demolished. I fear the effect in sections not yet heard from. In the east of Linden it seemed to fork off—the main track having been about thirty rods wide, and in some places plowing up the ground in the most decided manner."

ARRIVAL OF THE BALTIC.

Furious Sortie upon the French lines—Sapping of the Flagstaff Battery.

The official dispatches from Lord Raglan are to the 17th April only, and from General Canrobert to the 16th. Lord Raglan states that the condition of the army before Sebastopol continued to improve, and mortality from disease to decrease. The fire of both the English and French armies had been continued; but though superior to that of the enemy, Lord Raglan admits that it had not produced that effect which might have been anticipated from its constancy, power and accuracy. The list of casualties is not heavy.

Sortie from the Flagstaff Battery.

The correspondense which has come to hand since our last, gives a description of the furious sortie from the Flagstaff Battery on the French lines, on the 13th. A long and desperate struggle took place. Twice the Russians succeeded in entering the parallel in advance of the battery, and twice they were repulsed,—the second time with such loss as to compel an immediate retreat. The French made no attempt at pursuit, as the enemy were within a stone's throw of their own batteries. General Bizot was wounded in this affair, and having been struck also with a chance bullet after the close of the fight, has since died. In this sortie the French lost between 50 and 60 killed and wounded; the Russians a far greater number.

On the 14th the French fired three mines under the Flagstaff battery with partial success. The Russians, fearing an assault, opened a furious cannonade along the whole line. On the night of the 17th the French succeeded in making a lodgement in the portion of the battery, but on the 19th they were compelled to yield their position.

Brilliant Exploit at the Rifle Pits.

On the same night, the English succeeded in capturing the first of the enemy's rifle pits, from which much annoyance and loss to working parties has been caused. Col. Graham Egerton, the field officer in command of the trenches, who led the attacking party, was killed in the desperate action which took place afterwards for the protection of the trenches. In the last affair 50 British soldiers secured the trenches against a column of Russians, 1,000 strong.

The total loss of the English was 2 officers and 21 men killed, and 5 officers and between 40 and 50 men wounded. The enemy lost about 50 killed and twice as many wounded.

On the night of the 20th, an attack was made upon the second rifle pit; but the pit was almost immediately abandoned by the Russians.

The Turkish corps took part in a reconnoissance on the 19th, which was undertaken towards the valley of the Chernaya with the view of showing Omar Pacha the ground.

THE LATEST NEWS.

Successful Engagement before Sebastopol—Reported Insurrection in the Ukraine—Official Communication of Lord Panmure.

WAR DEPARTMENT, May 4, 7 P. M.—A sharp engagement took place on the night of the 1st of May, in front and left attack. The whole of the Russian Rifle pits were taken, eight light mortars and 200 prisoners.

The Daily News, under date of May 5th, says: On the night of Wednesday last, May 2d, the French under General Pelisser, having taken up a position before the Quarantine Bastion, advanced briskly upon the Bastion No. 4, attacked the advance works, which the Russians had raised to protect that Bastion, and carried them at the point of the bayonet. In this attack the French took twelve mortars from the enemy. The engineers immediately occupied the ground and began to carry on a flying sap. At day-break they had succeeded in establishing themselves in the conquered works.

Last night (Thursday) the Russians made a general sortie, with the object of retaking the lost ground. After a sanguinary conflict, they were driven back. Our losses have been great, but bear no proportion to those of the enemy, nor to the advantages gained.

This morning (Friday) the Russians have neither a man nor a gun outside the regular enclosure of the place.

The Times contains a paragraph under the head of Military News, in which it is stated that an expedition of 25,000 French and English artillery and infantry will be sent out immediately to assist in the operations about to be resumed against the Russian fortresses in the gulfs of Finland and Bothnia, and the Baltic.

FRANCE.

Attempted Assassination of the Emperor.

The Emperor of the French narrowly escaped assassination on Saturday evening, April 28th, when riding, attended only by two members of his household, through the streets.

An Italian, Pianori by name, discharged two pistols at him, at the distance of from five to ten yards, and had two other loaded pistols in his pocket, ready to be discharged, when he was overpowered and taken prisoner. Pianori, it appears, served in the regiment of Garibaldi at the siege of Rome.

The circumstances of the case indicate a conspiracy, and the hiring of a paid murderer, though Pianori says he was actuated solely by feelings of personal revenge. The Emperor has been overwhelmed with congratulations on his escape.

The King of Prussia is ill of fever.

FROM CHINA.

Highly Important from Shanghai—The Rebels Driven out of the City—Important from Japan.

From Shanghai our advices are to the 9th inst.

The city was re-taken by the Imperialists on the night of the 17th ult. (Chinese New Year' Day.) They set fire to it at various points, and a large portion of it was burnt. The rebels were killed or dispersed, and the people are rebuilding in their old quarters. The foreigners who were in the rebel service made their escape at Woosung on the day preceding the attack, and treachery on the part of the Canton men admitted the Imperial troops.

Law, the rebel chief, has been beheaded, but Chinaling has escaped. Less bloodshed than was anticipated took place, and the Imperial generals showed great forbearance and humanity towards the people. There was a large supply of powder, &c., in the city, but scarcely any food, and those who were not fighting men were reduced to the greatest straits.

The capture of the city has given universal satisfaction. The marines of the French frigate La Joanne d' Arc assisted in keeping order and preventing robbery. The troops which were encamped around Shanghai have been sent with all speed to operate against Nankin and Chin-kiang, where the rebels are said to be losing ground, but we have no authentic intelligence to rely on.

At Canton the Imperialists have gained a complete victory over a large rebel fleet, and the river traffic is again open to native craft, and large supplies of the necessaries of life are thus conveyed to the Canton market. Previously, great distress was felt by the poorer classes, prices being ruinously high. The insurgents have been driven from their head quarters, near Whampoa, the greater part of their fleet taken and destroyed, the town of Sanchow burnt, and Blenheim Fort recaptured. This took place on the 7th inst., the Mandarins having been strengthened by the adherence of many influential villages, whose "braves" acted on shore and gave no quarters to the rebels who fell into their hands. This success, if promptly and energetically followed up, may be productive of much ultimate good; but it must be remembered that, although this one body of rebels has been destroyed, there are many other bands which must be subdued ere trade can be re-established on any secure basis. As yet, there is no improvement.

The rebel chiefs have escaped with a portion of their fleet, and will doubtless go to increase the number of pirates who swarm at the entrance and on the river.

MARRIED.

By James H. Hart, on Sunday, May 20th 1855, Mr. CHARLES MORGAN, to Miss ANN MARIA DELAHAY, both from the Birmingham Conference, England.

NOTICE.

THE LITHOGRAPHIC ENGRAVING of the Great Salt Lake City, can had of the publisher ROBERT C. WILLIAMS, or of JAMES H. HART, Agent. Price 50 cents per copy. Accompanying pamphlet ten cents. They can be sent to any part of the United States.
Address "Luminary Office." may 27 27 3m

The reason why it succeeds.—THE Mustang Liniment has attained its enormous popularity, and almost universal use, simply because it gives better satisfaction, accomplishes more good, relieves more pain, and heals more wounds and sores than any other preparation ever before offered to the afflicted. Every bottle that is used, speaks for itself—tells its own tale in the relief it gives, and the cure it effects. And then one who has suffered, perhaps, long years with pain, without hope of relief, and finds in this Liniment an almost instantaneous remedy, cannot help but speak in its praise, and recommend it in the best terms to all he sees suffering. It needs no other recommendation than a trial.

☞See advertisement in another column. [may 19 26 3m.

NOTICE.

The members of the Priests Quorum are hereby notified that their Quorum meetings will be held in the room occupied by brother Erling, No. 12 St Charles st., formerly occupied as the Church Office.

INFORMATION WANTED.

CATHERINE GODARD and her daughter left England in the spring of 1854, on board the ship Marshfield. They started across the plains in Elder Empy's Company. A letter was received from her, by her sister, Mary Perks, when on the plains, stating that her husband had died—no tidings has been heard of since. Any information relating to them will be thankfully received. Address to Mrs. Mary Parks, or Luminary Office.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
UTAH TERRITORY.
HOOPER & WILLIAMS,

ARE transporting to Utah, this season, one of the largest and best assorted stock of GOODS ever taken to that region.

The purchases being made from the best houses in New York, Baltimore and St. Louis, and the long experience they have had in the trade, enables them to offer inducements in prices, style and kind, which will insure satisfaction.

Emigrants passing over the plains to California, will find it to their advantage to rest at Great Salt Lake, as produce can always be had for less than transportation from the States.

Persons wishing to remit or intend taking money with them, can avoid risk and save money by depositing with Messrs. ROBERTSON, and HOOPER & WILLIAMS, No. 29 Murray st., New York, or WATERMAN & RYAN, St. Louis, who are authorized to draw on us. Interest will be allowed at the rate of 7 per cent. from date of draft till payment.

HOOPER & WILLIAMS,
may 19 26 3m] Great Salt Lake City, 1855.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.
CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
HAS REMOVED TO NO. 94 MARKET STREET,
South side between Third and Fourth.

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article as as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.

N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.

96 Market Street,
may 26, 27 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

SCHEER & HACKMAN'S
WAGON MANUFACTORY,
Corner of Sixteenth and Market streets.

KEEP constantly on hand a large assortment of Wagons suitable for Traders and Travellers to Santa Fe, California, Oregon, etc., etc.; also, for Farmer's use. Persons in want of Wagons are requested to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere, as promise a first-rate article at reasonable prices. S. & H. [may 5 24 6m*

REMOVAL.

MRS. J. VINCENT, MIDWIFE, East side of Fourth street, between Market and Walnut streets, St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. J. Vincent wishes to inform her friends and the public, that she has removed from between 8th and 9th, on Market street, to the above place, and hopes by strict attention to her duties, to merit a further continuance of their patronage. [apr 14 21 3m

TO EMIGRANTS.
C. B. HUBBELL, Jr., 102 4th st., St. Louis
Informs persons travelling towards
SALT LAKE OR CALIFORNIA,
That they will find at his store, the largest stock of DRY GOODS in the city, comprising every variety of kinds adapted to their wants, which he will sell at prices fully TWENTY-FIVE per cent. lower than any other house in the trade, to which your attention is invited.
N. B. One price only ever asked, and no deviation. [apr 14 21 2m

GREAT ATTRACTION
AT
WILSON & COOPER'S NEW STORE!
The attention of Emigrant starting for
UTAH, CALIFORNIA, AND OREGON,
Is respectfully called to our IMMENSE STOCK of
FASHIONBLE DRY GOODS!
Comprising every article in the trade, from the plain substantial articles of every-day use, to the finest and most elegant fabrics of first class Dry Goods and LINEN DRAPERY.
Our goods are all marked in PLAIN FIGURES, from which no abatement is allowed under any circumstances.
N. B. A discount of FIVE per cent. will be allowed to parties going west, on all bills over $100. WILSON & COOPER,
apr 14 21] Cor. 4th and Locust sts., St. Louis.

OUTFITS FOR CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE AND OREGON.
WM. C. WILSON,
DEALER IN
Groceries, Wines, Liquors, and Provisions,; Pilot Bread and Crackers,
No. 193 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.

☞Is prepared to furnish everything in his line, at the lowest rates, and from past experience in the trade, feels assured, that parties intending to cross the plains, will find it to their interest to give him a call, and compare prices before purchasing elsewhere.

ON HAND AND FOR SALE LOW, THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES:

TEAS—A choice assortment of Imperial, Gun Powder, Young Hyson and Black.
COFFEE—Rio, Havana, Laguayra and Java—burnt and ground.
SUGAR—Crushed, Lump, Powdered, Clarified, New Orleans and Brown—all grades.
MOLASSES—Golden Syrup, Sugar House and Plantation.
LIQUORS—Best brands of Pure French Brandy, Holland Gin, Jamaica Rum, Irish, Scotch, Monongahela and Bourbon Whiskey, and all kinds of Domestic Liquors.
WINES—Pure Port, Maderia, Malaga, Sherry, Muscat, Champagne, Claret and White, Cordials, &c., &c.
BACON—Ham, Sides and Shoulders, Dried Beef and Beef Tongue.
FRUIT—Raisins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, Citron, Dried Apples and Peaches, &c., &c.
SUNDRIES—All kinds of Pickles, Sauce, Ketchups, Spice, Fancy Soaps, Candles, Oil, Gas, Fish, Mats, Cords, Buckets, Baskets, Brooms, Tubs, Lobsters, Oysters, Sardines, Cooking Extracts, Essences, Arrow Root, Farina, Sago, Corn Starch, Oat Meal, Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Maccaroni, Vermicelli, Honey, &c., &c. [apr 7 20 2m

W. H. HUISH,
MACHINIST, Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERALLY.
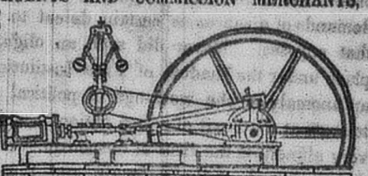
mar 24) [18 3m

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MAIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,



FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lantern, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, Iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.
N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.
Feb. 24, 14 1y

SKELDING & PETERS,
Residence, No. 328 South Side Franklin Avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets;
Shop on Gay Street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, and between Franklin and Morgan, St. Louis,

MANUFACTURERS of Emigrants' Ox Chains, Ox shoes, Yoke Rings, and staples and Nails. Also, Horse Nails, of all kinds. Also, saddle staples, &c., of all kinds, made to order on the shortest notice. All the above articles are warranted of the best American Iron.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 140 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by
ALFRED PERSEY,
St. Louis, Mo.
The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE and OREGON.
EMIGRANTS
Can be supplied with every variety of
PILOT BREAD & CRACKERS
Baked expressly for the overland Emigration, and WARRANTED to KEEP, at
J. B. WILLSON'S BAKERY,
No. 186 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
☞The trade supplied at the LOWEST RATES. [apr 7 20 3m

UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L. K. & Co.

CATTLE.

THE undersigned takes this method of informing those who emigrate West this season that they have on hand, and are constantly buying work Oxen Cows, and Young Cattle, all or which they will sell to Emigrants on reasonable terms. J. B. & J. H. FLEMING,
Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo.
REFERENCE—
ISAAC HOGKADAY, Independence; O. H. COGSWELL, Ind.
HADUS & MULLEN, Wayne City.
N. B. Stock, Corn, Bacon and everything in that line to be had in the neighborhood or Pleasant Hill. [Feb. 24, 14 3m.

OUT-FITTING!

M. J. FLOURNOY is dealing in all kinds of Out-fitting Goods, consisting of Groceries, Confectionaries and every other article usually found in out-fitting establishment in the West, and is prepared to fit out emigrants for Great Salt Lake City, California, Oregon, and the Western Territories, on liberal terms. M. J. FLOURNOY.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

WESTPORT, MO.
S. P. KELLER,
DEALER IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
HARDWARE, GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE,
Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Guns, Blankets, Flour, Meal, Bacon, Gum Goods, &c.,
Salt Lake, California, and Santa Fe Outfitting Depot
No. 27 Commercial Street,
WESTPORT, MO.
Feb. 24, 14 3m*

GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS.

THE Emigration for Great Salt Lake City, Oregon, California and the Western Territories, will find a supply of Groceries and Provisions always on hand at my Grocery Store in Westport, Mo.
Feb. 24, 14 3m* JAMES W. ELLIS.

C. D. KEARNEY. W. B. BERNARD.
KEARNEY & BERNARD,
METROPOLITAN STORE,
WESTPORT, MO.,
DEALERS IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,
Clothing, Groceries, Provisions and Hardware.
Feb. 24, 14 3m.

Poetical Department.

PUSH ON.

BY HENRY J. SARGEANT.

Awake! and listen. Everywh're—
From upland, grove and lawn,
Out-breaths the universal prayer,
The orison of morn
Arise! and don thy working garb,
All nature is astir;
Let honest motives be thy barb,
And usefulness thy spur.
Stop not to list the boisterous jeers,
(He would be what thou art;)
They should not e'en offend thine ears.
Still less disturb thy heart.
What! though you have no shining hoard,
(Inheritance of stealth;)
To purchase at the broker's board,
Push on! You're rusting while you stand;
Inaction will not do;
Take life's small bundle in your hand,
And trudge it briskly through.
Push on!

Don't blush because you have a patch,
In honest labor won;
There's many a small cot roofed with thatch
That's happier than a throne.
Push on! The world is large enough
For you, and me, and all;
You must expect your share of rough,
And now and then a fall.
But, up again! act out your part—
Bear willingly your load;
There's nothing like a cheery heart
To mend a stony road.
Push on!

Jump over all the if's and but's;
There's always some kind hand
To lift life's wagon from the ruts,
Or poke away the sand.
Remember, when your sky of blue
Is shadowed by a cloud,
The sun will shine as soon for you
As for the monarch proud.
It is but written on the moon
That toil alone endures;
The king would dance a rigadoon
With that blithe soul of yours.
Push on! You're rusting while you stand;
Inaction will not do;
Take life's small bundle in your hand,
And trudge it briskly through.
Push on!

DEMON OF THE BLACK POWER.

Extract from an Oration, delivered in West Chester, Pa., upon the Anniversary of Washington's Birth Day, by Reverend Robert Lowry.

The Demon of the Black Power has the Nation by the throat. It is questionable whether any legislation has shorne this monster evil of its desolation; while it is certain that the inevitable and pre-determined tendency of much legislation has been to extend its ravages and increase its victims. Slavery, as a popular institution, is stronger to-day, with all the augmented wealth and industry of the North, than at any other time since the formation of the Government. The slave interest in the Halls of our National Legislature is more potent than the voice of millions of Northern freemen. Resistance to the demands of a caucus is certain defeat to the party that opposes. Never did such an oligarchy find place under the shadow of Free Institutions. It is an anomaly in the workings of political science to tolerate at the heart of a free nation a spirit whose very aliment is the virus of despotism. It cannot be that the brood of the serpents and the eaglets of freedom remain in the same nest forever. The extermination of one race or seperate nests for both must be the ultimate alternative.

It cannot be disguised that we are verging toward a great crisis, which will try the patriot's heart-strings to their uttermost tension. The Union, prized, prayed for, eulogized, almost deified, swings on the pivot of the slave question. All other clouds on the national horizon are but flimsy vapor, compared with this robe of midnight that covers the heavens like a pall. The statesmen of the past met the evil as an insolent mendicant; and having not the moral courage to deny the boon demanded, invited it to the National fireside to conciliate its wrath. The statesmen of the present find the world's outcast still sitting at the Nation's hearth, now master of the domicil, and more insolent than ever. The politicians of the day not only dare not eject the intruder, but have no power to curtail his demands. What has the South ever asked for that she has not obtained? What administration ever held the ship of State that she did not direct? And yet the sordid hacks of the political stable fawn on her favors and evade her frowns. We cannot stave off the resolution of this monster problem. We may travel through domestic feuds and riven ties and dismembered States to find it, but the solution will come at any price. How long will the Nation make compromise of its virtue with the rapacious encroachments of the Black Power?

What is the prime element in the 'Manifest Destiny,' doctrine of the political Solons of the times? Is 'Destiny' of such tropical tendencies that it can only make advances toward the equator? Why have we no 'Destiny' toward the shores of the St. Lawrence and the bank of the New Foundland? Why have we no 'Destiny' into Baffin's Bay and Russian America? Why have we no ten millions for a strip of north-eastern territory, or for some fertile 'Mesilla' in British America? The answer is obvious. The demands of slaveocracy are the rule of national policy. We can inscribe on our banners 'Fifty-Four Forty or Fight,' and then give away a portion of Oregon; we can make patriotic speeches on the integrity of our territory, and then yield with a diplomatic flourish, a slice of the State of Maine; because those northern climes are not exactly udapted to our peculiar institution, and we could not afford to go to war for soil that cannot be employed in the humane purpose of slave breeding. Every project for the annexation of territory, either by purchase or conquest, has been for the interest of the Black Power. Why this morbid grasping after foreign territory? It is not even pretended that it is needed by the demands of immigration. 'To preclude war with contiguous nations by incorporating the nations' is too specious a pretext, since the warlike nations are only in one direction. What is this territorial aggrandizement but the inhuman rapacity of the slave demon, entrenching itself in new acquisitions, and fortifying itself against anticipated danger? Let the American Union once be dissolved, and two-thirds of the territory will be consecrated to human bondage. And still the demand is renewed for drafts on our national treasury. It is not enough that Louisiana, Florida, Texas, New Mexico, California and the Mesilla Valley have almost been devoted to the selling of blood and muscle, or held in reserve for future speculations in God's image. It is already intimated that Sonora is held loosely by the Mexican Republic, and 'for a consideration' Lower California can be easily obtained; while the southern fillibusters are unceasingly clamorous for Cuba, and have immortalized in prospective, the name of KINNEY as the entering wedge of slaveocracy into Central America. No demands are too arrogant for this assurant Black Power. Ex parte legislation for southern railroads is one of the smallest of its modest requests. Southern conventions, with commercial colors and political cargoes, is but another phase of aggressive assumption. Fulsome threats of secession have always been the spectres that haunted Mason and Dickson's Line; while the southern necromancers have availed themselves of northern stupidity to prove themselves adepts in legislation, at the woful expense of the gullible North.

Never has iniquity made such encroachment on the patience and patriotism of a free people. Notwithstanding the vice of slavery has disappeared from the northern States, the influence of the slave interest on the Central Power was never greater than now. Previous to 1820, the policy of the Government was to guard the Territories from the spoilation of the Black Power, and shut it up within its allotted habitation. In that memorable year, the noted Compromise, which was to secure forever the dominion of liberty north of 36 deg. 30 min., was but the magnanimous and honest relinquishment of right, for the satisfaction of a weaker party, and allaying of sectional turbulence. It was a treaty in perpetuity for the permanent securement of the boundaries of freedom, and the determination of the area within which the Black Power should be circumscribed. It was neither demanded by justice or necessity. It might have been witheld on principles of precedent, power and right But it was made—solemnly, sacredly, honestly, as an everlasting settlement of the limits of slavery and freedom. Under this benign influence, the country coalesced, co-operated and flourished. In good faith under the provisions of that Compromise, accessions of territory were made on our southern border, and States, with pro-slavery constitutions, admitted to the Union. The North gazed on the steady encroachments of the Black Power not without alarm, but, true to the sacred pledges of the Missouri Compromise, welcomed the incorporation of the southern States, and endured the increasing domination of the slave interest without resistance. Even amid the excitement and partizan fury of 1850, the too indulgent North, faithful to former compacts, and ever sacrificing for the sake of peace and union, tolerated the infamous and ever to be execrated Fugitive Slave Law, that legislated our citizens into compulsory slave-catchers, and turned our northern cities into hunting grounds for southern kidnappers.

No page of American history will seem so incredible to the future student of our national rise and progress as the amazing and self-immolating policy of the mighty and magnanimous North. But what will that student say when he reads, that the same Compromise, ratified by the most solemn pledges, observed with scrupulous exactness by the faithful North, accepted by the high contracting parties and published to the world as the ultimatum of adjustments and compromises, was, in the year of our Lord, 1854, at the hour of midnight, by the Congress of the United States, ruthlessly, sacrilegiously repealed! Repealed, did I say! No! not repealed. The Missouri Compromise cannot be repealed. The House of Hapsburgh could repeal the popular Constitution by forcing the people under the point of the bayonet; the perjured miscreant on the throne of France could repeal the Constitution of the Republic by ripping it up with his sword; and the Missouri Compromise could be repealed only by tearing it from the statute book of honor, rending it into fragments, and throwing it on the altar of the Moloch of despotism. There let it lie; bearing the sooty touch and sulphur smell of the demon of the Black Power. Let the outraged North gaze on its mangled surface, and strike hands, in the true and faithful compact, that the encroachments of the slave god shall end. Let not that Missouri Compromise, once violated, become a Compromise again. Let it hang as a trophy in the halls of the demon deity of slavery; but let the virtuous North vow on the defiled altar of truth and justice, that she has made her last compromise with the Embassadors of the Black Power. If the Nebraska Iniquity has opened a path for slavery north of 36 deg. 30 min., it has also opened a path for freedom south of that line. We have hitherto been the repellants in the warfare; we may now become the assailants. The whole land is now before us. There is, indeed, 'no North, no South' no limit the aggressions of either slavery or freedom. The only rampart that the Nation and the world regard as sacred, against the ravages of the monster, has been broken down by a combination of southern slave-holders, northern doughfaces, political demagogues, and hireling renegades. With the destruction of the Compromise of 1820, there are now no compromises to them in the area of freedom. The Fugitive Slave Law of 1850 can be repealed in Congress, as it has already been by the people of the North. Mason and Dixon's Line and 36 deg. 30 min., are to have no place on the maps of freedom. 'No more slave States in the Union' must now be the fiat of the aroused and incensed North. 'No more black stars in our Country's flag' must now be the rallying cry of the American patriot. Shut up the foul spirit in its own graveyard. Let them hug their darling 'Institution,' till it burns, and poisons and destroys them. Carry the Ordinance of 1787 to the very threshold of slaveocracy; and show them how the principles of that testament may be applied not only to the north-west Territory, but to the south-west Territory, and to all territory. We accept the renunciation of all Compromises. Now let the battle be fought, in the name of liberty and humanity, against human bondage in every form. From the hills of New England, through our own Keystone State, and over the plains of the mighty West, the thunder of the ballot-box has wrung a death knell in the ear of those who have prostituted place and power to the service of the slave demon. Catch up the echo and roll it on, ye watchful sentinels of Freedom's Temple. Aye, the people are abroad in the highways of the Nation, gathering an education not taught in the schools. Woe unto that clan or party that stand in the way of an indignant people, made desperate by the friction of successive indignities, and eager to obtain vengeance in the cause of bleeding humanity.

AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

We have been much interested in some new and important discoveries in printing and paper by Mr. H. Glynn, of Paris, who has obtained letters patent in this country for the manufacturer of a paper for the prevention of fraudulent erasure, and forgery generally, by any known process. Mr. Glynn, we understand, is introducing his invention to the heads of departments and to the banking interest throughout the country, with a view to the protection of the public from forgery and fraud.—[Union.

The specimens of printed and written documents and engravings, admirably re-produced, which Mr. Glynn has shown to us, are conclusive evidence of the approaching certainty of a great revolution in popular illustration for books periodicals, &c., abolishing the expense, labor, and delay of the present system, and accomplishing for the masses pictorially what moveable type has editorially. Perfect fac similes can now be obtained in relief, by a very simple, and very curious process, of the finest engraving on copper, steel, wood, &c.; and of hand-writing in common ink, &c.; a single impression being sufficient to enable the workman to produce in less than an hour a beautifully engraved plate in relief or intaglio, as desired, ready to print with the letter-press by steam from works of great value which may have taken years to engrave.

With such facilities for obtaining copies of documents, it was natural to supppose that they would lead to abuses in unscrupulous hands, and in corroboration, some wonderful specimens of forged bank notes, bankers' checks and hand-writings have been shown to us, which evidence the serious danger to which society is exposed.

Mr. Glynn is the inventor of a paper which totally defeats all attempts at fraudulent tampering and erasure by exposing the person attempting to operate on a document printed on his paper to the loss of the original; so that, in seeking to introduce among us a valuable discovery in the art of printing he offers at the same time an antidote and a safeguard; for it appears that the materials of which his paper is made possesses other eminently important qualities that must excite general attention. His paper professes to be indistructible by vermin or atmospheric influences—a quality highly valuable in the tropics, and great consequence as regards the preservation of our national records. There is no saying to what puppose such paper as this will not be applicable; in merchants' offices for account books, bills of exchange, letters, &c., registers, wills, and all books printed for public libraries all over the world.

The last United States census shows the necssity of such a paper by the following extract:

"Duty to coming generations requires that documents containing so many proofs relating to the history of the present should be carefully guarded from injury or harm."

For these and enless variety of purposes the demand for Mr. H. Glynn's paper must be enormous, and we hail the protection which he offers with the greatest satisfaction, and wish his invention every success.—[National Intelligencer.

"Do you know the prisoner, Mr. Jones?"

"Yes—to the bone."

"What is his character?"

"Never knew he had any."

"Does he live near you?"

"So near that he has only spent five shillings for firewood in eight years."

"Did he ever come into collision with you in any matter?"

"Only once, and that was when he was drunk and mistook me for a lamp post."

"From what you know of him, would you believe him under oath?"

"That depends upon circumstances. If he was so much intoxicated that he did not know what he was doing, I would. If not, I wouldn't."

"You can step aside, Mr. Jones. Crier, call the next witness."

A genius in Ohio has just perfected a rifle that knocks the minie into a cocked hat. He placed an ounce ball in it Tuesday evening last, and fired at the sky. A few moments afterwards, the dog star commenced howling, and in such a manner that the people of Clevelaud "are satisfied" he was wounded in the thorax. Where are your French gunsmiths now?

RELIGION is the best armour in the world, but the worst cloak.

NOTICE.

We have received and have on sale the following books and pamphlets.

Book of Mormon,	$1 00
Book of Doctrine and Covenants,	95
Voice of Warning,	50
Spencer's Letters,	50
Hymn Books, Morocco gilt, ext.,	1 25
" " Calf "	80
" " Roan "	50
Government of God, by J. Taylor,	50
New Jerusalem, or the Fulfilment of Modern Prophecy,	15
Divine Authority of Joseph Smith,	10
Remarkable Visions,	10
Only Way to be Saved,	5
Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, by O. Pratt, 6 parts, 10cts. ea., or per sett,	40
Polygamy, by a Lady in Utah,	5
The Seer, by O. Pratt, vol. 1, to which is added 6 parts of Divine Authenticity of the book of Mormon, and Polygamy, by a Lady of Utah, elegantly bound, in one vol.	2 25
Orson Pratt's works, bound,	1 50
Times and Seasons, vols. 4, 5, and 6, well bound, ea.	1 50
Portraits of the First Presidency,	1 25

Route from England to Salt Lake may be expected in a few weeks.

We have a few numbers of the Millenial Star of vol. 17 on sale.

Those wishing any of the above books, or wishing to subscribe regularly for the Millenial Star, can apply to me every Sunday at the Church, or by post.

Apr, 14 21.] JAS. S. CANTWELL.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!

PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES,
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.
JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.
Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.
N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.
Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!
Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.
It has cured more cases of
RHEUMATISM
than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.
G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,
J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.
MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.
MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:
Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.
I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.
I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.
Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.
I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Croton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS
have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:
Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Swaney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.
The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.
G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.
Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST,
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.
Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
75 MARKET STREET,

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.
N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.
75 Market Street,
(One door from corner Third, opposite U. S. Hotel,)
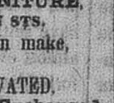
Feb. 17, 13 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS,
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail,
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged,
Feb. 3, 1855. [113m*

GOODIN & TOOKER,
GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,

No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.



HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.
We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfilment.
Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand. Lamps repaired, reglided and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 10 6m

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. 23. [6 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.
EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their Interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.
FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.
THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
60 packets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
80 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 cases dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoo Almonds;
5 cases Gillod's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERE.
Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Lubeanme Sieert,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS,
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MCLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.
One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.
Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.
Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.
Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.
J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.
Jefferson county, Mo.
For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.
We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.
☞ For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.
I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.
☞ Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.
T. W. HOIT.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PAPER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.
A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
34 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.
A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.
They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.
They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.
Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.
Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.
WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.
☞ Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.
N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.
Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his vest,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

Its fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,
OF CORINTHIAN HALL,
297 BROADWAY,
ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,
FOR THE SALE OF
FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,
FOR $4 EACH!
FOR A
LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,
GO TO CORINTIAN HALL!
FOR AN
INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
297 Broadway;
☞ BIG HAT. ☜
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st, between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.
☞ Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 16, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,
MANUFACTURER of all kinds of COPPER, TEN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.
COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light travelling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 133 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.
Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.
Nov. 16, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.
BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set, Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tanners' Sheats, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Chopping ground.
☞ Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.
☞ The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, JUNE 2, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XXVIII.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE. BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.
Mailed to Subscribers in the U. States at $2 per annum.
To Foreign Subscribers, (American Postage prepaid,) at $3 per annum.
To contiguous British Provinces, at $2.50 per annum.
No Subscription received without the money, though a specimen copy will be sent when required.
Any person forwarding us nine new Subscribers and remitting any current money in payment, will be entitled to the tenth copy gratis.
To avoid mistakes, particular pains must be taken, to send us all names of Subscribers, Post-offices and States, plainly written.
United States postage on the Luminary to British American Provinces, is one cent each--to Foreign countries two cents--within the U. States, one-half cent; provided, each subscriber notifies his Post-master, and pays the postage quarterly in advance, otherwise it will be two cts.
All letters requiring an answer, should, to insure attention, enclose a Postage Stamp.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

One square (eight lines or less,) one insertion,	$ 50
do. do. each additional insertion,	25
One square one month without alteration - -	1.00
do. two months - - - - - -	2.00
do. three months, - - - - - -	2.75
do. six months, - - - - - -	5.00
no. one year without alteration, - - -	8.00
For each alteration, - - - - -	25

Extensive advertisements as per contract.
Quarterly and yearly advertisements to be paid at the end of each quarter.
Prepayment required for any term less than a quarter.

From the Deseret News.

Discourse by President Brigham Young, Tabernacle, February 18th, 1855.

READ BY ELDER THOMAS BULLOCK.

(Concluded.)

Our battalion went to the scene of action, not in easy berths on steamboats, nor without a few months absence, but on foot over two thousand miles across trackless deserts and barren plains, experiencing every degree of privation, hardship and suffering during some two years absence before they could rejoin their families. Thus was our deliverance again effected by the interposition of that All-Wise Being who can discern the end from the beginning, and overrule the wicked intentions of men, to promote the advancement of his cause upon the earth. Thus were we saved from our enemies by complying with their, as hitherto, unjust and unparalleled exactions; again proving our loyalty to the government.

Here permit me to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of Captain Allen, the bearer of this requisition from the government. He was a gentleman full of humane feelings, and had he been spared, would have smoothed the path and made easy the performance of this duty, so far as laid in his power. His heart was wrung with sympathy when he saw our situation, and filled with wonder when he witnessed the enthusiastic patriotism and ardor which so promptly complied with his requirement. Again proving, as we had hundreds of times before proved by our acts, that we were belied by our enemies; and that we were as ready, and even more so than any other inhabitants of the Republic, to shoulder the musket, and go forth to fight the battles of our common country, or stand in her defence. History furnishes no parallel either of the severity and injustice of the demand, or in the alacrity, faithfulness and patriotism with which it was answered and complied with. Thus can we cite instance after instance of persons, holding legal authority, being moved upon, through the misrepresentation and influence of our enemies, to insult us as a people by requiring a test of our patriotism. How long must this state of things continue? So long as the people choose to remain in wilful ignorance with regard to us; so long as they choose to misinterpret our views, misrepresent our feelings, and misunderstand our policy.

To accuse us of being unfriendly to the government, is to accuse us of hostility to our religion, for no item of inspiration is held more sacred with us than the Constitution under which she acts. As a religious society, we, in common with all other denominations, claim its protection; whether our people are located in the other States, or Territories, as thousands of them are, or in this Territory, it is held as a shield to protect the dearest boon of which man is susceptible, his religious views and sentiments.

The government of the United States has never engaged in a crusade against us as a people, although she has remained silent, or refused us, when appealed to for redress of grievances. She has permitted us to be driven from our own lands, for which she had taken our money, and that too with her letters patent in our hands, guaranteeing to us peaceable possession. She has calmly looked on and permitted one of the fundamental and dearest provisions of the Constitution to be broken; she has permitted us to be driven and trampled under foot with impunity. Under these circumstances, what course is for us to pursue? I answer that, instead of seeking to destroy the very best government in the world, as seems to be the fear of some, we, like all other good citizens, should seek to place those in power who will feel the obligations and responsibilities they are under to a mighty people; who would feel and realize the important trusts reposed in them by the voice of the people who call them to administer law under the solemn sanction of an oath of fidelity to that heaven-inspired instrument, to the inviolate preservation of which we look for the perpetuity of our free institutions.

It should be the aim of all good citizens, and it is our intention and design as a people, to promote virtue, intelligence and patriotism, and when any person seeks to invade our virtue by sowing the seeds of corruption and vice, and when rebuked therefor, assails our rights and patriotism, as has universally heretofore been done, he exhibits, before this people, his own depraved heart. Should not those persons who are appointed to administer law, observe it themselves? Should not those officers who have been sent among us by the United States be an example in point of morality, virtue and good behavior, and do honor to those laws which they came here to execute and administer? And shall they so far forget themselves as to spend their time in licentiousness, gambling, and seducing the innocent and unsuspecting, and in a variety of ways sow the seeds of sin and immorality with impunity, and no man dare utter his protest? I tell you nay. With me with this people you will have war, if needs be, upon this principle. It is incumbent upon us to use our influence for the preservation of ourselves, our wives, our children, our brethren, our sisters, and all of our society, from the contaminating influence of vice, sin, immorality and iniquity, let it emanate from where it will. If it exists in high places, so much the more need of rebuking it, for from thence it will do the most harm.

I claim this as a right, as a constitutional right; I believe it is legal to exercise all the power and influence which God has given me, for the preservation of virtue, truth and holiness; and because we feel sensitive upon points such as these, should it be construed that we are enemies to the Federal Government? Our history proves that for such things we have been persecuted even unto death, but this deters me not. I would rather have God my friend, and all the world enemies, than be a friend with the world and have God my enemy; and in this view of the case the government should also be our friends, for assuredly in the preservation of virtue, morality and intelligence, she may look for the perpetuity of her free institutions and the preservation of her liberty. And in the moment of her disregard to these principles, when wickedness and sin can run riot with impunity, and not moral influence and force enough be found in the people to check it, and walk it under foot, then may she reckon on a speedy downfall. When moral obligations cease to exert an influence, and virtue hides its face, and the unblushing effrontery of sin and foul corruption takes its place, then may the nation consider there is danger. "When the wicked rule the people mourn."

This then is our position toward the Government of the United States, and toward the world, to put down iniquity and exalt virtue; to declare the word of God which he revealed unto us, and build up his Kingdom upon the earth. And know all men, governments, nations, kindreds, tongues and people, that this is our calling, intention and design. We aim to live our religion, and have communion with our God. We aim to clear our skirts of the blood of this generation by our faithfulness in preaching the truth of heaven in all plainness and simplicity; and I have often said, and repeat it now, that all other considerations, of whatever name or nature, sink into insignificancy in comparison with this. To serve God, and keep his commandments, are first and foremost with me. If this is higher law, so be it. As it is with me, so should it be with every department of the government; for this doctrine is based upon the principles of virtue and integrity; with it the government, her Constitution and free institutions, are safe; without it, no power can avert their speedy distruction. It is the life-giving power to the government; it is the vital element on which she exists and prospers; in its absence she sinks to rise no more.

We now proceed to discuss the question, does our faith and practice--our holy religion, as we hold and believe it--come within the purview of the Constitution; or, in other words, is it a religious question over which the Constitution throws its protecting shield? It reads, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." Ours is peculiarly a religious establishment; in it are centered all our hopes of salvation, honor, glory and exaltation. In it we find our hopes of a resurrection, and of a life of immortality in another state of existence. By it we are actuated in all our business of life, through its influence we have preserved virtue, established truth, and been enabled to endure persecution. By its influence we have surmounted the difficulties of a banishment from the abodes of civilization and this world's enlightenment, and established ourselves in these distant vales, where, until we came hither, there was nothing, either in soil, climate, or productions, to attract the notice of even the adventurous and enterprising; in a country which offered no inducements worthy of consideration to any people but us. And why to us as a people? Because here, far distant from any white settlements, upon a piece of earth not valuable for its facilities either for cultivation, navigation, or commerce, where the whole face of the country presented the most barren and forbidding aspect, we considered we might live and enjoy our religion unmolested, and be free from the meddlesome interference of any person. If our principles and religion were obnoxious to any, they were relieved from our presence, unless they chose to follow us.

If the people of the United States do not like our religious institutions, they are not compelled to mix in our society, or associate with us, or with our children. There is nothing here to tempt their cupidity, their avarice, or their lust. Then let them remain at home, or if they wish to roam in quest of new locations, there are none less desirable than this, for any other purposes than the one for which we have selected it, not for its intrinsic value in a pecuniary point of view, but in order that we might enjoy our religion in peace, preserve our youth in virtue, and be freed from the insults, abuse and persecution of our enemies.

Why should we have enemies? Why is it, say our objectors, that you cannot mingle and mix in society like other religious denominations? It has been seen that the people would not permit us to dwell in their midst in peace. We have been universally driven by illegal force, by mobs, murderers and assassins, as unworthy of having a place among the abodes of civilized man, until, as a last resort, we found peace in these distant valleys. It is because our religion is the only true one. It is because we have the only true authority, upon the face of the whole earth, to administer in the ordinances of the gospel. It is because the keys of this dispensation were committed by messengers sent from the Celestial world unto Joseph Smith, and are now held on the earth by this people. It is because Christ and Lucifer are enemies, and cannot be made friends; and Lucifer, knowing that we have this priesthood, this power, this authority, seeks our overthrow.

I am aware that these answers involve the truth of our principles, the divine appointment of Joseph Smith, the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, &c.; but this subject I leave for your consideration and investigation, with this simple declaration, that whether our religion is believed by any other people or not, it is by us, and no power or authority in the government can lawfully or righteously molest us in the peaceable and quiet enjoyment thereof. It cannot be done without law, and surely the government have no right to make any law concerning it, or to prevent the free exercise thereof.

Why should tests of patriotism to the government be required of this people, more than of any other community in the States and Territories? Would it not be considered insulting and abusive in the highest degree, by any other community in the government, to be thus subjected and humiliated? Cannot the people and government perceive in us, as a people, industry, sobriety, order, and well-regulated society; also a general diffusion of knowledge and dissemination of moral principle? And do they not know that these are the unmistakable signs and fruits of virtue, truth, love of our country, and high regard for her institutions? And do not such views, feelings, practices and principles emanate from a pure and undefiled religion, a high sense of faith, practice and obligation unto Christ our Lord, and his revealed will unto us?

Does our doctrine, containing such views, sentiments and practices, and exercising so genial an influence upon society; or, in other words, does our religion disqualify us from being faithful, good and patriotic citizens of the American government? Have the American people so far gone astray, and wandered from the light and power of the Gospel, that they cannot understand, recognize and appreciate the savory element of religious influence, high tone of morality, and exemplary practice of virtuous and holy principles? If so, then indeed have the degenerate sons of worthy and patriotic sires well nigh spent their substance, and are preparing to subsist on husks, with swine. If so, then does the moral dearth well nigh betoken a famine far exceeding the scorching drought, wasting pestilence and direful calamities of 1854. If so, then will the government, like the storm-driven barque, soon dash to atoms, having neither rudder to guide nor calibre to withstand the angry surging of the tempestuous waves.

In the sincere observances of the principles of true religion and virtue, we recognize the base, the only sure foundation of enlightened society and well-established government. In truth, and by virtue of divine appointment, we combat error, and seek to rend asunder the veil of darkness enveloping the human race.

In the progress of the age in which we live, we discern the fulfillment of prophecy, and the preparation for the second coming of our Lord and Saviour to dwell upon the earth. We expect that the refuge of lies will be swept away, and that city, nation, government, or kingdom which serves not God, and gives no heed to the principles of truth and religion, will be utterly wasted away and destroyed.

The word has gone forth from the Almighty, and will not return unto him void. It becomes us, therefore, one and all, to have on our wedding garments, to have our lamps trimmed and burning, well filled with oil, lest we also be taken unawares, and share the fate of the foolish virgins.

May the Lord bless us with the inspiration of his Holy Spirit, that our minds may be enlightened, our understandings enlarged and strengthened; and may his grace, wisdom and intelligence be given unto us for our preservation and sanctification according to our day and generation, for the Redeemer's sake. Amen.

A TEST OF FRIENDSHIP.--"I weeded my friends," said an old eccentric gentleman, "by hanging a piece of a stair-carpet out of my first-floor window, with a broker's announcement affixed. It had the desired effect. I soon saw who were friends. It was like firing a gun near a pigeon-house; they all forsook the building at the first report, and I have not had occasion to use the extra flaps of my dining-table since."

A GREAT MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

Taken from the System By Electricity.

The article which follows, published in the Scientific Bulletin, of Paris, is entitled, "The Application of Chemical Electricity to Therapeutics." Though not literal, the substance of the article is intact. The Bulletin says:

Chemistry is about to drag from an anticipated death thousands of men, who, in the exercise of their cruel profession--gilding looking-glass, plating, white lead manufacturing, etc., and also those whose systems have been ruined by mercury in its various forms--for this science has raised her right arm and arrests their misery and destruction. This discovery extracts from their bodies, atom by atom, every particle of metalic substance from every part of the human system. Where do we get this great hope? In a memoir presented to the French Academy of sciences by M. Dumas, which has for its authors two men whose names will strike the ear of the public for the first time to-day. But if they prove what they promise to, they will soon take rank among the greatest benefactors of humanity. These authors are Andre Poly of Havana, and Maurice Vergnes. The invention consists of an application of chemical electricity to accomplish the above purpose, and of all the marvellous things that electricity has achieved this is the boldest and most triumphant.

The modus operandi is as follows: A metalic bath is insulated from everything, and partially filled with acidulated water, to convey more readily the electrical currents. The patient lies upon a seat in the tub insulated entirely from the bath.--When gold, silver, or mercury is in the system, nitric or hydrochloric acids are employed. When lead is suspected, the acid used is sulphuric. This done, the negative pole of a battery is put in connection with the bath, while the positive pole is in the hands of the patient. Now the work of purification commences. The electrity precipitates itself, hunts, digs, searches, and discovers every particle of metalic substance concealed in the most profound tissues, bones, nerves, and joints of the patient, resolves them into their primitive forms, and, extracting them entire from the human organism, deposits them on the sides of the bath, where they can be seen with the naked eye.

After the end of one of these operations a chemist of Havanna, M. Moissann, having annalyzed 912 drachms of the liquid in the bath, saw foaming a metalic globule of the diameter of nine-tenths of a mill-metre, and this was mercury. At another time the same chemist saw a very light, white, precipitated substance, which gave two globules of metalic lead, perfectly visible to the naked eye, and M. Poly announced that he had taken from the tibia and thigh-bone of a patient a quantity of mercury that had been there, creating intense suffering for fifteen years.

Upon the foregoing announcement of the Paris Bulletin, the Louisville Journal remarks:

This is certainly a most remarkable discovery if what it proposes to do shall be accomplished. We would suggest to the inventors to extend their investigations, and see whether meanness, malice, and lying can not be extracted from a man's system. If they shall succeed in doing this, there will be a field for its exhibition on various Locofoco editors.

A PICTURE OF KNOW-NOTHINGISM.

The New York Herald, the leading Know-Nothing organ of the country, thus speaks of the beauties of the new party. Bennett, with his usual sagacity, sees it has nearly run the length of its rope, and he is about to take a new tack so as to go with the current:

"What are their principles and purposes as a great national organization? They are as mysterious and inexplicable as the future destinies of the order. The party themselves in this respect are veritable Know-Nothings. Look, for instance, at Massachusetts. There they have absolute and undisputed possession of the government; yet there they have favored us recently with some of the most abominable legislative developments of fanaticism, treason, and indecency--treason to the constitution, and indecent outrages against private rights and public morality. In New York, again, we find a portion of the Know-Nothings aiding in Seward's re-election, and aiding in the passage of the new liquor law of pains and penalties, which is destined to produce a more disastrous revulsion in the business affairs of this community than all our Schuyler frauds and bank and commercial failures of the last ten years. There are already two or three branches of this Know-Nothing movement in this State, two or three in Pennsylvania, two or three in Massachusetts, and similar symptoms of division and discord are not wanting in other States. How all these discrepancies are to be harmonized is the inexplicable mystery of which we speak."

SPEECH OF ZACHARIAH SPICER,

On the Question "which enjoys the greatest amount of happiness: The Bachelor or the Married Man?"

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN.--I rise to advocate the cause of the married man. And why should I not? I claim to know something about the institution, I do. Will any gentleman pretend to say I do not? Let him accompany me to my home. Let me confront him with my wife and 17 children, and decide.

High as the Rocky Mountains tower above the Mississippi Valley, does the character of the married man tower above that of the bachelor! What is a bachelor? What was Adam before he got acquainted with Eve?

What but a poor, shiftless, helpless, insignificant creature? No more to be compared with his afterself than a mill dam to the great roaring cataract of Niagara! (Applause.)

Gentlemen, there was a time, I blush to name it, when I too was a bachelor, and a more miserable creature you would hardly expect to find. Every day I toiled hard and at night came home to my comfortless garret--no carpet, no fire, no nothing. Everything was in a clutter, and in the words of the poet:

"Confusion was monarch of all I survey."

Here lay a pair of pants, there a dirty pair of boots; there a play bill, and here a pile of dirty clothes. What wonder that I took refuge at the gambling-table and bar-room. I found it would never do, gentlemen and in a lucky moment, I vowed to reform. Scarcely had the promise passed my lips when a knock was heard at the door, and in came Susan Simpkins after my dirty clothes.

"Mr. Spicer says she, 'I've washed for you for the last six months, and I havn't seen the first red cent of pay. Now I would like to know what you are going to do about this matter."

I felt in my pocket-book, there was nothing in it, and I knew it well enough.

"Miss Simpkins" said I, its no use denying it, I haint got the pewter, I heartily wish for your sake that I had it."

"There now," said she, promptly. "I don't wash another stitch for you, so there."

"Stop Susan!" said I, "I will do what I can for you. Silver and gold have I none, but if my heart and hand will do, they are at your service."

"Are you in earnest?" said she, looking a little suspicious.

"Never more so," said I.

"Then," says she "as there appears to be no other way of getting my pay, I guess I will take up with your offer."

Enough said. We were married in a week, and what is more, we haint repented it. No more attics for me, gentlemen. I live in a good house and have somebody to mend my clothes.

When I was a poor miserable bachelor, I was as thin as a weasel, but now I'm as plump as a poker.

In conclusion, gentlemen, if you want to be a poor ragged devil, and not have a coat to your back, or a shoe to your foot, if you want to be old before your time, and as uncomfortable generally, as a hedgehog rolled up the wrong way, I advise you to remain a bachelor; but if you want to live comfortably and respectably, get married. I've got ten daughters, gentlemen, (over-powering applause) and you may have your pick.

Mr. Spicer sat down amid long and continued plaudits. The general proposal with which he concluded secured him five sons-in-law.

A MISSOURI LADY IN EUROPE.

A lady of our neighboring State, who is making a tour through some of the countries of Europe, and who is also the owner of a number of slaves in Missouri, has recently written a letter from Vienna, to one of her negroes. The following extract will be found interesting:

"I never see one of your color where I am--and have rarely met with a colored person since I left the shores of America; but I have witnessed misery and distress, such as you know nothing of. In England, where so much concern has been expressed for the colored people of our country, there is much human suffering. I passed through large manufacturing towns, where the houses seemed almost piled up upon each other, crowded in dark lanes and alleys, half under ground, like so many dungeons, with no pure air, the light of heaven shut out of their damp, comfortless dwellings. I compared, in my own mind, these wretched dwellings with the cottages which are furnished on the plantations for the homes of the servants, and the thought arose--how much better off are the colored people of America than those poor families with whom it is all work, work--little children and all, with no hope of any improvement in their condition, no kind word from master or mistress--if they are sick and unable to be in their places, or commit any fault, they are liable to be turned off, and then they may starve, for no one will employ a workman who has been turned away by another master. There are more workmen than places to fill. In the mining and coal districts, the condition of the working people is still worse than in the manufacturing towns; here children are born under ground, pass their lives, and die in old age, without ever having seen the glorious sun or moon, which the good God made for his creatures.

In France, Switzerland, and in Austria, I have seen the fields covered with women plowing, getting out or spreading manure, digging and ditching, working on railroads, and carrying loads of dirt or manure on their heads in bags and baskets. They are so sun-burnt as often to be blacker than many colored persons, wrinkled, and sad looking, as if they had grown old before their time, and had never a happy feeling. The miserable hovels are usually surrounded with mud and filth, with pigs or a cow before the door, the barn and house are mostly together, scarcely a slight partition dividing them. When the poor women have finished their hard day's work, (and this I observed was prolonged till dark,) they pick upon their children and go to their comfortless homes. These people do not own the land they work on, and may be turned away when a new master comes.

In witnessing the poverty and wretchedness of these lands, I think of our own country, and the many comforts enjoyed by all. Even the poorest are not as miserable as they might be."--[Quincy Herald.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,
SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer, address box 488.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor, 102 Nassau st., cor. of Ann.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.
Wm. Cazier, Nephi City.
S. B. Hoyt, Fillmore City, U. Territory.

THE BLACK LEADER.

It is often said by very competent judges, that, "there is honor among thieves." We wish we could say as much to the credit of anti-Mormon editors, and their servile minions: but justice forbids it, for their cup of dishonor is full, and runs over upon every paragraph of their vile productions. The city of St. Louis furnishes, probably, as honorable a contingent of the editorial fraternity, as any city in the Union. We hoped to have added the editor of the Leader to the honored list, for some had whispered to us that the Leader was a gentleman, but they were certainly mistaken, which his last week's editorial will prove beyond a doubt. "It is notorious," says the sooty Leader, "that the Territorial Officers sent to Utah by the United States, cannot undertake the discharge of the duties to which they are named!" Now, every one knows this to be a notorious lie, and if the editor did not make it, he is equally guilty for publishing it. The Leader uses freely Judge Kinney's name in the course of the article, and affirms, by the by, that he has been offered the appointment of Governor of Utah, and has signified his intention to accept it, which may be put down as lie No. 2. Let us hear what the Judge has said upon the subject—we quote his own words: "If I examine my own feelings in relation to coming to this place, I was actuated by one feeling, which was, to show to the world, that a man could occupy my present position, and discharge the duties thereof faithfully." We have cited the highest authority as a witness, that can be demanded by any jury—the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Utah Territory, and a clear verdict is given against the Leader as a liar in the first degree; and it is written in the Leader's own book, that "all liars shall have their portion in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone." We will leave him there a while, and again refer to the sayings of Judge Kinney. He says: "I heard the report made by the originator of the first excitement; his own statements condemn him. I saw him in Washington, and told him to his teeth, in the lobby of the House of Representatives, that when they chastised him in Utah, it was because he deserved it." Yet in the face of all this evidence the Leader has the effrontery and insolence to affirm that the Territorial Officers cannot undertake the discharge of their duties in Utah—that "they have no alternative but to become the supple tools of Young, or share the fate of Gunnison." Perfidious wretch, that could publish calumnies so base, and insinuations so damnable. Shall we seriously refute these venomous charges, made against us? No! let them return home and fasten upon the vitals of the foul calumniator, and gnaw his guilty conscience until he repent and make restitution for the wanton injustice, and base libel perpetrated against an innocent righteous people.

The Leader makes Judge Kinney to say, that at the late trial of some Indians in Nephi city, Utah, for the murder of Capt. Gunnison, several of the Jury acknowledged that they had rendered their verdict in obedience to Brigham Young, who is charged indirectly, with having entered into a conspiracy with the hostile Indian tribes, against the citizens of the United States. The first question is so deformed and ugly, that we think its father must be a cripple; for the child carries upon its frontlet, the black mark of the beast. The Leader must be an egregeous blockhead to dish up a mess of such ill-proportioned falsehoods, with an idea that any decent and respectable person would receive them. They may be relished by the devout Monks, and the leures Femes modeste—the Nuns, and the Leader's empty headed devotees; but every honest hearted man and woman will regard them as most loathsome and nauseous, and as the base productions of an evil heart. Would several members of a Jury make a voluntary acknowledgment, with impunity, that they had perjured themselves? Oh, monstrous absurdity! equalled only by the monstrosities of the Leader's Popish creed.

As to the charge against Governor Young, for conspiracy with the Indians—'tis an old story—it has been worn threadbare long ago—having no foundation in fact, nor possessing the slightest evidence to support the allegation. The New York Commercial Advertiser, writing upon the subject, says:

"It is worthy of notice that Brigham Young cooperated with the United States Government and gave Col. Steptoe valuable counsel as to the best mode of securing the murderers. His practical knowledge of the habits and haunts of the Indians, was of essential service, and following his suggestions, Col. Steptoe had an interview with the Chief of the tribe, and by peaceful negotiations obtained the surrender of six of the alleged murderers. Three of these only were indicted, viz: Ankle Joint, Sandy Hair, and White Tree. These were tried at Nephi city, Juab county, in March, and as we have said were convicted of man-slaughter.

"Beyond question the Territory of Utah promises to be a source of sufficient trouble and perplexity without overclouding the prospect with the shadows of unreal and imagmary difficulties.

"If to Brigham Young's prudent and judicious counsel is to be attributed the surrender of these murderers to the United States authorities—if Col. Steptoe sought and acted upon his advice, and found in the success that resulted from following it, an evidence of Young's good faith—it seems neither just nor a fitting requittal to charge upon his secret machinations the erroneous verdict of the Jury. It involves a contradiction that is to obvious to be overlooked by any reflecting person."

Liars rarely stop to think, or reflect upon their course, or to consider the veracity or consistency of their sayings If they can but make capital of their lies and make them answer their purpose, they are just as much sought after and appreciated by their readers as the truth; and a great deal more so, if those lies have any bearing against the Church of Latter-day Saints.

It is really amusing to the careless observer of events, to watch the miserable plans and schemes devised by anti-Mormon editors and divines to arrest the progress of Mormonism. Neither reason, revelation, law, truth, justice, nor any other honorable principle, appear to have any place in them. One would almost be ready to conclude that their Black Leader had, by some sulphurious or other chemical process, extracted every principle from their constitution, except meanness, malice, and murder, and their concomitants, indeed they appear to possess so little of any other principle, that 'tis questionable whether anything else could possibly be extracted from them. They bear a striking resemblance to their Black Chief of Bible notoriety, who like a mean cowardly devil, ingratiated himself into the favor of Eve, in the absence of her husband deceived and seduced her, and brought misery and death to the inhabitants of the earth. By a series of acts of a similar character, he has become the great Professor and Apostle of the Gentiles, and stands at the head of all the institutions and Governments of the earth. His government was so universal in what is called the Apostolic age, that he showed Jesus all the kingdoms of the earth which were under his rule and dominion, and said, "all these kingdoms will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me."

He now holds the same power and dominion in the earth, and were it not for the Latter-day Saints, their Prophets, Apostles, revelations, and organizations, his government would now be universal. He controls the spirit of the press, and governs the feelings and dictates the religions affairs of all nations, and when a demonstration of their feelings is made, either from the pulpit or press, it is at once known as the spirit of their Black Leader. It may be truly said vox populi vox diaboli.

In the Romish church, he will chant vespers, and recite Latin with the devoutest priest of the strictest order. He is said to be particular partial to a Monastic life, and withal exceedingly abstemeous. It was by his will and command that the law was given for the church to abstain from meats, and her priests forbidden to marry, being himself ineligible for marriage he is a decided and inveterate opposer of the institution.

He is not particularly opposed to monogomy in general, but he abominates polygamy as much as he is said to hate holy water. He has no objection to a man having one wife, and seducing a dozen others; but for a Prophet to marry several wives as Jacob did, and raise up a nation of Prophets, Patriarchs, and Saints in opposition to his extended government and dominion, is a pill he can in no way swallow. Only think of Brigham Young, the twelve Apostles and other Elders of the Latter-day Saints, receiving the blessings of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, (a plurality of wives,) and each of these Elders raising up a nation of Prophets, Patriarchs, and Saints, as Jacob did. Is it not awful to contemplate the consequences and their terrible effect upon the rebellious kingdoms of the earth. It is enough forsooth to scare ten thousand devils. No wonder that their Black Leader has turned mad, and his ministers rage and foam, and resort to mean, malicious, and murdererous measures to prevent this dread consumation. No wonder they incoherently exclaim, Mormon delusion! Fanaticism! Treason! Polygamy! &c., &c. No wonder they advocate the propriety of sending U. States troops to Utah to murder the Prophets and Saints. Anomalous as these things may appear, they are perfectly consistent with the calling and position of anti-Mormons in the church and kingdom of the devil; and we wish them all the success their Black Chief can possibly give them, and when they have finished their mission all the honor and happiness his home can afford them.

SAVE YOUR DIMES.

The question is often asked by our brethren with more or less intensity of feeling, how shall we be able to gather home to the valleys of the mountains? It has become a question of such solicitude and importance, and we have been so quetioned and importuned upon the subject that we have been led by these earnest solicitations of our brethren from a knowledge of their circumstances, and sympathy in their position, to propose a plan, the practical operation of which, will fully answer the all absorbing question. 'Tis not not a crude and hasty movement on our part, but a subject we have carefully considered in all its bearings; and a subject which all who have canvassed and comprehended have approved and pronounced, very good.

It will be remembered by some, that at our last conference held 6th of April 1855, we suggested for the consideration of the Conference, the propriety of each one saving his dollars and dimes for his own emigration, to the home of the Saints; the proposition was received with joy and gladness, for it commended itself to the circumstances and wants of the people. As a theory, it was appreciated and accepted, and it now remains for you individually, to reduce it to practice, and it will save you many a dollar that you now squander away, for that which is worse than useless, which judicially deposited, will constitute the foundation of your salvation, from the midst of strangers and aliens to your religion, and your God, and the kingdom he hath established in these the last days.

The adage "God helps those who help themselves," has become familiar to you as household words, and the system we propose is one by which you may help yourselves, to the greatest sum of your aspirations. Do you aspire to the privilege of conversing with the Lord's anointed face to face, and receiving the revelations of Jesus from their lips? If so, save your dimes, and deposite them as you may be directed, by the bishops of your several wards, and God will help you. Do you desire to go up to the house of the Lord in the tops of the mountains, that you may be taught in his ways, that you may walk more fully in his paths? then help yourselves, and God will help you, and you will be gathered home to Zion ere some have drained their whisky barrel, or finished chewing their cavendish and pigtail.

The several bishops in this Stake, are all instructed and authorized to receive your donations to the emigration fund, who will give you receipts for all monies paid, which will be handed over to the general Secretary and Treasurer; with an understanding that it be deposited for the special interest and benefit of the depositor, for his own individual emigration, or for the emigration of such person or persons to whom he may transfer his interest, which may be done by gift or purchase, but on no pretence whatever, shall any monies deposited in this fund be appropriated to any other purpose than that of Emigration.

We believe there are very few Saints in this city, and indeed throughout this Stake of Zion, but could in two or three years gather up to Zion by adopting the plan of saving weekly some portion of their earnings. they could at the least send along some portion of their family who would reach back their arms to the remaining portion and produce a reaction that would in the end be equally salutary.

There are numbers of Saints who have arrived, and will yet arrive among us this year, who will be unable to go through this season to the valley. If the bishops and visiting officers will instil into their minds this, in connection with other principles, it will prove the Gospel of Jesus Christ unto their salvation, and the next year they with hundreds more, by this means may wend their way to Zion, who otherwise might remain here for years or perchance fall under the destroyers rod, and never reach their place of destination.

The S. Curling, and Chimborazo.

The New York Tribune contains a somewhat lengthy and interesting article concerning the company of Saints of the ship S. Curling which landed at that port on the 22nd inst.

The Tribune furnishes the most minute, favorable and interesting description of the company that could be wished. A more flatering and eulogistic compliment we do not recollect to have ever seen, concerning a company of emigrants to any nation. It appears from the details, that the writer made himself particularly acquainted with Elder William Willes, the company's Secretary, who has traveled some several years in India. Our readers may expect a brief sketch of his travels in our next paper, as well as the article above referred to, which will doubtless be interesting to all our readers.

The Chimborazo arrived at Philadelphia the same day that the S. Curling arrived at New York; both companies may be expected at this City about the same time. they left on the 24th and 25th for this City, and may be expected on Monday at latest.

WE HAVE HAD the pleasure during the week, of striking hands with our worthy and esteemed brother Elder Daniel Spencer, of the Presidency of the British missions. He made a quick trip from Liverpool, by the Steam-ship America. He arrived in this City on Wednesday morning, and left the same day for Atchison, on the splendid Steam-boat Alma, in company with the Hon. Seth M. Blair.

We hope to be favored with Elder Spencer's company during the remainder of the emigrating season. His presence is cheering and gratifying to us, and we doubt not but his experience and wisdom will prove beneficial to the camps' of Israel, now about to take up their line of march to the vales of the west.

Elder Spencer will return to England at the close of the Emigration.

MORALS IN NEW YORK.

The following paragraph from the New York Herald, shows the state of morals in that city to be anything but respectable. St. Louis and other cities have nothing to boast of in that respect, we think from the constant exposures of their corruptions and pollutions, that they are sinking daily into greater depths of vice and infamy, and will soon be prepared for the besom of destrution, en attendant, let them never lisp the name of Utah and its inhabitants but with respect and reverence, for their morality and purity are au dessus any other people in the world—polygamy notwithstanding.

In accordance with the orders of Mayor Wood, the police captains in the several districts last night made another decent upon the street walkers. The station houses were soon thronged with these poor creatures, and their still more miserable male associates, who make a living off these poor children of shame. The sixth ward police arrested a number of girls who make the Park their resort to pursue their calling, these are generally the most abandoned characters, as was abundantly evinced when taken to the station house. They shouted, sung, and made all manner of uncouth noises. They were accommodated with cells for the night. There were twenty seven in all, the majority of whom were found in the Park. In the fifth ward, there were twenty arrested. One of the women, incensed at being arrested swallowed a vial of laudanum. A doctor was sent for, and the use of a stomach pump made all right. In the eighth ward there were no arrests made, as the women got wind of the foray, and wisely kept out of the streets. Those few who did make their appearance, walked along quietly, and acted very differently from the way they usually conduct themselves.

By ten o'clock, so quick had the news spread, the streets were as noiseless and quiet as they usually are about three o'clock in the morning. The appearance of the great thoroughfare was very different from the way it usually appears. In the Fourteenth ward there were five girls arrested, mostly those of an abandoned character, who were making a disturbance in the street. There could not be less than a hundred girls taken up to the station houses in the lower wards.

As the attention of the authorities is now fixed on this matter, it would be well for them to take some notice of the men who make it a business to follow young girls in the streets, and insult them with infamous proposals.

A young and very pretty girl came to the office of the Chief of Police last night, and informed Sergeant Owens that she had just arrived from Albany, and was crossing the Park, on her way to a boarding house, when she was accosted by a well dressed scamp, who offered to accompany her home. she declined his company, but he continued to follow her, until she was compelled to take refuge in the Chief's office. Officer Mathews was sent in pursuit of the fellow, and succeded in arresting him; but as the girl refused to make a charge, he was allowed to go. This is but one of the many cases that nightly occur. Poor working girls, on their way home, after dark, dare not cross the Park, for fear of being grossly insulted.

To-day the girls arrested last night will be taken to the several police courts, and dealt with as the law directs.

Awful Whirlwind—Life and Property Destroyed.

The tornado, whirlwind, and earthquake, are becoming frequent in this and other countries, but very rarely has a whirlwind in this hemisphere caused such fearful devastation as that of the last week. We copy the following particulars from the Chicago times of the 24th inst.

"We learn from a gentleman who resides in the vicinity of O'Plain Station, on the Illinois and Wisconsin Railroad, that an awful whirlwind swept over that neighborhood on Tuesday afternoon last Persons at O'Plain witnessed about four o'clock a spectacle like dense smoke, rising in a huge column from the earth, at a distance of a few miles to the west. The column extended upwards to the clouds, when it became violently agitated with a whirling motion, and commenced moving over the country towards the south-east. It bore some resemblance to a water-spout, but was more terrible in its appearance and movements. Lightnings flashed from the heavens and descended through the column, contrasting streaks of flame with its dark out-lines, and lending to the whole an aspect truly fearly.

The column continued moving in a circular direction towards the south-east, through a segment of about forty-five degrees, when it suddenly broke in two and disappeared. In a few minutes, at the point where the column went down, it was observed to rise again, this time apparently but a few feet in diameter. It expanded as it went whirling upward, until nearly as large as before, and on reaching the clouds (to appearonce) moved back again towards the North-west, over almost precisely the same path as before. When about half way back to its first starting point, the column disappeared and was no more seen.

This strange looking phenomena was a whirlwind. On hearing from the neighborhood where it was first observed to rise, (about twenty miles from this city,) it was found to have been of the most terrible character—uprooting and destroying everything which happened to be in its path. The house of Mr. Page, about a mile south of O'Plain station, was totally demolished, and four of the inmates were killed.—Three others, the son, and daughter-in-law of Mr. Page, and one of their children, were badly, and our informant tells us, dangerously injured. The persons killed were the wife of Mr. Page, sr., and three of his grand children. Two other children were hurt, making nine altogether who were either killed or injured by the calamity. One of the children was found twenty rods from where the house stood, its body mutilated in a most shocking manner and stripped of every particle of clothing. The house was a frame, and stood upon a solid stone foundation, from which it was lifted bodily by the wind, and dashed to fragments.

Farther west the whirlwind demolished a large barn, and instantly killed a fine horse and a number of calves which were inside. Fences were levelled, trees uprooted and twisted from their trunks by the awful power of the wind. The destruction along the path which it travelled must have been very great. We fear that more human lives have been lost. The wind, it is said, was the most terrific which has ever been known in this region of country, where whirlwinds have not been an uncommon occurrence.

The wind was accompanied by a heavy fall of rain and hail. The account given of the size of hailstones which in the vicinity of O'Plain are almost incredible. The conductor of the passenger train, which left here on Tuesday afternoon, assures us that he picked up a hail stone which fell in the vicinity of O'Plain Station and carried it in the cars to Fox River, where it was still larger than a hen's egg. Similar facts are vouched for by other witnesses. In this city, hail fell plentifully, many of the stones being the size of hickory nuts.

LATER.—We learn by a gentleman who was at O'Plain, yesterday, that Mr. Page, jr. and wife are lying in a dangerous situation on account of injuries received in the demolition of their house.—The scene of the terrible disaster is described as one of Universal ruin and destruction.

In one place, some twenty rods of "post and rail" fence—the post firmly driven in the ground—was torn up and carried, no one knows where. Not a rail or post of it could be anywhere found.

SECOND DISPATCH.—Additional testimony from the locality of the tempest confirm the above accounts. Persons near the Aux Plains River were carried bodily near a hundred feet through the air. We have seen eye witnesses of the ravages of the whirlwind, who describe it as most terrific. It is possible, however, that some of the statements may be exagerated, but the effects of the wind are truly frightful.

On the same afternoon there was a severe hail-storm in this city, which was succeeded by a singular appearance of the sky to the north-east, and a sultry oppressive heat, suddenly changing to a chilly freeze.

CHICAGO, May 25.

Witnesses who just returned from the scene of the tornado, report that the wife and part of the family of Mr. Gillet, were caught up a fearful distance by the whirlwind, and the former killed; the house occupied by them was crushed and torn into pieces of wood about three feet long, and a chest containing several hundred dollars, has completely vanished.

The suffering and destitution of some of the families is indescribable, and the force of the tempest quite transcends belief. Just previous to the beginning of the whirlwind, the temperature in that vicinity was 90° above zero. Suddenly a violent storm of hailstone, some of them as large as hen's eggs commenced, which was immediately followed by the tornado.

Correspondence.

GREAT S. L. CITY, U. T. Feb. 21, '55.

ELDER E. SNOW:—In my leisure moments, I am always thinking, and believing a drop or two from the mountains will afford a refreshment. I communicate them to you.

ISRAEL'S COMING.

BY W. W. PHELPS.

Lo! we come from every nation,
As the children of the Lord;
From the East—the land of Abr'am,
Where we heard the sacred word.
CHORUS: We're the true born sons of Zion,
With the holy Priesthood on;
We're the royal seed of Israel,
And our Gentile race is run:
We're the lawful heirs of Abr'am.

From the land of blood and carnage,
When the might of monarchs flow;
From the land where serving peasants
Feel the cramps of wealth and wo.

From the land of "bitter princes,"
When the mountains shine with snow;
From the land of "hither India,"
Where the silk and tea both grow.

From the land that Ham inherits,
With his curse the same as Cain's;
From the land of grapes and citrons,
From the deserts and the plains.

From the Islands of the Ocean,
Rich in spice and tropic grains;
From the midst of every nation,
Where the "prince of this world" reigns.

From the caves and dens in mountains,
Where the "remnants" were reserved;
From the wilderness and forests,
Where the seed of Joseph served.

From the East and West like brethren,
Now we come with one accord;
From the North and South we gather
To the "Lion of the Lord."

We have left the "dreadful splendor,"
That enchants its minion slaves;
We have left our "Gentile honors,"
And We've left our fathers' graves.

'Tis the end of Jacob's troubles,
'Tis the time of our release;
'Tis the day of God Almighty,
For a thousand years' of peace.

MORMON GROVE, K. T.
May 22nd, 1955.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LUMINARY:

Feeling as though any information concerning the progress and health of the camp of Israel would be gladly received by the Saints in general, I feel to employ a few minutes this evening, in communicating to you some things in relation to our present prospects.

I arrived at this place on the 12th inst., in charge of five hundred and fifty head of oxen and cows, for the benefit of our spring emigration. On arriving we found the brethren at the grove enjoying perfect health, and much of the spirit of the Lord. They had put up a small log cabin, and covered it, for the purpose of storing provisions; so we have already at this place, a store-house of the Lord's people. Garden vegetables looking green and fresh, connected with this small house, begins to make the country at the grove, look like a fruitful field.

The next day after our arrival, I started the hands to ditching in the farm, and at the present time, there is nearly one mile of the ditch and sod fence completed. We expect in the course of ten days, to have the fence completed. We started the plough at the same time, and have planted about five acres of corn, potatoes, and garden vegetables. The beautiful situation at and around the grove, makes many that have not been used to a prairie country, say that they would be willing to remain at this beautiful place; but those who feel and know the spirit of truth, have no attachment to the lands whilst under the rule of Gentile influence; but they pant for the water and bread of life in the far Western vallies, near the great backbone of the American Continent.

At 5 o'clock this evening, I harnessed my horses, took some of the Saints for the purpose of taking a more extensive view of the country, and all were much delighted while we were driving over the rolling hills of old Father Lehi's farms; and after a ride of about six miles, we came around to Denmark, or rather, to the camp of the Danish Saints, who have just arrived to-day, under the charge of P. O. Hanson, and whilst in their camp we learned by brother Hanson, that they were highly delighted with the country, and that they had just dismissed a public meeting which they had been holding that afternoon. Brother Hanson informed us that they had more of the spirit of the Lord in their meeting, than they had had at any other time since they have been in the upper country. They have suffered much with sickness at Leavenworth, and feel glad to think that there is a prospect of starting soon, on their journey over the plains. We anticipate, if no preventing providence should say otherwise, to start a company in about six days. There is a general good spirit prevailing, and the Saints in general feel desirous to serve God, by obeying those who are placed over them in the Lord, and all things seem to be working for the way to be speedily opened for the starting of the Saints.

I would say to my Counsellors in St. Louis—Br. Edwards and Gardiner—also, the High Council, be fathers to the flock which the Holy Ghost has entrusted to your care, and the God of peace will give you the spirit of judgment and of might. To the Saints in general, I would say, be faithful, and you shall have the privilege, ere long, of tasting in real life, the benefits of the encampment of the Latter-day Saints.

I have preached since my arrival here, three times, and find that the Lord pours out abundantly, his holy spirit, and all that love him rejoice while under its influence. We also have had a small encampment of some six wagons and families of Strang's disciples crawl under our banner and ask for the right hand of fellowship, which I proffered to give them when they would come through the waters of baptism to get it, which I think from the spirit already manifest, they will readily do when I designate the time. There are others in our camp who wished to be baptised—we shall attend to all such cases in a day or two.

I shall now close by praying my Father in heaven to bless and preserve His people. May grace be multiplied unto them that know the Lord. Amen.

MILO ANDRUS.

St. Louis, May 23, 1855.

President Snow,

Dear Sir: —I wish to say through the Luminary to my brethren in general, but more particularly to the Eleventh Quorum of Seventies, to which I claim to belong, that I have lately arrived in St. Louis, from the State of Vermont with my family and am bound for the mountains of Israel as soon as circumstances will admit. Since our exodus from Navoo, many have been the changes of circumstances that I have been subject to, in connection with many of my brethren, and taking every thing into consideration, our persecutions, losses, sacrifices, &c., I cannot but acknowledge the blessings of my heavenly Father, in preserving my life, and favoring me with the privilege of gathering thus far towards the mountains of Isreal.

Whilst I have been absent from you, I have endeavored to stand forth boldly in defence of the great work of the last days. I have been testimony to many people in public and in private, many have listened with candor to my testimony, some have received it and are now rejoicing in the vallies of the mountains with the Saints of God. The great work of the last days is my whole scheme and ever has been ever since I became aequainted with it — It has been my study night and day to something for its advancement amongst the children of men, having some realizing sense of the importance of the work from facts which have come under my own observation. I am a living witness to the power of the Almighty, accompanying the ordinances of the Gospel through the prayer of faith.

I can surely say in fulfilment of a promise sealed upon my head by Bro. Hyrum Smith whilst in Nauvoo, that the Lord hath greatly blessed me at home and abroad, in my administration of the ordinances of the Gospel, am witness that the dumb speak, and the sick are healed, and devils cast out, by the power of God, &c., and herewith give my testimony to all people, Saints and sinners that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, to introduce the last dispensation even the dispensation of the fulness of times; and a greater and better man never lived upon the earth. I wish also to give my testimony in favor of Brigam Young he being the first man that I heard preach the fulness of the everlasting gospel. I have the most implicit confidence in him as a prophet and man of God, in connection with all others who hold the Priesthood of this dispensation. The greatest and most that I desire is a good standing in the church, and the confidence of my brethren. I hold myself ready to do anything that I can for the advancement of the work of the Almighty. I also wish to say to my brethren of the Quorum, that I desire to be one with you and hope you will uphold me by your faith and prayers, and as soon as circumstances will admit of it, I shall be on my way over the plains. I wish also to say that it has been nothing but unavoidable circumstances that has kept me where I have been for the last few years. I must now close by wishing you and all Israel peace and prosperity.

Your Brother in the Gospel of Christ,

JAMES BURGESS.

St. Louis, May, 31, 1855.

To the Editor of the Luminary:

Dear Brother: —I write at the request of Brother James Case, to inform you and those that feel interested in the rolling forth of the "little stone," that he left St. Louis, immediately after the conference, wending his way up the great Father of waters, until he arrived at Alton, where, being directed by the Spirit of God, (as all Saints should be, especially the Elders in these dark and benigtened times,) he made a halt and labored there, and in the regions round about, until about the last of April, where I found him Sunday 29th. He informed me that he felt that his mission was done there, having baptized and rebaptized about twenty adults. As I was bound for Jacksonville, via., Springfield, Ill. He requested me to tarry until Monday evening and he would accompany me as far as Springfield, as he had a work to do their, before he went farther north. We had a pleasant trip, stopped at the house of Nicholas Grossbeck. We received a hearty welcome, they are old Mormons, but but had remained so long in the fog that obscures this once happy land they had lost sight of the little stone that has been rolling for twenty-five years past, and will roll until it fills the whole earth.

In the morning we discovered that the brother of the Prophet Joseph Smith had been our fellow lodger, he was very much surprised and sorely displeased to see a brace of Salt Lake Mormons, he was pleased to term us. He had been laboring with might and main to poison the minds of all as far as his influence extends, against the authorities of the church of Christ in Utah, villifying the characters of the Elders that are sent by said authorities. He had endeavored to give a public lecture against polygamy, at the hall in Springfield, but it was no go, it was like old Darky reproving sin. I had a long talk with him concerning his position, he thinks he has been "shamefully treated, persecuted and abused," by said authorities through misrepresentation, and a lack of knowledge concerning him, etc. He said he was willing to submit his case to, and abide the decision of President Brigham Young, provided he could retain his Apostleship, if so he was willing to be a Brighamite and be numbered as one of the Salt Lake Mormons.

I visited Jacksonville found a number of old Mormons that were in about the same fix as the Saints at Ephesus were—they could not bear those which were evil — they had tried him who said he was an Apostle, but found him a liar — had borne and had patience, and had not fainted. Nevertheless, they had lost their first love, they were blind and could not see afar off. I exhorted them to do their first works, or their candlestick would be removed from its place, for it was of no manner of use, unless they kept a candle in it, trimmed and a burning. Subsequently I paid them another visit, in company with Bro. Case, they heard of our arrival, and assembled at the house of Sister Julia Hampton, relict of Bro. Jonathan Hampton, whose body lies sleeping under the silent clay in Nauvoo, awaiting the joyous glories of the resurrection day. We gave them some instructions suitable to the occasion, as we were led by the spirit, they received our testimony and counsel with gladness, and manifested an anxious desire to renew their covenants by re-baptism, that they might be numbered with the Saints. According to their desires, we repaired to the water the next day, (May 22) and re-baptized eight, and baptized one person for the remission of sins, and confirmed them members of the Church Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, by the imposition of hands.

It was a glorious time, some had united with the Church soon after its organization, and belonged to the Colesville branch. The names of those that renewed their covenants were as follows: William Strtngham, and his wife Eliza; Phillip Stringham and his wife Mehetable; Julia Hampton and her sons, Brigham Y. and Eadly Foster Hampton; also Walter Stringham.

Having business in the East, I left on Thursday, the 24th inst., for Chicago, brother Case remaining at Jacksonville, where he had not been idle. He had organized a branch of twelve members, brake bread and administered the sacrament—they had a glorious time. I visited them all and found them filled with the spirit. I felt almost willing to postpone going to the Valley this season, if it was according to counsel. I left brother Case in Jacksonville as happy as a Saint. There are many sheep in this part of Illinois, that are anxious to be gathered into the fold again. Wm.. Smith's influence is on the wane in those regions. In Springfield, brother Case rebaptized six persons who had weighed William in the balance, and found him wanting. The names are as follows: Jonathan Palmer and wife, Levi Golly, Elizabeth Grossbeck, Mary Snyder, and Sarah Yomans, all old Mormons. There are others in Springfield that are almost persuaded to renounce the world and take passage on board Zion's ship. With regard to my humble self, I feel well all the time. My course is onward, but I have gained but little as yet toward my mountain home.

If the Lord will, I shall visit Jacksonville before I go West. My health is and has been excellent with the exception of one day, since I have been in St. Louis, for which I feel grateful to my heavenly Father. That the choicest blessings of heaven may visit and abide with you and those connected with you, is the prayer of yours as ever.

THOMAS COLBURN.

From the Deseret News.

SOUTHERN INDIAN MISSION.

Progress of the Mission; Indian marriage ceremonies; dam across the Santa Clara, &c.

Fort Harmony, March 6, 1855.

To the Editor of the News:

Dear Brother:—A: this time, a few details of our labors on the Santa Clara, or as we call it "The Tonaquint Station"—after the Indian name, may be interesting to your readers.

I copy from the journal of Jacob Hamblin, president of that station, who has just returned hither, after a short but severe fever. Bros. Hamblin, Hardy, and Haskell, have spent the winter there.

"On the 1st Dec., 1854, Jacob Hamblin, Thales Haskell, and A. P. Hardy, started for the Santa Clara; we encamped that night on the Rio Virgin, when we met some of the Pahutes out on a hunting expedition, among whom was their chief, Tatsorgorits. They were much pleased to see us, and more so when we told them we had come to live among them, and teach them to build houses and raise grain. They returned with us to their lodges on the second day, and the chief desired us to camp near his lodge; we did so. On the third day they were much alarmed, having heard that some Utah Indians were on their way to steal their children that night. The chief asked if we would help them to fight; I counselled with my two brethren, and replied that we would if they attempted to steal their children, or if it were necessary. I then let them have ten rounds of ammunition for each gun they had. Spies were sent out, and every thing made ready for the reception of these anticipated thieves. The old chief went aside, and began to preach to the Utahs, as if they were within hearing; he said, they must not come now to steal their children; their white brothers—the Mormons—had come here, and would fight for them. He then came and told me I might lie down, but I must not sleep too hard; and he would wake me before the Utahs came. The night passed, and no Utahs came. The next day we went down the river Santa Clara eight miles, to where we purposed building houses for them and ourselves.

On the 14th December, President R. C. Allen and H. Burgess arrived from Fort Harmony, and on the following day we commenced cutting house logs. We chopped them, and the Indians carried them to the site of building. There is an abundance of cottonwood here, from six inches to three feet in diameter. We soon had one comfortable cabin for ourselves, and two for the Indians."

ARRIVAL OF THE UTAHS!

On the 17th December, "Sanpitch," a Utah chief, brother to Walker, and some others, arrived. Their business was to trade for children. He rather abruptly asked what we wanted to do there? We told him. "He said that Walker, the big chief, wanted we should keep away from there, that the Snakes had been killing the Utahs at Provo, and that the Mormons were glad." We told him that our chief had sent us, and we should stay until he told us to leave; and as for the Mormons at Provo, they had been kind and good to the Utahs, and the Utahs in return had been mean, threatening to shoot, &c.; and if some of the Utahs were killed, it would teach the others to do better. We asked Tatsagorits, the Pahute chief, whether they wished us to stay, or leave. He said that the water and land are ours, and we wish you to stay. Sanpitch then said, "I was blind at first, go ahead; it's all right. I wanted to know if you were braves!" I had some good talk with Sanpitch on the work among the Lamanites in the last days, and of the Son of God. He said "that he (Savior) was not wise enough, when he was here before, to do what his Father wanted him to do; he took him home with him, and he would become very wise, and would come again and destroy everything that was not good on the face of the whole earth, the musquitoes, snakes, wolves, &c." He stayed eight or ten days, bought three girls, giving one horse and two guns for them, and many beads. The father and mother of one of them cried much on seeing their daughter go, but they had nothing to give her to eat, and the gun, her price, would help them to get food. From the oldest girl, aged about 12, as she was carried off, I beheld the tears falling fast and silently, and my heart was pained to think that she might become a slave to the Mexicans.

December 24, we started for Harmony, and with Ira Hatch I again returned to the Tonaquint Station on the 11th January, 1855. After visiting the different encampments, on the 17th January we were invited to "an Indian Wedding, but the bride, having dreaded the ceremony, had made her escape; and until the 24th, we were not permitted to behold this novel spectacle, even for the first time, and then by other parties than those named above. This squaw, with her present husband, had come to visit her family and friends; but the Indian she now lived with had stolen her from another a year before. Her former husband came, and claimed her. The chief said that they must fight for her. About fifty Indians arranged themselves on the sides of the combatants, the contending suitors, according to their feelings, and were about equally divided. They stripped themselves, except about the loins, and tied their hair back. The husbands commenced the fight, bruising each other's faces, and causing the blood to flow, like the more civilized (?) duellists and prize fighters. At length one of them fell, when one of his friends took his place. Thus they continued till all had a share in the melee, and most had their faces badly bruised. Only at times did they appear angry during this brutal ceremony.—They occasionally stopped and wiped their faces, and rubbed and pulled their fingers. Before this the squaw had eaten a good meal, and sat down among the other squaws to witness, and await their feats of bravery.

At this stage of the wedding her part became more prominent. Some one more daring than the others takes her by the arm, and leads her through the crowd until another opponent dares to offer fight again. This is a signal for another fight, and thus they continued till an hour after sundown, having commenced shortly after noon. At one time they tried to haul her over the river, she escaped from them, and running towards me put out her hand that I might help her up the bank, and because I stretched forth my hand to her aid I was counted in the ceremony, and fight was offered, but I escaped in consequence of not knowing their rules.

Eventually they dragged her through the water to where were five or six lodges. The two claimants again fought there, and one of them seized the other by the hair. This, being considered foul play, was the signal for a scene such as I cannot describe.—They all commenced fighting like so many dogs, children and women shouting and hallooing. The bride was trampled under their feet, and fire was thrown into the dense crowd by the women.

At length, having beat one another till tired, they quit. The squaw had fainted, blood issued from her mouth, and she seemed lifeless. Two of them hauled her back of one of the lodges, where they again quarrelled some time; they then tore off her buckskin shirt, fought over this till they were tired, and one of the claimants having got the remainder of it bravely slept on it. This marriage, or the successful wooer, was not decided that night.

The next morning I counted 100 Indians, who had collected for the fight on a convenient place near their lodges, where were two fires. They again took sides, and after they had teased and talked sometime they made a general rush at each other, beating one another till their faces were again bruised and covered with blood. After a while they again rubbed their faces and fingers, pulling the latter, and commenced pulling the same squaw about, and fighting as before, which they kept up till three P. M. of this day.

The day following there was to be another fight for another squaw, eight miles farther down. I was asked to go with them, and went. At 9, A. M., they began as before beating each other; at noon began dragging the squaw; at 3 P. M., they dragged her to the lodges, and I could see no signs of life in her.

The following day they commenced again to fight for the one so long contended for at first, because she did not want to live with the one that had gained her. He won her again, and she still refused.—They tore her clothes off in dragging her through the brush, and started to drag her down the bank of the river. Then I ran between them and it, telling them, as well as I could, how unwise! how unkind! I was happily disappointed at the result, for they stopped, and carried her almost lifeless to the camp, but were somewhat mad because she would not live with the man who had won her.

I then went to the chief, and told him that I would not stop with his people if they persisted in such conduct. He replied, "that was the way they got their women." I told him there was a better way, that if an Indian wanted a wife, and could find one that would live with him, that he should marry them, and they should love their women. You want I should write good to the Mormon chief? "Yes." I write truth to him, and it would be bad to write all I have seen done here, unless you try to stop it now.

He and his chief men counselled that night, and in the morning he came to me and said, "he did not want me to say anything about what had been done, for they were ashamed of it. Throw away all you have seen, and we shall stop such fights." That night, Jan. 28, I preached to them from the house top.

Bros. Knights and thornton having arrived from Cedar City with a donation of picks, spades, axes, &c., we commenced building a stone dam across the Santa Clara for emigrating purposes, 80 feet long, 14 feet high, and three feet thick, the Indians helping. We had suffered some little for want of flour, &c., but a donation from the Parowan Saints came in good season."

T. D. BROWN, Recorder.

P. S.—Our mission does as well as may be expected, more than two-thirds of our time being occupied in "building up Harmony," fencing, farming, &c., that we may live. T. D. B.

AN ODE TO SOLITUDE.

O solitude! how great thy charms,
I throw myself within thy arms
To find some present rest;
Alone with thee, communion sweet,
I haste with joy to thy retreat,
When sore with life oppressed.

O precious rest, when I'm with thee,
From all the cares of life set free—
Secluded from the world;
Then thoughts all pleasing in me rise,
And break restraint—ascend the skies,
Bright visions to behold.

With thee my prayers to heaven ascend,
My thoughts to higher beings tend—
I feel the holy dove;
Its wisdom dwells within my mind,
And gives me hope to be redeemed,
Being filled with heavenly love.

The checquered sceenes of woful life,
Are not designed to give me strife,
Nor wound the heart of love.
There all is calm, and all is rest,
The peace of heaven alone my guest,
How happy is my lot!

Then fare-ye-well, ye great and gay,
Bless't solitude; shall be my lay,
I'll sing of love with thee;
This world with all its pleasures vast,
Will soon be o'er, it cannot last;
But thou art sweet to me!

S. J. Lees.

St. Louis, May 28, 1855.

FRANCE.

Trial of Pianori, the Regicide.

The trial of Pianori, the regicide, came on at Paris on Monday morning, the 7th inst., as appointed. The court was very full. The most crowded part was behind the bench, where official personages and friends of the judges mustered in such numbers that there was scarcely standing room.

The President read from the bench, two telegraphic despatches from the French charge d'affairs at Rome, the first of which is as follows:

"Pianori Senezzio, alias Brizzi Ghellino, aged 32 years, has two children. He fled after a political assassination in Servia, in 1852. He took refuge in Genoa. He has often returned to this country to commit fresh crimes."

The second despatch is as follows:

"Rome, May 5, '55.—Positive information.—Pianori was sentenced to twelve years in the galleys for murder. He is accused as the author of two incendiary fires in 1849."

The prisoner positively denied both these statements, and it must be admitted, as his counsel observed, that they are far from being positive proof that he is the individual who was found guilty of murder in Italy. He admitted, after some hesitation, that people did sometimes call him Brizzi Ghellino, and that he had been in prison for six months, but he pretended he did not know what for.

M. Benoit Champy concluded his plea for the prisoner as follows:

"Perhaps—even if the inflexible justice of the jury should prevail over their sentiments of mercy, the life of the prisoner might yet be saved. Perhaps the Emperor, who protected him from the vengeance of the populace on the theatre of the crime, might yet, in the greatness of his soul, inflict upon the prisoner the punishment of a pardon, and thus condemn him to perpetual remorse and unbounded gratitude."

The jury retired for ten minutes, and returned a verdict of guilty. The court sentenced the prisoner to die the death of a parricide. Pianori retired with the gendarmes without betraying the slightest trepidation.

In former times a parricide had his hand cut off from the wrist previous to execution. The 13th Article of the Penal Code specifies that "the parricide shall be led to the place of execution in a shirt, barefoot, and his head covered with a black veil; that he shall be exposed on the scaffold whilst a public officer reads to the people the sentence of condemnation, and that he shall be immediately put to death." It is rumored that the prisoner declared that, though he did not deny the crime, yet he would not commit it if it was to be done again. It is also thought that the Emperor will commute his punishment, and that Pianori will perhaps be sent to Guiana. This, however, is mere rumor.

If no delay takes place in the execution—the opinion being all but unanimous, both on the part of the judges and of the public, against a mitigation of punishment—it will be owing probably to the information recently received of the existence of a revolutionary plot with ramifications in most of the countries of Europe. It appears that the day the Emperor was fired at the chiefs of the secret societies received accounts that the Emperor was killed, and that Paris was in insurrection. The hope is not yet entirely given up that Pianori, with the prospect of death before him, may make some important disclosures.

Gen. Canrobert to the French Troops.

On the 27th of April, when General Canrobert reviewed the French troops, he said:

"Be confident and patient, for the moment will soon come when, in the name of France, I will knock at the door; and if it is not open, we shall enter both by the windows and the door. With a little patience we will come off triumphant from the terrible struggle, and the glory which it will reflect on you all will be immortal."

His announcement that this fine force, which is in splendid condition, would, within fourteen days, be reinforced to the vast extent of 80,000 men, together with the statement, "if we don't get in at the door, we will at the window," was received with enthusiastic cheers by the troops. The third bombardment was hourly expected to commence.

General Canrobert, in a letter addressed to the Emperor, dated April 28, thus expresses himself:

"It is with pleasure that I announce to your Majesty, that the English army, always so solid, has become as fine and healthy as it was in the first days of its arrival in the East. It is receiving reinforcements in infantry, in cavalry, and in means of transport. I continue to live on the most cordial terms with Lord Raglan, and the two armies continue to be closely united, and count one upon the other."

SPAIN.

Madrid, May 7.—To cover the deficit, an extraordinary impost on the goods of the church has been resolved on. The resignation of M. Cuesto is accepted. M. Luziaraga made known to the Cortes, on the 5th, that the affair of the Black Warrior had been settled in a manner honorable to both countries. He took the opportunity of declaring that Spain would not, at any price, consent to sell Cuba. The Cortes have rejected the vote of censure.

TURKEY.

Trieste, Wednesday.—Constantinople advices of 30th April, by the mail steamer, state, that shocks of earthquake were again perceptible, and that the cholera had reappeared in the suburbs.

An eruption of Vesuvius commenced on the 1st of May. The form of the mountain was undistinguishable, nothing was to be seen but clouds, smoke, and fire. Up to the very zenith the sky was covered with large bulbous clouds, black as ink, and fringed with white; underneath, and half-way down the mountain, everything was on fire, whilst right in the centre of it shot up a cone of black smoke. The scene was rendered still grander by an eclipse of the moon, which took place about two hours and a-half after midnight.

Persia, it is said, would declare for Turkey immediately after the envoys of France and England had arrived at Teheran.

It is reported that the Khan of Khiva had been caught marauding on the Persian territory, and that he had been decapitated at Herat, and his head exposed at Teheran. Twenty-seven other persons suffered with him.

General La Marmora arrived before Balaklava on the evening of the 8th, with 4,000 troops of the Piedmontese contingent.

THE WAR.—THE SEIGE OF SEBASTOPOL.

We continue to publish the most interesting extracts from the various correspondents of the London papers, on the progess of the seige.

The Times correspondent writes: "It is the opinion of the best informed military men that it would not only be useless, but impossible, as we are at present circumstanded, to make an incursion into the country with sufficient force to operate against the Russian army with permanent advantage. It may have been an imprudent step to have set down before (or behind) Sebastopol, but once there we cannot retire. If we were to withdraw our guns and stores, it would take weeks of labor, during which the enemy would redouble their exertions in fortifying the heights around us, to embark our material, and no one, I suppose, for a moment thinks it would be advisable to abandon them. It would require a very considerable force to hold these heights. If we left them, the enemy would most likely occupy them and our forces are not strong enough to invest them and the north side at the same time. It seems that there is nothing for it but patience. Every day the difficulties of Russia in feeding her Crimean army and supplying the munitions of war to Sebastopol will increase. The transport of the Crimea has been "used up" long ago, and at present carts and cattle from Poland have been brought down, and are engaged in conveying provisions and material to the place.

Although Russian iron is excellent, it cannot last for ever—guns must wear out, and shot and shell do not grow. With the sea at our command, we find it difficult to keep up the supply of shot and shell for our batteries, and even when we do land them, although we possess a railway half way to the trenches, our difficulties seem only to begin. What means Russia would adopt to keep her batteries efficient in winter is, I trust, matters of very profitless speculation, because there is no reason to think that the place will be able to hold out so long against sap and mine, bombardment and cannonage particularly when General Canrobert "enlarges his circle" of operations. Every day we diminish our distance from the enemy, who does, it must be said, his best to meet us; but, although his outerworks are advanced, the line of his batteries on the left has been perforce considerably retired. As our advances are made, the parallels behind are strengthened and put into a fit state for mounting guns in them, which will be close to the enemy's works, and produce a corresponding effect, though with increased loss and damage to ourselves from the Russian guns. The process thus goes on, in proportion to our strength and the enemy's weakness, day after day, and bit by bit the ground is won from them; and, though the town itself may be defended by the infintessimal batteries to the water's edge, so long as we can keep our works clear of the enemy, and can maintain our fire against them, there can be no doubt of ultimate success, if the external army is unable to force the allies to raise the seige.

THE ARCTIC EXPEDITON.

New York, May, 29.—The Arctic Expedition in search of Dr. Kane, is now ready for sea. The vessels have been fitted out of the navy yard, and will depart on Thursday next. They will take out with them a marble tablet, with a suitable inscription upon it, as a tribute to the Franklin expedition, which has been prepared by Mr. Grinnell, at the request of Lady Franklin, and will be erected on Beechy Island, by the side of that commemorating the fate of the gallant Lieutenant Bellot.

It is said that vessels of war in this port are under instructions to prevent the departure of the steamship United States with the Kinney expedition.

Poetical Department.

THE GENUINE YANKEE DOODLE.

Fayther and I went downn to camp
'Long with Major Goodin;
And there we see the men and boys
As thick as hasty-puddin.

And there was Captin Washinton,
With gentle folks abeout him—
They say he's grown so tarnal proud
He will not ride without 'em.

They got him on his meetin clothes,
Upon a slapping stallion;
He set the world along in rows,
In thousands and millions.

The flamin ribbons in his hat,
They looked so tearin fina,
I wanted pockily to get,
To give to our Jemima.

And there they had a swampin gun,
As large as a log of maple,
Upon a deuced little cart—
A load for fayther's cattle.

And every time they fired it off,
It took a horn of peowder;
It made a noise like fayther's gun,
Only a nation louder.

I went as near to it myself
As 'Siah's underpinnin;
But fayther went as nigh again—
I thought the deuce was in him.

Cousin Simon grew so bold,
I thought he would have cocked it;
It scared me so that I sneaked off,
And hung by fayther's pocket.

And Captin Davis had a gun,
He kinder claped his hand on't;
And stuck a crooked stabbin iron
Upon the little end on't.

And there I see a punkin-shell
As big as mother's basin;
And every time they touched it off,
They scampered like the nation.

And there I see a barrel, too,
Its heads were made of leather;
They knockt upon't with little clubs,
To call the folks together.

And there I see a snarl of men,
A diggin graves, they told me,
So tarnal long, so tarnal deep,
They tended they should hold me.

It scared me so, I hooked it off,
Nor stopt, as I remember,
Nor turned abeout till I got hum,
Lockt fast in mother's chamber.

THE ENGLISH AND THE FRENCH.

BY WASHINGTON IRVING.

The French intellect is quick and active. It flashes its way into a subject with a rapidity of lightning; seizes upon remote conclusions with a sudden bound, and its deductions are almost intuitive. The English intellect is less rapid, but more persevering; less sudden, but more sure in its deductions. The quickness and mobility of the French enable them to find enjoyment in the multiplicity of sensations. They speak and act more from immediate impressions than from reflection and meditation. They are therefore more social and communicative; more fond of society, and of places of public resort and amusement. An Englishman is more reflective in his habits. He lives in the world of his own thoughts, and seems more self-existent and self-dependent. He loves the quiet of his own apartment; even when abroad he in a manner makes a little solitude around him by his silence and reserve; he moves about shy and solitary, and, as it were, buttoned up, body and soul.

The French are great optimists: they seize upon every good as it flies, and revel in the passing pleasure. The Englishman is too apt to neglect the present good, in preparing against the possible evil. However adversities may lower, let the sun shine but for a moment, and forth sallies the mercurial Frenchman, in holiday spirits, gay as a butterfly, as though his sunshine were perpetual; but let the sun beam ever so brightly, so there be but a cloud in the horizon, the wary Englishman ventures forth distrustfully, with his umbrella in his hand.

The Frenchman has a wonderful facility at turning small things to advantage. No one can be gay and luxurious on smaller means: no one requires less expense to be happy. He practices a kind of gliding in his style of living, and hammers out every guinea into a golden leaf. The Englishman, on the contrary, is expensive in his habits, and expensive in his enjoyments. He values everything, whether useful or ornamental, by what it costs. He has no satisfaction in show, unless it be solid and complete. Everything goes with him by the square foot. Whatever display he makes, the depth is sure to equal the surface.

The Frenchman's habitation, like himself, is opening, cheerful, bustling and noisy. He lives in a part of a great hotel, with wide portal, paved court, a spacious dirty stone staircase, and a family on every floor. All is clatter and chatter. He is good-humored and talkative with his servants, sociable with his neighbors, and complaisant to all the world. Anybody has access to himself and his apartments; his very bedroom is open to visitors, whatever may be its state of confusion; and all this not from any peculiarly hospitable feeling, but from that communicative habit which predominates over his character.

The Englishman, on the contrary, ensconces himself in a snug brick mansion, which he has all to himself; locks the front door; puts broken bottles along the wall, and spring guns and man traps in his garden; shrouds himself with trees and window curtains; exults in his quiet and privacy, and seems disposed to keep out noise, daylight and company. His house, like himself, has a reserved, inhospitable exterior; yet whoever gains admittance is apt to find a warm fireside within.

The French excel in wit; the English in humor; the French have gayer fancy, the English richer imaginations. The former are full of sensibility, easily moved, and prone to sudden and great excitement; but their excitement is not durable; the English are more phlegmatic; not so readily affected, but capable of being aroused to great enthusiasm. The faults of these opposite temperaments are, that the vivacity of the French is apt to sparkle up and be frothy the gravity of the English to settle down and grow muddy. When the two characters can be fixed in a medium, the French kept from effervescence and the English from stagnation, both will be found excellent.

This contrast of character may also be noticed in the great concerns of the two nations. The ardent Frenchman is all for military renown; he fights for glory, that is to say, for success in arms. For, provided the national flag be victorious, he cares little about the expense, the injustice, or the inutility of the war. It is wonderful how the poorest Frenchman will revel on a triumphant bulletin; a great victory is meat and drink to him; and at the sight of a military sovereign bringing home captured standards, he throws up his greasy cap in the air, and is ready to jump out of his wooden shoes for joy.

John Bull, on the contrary, is a reasoning, considerate person. If he does wrong, it is in the most reasonable way imaginable. He fights because the good of the world requires it. He is a moral person, and makes war upon his neighbor for the maintenance of peace and good order, and sound principles. He is a money-making personage, and fights for the prosperity of commerce and manufactures. Thus the two nations have been fighting, time out of mind, for glory and good. The French, in pursuit of glory, have had their capital twice taken; and John, in pursuit of good, has run himself over head and ears in debt.—[Wolfret's Roost.

THE JEWISH SABBATH.

It is unlawful to ride on horseback or in a carriage—to walk more than a mile from their dwelling—to transact business of any kind—to meddle with any tool—to write—to play upon any musical instrument—to bathe—comb the hair—and even to carry a pin in the clothes which is unnecessary.—These, and a great many others, are complied with by the most rigid. There is one command in the law of Moses, to which all Jews most scrupulously adhere. "Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the Sabbath." (Exod. xxxv. 2.) Consequently they never light a fire or a lamp, or a candle, on the Sabbath day, nor eat food prepared on that day—all must be done on Friday. As it is impossible to spend the Sabbath in cold climates without fire or light the Jewish families who keep servants make it a point to have a gentile in their service to do these things; and among the humbler classes a number of families generally unite in securing the service of a gentile neighbor for the day. Nothing can wound the conscience of a Jew more than to be under the necessity of putting fuel on the fire or snuffing his candles on the Sabbath.—[The British Jews.

IMMENSE swarms of locusts have lately made their appearance in parts of Georgia, destroying all vegetation that comes in their way. They are said to approach from a western direction.

The reason why it succeeds.—THE Mustang Liniment has attained its enormous popularity, and almost universal use, simply because it gives better satisfaction, accomplishes more good, relieves more pain, and heals more wounds and sores than any other preparation ever before offered to the afflicted. Every bottle that is used, speaks for itself—tells its own tale in the relief it gives, and the cure it effects. And then one who has suffered, pehaps, long years with pain, without hope of relief, and finds in this Liniment an almost instantaneous remedy, cannot help but speak in its praise, and recommend it in the best terms to all he sees suffering. It needs no other recommendation than a trial.

☞See advertisement in another column. [may 19 26 3m.

NOTICE.

We have received and have on sale the following books and pamphlets.

Book of Mormon,	$1 00
Book of Doctrine and Covenants,	95
Voice of Warning,	50
Spencer's Letters,	50
Hymn Books, Morocco gilt, ext.,	1 25
" " Calf "	80
" " Roan "	50
Government of God, by J. Taylor,	50
New Jerusalem, or the Fulfilment of Modern Prophecy,	15
Divine Authority of Joseph Smith,	10
Remarkable Visions,	10
Only Way to be Saved,	5
Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, by O. Pratt, 6 parts, 10cts. ea., or per sett,	40
Polygamy, by a Lady in Utah,	5
The Seer, by O. Pratt, vol. 1, to which is added 6 parts of Divine Authenticity of the book of Mormon, and Polygamy, by a Lady of Utah, elegantly bound, in one vol.	2 25
Orson Pratt's works, bound,	1 50
Times and Seasons, vols. 4, 5, and 6, well bound, ea.	1 50
Portraits of the First Presidency,	1 25

Route from England to Salt Lake may be expected in a few weeks.

We have a few numbers of the Millenial Star of vol. 17 on sale.

Those wishing any of the above books, or wishing to subscribe regularly for the Millenial Star, can apply to me every Sunday at the Church, or by post.

Apr, 14 21.] JAS. S. CANTWELL.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

STEPHEN HOYT. G. C. GREEN.

STEPHEN HOYT & CO.,
WHOLESALE DEALERS IN GROCERIES,
IMPORTERS OF
Wines, Fruits, and Nuts,

Calls the attention of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California and Oregon, to No. 47 SECOND SHREET,
Between Olive and Pine Streets, St. Louis,

WHERE there always will be found an excellent assortment of goods adapted to the wants of Emigrants crossing the plains, viz:
Green and Black Teas, Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Fish, Spices, Tobacco, Dried Fruits, Starch, Saleratus, Powder, Lead, Window-glass, Nails, Rope, Olive Oil, Pickles, Tar, &c., &c., &c.
June 2 28 3m] STEPHEN HOYT & Co.

OUTFITS FOR CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE AND OREGON.
WM. C. WILSON,
DEALER IN
Groceries, Wines, Liquors, and Provisions,; Pilot Bread and Crackers,
No. 195 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.

☞Is prepared to furnish everything in his line, at the lowest rates, and from past experience in the trade, feels assured, that parties intending to cross the plains, will find it to their interest to give him a call, and compare prices before purchasing elsewhere.

ON HAND AND FOR SALE LOW, THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES:

TEAS—A choice assortment of Imperial, Gun Powder, Young Hyson and Black.
COFFEE—Rio, Havana, Laguayra and Java—burnt and ground.
SUGAR—Crushed, Lump, Powdered, Clarified, New Orleans and Brown—all grades.
MOLASSES—Golden Syrup, Sugar House and Plantation.
LIQUORS—Best brands of Pure French Brandy, Holland Gin, Jamaica Rum, Irish, Scotch, Monongahela and Bourbon Whiskey, and all kinds of Domestic Liquors.
WINES—Pure Port, Maderia, Malaga, Sherry, Muscat, Champagne, Claret and White, Cordials, &c., &c.
BACON—Ham, Sides and Shoulders, Dried Beef and Beef Tongue.
FRUIT—Raisins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, Citron, Dried Apples and Peaches, &c.; &c.
SUNDRIES—All kinds of Pickles, Sauce, Ketchups, Spice, Fancy Soaps, Candles, Oil, Gas, Fish, Mats, Cords, Buckets, Baskets, Brooms, Tubs, Lobsters, Oysters, Sardines, Cooking Extracts, Essences, Arrow Root, Farina, Sago, Corn Starch, Oat Meal, Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Maccaroni, Vermicelli, Honey, &c., &c. [apr 7 20 2m

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

NOTICE.

THE LITHOGRAPHIC ENGRAVING of the Great Salt Lake City, can had of the publisher ROBERT C. WILLIAMS, or of JAMES H. HART, Agent. Price 50 cents per copy. Accompanying pamphlet ten cents. They can be sent to any part of the United States.
Address "Luminary Office." may 27 27 3m

SCHEER & HACKMAN'S
WAGON MANUFACTORY,
Corner of Sixteenth and Market streets.

KEEP constantly on hand a large assortment of Wagons suitable for Traders and Travellers to Santa Fe, California, Oregon, etc., etc.; also, for Farmer's use. Persons in want of Wagons are requested to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere, as promise a first-rate article at reasonable prices. S. & H. [may 5 24 6m*

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan.

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!
PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES.
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.
JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.
Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.
N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

W. H. HUISH,
MACHINIST, Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERALY.
mar 24] [18 3m

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yangers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.
Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.
It has cured more cases of
RHEUMATISM
than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.
G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,
J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.
MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.
MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:
Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.
I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.
I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.
Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.
I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Croton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE BACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS
have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:
Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.
The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.
G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.
Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST.
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.
Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 3, 1855. [113m*

TO EMIGRANTS.
C. B. HUBBELL, Jr., 102 4th st., St. Louis
Informs persons travelling towards
SALT LAKE OR CALIFORNIA,
That they will find at his store, the largest stock of DRY GOODS in the city, comprising every variety of kinds adapted to their wants, which he will sell at prices fully TWENTY-FIVE per cent. lower than any other house in the trade, to which your attention is invited.
N. B. One price only ever asked, and no deviation. [apr 14 21 2m

GREAT ATTRACTION
AT
WILSON & COOPER'S NEW STORE!
The attention of Emigrant starting for
UTAH, CALIFORNIA, AND OREGON,
Is respectfully called to our IMMENSE STOCK of
FASHIONBLE DRY GOODS!
Comprising every article in the trade, from the plain substantial articles of every-day use, to the finest and most elegant fabrics of first-class Dry Goods and LINEN DRAPERY.
Our goods are all marked in PLAIN FIGURES, from which no abatement is allowed under any circumstances.
N. B. A discount of FIVE per cent. will be allowed to parties going west, on all bills over $100. WILSON & COOPER, apr 14 21] Cor. 4th and Locust sts., St. Louis.

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. 23. [6 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 19, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 37 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to complete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
60 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 pockets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
6 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERE.
Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [3 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Labeaume Steert,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MCLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.
One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.
Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.
Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.
Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.
Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.
We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.
☞For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere
Dec. 9, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.
☞Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.
Nov. 22, '54. T. W. HOIT.
[1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PARER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.
A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.
A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.
They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.
They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.
Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.
Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.
WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.
☞Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.
N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

CORINTHIAN MELODY.
Music—"HARK!"

The Hat was on his head,
The passing crowd admired
A whispering maiden said—
See how that man's attired!
What beauty in his waist,
How matchless his cravat,
And then how much he's graced
With that resplendant HAT!

He turned him from the throng,
As he left Corinthian Hall;
But as he moves along,
On him all glances fall.
Cried one—"Not heaven's clear blue,
With starry radiance set,
Appears more fair to view
Than yonder lustrous jet!"

Its fame by all was raised;
His bosom swells with pride;
While they admiring gazed,
He raised his voice and cried—
"Friends, would you have my joy,
And win an equal fame,
Your Hats on Broadway buy;
There's a few more left—the same."

THE GREAT NATIONAL HAT STORE,
☞ OF CORINTHIAN HALL, ☜
297 BROADWAY,
ESTABLISHED 6TH MARCH, 1849,
FOR THE SALE OF
FINE ST. LOUIS MADE DRESS HATS,
FOR $4 EACH!
FOR A
LUSTROUS, STYLISH, AND DURABLE SUPER DRESS HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR, PLUSH, OR COTTON CAP,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
FOR A
FUR OR WOOL SOFT FELT HAT,
GO TO CORINTIAN HALL!
FOR AN
INFANT'S FASHIONABLE FANCY HAT,
GO TO CORINTHIAN HALL!
297 Broadway;
☞ BIG HAT. ☜
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.
☞Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,
Manufacturer of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.
COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light travelling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 133 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.
Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

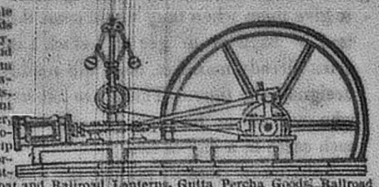
S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set, Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tinners' Sheers, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.
☞Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.
☞The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.
CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
HAS REMOVED TO NO. 94 MARKET STREET,
South side between Third and Fourth.

CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.
N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.
96 Market Street,
may 26, 27 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MAIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.



FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.
N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.
Feb. 24, 141y

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by
ALFRED PERSEY,
St. Louis, Mo.
The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE and OREGON.
EMIGRANTS
Can be supplied with every variety of
PILOT BREAD & CRACKERS
Baked expressly for the overland Emigration, and WARRANTED to KEEP, at
J. B. WILLSON'S BAKERY,
No. 186 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
☞The trade supplied at the LOWEST RATES. [apr 7 20 2m

GOODIN & TOOKER,
GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,
No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.

HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.
We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders may rely on their faithful fulfilment.
Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand. Lamps repaired, regilded and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 19 6m

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.
UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L. K. & Co.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
UTAH TERRITORY.
HOOPER & WILLIAMS,

ARE transporting to Utah, this season, one of the largest and best assorted stock of Goods ever taken to that region.
The purchases being made from the best houses in New York, Baltimore and St. Louis, and the long experience they have had in the trade, enables them to offer inducements in prices, style and kind, which will insure satisfaction.
Emigrants passing over the plains to California, will find it to their advantage to refit at Great Salt Lake, as produce can always be had for less than transportation from the States.
Persons wishing to remit or intend taking money with them, can avoid risk and save money by depositing with Messrs. ROBERTSON, and HOOPER & WILLIAMS, No. 29 Murray st., New York, or WATERMAN & RYAN, St. Louis, who are authorized to draw on us. Interest will be allowed at the rate of 1 per cent. from date of draft till payment.
HOOPER & WILLIAMS,
may 19 26 3m] Great Salt Lake City, 1855.

REMOVAL.

MRS. J. VINCENT, MIDWIFE, East side of Fourth street, between Market and Walnut streets, St. Louis, Mo.
Mrs. J. Vincent wishes to inform her friends and the public, that she has removed from between 8th and 9th, on Market street, to the above place, and hopes by strict attention to her duties, to merit a further continuance of their patronage. [apr 14 21 3m.

WESTON, MO.
D. G. TUTT. J. F. BAKER.
TUTT & BAKER,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
FORWARDING AND COMMISSION
MERCHANTS.
WESTON, MO.,
Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.
March 3, 1855. 16 3m

J. B. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.
EVANS & MITCHELL,
MERCHANTS,
At Weston, Missouri,

HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 16 tf.

TO EMIGRANTS.
J. D. HARPER. T. J. HARPER.
AT the firm of J. D. H. & Co. Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especialy of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description, which we will sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never "go" with our customers.
mar 10 16 3m J. D. HARPER & Co.

NOTICE.

I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at
ST. LOUIS PRICES.
mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

LEAVENWORTH, K. T.
G. M. & A. FISHER,
Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,

ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as And-Irons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.
They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or outfits elsewhere. [mar 3 16 3m

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.
STORAGE AND OUTFITS.
LEWIS N. REES,
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,

IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pirtols, Bowie-Knives, &c.; Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.
Groceries and Provisions.
Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.
He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Hentingcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis.
[mar 3, 16 3m

BLACKSMITHING.

T. S. ABURY takes this

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, JUNE 9, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XXIX.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.
Mailed to Subscribers in the U. States at $2 per annum.
To Foreign Subscribers, (American Postage prepaid,) at $3 per annum.
To contiguous British Provinces, at $2.50 per annum.
No Subscription received without the money, though a specimen copy will be sent when required.
Any person forwarding us nine new Subscribers and remitting any current money in payment, will be entitled to the tenth copy gratis.
To avoid mistakes, particular pains must be taken, to send us all names of Subscribers, Post-offices and States, plainly written.
United States postage on the Luminary to British American Provinces, is one cent each—to Foreign countries two cents—within the U. States, one-half cent; provided, each subscriber notifies his Post-master, and pays the postage quarterly in advance, otherwise it will be two cts.
All letters requiring an answer, should, to ensure attention, enclose a Postage Stamp.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

One square (eight lines or less,) one insertion,	$ 50
do. do. each additional insertion,	25
One square one month without alteration - -	1.00
do. two months - - - - - -	2.00
do. three months, - - - - - -	2.75
do. six months, - - - - - -	5.00
no. one year without alteration, - - -	8.00
For each alteration, - - - - - -	25

Extensive advertisements as per contract.
Quarterly and yearly advertisements to be paid at the end of each quarter.
Prepayment required for any term less than a quarter.

From the Deseret News.

INSTRUCTION TO NEW COMERS.

By Jedediah Grant, Tabernacle, Sept. 24, 1854.

While the sacrament is passing, it may be well to speak a few words to the people. I am aware much instruction has been given to the people, at least to the majority of those who are here before me; and we do not wish to preach you to death, but we wish to preach so that you may enjoy life. A thousand ideas float in the minds of the people in relation to preaching; each have their standard, and their notions of what they call the sacred desk. All Mormon desks are sacred. I am no more religious to-day than yesterday; I am equally as religious in the kanyons hauling wood as in the pulpit; and if I were a going to swear in either place, I should prefer the pulpit to swear in; consequently, I consider that a man should live his religion in all places, and under all circumstances and situations in life.

We understand how to serve the Lord. I speak of all the Latter-day Saints; that is, we understand how to serve him in some things, we have learned some duties which are practicable at the present time. I am aware that some Elders who go forth and preach long and pious sermons, frequently represent Zion as one of the most delightsome places in the world, as if the people in Salt Lake City were so pure and holy that the flame of sanctity would almost singe the hair of a common man's head.—Others suppose when they come here that they are to be fed, clothed, and housed independent of their own exertions. Some of the Elders have told the Saints in England that the first two weeks after they landed here, all they would have to do would be to contemplate the beauties of Zion, and be furnished two weeks' provisions. The imaginations of some Saints have been so exalted by the Elders who preached to them, that they suppose that all our pigs come ready cooked, with knives and forks in them, and are running round squealing to be eaten; that every tray is filled with bread, every manger with potatoes, and every man's waggon with the choice fruits of the earth. On the contrary, when the Saints from abroad come to Zion, they will find the people so busy that they can scarcely find time to speak to them, and if they have lost some of their friends on the way, the people in Zion have not time even to help them mourn.

Some come here and are astonished, for they had supposed that they should find the stereotyped editions of Zion sitting on the seats singing hallelujah, and shouting glory to God continually; but when they find us all active, some rushing to the kanyons, some gathering in the crops, and others rearing houses—when they find the people all alive with business, they think that the Mormons are all telegraphs, and so we are, stereotyped editions of the telegraph. Every man and woman in Zion at their duty is a telegraph moving and exerting an influence, building up, fortifying, and fulfilling the words of the prophets by building city after city. It makes no difference whether we have gold and silver, or not; we build just as fast without money as the people of the east build with it, and a little faster. A man who has faith says he has capital in himself; he is telegraph enough to build him a house. Another man has to sit down, and count "three and two are five, five and two are seven, seven and four are eleven, and eleven and six are seventeen; and so he will calculate, and unless he has so many dimes, he has not faith enough to draw the first rock, or the first adobie, or get the first foot of lumber, or do the first thing.

But you take a man who has got in him the true Mormon spirit, and he considers that he can accomplish just what he thinks ought to be accomplished. If he considers that he wants a house he deems himself competent to go at it, and to build such a one as he wants; if he wants a small one he can build it, and if a large one he can build it. That is the Mormon spirit.

If you Saints who have just arrived here expect a heaven, I will tell you how to get it; if you have brought a small one with you, keep it, and keep adding to it; that is, if you want a heaven, go to and make it. If you have not means enough to buy a farm, go to work and make one; if you have not means enough to buy a house, build one, and thus gather around you the comforts of life, and the means to subsist upon. But I will tell you one thing, if you neglect to pray, neglect to watch, neglect to do your duty, and to serve your God for yourselves, you will be apt to become dissatisfied, disheartened, and dispirited, and wish to go back from whence you came. But the opposite will be the result with those who keep the commandments of God, who watch and pray, who are active in their spirits and in their religion, and work out their salvation with fear and trembling, if you please, or they may work as hard as they please without fearing and trembling, if they have a mind to. Consequently, when you come here, it is essential that you keep the same religion that you embraced before you started to come here.

I am aware that a great many have so much piety in them, that they are like the Baptist priest who came to see Joseph Smith. Joseph had the discernment of spirits to read a man, and a peculiar faculty of using up the old sectarian tone to "my de-e-er brethren." When he heard that good old tone he used to imitate it; and whenever one of the class who are so filled with piety, and the good old tone, came to Nauvoo, Joseph used forthwith to take a course to evaporate their sanctimoniousness, a great deal of which consists in the long ass-like tone. Before the Baptist priest I have referred to came to Nauvoo, he had heard brother William O. Clark, who could preach a bible and a half at a sermon, and could use the fashionable old tone, the blessed old tone. This Baptist imbibed a notion that we were as much ahead of his ideas of piety, and that our tone was as much longer than his as the strength of the arguments produced by Clark were stronger than his; and supposed that our sanctimoniousness was coequal with what he considered the merits of our doctrine.

Under these impressions he came to Nauvoo, and was introduced to the Prophet. In the meantime some persons came up that brother Joseph would have a talk with, but while doing this he kept his eye upon the stranger—on this priest. After he got through chatting, the Baptist stood before him, and folding his arms said, "Is it possible that I now flash my optics upon a Prophet, upon a man who has conversed with my Saviour?" "Yes," says the Prophet, "I don't know but you do; would not you like to wrestle with me?" That, you see, brought the priest right on to the thrashing floor, and he turned a summerset right straight. After he had whirled round a few times, like a duck shot in the head, he concluded that his piety had been awfully shocked, even to the centre, and went to the Prophet to learn why he had so shocked his piety. The Prophet commenced and showed him the follies of the world, and the absurdity of the long tone, and that he had a super-abundant stock of sanctimoniousness.

You Saints who have come here, if you have around you the garb of secretarianism, must calculate that the Mormon plow will turn that under; you must calculate that here we are a practical people; a people who believe in their religion, and are good Saints; who do their work, and attend to their prayers in the season thereof; and are not so much in a hurry in the morning, but that they can kneel down and consecrate their families, their effects, themselves, and all they have, to the Most High God.

But in the midst of this people you will find various stripes of character. The net has been cast into the sea, and, if the parable is true, it has drawn to the shore all kinds of fish, and you must not be alarmed if you find in Zion some curiosities. If I wished to find the best men in the world, I should go to Zion to find them; if I wished to find the biggest devil, I would look in Zion for him, among the people of God; there I can find the greatest scamps. I believe the words of Christ are true, that the net has gathered of every kind of fish; that it has gathered men of every class. Do not marvel if you find here goats as well as sheep, and the speckled goats, and the long-haired goats and the smooth goats, and the rough goats, and goats of every grade, size, and color, mixed among the sheep. Do not think you will be without your trials here, that you are to be a stereotyped edition to sit upon stools, singing glory to God, and that is all you have to do.

I have often said to the English brethren and sisters that were I in England, for there is where the Elders preach piety, I would tell them the first things they might expect to meet in Zion, viz., to leap into the mire and help to fill up a mud hole, to make adobies with their sleeves rolled up, and be spattered with clay from head to foot; and that some would be set to ditching in Zion, to making ditch fence ankle deep in mire; and that they might expect to eat their bread by the sweat of their brow, as in their native country. I told them when I was in St. Louis, where there were many English and Scotch, that if we succeeded in getting to Zion it was a "knack," and if we did not it was a "knick," and consequently there were "knick-knacks" in going to Zion, and "knick-knacks" after we got to Zion.

These things are all connected with the common salvation that you heard Elder Hyde treat upon this forenoon, the salvation that is common with the people of God. You understand it, you have practised it, and tasted the sweets thereof. You come here, and you think that we are busy and active, but only live your religion and you will feel the power, spirit, and fulness thereof, as you have never felt it previous to this. What I mean by the spirit is the Spirit of God, the Holy Ghost, which you can feel from the crown of your heads to the soles of your feet. It is here with you if you do right, and every thing you anticipate in the Holy Ghost, and in the power of the priesthood, and in the love of God, and every thing you have thought of in your own minds is here, and God is here; and if you have thought of bad, it is here also. If you approach a large furnace the first thing you see are the black columns of smoke rising up and towering aloft, and if you approach nearer you discover piles of coal and ore, and the ashes, dust, and cinders which have been heaved out; but all this will never convince you that there is no iron there. You would say that where there is so much iron cinders there must be iron; that the iron has been taken out and dressed; that there must have been lots of iron here, and you begin to look for the iron.

If you occasionally see a dirty sheep, do not let it try you; if you do not get a bushel of wheat as quick as you want it, do not let that try your faith. If you are agoing to die of hunger that is the time to be strong in the God of Israel. I wish to see the new comers active in their religion; I wish to see them live their religion, and not only seek to be endowed with the spirit of Zion but to bring the spirit of Zion with them. I wish to see them come here with their countenances lit up with the love of God, and their hearts burning with the Holy Ghost, and their voices sounding like the music of sweet instruments, to join in the songs of Zion, and in the work of our God, in cultivating the earth, and in building houses. Bless your souls, if you desire an experience of this kind, in order to build up Zion, you must learn. Unless you have practice in it, unless you begin with one house, and then go from one house to another, you cannot learn how to build.—You cannot learn how to make a farm by reading alone, but you have got to have the practical knowledge. So it is in relation to building, an architect may draw a fine design of a house, yet there is not one man in a thousand who can carry it out, without the architect is continually by him to direct, and to say place that there, and this yonder.

We may talk of making our own heaven, and of building up the city of Zion and making it beautiful, and having it polished after the similitude of a palace, but we must have an experience in doing such a work before we can accomplish it. The world do not comprehend all things as they should; they do not comprehend the greatest things; the light and power of God, pertaining to man in his probation, towering among the clouds and smoke, but its force is down here in the practical duties of life, in the work under the sun that we have to do.

Now when you come to Zion, you will find men standing upon their feet; but go into the world, and there, if a man wants to show himself to be a smart man, he must mount a cabbage leaf, hiccup, and jump up to spit over his shirt collar. There was a man here last winter who thought himself a smart man because his father was a smart man; and he was all the while on the strain, like a man who mounts a cabbage leaf to hiccup, or jumps up to spit over his shirt collar in trying to be smart. What do they make of it? nothing but a bubble, and a laughing stock for men of sense.

The ore, coal, and flux are put in the tunnel head of the furnace, and iron and cinder run to the boshes below, and are seperated. You see the smoke first, but you find here the true metal. "The Mormons, a little handful of Mormons cannot accomplish much," used to be said. But we are gathering out the tough wire, it has got to come here.

I wish the saints who come here, to be saints. I said last spring, curse a man who will starve the poor by keeping up the price of grain, and who will not help his brethren. I know some men will say that we have fine men among us. I know that we have first rate good mercantile houses here; I like them first rate; but it would be better for us to do our own trading, and by that means keep our money in our midst.

These are my views, and have been all the time. I like to see a Mormon be a Mormon, and act like a Mormon. A good Mormon will have an elastic faith, and not say, "O Br. Grant, the old snag ship is in snag harbor," but be mindful that Br. Brigham is cautious how he guides her. Brother Joseph had not time to be careful, and run the ship around the snags, but was under the necessity of running her right on to them. But when Brigham chooses to run around a snag, or across a snag, he will do so. The ship is all oak, let her slide. If we are in snag harbor, all right; we will steer the ship, and run around the snag, or over it, just as the Lord pleases. Jesus, our elder brother, is at the helm, and has a good crew aboard, who are faithful, meek, and humble. If the saints desire to strengthen Zion, let them be humble, meek, lowly, and contrite in spirit; let them be dilligent, and seek counsel through the light of the Spirit of God, and watch and pray, and they will be filled with joy, and be happy at night, and healthy in the morning; and their spirits will be buoyant, and they can shout glory hallelujah in reality.

May the God of heaven fill you with the Holy Ghost, and give you light and joy in his kingdom: amen.

THE Californians have been so infuriated by the banking failures, that placards have been posted, offering $3,000 for the head of J. C. Wood, of the house of Adams & Co.

Ought Brigham Young to be re-appointed Governor of Utah.

We have no hesitancy in answering this question, nor have we had any doubt how it ought to have been answered at any time since it arose. We think Governor Young ought to have been, and ought now to be, re-appointed. He has the capacity for the discharge of the office; nobody has successfully impeached his integrity in the discharge of it; he has the entire and implicit confidence of the whole body of the citizens of Utah; all those citizens, with perhaps not one exception, certainly without one exception among ninety-nine one-hundreths of the Utah population, are exceedingly desirous that he should be re-appointed. And, beside all this, residents in the Territory—men, the most of whom must be supposed to be free from improper bias—join cordially in recommending him as by far the most suitable man for Governor in the whole Territory. In proof of this last statement, take the following memorial:

To his Excellency Franklin Pierce,
President of the United States:

Your petitioners would respectfully represent that, Whereas, Gov. Brigham Young possesses the entire confidence of the people of this Territory, without distinction of party or sect; and, from personal acquaintance and social intercourse, we find him to be a firm supporter of the Constitution and laws of the United States, and a tried pillar of republican institutions; and, having repeatedly listened to his remarks, in private as well as in public assemblies, do know he is the warm friend and able supporter of constitutional liberty—the rumors published in the States to the contrary notwithstanding—and having canvassed, to our satisfaction, his doings as Governor and Superintendent of Indian Affairs, and also the disposition of the appropriation for public buildings for the Territory; we do most cordially and cheerfully represent that the same has been expended to the best interests of the nation; and,

Whereas, His re-appointment would better subserve the Territorial interest than the appointment of any other man, and would meet with the gratitude of the entire inhabitants of the Territory, and his removal would cause the deepest feeling of sorrow and regret, and it being our unqualified opinion, based upon our personal acquaintance, which we have formed with Governor Young, and from our observation of the results of his influence and administration in this Territory, that he possesses, in an eminent degree, every qualification necessary for the discharge of his official duties; and unquestioned integrity and ability; that he is decidedly the most suitable person that can be selected for that office.

We, therefore, take great pleasure in recommending him to your favorable consideration, and do earnestly request his re-appointment as Governor and Superintendent of Indian Affairs for this Territory.

Signed: J. F. KINNEY, Chief Justice U. S. Supreme Court Utah Territory.
E. J. STEPTOE, Lieutenant Colonel U. S. Army.
GEO. P. STILES, Associate Justice S. C. of U. S. for Utah Territory.
LEO. SHAVER, Assistant Justice for Territory of Utah.
HORACE R. WIRTZ, Med. Staff U. S. Army.
A. W. BABBIT, Secretary of Utah Territory.
STEPHEN B. ROSE, Sub. Ind. Agt. for Utah Territory.

GREAT S. L. CITY, U. T., Dec. 30, '54.

This petition was supported by the names of all the chief officers in the Territory, both civil and military, as also by the principal merchants and residents, whose names we omit for the sake of brevity.

Now, we regard this certificate as, upon the whole, an extraordinary testimonial. It is signed by all three of the Justices of Utah, by the Indian Sub-Agent, and by two officers of the United States army, one of whom is a physician, and the other is a Colonel, in command of a large body of troops now in the Territory. Can it be that corrupt and sinister motives or fear is operating on the minds of these gentlemen. Are these judges bribed, or this commander, with a little army at his back, intimidated? Are they not all likely to be men of discernment and men of honor? Would they put their hands to testimony which they disbelieved, or be made tools of by others? What has induced gentlemen of their position and character to present themselves before the President as the warm defenders, supporters and advocates of Brigham Young? We scarcely believe of them that they are such fools as to have done this without knowing what they were about; or such knaves as to have done it, knowing that they were imposing a falsehood on the President and abusing the trust that was reposed in them, when they were elevated to the offices they hold. Any such supposition is nonsensical. The body of testimony in favor of Brigham Young's fitness for the Governorship of the Territory, and the suitableness of his appointment to it, which is furnished by the document signed by these gentlemen, is, we think, a higher recommendation for office than most men usually have, and all that any man ever need have.

But, it may be argued, the objection to Governor Young is not a personal one. The objection is to the appointment of any Mormon. If a Mormon must be appointed, Young may be as fit as any other Mormon, and perhaps fitter. In this way, it may be attempted to sustain President Pierce in his refusal to appoint Gov. Young. But this argument, like all of the sort, proves too much. It assumes that Mormonism itself is obnoxious, and ought to be put under the ban of our government and its institutions. It is clear enough to us, however clear its contrary may be to others, that a community of 50,000 Mormons, with scarce a dissenter in their midst, ought, under our institutions, to be governed by a Mormon, if there is an undeniably fit man among them for Governor. It would be so, if we had in the Union a State peopled almost exclusively by Mormons—even if there were not a man in it with quite timber enough to be its Chief Magistrate.—And it ought to be so in the territories. That is, as far as possible, the real popular will of the inhabitants, voters or citizens (call them what you may) of the Territory ought to be deferred to in the Territory just as it certainly would be enforced in the State. But, if it is proposed to lay down another rule in respect to Utah, that every attempt shows that something besides and very different from laying down such a rule is required to be done. It shows the existence of reasons—either good or bad—for denouncing the whole territorial organization, and for proceeding to demolish the entire structure, from top to bottom. If a large community, which enjoys a territorial organization, and is a unit in its opinions and will as regards the person to be appointed its Governor, is not to be in the least degree respected or heard in the matter of such appointment, then it is clear that such a community ought not (at least politically) to be suffered to exist. Their organization should be suppressed and terminated.—But, as long as Utah is a Territory, and is inhabited just as it is now, such recommendations as Brigham Young's friends have brought to the eye of the President, with the President's own knowledge, if he is not the most ignorant man in the Republic, of what the real sentiment of Utah is, ought, it appears to us, to be conclusive with that functionary. If the Mormons are to have a Territory to themselves, they ought to have a Governor from themselves. And, from testimony of very high character and great trust-worthiness, we are satisfied that the Mormons offer a man for Governor who will do his duty faithfully—not disobeying the laws of the Union, but executing them.

We write all this, not caring a bawbee about the success of Mormonism, and, as we have always thought, still thinking, not at all favorably of either its character or prospects in the great future. But, nevertheless, we do feel that the way in which the administration is acting toward Utah, in the matter of this Governorship, is trifling. Let President Pierce give Utah for its Governor the man who, besides being endorsed by unprejudiced and disinterested testimony as perfectly well qualified, is by the President well known to be wanted for its Governor by nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand of its citizens. This will be a compliance with his duty under the Organic Law. After that, if he sees fit, he can urge on Congress the repeal of that law, the abolishment of the Territory, or any other political measure, of a lawful kind, which he may think efficacious for rooting out Mormonism. But, as the matter now stands, it is perfectly clear that the office of Governor ought to be filled, and that no other man has a hundredth part of the pretensions that Brigham Young has to it.—[Morning Herald.

FRENCH PROCESS OF EMBALMING.

A Paris letter says: "I have lately witnessed the process of embalming as practiced here. It was on the person of a young American, whose friends preserved the body as perfectly as possible, in order to send it home. The law requires that twenty-four hours notice of decease shall be given to the police by the attending physician, before either autopsy or embalming shall be practiced. The design of the regulation is to give certainty that death has really taken place, and in a legitimate manner. Embalmers are prohibited from using arsenic, an excellent antiseptic, because in case of death from that poison administered wilfully, their use of it would defeat the ends of justice. The mode of procedure in this instance was as follows: The operator first filled two vials with his preparation, and gave them to a police officer who was present, to be sealed and subsequently analyzed by a competent chemist. If the least trace of the prohibited article should be found, the embalmer would be liable to severe punishment.

He then, through the caroted artery and by means of a large syringe, furnished with a detached stop-cock, injected about a gallon of a reddish fluid which I have since learned had probably chloride of zinc for its base. As the vessels became distended, this fluid permeated the capillaries, marking its passage by abhorrent white lines, until gradually a considerable portion of the skin assumed a clear, pearly lustre which I was informed would after a time be the case with the whole surface. The body then, after being washed with cologne water, having the nostrils and ears stuffed with cotton dipped in some extract of a musky odor, the cheeks and lips painted, the eyeballs fitted with glass fronts of the natural shade, and the hands and feet clad in silk gloves and stockings, was surrounded with four coffins, the inner shell being lined with lead, and the outer one having the appearance of a box containing goods. And so our poor friend was transported to his mourning relatives. The same steamer that carried this, took out also two other American corpses.

Simple as is the process of embalming, it is very costly. For that and the four coffins, I believe the demand was four thousand francs. In reply to some questions as to the efficacy of the process, the embalmer declared that he had known bodies preserved by it perfectly during five years, and he thought the time of its action might be extended greatly beyond that limit.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,
SATURDAY, JUNE 9, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer, address box 488.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor, 102 Nassau st., cor. of Ann.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Silee, Traveling Agent through the West.
Wm. Cazier, Nephi City.
S. B. Hoyt, Fillmore City, U. Territory.

There is a certain class of uneasy, restless madbrained, enthusiastic beings in the world, never contented and satisfied, unless something is in circulation, which is considered detrimental to the influence and character of Mormonism. To hear of the success of the Elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, in their missions among the nations of the earth, is worse to this class of characters, than to hear of the most dreadful calamities that can befall mankind. To hear of the peace and prosperity of the inhabitants of Utah; is worse to them than the report of ten thousand murders. To see Steamboats loaded with Latter-day Saints, flocking to the envied Territory of the Mountains is distressing and heart-rending beyond description. — They have been pouring in so fast during the last five months, that it has really become alarming to some of our pious countrymen. They appear almost choked with fear and mad with rage. They have vehemently denounced the founder of Mormonism, as an impostor, a money digger, and an ignoramus. Editors, lawyers, and other honest men have led on ruthless blackhearted and blood-thirsty mobs, against his faithful followers. And have inhumanly butchered men, women and children, of the Saints. Imprisoning the Prophets and Apostles, and Saints, giving them human flesh to eat. — These and a thousand other barbarities have been inflicted upon the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. And still it lives and prospers, and is increasing in power and influence in all nations, and more particularly in these United States.

We are not surprised at the feelings and spirit of these our honorable persecutors' callumniators and murderers, nor should we be surprised if they should attempt to re-enact the dark and damning deeds of Carthage, Haums Mill and Nauvoo, foiled in all their efforts to injure and destroy the Saints. Baffled in their every scheme to crush and obliterate the Kingdom of God, it is but natural that they should feel chagrined and enraged to witness the rapidly advancing progress of their avowed enemy. They could not feel otherwise consistently with their position and profession. It is perfectly consistent for anti-Mormons to murder their fellow-countrymen, because they do not believe in the same creed they believe in. It is perfectly consistent for these honorable gentlemen to compel one portion of their fellow citizens at the point of the bayonet, to sign away their lands to their murderous enemies, as was done in Missouri. It was quite right for our fellow citizens to proscribe us from our lands our temples and our homes, and drive us into the wilderness, for this was the most important epoch in our history, and has brought us greater influence, territory and dominion, than we could have possessed by remaining where we were; and every coup de guerre against us will only serve to better our position, and accelerate our progress. We can therefore say with all confidence as the prophet Joseph often said, "Let us alone, Gentlemen, and we will build up the Kingdom of God, persecute us and we will do it the faster," which approximates near to the poets maxim, "Whatever is, is right."

These thoughts have been suggested by a notice concerning us contained in the Cincinnatti Times, the substance of which is said to have been extensively circulated in the United States. The object of the writer was evidently to frighten and intimidate the emigration now arriving from the east. — "It is regarded as indisputable that the Mormons connived at if they did not actually aid and abet in the massacre of Capt. Gunnison and party by the Indians." says the Times. This charge is perfectly in keeping with the mean and contemptible spirit of our enemies. Any base insinuation they can invent or circulate, is industriously published, and constitutes so much stock in trade in their nefarious peddling. But will it effect our honor and integrity in any way? No! but it will brand the writer as a foul calumniator. The Times goes on to say "the Government has arrived at this conclusion, from a review of the facts connected with the trial of the murderers, and it is determined it is said, to prostrate the power of Brigham Young." It will be seen that all is based upon on dit, it is said, &c., but who said it? The Government we are told. — Who is the Government? The people! And who is the people? Oh, it's the Cincinnatti Times, the New York Herald, the Charleston Murcury and their satlelites. It is not President Pierce, and our noble Senators, who have made so false a conclusion, but the government and its liege lord and governor who would like above all things to prostrate the power of Brigham Young, or the power of the holy Priesthood. And will the government referred to, or any other government ever prostrate this power? No, never, for God hath declared it with his own voice to his servant Joseph. This Priesthood and power that I have conferred upon you shall never be taken from the earth. If our opponents think they can prostrate the power of the Priesthood controlled and wielded by Brigham Young they are wonderfully deceived, for it has neither father nor mother, neither beginning of days nor end of years. It has been brought from Heaven by holy angels, it cannot be slain or destroyed, but must eventually rule and govern the whole earth.

One more quotation from the Times, and we will leave him to reap the reward of his unrighteousness. "Accounts from the Plains, received through various channels, agree that the Indian tribes are assuming a very hostile attitude against the whites. the preparations made are of such a formidable character as to leave no doubt but that an indiscriminate slaughter of the whites will occur at the first favorable opportunity. The Times has committed an egregious blunder in thinking to intimidate our emigrants by threatening with destruction, the Prophet Brigham Young's power, and by exaggerating the hostility of the Indians. The Mormon emigrants are not such pusillanimous cowards as he is, they are not be scared by a few squaws, as he doubtless would be. The Mormons fear neither Editors, Indians nor armies, and will never fear while God rules in Heaven, and His Priesthood dwells on earth, for like the Apostles and Saints in days of old, they count not their lives dear unto them, so that they save their wives and children and friends, and build up the kingdom of God, and are accepted of Him.

The Mormons believe in prophets and revelations; but they have tried all such characters as the anti-Mormon forces can furnish and have found them liars. They have predicted our destruction and overthrow from nearly every pulpit and press throughout the land, while we were yet in our infancy, and we are not crushed and destroyed yet; and what is more we do not intend to be, for the child has grown to be a strong sturdy boy and will not be trampled upon with impunity by his elder brethren, but will represent his own case, both through his legislators, governors and Judges and through his own Senators, ambassadors and printing presses, and his rights must be respected, his claims honored, and justice awarded him.

Upon the strength of its own statement the Times warns the Mormons against going to Utah. We sincerely hope it will be heeded by all those who are half as mean, contemptable and cowardly as himself. We have no use for such fish in Utah nor on the Plains. We might pickle them, 'tis true in Salt Lake, but we should not be willing to waste the brine upon them, for pickle them as we might, they would still remain the same, and would never repay the trouble. Such characters could not live comfortably in our society, for our forces are composed of brave, bold, and valient men, who are not afraid to die, they cannot be frowned down nor in any way intimidated, nor can they be turned from their purpose, which is the restitution of all things, and the establishment of the Kingdom of God, which purpose is fixed and immovable in the bosom of every faithful Latter-day Saint.

When all things are restored we think the mobocrats who have robbed and plundered us of our possessions in this and other States, will feel rather mean and destitute, for the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, and if he should restore it unto the Saints, the meek of the earth, as he has declared he will in the last days, then will the unrigheous be poor indeed. They may then call in vain for Lazarus to dip the tip of his finger in cold water and cool their parched tongue. Then will the Saints be acknowledged and honored as the legal rulers and judges of the Earth. In the mean time, let the Saints be humble, faithful and true, and all things we have sacrificed for the gospel sake, will be restored to us, with interest a hundred fold in this life, and in the world to come life eternal.

WHAT SHALL BE EATEN?

This is a question of domestic economy which has peculiar interest for every man who has to pay for what he eats. Especially is it so to all who have families of no moderate size, with only moderate incomes out of which to provide for them. Provisions, it is no use to repeat it, are excessively high, and when they will fall nobody can tell. Meats, particularly beef, will continue very high for a long time to come. Flour may let down a little after the wheat harvest—but, it must be recollected that harvest may, by excessive rains, be shortened more than half below present expectations. Poor men must, if they can, live, in the main, upon something cheaper than beef and flour. And fortunately, there are cheaper articles which are quite as nutritious, and vastly more so, than beef. Thus, corn meal is quite as nourishing as flour, while it does not cost a third part as much. Corn meal is six times cheaper than beef, while it has from three to four times more nourishment. The following table shows these facts, and ought to be put up in every poor man's kitchen:

ANIMAL FOOD.

100 lbs.	fresh Beef contains	26 lbs.	nutritious	matter.
do	do Veal	25	do	do
do	do Mutton	29	do	do
do	do Pork	24	do	do
do	do Fowls	26 to 30		do
do	do Fish	18 to 20		do
do	do Milk	7 1-2	do	do
do	do White of egg	14	do	do

VEGETABLE SUBSTANCES.

100 lbs.	Wheat Flour con.	90 lbs.	nutritious	matter.
do	Corn Meal	91	do	do
do	Rice	86	do	do
do	Barley Meal	88	do	do
do	Rye Flour	79	do	do
do	Oat Meal	75	do	do
do	Potatoes	22 1-2	do	do
do	White Beans	95	do	do
do	Carrots	10	do	do
do	Turnips	4 1-2	do	do
do	Cabbage	7 1-2	do	do
do	Beets	15	do	do

FRUITS.

100 lbs.	Strawberies con.	10 lbs.	nutritious	matter.
do	Pears	16	do	do
do	Apples	16	do	do
do	Cherries	25	do	do
do	Plums	29	do	do
do	Apricots	26	do	do
do	Peaches	20	do	do
do	Grapes	27	do	do
do	Melons	3	do	do
do	Cucumbers	2 1-2	do	do

[Morning Herald.

We recommend the above article to the careful consideration of our brethren in this city and surrounding country; the hints here thrown out may prove beneficial to those who heed them, both in a sanatory as well as economical point of value. For the question of economy is not the only question envolved in partaking freely of fresh meats. Oxen and sheep are often subject to disease, and more particularly during the summer season. Diseased cattle are more likely to be killed for food than if healthy, which is more likely of course to engender disease in those who freely use it, and we particularly recommend our brethren and friends, during the sultry season, to use it sparingly, they may thereby save themselves alive for future usefulness.

The Chimborazo and S. Curling's Passengers.

Late on Saturday night, the 3rd intst., from 550 to 600 souls of Saints arrived here by the excellant and commodious Steamboat Amazon, under the Presidency of Elder Edward Stevenson. This company was composed of the passengers by the ships Chimborazo and S. Curling, about an equal number nf each company. About 100 arrived on Thursday the 7th inst., by the Steamboat Gibson, in charge of Elder Thurston. The balance of the companies are remaming in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, and other places between this city and New York; the most of whom will doubtless make their way to the Western country as soon as circumstances will permit.

We shipped on Monday, the 4th inst., about 140 passengers on the Ben Bolt, for Atchison, including about 80 P. E. Fund passengers, who left about 10 o'clock P. M., in charge of Elder Stevenson in company with Elder Jeremy, late of the Presidency of the Welsh Mission.

On Friday, the 8th inst., we shipped on the Amazon, for Atchison, about 300 passengers including about 220 in charge of the P. E. Fund company. The whole company is placed under the Presidency of Elder Israel Barlow; Elder Willes. Secretary, late Missionary in India.

About 300 of the ships' company above named, are in this city awaiting orders from the P. E. Fund Company's agents. About 200 are encamped a short distance from the city, on a fine open country, in a healthy location, where they are permitted to enjoy the luxury of living in tents in the real Oriental and Patriarchal style. This company is under the Presidency of Elder Andrew L. Lamoreaux, late President of the French Mission, who has brought with him from that Mission upwards if 70 Saints, who are now mostly in the St. Louis camp of Israel.

Elder John S. Fulmer arrived here on Monday evning, having received and forwarded the several ship's companies—Siddons, Juventa, Chimborazo, and S. Curling. He has satisfactoraly arranged the P. E. Fund company's business, and is now preparing to ascend the river and to lay hold of the P. E. Fund Emigration at Atchison, and superintend its movements from that point to Salt Lake city.

We call the attention of our readers to an article from the Morning Herald, of this city, headed: "Ought Brigham Young to be appointed Governor?" The question is answered in an independent, bold, and honorable manner, which spirit we admire whether 'tis displayed by Jew or Gentile. There are in this city some of the most worthy and honorable of the editorial fraternity, of whom we feel proud, and there are on the other hand some of the most mean, worthless, rotten-hearted, and contemptible creatures that ever crawled upon the earth. We advise them to crawl into their dens and hide their guilty heads, and never again to open mouths or raise their their plumes in opposition to the Lord's annointed, for he will live down prejudice and opposition, and those who seek to destroy his character, and prostrate his power will yet crouch in his presence, and bow before him, and be compelled to acknowledge that he is not only the man of the peoples universal choice, but they will be compelled to admit him to be the God of Israel's choice, his annointed law-giver as was Moses.

It will be seen by the following extract, from the Republican, that in case our emigration should be troubled by the hostile Indians on the Plains, they may find the Government troops now stationed on the way of considerable service, in clearing the way before them, and guarding our camps. We hope they will be faithful to their duties, and appreciate the honor thus conferred upon them:

"The detatchments for Kearney and Laramie have at length departed. They left Fort Leavenworth last Monday, and reached Ponsino, fifteen miles distant that evening. They there tarried all day yesterday, to allow those who were detained, and straglers generally, to get in and to more thoroughly organize than they could do in the Fort, for the expedition across the far spreading plains. Everythtng was put in excellent order, and this morning with cheerful spirits and bounding step, they marched upon their distant way. May they return as cheerly as they went.

There were only four companies of infantry instead of six, as I before wrote you, and one hundred and fifty recruits. They were commanded by Major Cady, Capt. Tood, Capt. Hendricson, Lieut. Mercer, Lieut. Plummer, Lieut. Patterson, and Lieut. Conlan, who had special charge of the recruits. Capt. Dunn of the Artillery, was Quartermaster and Commissary. Mrs. Col. Hoffman and Capt. Lovell, accompanied the expedition, and were in perfect health and the highest spirits of anticipation of joining their husbands at Fort Laramie. — May they have a pleasant journey and a happy meeting. Long trains of waggons and droves of cattle followed in the rear, and as the whole concourse lengthened out upon the plains they resembled in the distance some mighty caravan laden with rich stores and proceed by a holyday and joyous cavalcade. They will reach Fort Kearney in fifteen days and Laramie in thirty.

A countryman attended one of the President's levees, at which the ladies appeared in full ball costume, that is to say, with dresses cut very low in the neck, and leaving not so much to the imagination as poetry would require, as to the charms half concealed and half disclosed. When the unsophisticated citizen was about to take his leave, the President asked him (speaking of the levee, of course) if he had ever seen such a sight before. "No," said he, emphatically, "not since I was weaned!"—[New York Tribune.

Correspondence.

St. Louis, June 2, 1852.

To the Editor of the Luminary:

Dear Brother:—Having lately arrived in this city from Canada. I have thought that a brief description of my late field of labor, and the general prospects of the mission in Canada would not be uninteresting.

About the first of August 1754, Elders Waugh, Gustin and myself arrived in Cannada. Elder Waugh proceeded immediately to Toronto. Elder Gustin and myself to Shakspeare, where we found Elder Cossy, whom I had baptized and ordained in 1846. We stayed in that vicinity some four or five weeks. Brother Gustin was sick most of the time and unable to travel.

After baptizing Samuel Martin and rebatizing Adam Shadneich of Zora, and Aquala Bennit, I travelled through the country. I found many of what some folks call cold Mormons, who profess to believe in ancient Mormonism, but repudiate what they consider innovations, they do not know what to do with modern Mormonism.

I have found another class, who through poverty or misfortune, have been unable to gather with the Saints. Still they have been true and faithful according to their circumstances. Among these honorable ones is Able Parker of Canboro, who holds the office of a Priest. He has never failed to bear a faithful testimony concerning the Gospel wherever he was, and the Lord had blest him. We baptized all his family, and he is now preparing to gather with the Saints. In consequence of the awful darkness of the people brought upon them by the Priests and Apostates, the people of Canada are in a deplorable condition, but notwithstanding we have baptized considerable numbers, and a great many more are believing in the doctrine and principles of the Church of Latter-day Saints, but are too careless and indiferenct concerning their eternal interests to obey them.

Through the influence of the Priests, nearly every door is closed, every falsehood they can invent is industriously circulated, in order to injure our character and destroy our influence. The people are told not to listen to us, for if you do, say they, you are sure to be deluded. They have succeeded in closing the peoples eyes and ears as well as their doors.

Elders Waugh, Gustin, and myself, met in counsel a short time since, and counselled together concerning the propriety of making arrangements for gathering the Saints, from Canada to the valleys of the mountains. We concluded to emigrate the mission to Utah, and prepare ourselves to go home as soon as convenient.

The brethren that are to leave Canada for the West, will organize in the vicinity of Council Bluff's, between this time and next Spring when we hope to have a goodly company to cross the Plains to join our brethren in the valleys of Ephraim.

I purpose leaving this city in a few days, and shall proceed up the river, if your counsels should not direct me otherwise,

I am sir, your humble servant, and brother in the everlasting gospel, JAS. C. SLY.

St. Louis, May, 31, 1855.

To the Editor of the Luminary:

Dear Brother—I arrived in this city on Saturday afternoon, the 26th inst., with a small company consisting of thirty-four souls, and on Tuesday 29th inst., two more families consisting of twenty-one souls, including children, joined us with a hearty shake of the hand and feelings of joy and gladness; all from Halifax, N. J. We were to have left in one company, but in one family sickness interfered, and in the other some matters of business hindered for a few days.

I thank God, my heavenly father, for his protecting care over us, in bringing us safe to this stake of Zion, and pray that our journey may be finished with the same blessings of health and protection; and that we may soon rejoice with the Saints of God in the vallies of the mountains.

I made arrangements at Halifax for the stearage of the new Packet Barque Halifax, owned by Messrs Hart & Young. It is large and contained twenty-four berths, and capable of accommodating our company comfortably, with the exception of two or three whom I concluded would go in the cabin.

We left Halifax on the 12th inst., thirty-two in number, and after a passage of six days arrived at Boston. The passage, though longer than usual, was a pleasant one, the weather fine, wind light, and the sea was smooth. There was some seasickness among us, and one of the sisters was very sick on our arrival; she, however, recovered sufficiently to continue her journey and got well on the way. Capt. Lobold was kind and treated us with much respect. We called upon the Lord in prayer as opportunity offered, for his faithful protection and care, and gave thanks for his mercy and kindness. We made the songs of Zion to sound aloud over the mighty deep, and the silence and apparent attendance of all on board seemed to give assent to the sentiments which our songs expresed.

We arrived in Boston, after a pleasant and comfortable passage of six days, at 10 o'clock Friday, 18th inst. We left Boston on Saturday, and with fine weather and a tolerable comfortable journey by the Southern Michigan Rarilroad of seven days, stopping Saturday night and Sunday night at Albany, and Wednesday night and Thursday night at Tolledo, and arrived at St. Louis on Saturday, 26th inst. at 3 o'clock, in good health and spirits, except two of the children who have since recovered. Two families immediately took passage on the steamer Golden State, for Atchison, and the remainder of us put up for the night in the basement of a large house. I forgot to mention above, that two joined us in Boston, belonging to two families in the company.

I pray that God may continue to bless us and you, and all the faithful that the great work of the Lord may progress rapidly, and all the faithful may speedily be gathered to their joyful home in the mountains of Ephraim.

Yours in the truth, JOHN A. JOST.

To err is human; to forgive is divine.

St. Louis, 8th June 1855.

To President Erastus Snow:

Beloved Brother: Being now on my way home, I am unwilling to allow an opportunity to pass without sending you a few particulars regarding my mission to India, which has occupied nearly a period of four years, including my voyages out and home.

A year was spent by me in Calcutta, preaching, visiting and tract distributing. And as the press of that country, (as usual everywhere) took up the question of "Mormonism." It afforded me the privilege of reply in several instances, in as many as nine newspapers. I speak this to the credit of the parties concerned, who cater for the public in that country.

The remaining part of the time, I spent in the Upper Provinces of India; my travels extending as far as the Himmalels, a distance of nearly 1200 miles. The European residents as well as natives, opening their houses, and donating their means in assisting me to carry out the objects of my mission. In short their houses, their horses and carriages, servants, &c., were at my service in almost every station I had the pleasure to visit. As far as this was concerned it is all well, but in relation to the results. They have not been proportionate, chiefly owing to the fact that curiosity and hospitality were the chief incentives, coupled with luxury, competence and a disinclination to change. Yet there are many who are now rejoicing in the truth, and extremely anxious to gather to Zion, hoping to be able to so next year.

After having spent about two years and a half in Hindoostan; I next went to Rangoon, in Bumah, staid for six months, during which time more than twenty were brought into the Church, chiefly soldiers of the 84th Foot, several of whom have since my departure, sent their tithing and temple offerings to Liverpool.

It occupied six months to reach Liverpool from Rangoon, calling on my way and scattering the written and spoken word at Penang, or Prince of Wales Island; and Singapore in the Straits of Mallacca, with one very full day of street preaching; tract flying and book distributing in the far famed cenotoph of Napoleon, (the Island of St. Helena,) in which place many of the leading inhabitants flocked around me to obtain information.

If time permitted, I should like to dwell on many interesting particulars, both of a religious, political and social character peculiar to the people, among whom I have mingled, but the word now is forward, and on I go, as far as I have been encouraged to hope, to the home of the Saints, where my dear wife and family, and many kind Saints are awaiting my arrival by this season's emigration.

With earnest prayers for your prosperity now and forever, and the onward rolling of the great work of the last days, I remain most affectionately in Christ Jesus, your brother and humble servant,

WILLIAM WILLES.

Centreville, Del., May 29, 1855.

Dear Brother Snow:—The work of the Lord is moving on slowly in these parts. I have preached considerably in this State and Pensylvania since I returned from my mission in Hindostan, but have only baptized six, and have some others believing, and I hope to be called on soon to initiate them into the kingdom of God. The devil shows his good will to stop the work of the Lord now and again.

I went to hear a Reverend gentleman of the M. E. Church preach yesterday morning. His text was Mat. vii 14. "Because, strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." He affirmed the gate to be conversion, and strait, to be, or signify difficult, &c. So as I had the same Hall engaged for the afternoon, as soon as he was through, I stepped into the stand (by his permission) and announced my meeting, (although a standing appointment,) and that I would notice the same text, &c. So the time came and quite a number of the Methodists came to hear me, through curiosity perhaps. So I took the same text, gave the same admonition, "beware of false Prophets, &c., and by their fruits ye shall know them, &c." I spoke some hour and a half or more—showed them the gate or door by which they should enter the "narrow way," and the falsity of his position, &c. So I done a little good by going to a Methodist meeting, for I got some out to hear, who would not have come on any other account.

The people, as a general thing, are tolerably hardened, but still as I have to remain in the states this year, I hope to do at least a little good, and to have a few souls for my hire; if I do not make many new converts, I will try and save a few of those already in the kingdom. I have been busily engaged for a month past, getting places for the English Saints, and taking them to the same. I have been up to Philadelphia on the arrival of each ship, and have brought some out of each company down into various parts of this State. So I am not idle, altho' I have filled the mission I was on; but I have learned one thing some time since, that is, a servant of the Lord never has his work finished, but as fast as one part is finished there is another on hand.

Last Friday evening, after I had returned to father Mousley's from taking the brethren and sisters to their places, and was very tired, as I go on foot, I was remarking to mother Mously that I was through with that job and I was glad of it, and should now take a little rest for a few days, as I suppose the ship Chimborazo is the last that will land in Philadelphia for a while; but I was not through speaking, before she said brother Woolly, look at the army out there. I took no particular notice, but in a few minutes father Mousley came in and said here is some more men. I went down and found five of the brethren from the Chimborazo which brother Clinton had sent out to me. So my consolation did not last long, as I had to stir out the next morning be-times with them to try and find them situations. The farmers in these parts are a little dubious about hiring perfect strangers without some little reference, as they have been served some tricks, therefore I go and see to it myself.

I occasionally see one of your valuable papers and must say it carries light and truth where ere it goes, and will I trust be the means of bringing many honest souls to the knowledge of the truths of heaven, and I think the spirit of God will induce them to obey its precepts. The Saints in these parts feel first rate as a general thing, and are anxious to gather to the sweet, lovely vallies of Ephaim where they can live in peace and quietness, far remote from the turmoils, strife and contention of wicked Babylon, there to worship God and keep all his commands according to the dictates of their own conscience. While war, famine, earthquakes, plagues, and pestilence of various kinds will stalk abroad among the wicked and destroy them off from the face of the land to give room for Zion (the righteous) to spread her stakes, strengthen her cords, and give strength to her bulwarks, and finally to establish peace and righteousness throughout the whole of our little globe, and thus bind the devil and all of his imps and cast them out of our midst. This, in part, is what Mormonism will finally do, for Mormonism is nothing more nor less than the work of God on the earth—the gospel of Jesus Christ—the power of God unto salvation of any one that believeth, obeys and continues faithful therein, whether Jew or Gentile—"he that endureth to the end the same shall be saved."

Well, I have scribbled enough. Please excuse this as I write in haste. I would be pleased to receive a line from you if time will allow you so to do, though I am well aware of the multiplicity of your business in your responsible station; but I pray God to give you strength as your day may demand, and desire an interest in yours in return that I may be faithful and return home with clean hands as I have thus far, thank God.

Please forward my letters that may come into the Post-office, or anything else, to Centreville, New Castle county, Delaware, care of Titus Mously, and much oblige your humble servant.

I will now close with kind respects to yourself and all the Saints, and particularly the valley Elders.

I remain, as ever, your humble servant and brother in the gospel. S. A. WOOLLEY.

From the Deseret News.

SANDWICH ISLANDS MISSION.

Mr. Editor:—Sir: In compliance with your request, the fulfilment of which I have long deferred, I attempt to give you a brief sketch of the situation of the Sandwich Islands Mission from its commencement up to the time of my departure for this place.

On the 11th of Oct., 1849, I left this city, in company with several others, under the direction of Elder C. C. Rich, for California; and was, while there, appointed by him along with nine others (Hiram Clark, Thos. Whittle, John Dixon, H. W. Bigler, Thomas Morris, James Keeler, James Hawkins, Wm. Farrer, and H. B. Blackwell), on a mission to the Sandwich Islands. Brother H. Clark was appointed as president of the mission.

We left San Francisco on the 22nd of Nov., 1850, and arrived at Honolulu, the capital of the islands, on the 12th of Dec., 1850. The day after our arrival we ascended a mountain in the vicinity of the town and erected a small altar of stones, and then bowed ourselves in prayer before the Lord, dedicating those lands to him, and beseeching him to open our way as his servants in endeavoring to plant the gospel among that people. We felt the Spirit very powerfully, and realized that the Lord was pleased with us and accepted what we had done, we received the spirit of prophecy, and of tongues with the interpretation, and we received the promise that we should be blessed with greater blessings than we had asked or could ask. This we afterwards proved to be a truth.

President Clark selected brother Whittle to stay with him in Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, and then selected four from the rest to go to the four principal islands—Maui, Hawaii, Kauai and Molokai—and preside, with the others as partners.—Brothers Hawkins and Blackwell went to Hawaii; brothers Dixon and Farrer to Kauai; and as brother Morris was counseled by President C. to stay in Honolulu, brother H. W. Bigler, whose partner brother Morris was, and whose field was the island of Molokai, accompanied brother Keeler and myself to our field—the island of Maui—where we landed on the 19th, one week from the time of our first landing. We were now scattered round upon the different islands, and among a people to whose language, manners, and customs, we were strangers, our means short and a poor prospect, looking at it naturally, for obtaining more. It was thought before we left California that the white population of the islands would be sufficient to occupy our attention, but we soon found, after landing, that there was too sparse a population to justify us in confining ourselves to them alone. To return without accomplishing anything we felt would be inconsistent with our character as messengers of salvation; around us lay a nation who, in our opinion, were descendants of Abraham, the friend of God, and who were grovelling in darkness and in ignorance of the plan of salvation, and if we would acquire their language there was a large field of usefulness open before us. We felt by the manifestations of the Spirit to us that if we wished to be approved, this was the course for us to pursue, and we accordingly adopted it.

From the brethren on the other islands we continued to hear of their want of success, and finally, as the prospect seemed hopeless of doing much among the whites, four of the brethren, in accordance with the counsel of brother Clark, left for San Francisco in the months of February and March, 1851, and he, himself, shortly afterwards left for Tahiti, one of the Society Islands, with the feeling that the work was done where we were; leaving five of us, brothers H. W. Bigler, Hawkins, Keeler, Ferrer, and myself, to do what we could. Brother Farrer had joined us when the other brethren left as a partner for brother Bigler, and in the month of April, 1851, they left Maui, and went to Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, with the design of occupying that portion of the field.

In the course of three or four months after our landing, I was enabled to lay the principles of truth in some degree of plainness before them in their own language, and considerable interest was manifested by many in relation to it; but opposition from the missionaries and others was so very strong, and we had nothing to recommend us but the merits of the doctrines of which we were the bearers, that there were but very few who had the boldness to show a disposition to favor it. Those who harbored or countenanced us in the least, if they belonged to their church, were threatened by the missionaries with excommunication—a threat which at that time had great effect on the native mind—and if they did not belong to the church they used every other influence to intimidate, and if not intimidate, injure them. But, notwithstanding all the persecution and opposition manifested towards us, we were blessed, and in less than seven months from the time of our landing, we numbered, on the island of Maui, about two hundred, and calls for preaching on all hands.

On the 10th of August, 1851, brother Lewis, Hammond, and Woodbury, and sisters Lewis and Hammond, arrived at Lahaina, on the island of Maui. These brethren proved a welcome accession of strength, and it gladdened our hearts to see them and hear the news they brought from Zion. In the fall of the same year brother W. J. Perkins and wife, and sister Woodbury, arrived from California; they having had to stay after the other brethren left, for want of means. Brother Hawkins, also, being alone on the large island, Hawaii, came down about the same time to Maui, and continued to labor successfully with us there until Oct., 1853, when he was appointed to labor on the island of Oahu.

We now occupied and spread out in the field as much as our strength and opportunities afforded, warning the people, and teaching in as simple a manner as possible the principles of the gospel of Jesus, and with considerable success, for hundreds embraced the work, and many proved useful auxiliaries to the Elders in propagating the doctrines.—We had abundant cause to rejoice that we had stayed and endeavored to establish the gospel there when we beheld the effect the preaching of it had, for they enjoyed the gifts and manifestations of the Spirit, especially the gift of healing, to a remarkable extent.

On the 27th of January, 1852—a little over a year from the time of our landing—I commenced the translation of the Book of Mormon, which was continued during the intervals not occupied in traveling and preaching until completed and revised ready for press. This was a work of some magnitude in that country, as the facilities for obtaining aid were not such as could be obtained in more civilized countries. The book was translated and then revised; and in the work of revision I was assisted by several intelligent natives in rendering it as consonant with the idiom of that language as possible; then recopied and subjected to another revision.

In the fall of 1852, brother W. J. Perkins and wife left for home, having been counselled to return in consequence of ill health.

In February, 1853, nine more of the brethren arrived from the valley—brothers B. F. Johnson, N. Tanner, James McBride, Ephraim Green, Thomas Karren, James Lawson, R. A. and N. N. Allred, and Egerton Snider—all of whom arrived in good health and spirits, and took hold of the work in earnest. Their assistance was much needed, as there were more calls than we could possibly fill, and they were, therefore, distributed among the several conferances to enable them more readily to acquire their language. After the arrival of these brethren we were enabled to spread out on to all the inhabited islands of the group, and occupy some small portions; and thus it has spread until there is scarcely a district in the group that has not heard the sound of "Mormonism," more or less, and our numbers have increased to upwards of 4,000. But the mere preaching of the word is not all that is needed among that people, they need continual lessons in the practical part of "Mormonism," to raise them from their present low condition to a position, to which, according to the prophecies, they have a right to aspire.

At the October Conference, 1853, measures were entered into for procuring a press and type to publish our works in the native language; and although, looking at it in some points of view, it seemed like a great undertaking among so poor a people, yet we felt sanguine that the Lord would sustain us in every effort that we might make, with an eye single to His glory, to elevate them. We also appointed a committee of brethren to make inquiries and select a portion of some one of the Islands, in accordance with counsel received from President Young, as a subsidiary gathering place. The island of Lanai, a small island tolerably convenient to the two principal markets—Honolulu and Lahaina,—was selected, and a portion of it secured on favorable terms; and from letters which I have received since my departure, I learn that the work of gathering, &c., has commenced to a small extent, commensurate with the facilities which they at present possess.

In the early part of 1854, brother McBride left for San Francisco, it having been deemed wisdom for him to return in consequence of his ill health; and shortly afterwards brother Tanner left for the same place with the intention of procuring a vessel for the emigration of the native Saints, but which has since proved impracticable, as there is a strong prohibitory law which prevents the emigration of natives. Both these brethren are at present laboring assiduously in California, under brother P. P. Pratt's direction.

At a conference held in Honolulu, July 24, 1854, brothers H. W. Bigler, Hawkins, Farrer, and myself, were released from the duties of the mission, and granted the privilege of returning home. We embarked soon afterwards, and after reaching California, it was thought best by brother Parley, in consequence of the lack of means, for one of our number to return with brother C. C. Rich, and the remainder stay until spring. At the suggestion of the brethren I returned, and arrived in this city with a heart full of gratitude to God for having preserved me to be once more re-united with His people in these peaceaful vallies. Although but young and inexperienced, I ever found my strength sufficient to my day, and I lacked nothing, in a temporal point of view, necessary to enable me to magnify my office and calling. The brethren and sisters from the valley, by their correct and upright course, have gained a lasting influence there, and I felt thankful that my lot had been cast among such while absent from Zion.

Much more might be said in relation to the habits of the people, their traditions, &c., that might be interesting; but, as I have already trespassed on your space, I shall forbear.

With continual desires for the progress and establishment of the Kingdom of our God,

I remain, your brother, GEO. Q. CANNON.

G. S. L. City, March 7, 1855.

Miscellaneous.

WORKING BEE.

TUNE.—"ROSA MAY."

O! once I dwelt in Babylon, in darkness and in dread,
For I could see some thick dark clouds were hanging o'er my head,
But soon the Mormon sun burst forth, dispersed those clouds of jet;
And I became a working bee in the hive of Deseret.

When I began the truth to scan, kind friends their warning gave,
They straight condemned the Mormon plan, and tried poor me to save;
They raved, persuaded me to quit the "poor deluded set,"
But I became a working bee in the hive of Deseret.

I read, marked, learned, and did digest the plans which Joseph taught,
For, of all the plans, it is the best, and one that Jesus brought;
And from my heart, I bless the day, I first the Mormons met,
And glad became a working bee in the hive of Deseret.

Thanks to our King, the stone rolls forth, the kingdom lives and grows,
Enlightens part of this dark earth, and onward, upward flows;
To every nation, Saints go forth, and spread the gospel net,
Returning with fresh working bees for the hive of Deseret.

While discord reigns throughout the earth, proud nations rush to war,
And famine, pestilence, and strife, extend from shore to shore;
All Mormon hearts united are, on peace their minds are set,
No drones nor discord plague the bees in the hive of Deseret.

When Brigham speaks, the Saints give ear, they work with hand and heart,
And by "hard knocks" the kingdom rear, and cheerfully impart
Abundantly of earthly goods, and grudge not, nor regret
They have become the working bees in the hive of Deseret.

Both old and young, and grave and gay, from every sect have fled,
They've found the strait and narrow way, and follow Christ their head;
By day and night to keep His laws, their hearts are firmly set,
And praise His name, they're working bees in the hive of Deseret.

And from my heart I now invite each wanderer on the earth,
To come and prove the joys I sing, and gain celestial birth;
Ere Satan by his wiles beguile, and catch them in his net,
May they become good working bees in the hive of Deseret.

WILLIAM WILLES, East India Mission.

DRAGOONING THE PEOPLE.

A Salt Lake correspondent of the Ruplican writes as follows, of the people of Utah Territory:

"The idea advanced by the editors of some of the Eastern papers, that they are to be governed only by military force, is ridiculous and farcical in the extreme, and no one deprecates such newspaper paragraphs more than Col. Steptoe. They go to prove the prejudice and ignorance of these writers in everything connected with these people, and to excite feelings of animosity in the minds of the community at large against them."

This idea of employing military force against the citizens of the Territories is a favorite one with certain presses and party leaders at this moment. We are no polygamists or defenders of polygamy; but the outrage of sending out United States troops to suppress it by force in Utah, with such institutions as the people of this country have agreed to live under, has been frequently exposed in the columns of this paper. And to put such an invasion on any other ground—would be a contemptible subterfuge. Just so of Kansas. The facts are of Kansas, that there was a cunningly contrived plot to abolitionize that Territory, or, (if you please,) to give its politics anti-slavery complexion. There is plenteous proof, that hundreds sent out as agents in the execution of this plot were dispatched to Kansas, not to remain there, but to stay there till the election, and then, having done their appointed work on that occasion, to "go about their business," that is, scatter and disperse to parts unknown, or return to the places which sent them out. Of this, we say, there is adundant proof. The plot was kept as secret as it is usually possible to keep conspiracies, which envelope large numbers of persons. And there was a plenty of free-masonry about it. Signs, grips and passwords, showed how thoroughly matured was the organization in all its details. Well, the existence of such a plot having come to the ears of the other side, that side counter-plotted and sent in also its men—the election came on—there was some disturbance, but not a hundredth part as much in the whole Territory, as has happened in a single precinct in New York city on similar occasions. There was a good deal of alarm—much of it needless—on the part of Greely's men. But this fact was palpable:—After every allowance for illegalities and irregularities, Greely's men were out-voted, almost ten to one. The poor people of Kansas Territory, assembling under the Organic law of that Territory, declared their will, according to law. Such are the facts—the stubbern facts—which no state of things hereafter, and which no railing at results can by any possibility alter. Now, when these facts are revealed and these facts cannot be denied, what do we see?

In various sections of the country there are to be found journals advocating the employment of United States troops against the people of Kansas! We are quite sure that these journals speak a language and urge on extremes, which were never before heard of in the history of our country from any organ of public opinion. Coercion and chastisement of this character are new propositions. They are as monstrous as they are new. Can the men who offer such desperate counsels have any proper conceptions they would precipitate? Can they be wholly blind to the unutterable folly and wickedness of what they advise? Many of them doubtless are. For the flippant style in which they utter their atrocities shows them devoid of the last particle of sense, judgment, or wisdom. Foiled and beaten at their own game—the attempt by trickery to shape the politics of a Territory to their liking—they are mortified and enraged. In the blindness of their fury, they are seeking revenge through resorts, which will stir up a Civil War. One foolish journal declares even that "there is now Civil War."

But we will not dwell on such astounding and execrable folly. Unsettled and excited as are the minds of men at this day, we cling to the belief that there is still to be found, among our countrymen, a reserve of sound sense and moderation, against which all the mischievous forces set in action by such folly will dash in vain. The country which gave birth to Washington, Franklin, Marshal, Webster, Wright and Clay, has also given birth, we believe, to other men in this generation of the same stamp. Should this unhappy excitement continue, the country will not in vain look for guides and saviors to such men. Let all the knaves, and all the fools, and all the fire-brands in the country combine for the destruction of our Union and its institutions, we still cherish an abiding faith that their plots will be defeated, and they themselves brought to all the shame, which they are capable of feeling.—Herald.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Dr. Tyng and Dr. Cumming on the second coming of the Lord.

It may sound strange to some of our readers to be reminded that some of the most eminent Doctors of the Old Dispensation are still maintaining that the day of the Lord's literal personal appearance is rapidly approaching. We see it mentioned that Doct. Cumming, an eloquent Scotch preacher, and a popular theological writer, has published a work on the "Signs of the Times," in which he affiliates very closely with the views of the Millerites.

His theory is that Christ will come in 1864—that the advent will be what is termed pre-millennial, or in other words, that Christ will come before the millennium, and the millennium glories will consist of Christ's personal reign on the earth for a thousand years—that the Jews will be literally gathered to Jerusalem to be converted—that the Moslem power is about to expire, not by destruction of the Turks, but by their conversion and absorption into the church—that Popery will be destroyed by Christ's coming and not before it.

Strange as their visionary phantasies may sound to one whose mind has been even in the least degree opened to the reception of the rational light of the New Dispensation, yet such notions are still extensively promulgated through the pulpit and the press, and not simply by the "deluded Millerites," but by men who are highly esteemed for their learning and eloquence. Dr. Tyng, formerly of this city, now of New York, has, within the last few years, publicly and earnestly advocated a doctrine identical in its main features with the one referred to above.

Several of the Episcopal bishops hold and teach the same doctrine.—Phil. New Church Herald.

THE BRITISH LOSSES IN BATTLE.

A Parliamentary return, just published, gives some particulars regarding the killed and wounded in the British Army in the Crimea since the commencement of the campaign. In the cavalry there were killed 11 officers, 14 non-commissioned officers, and 146 men; in the artillery 6 officers, 5 non-commissioned officers, and 35 men; in the sappers and miners (Royal engineers) 1 officer and 1 man; in the infantry 64 officers, 62 sergeants, and 1000 men, and 9 officers of the staff—making a total of killed of all ranks, 1360. The total number of wounded was 4546—viz.: in the cavalry, 21 officers, 21 sergeants, and 181 men; in the artillery, 9 officers, 10 sergeants, and 149 men; in the engineers, 3 officers, 1 sergeant, and 9 men; in the infantry, 186 officers, 236 sergeants, and 3698 men, together with 22 officers of the staff. Of the 241 officers of all arms of the service thus wounded, 20 died in consequence of the injuries received. The number of horses killed during the campaign was 381, while those who died from other causes amounted to 1466.

MORMONS.

From the best information we can gather, Atchison is settled upon by these people, as the permanent starting point for all future emigration. This has been decided upon, after thoroughly canvassing the various advantages; and experienced travelers have declared, that no point on the Missouri river, from St. Louis to Council Bluffs, offers more inducements to the emigrant than the city of Atchison.

During the stay of the Mormons in our midst, they have conducted themselves in such a manner as to entitle them to credit. We have the first dispute or quarrel to hear of, and no bad feelings between the citizens and these people have taken place. Considering the prejudices of the Missourians and Mormons against each other, this result could have hardly been expected. But the good behavior on the part of the Mormons, and their strict attention to their own business, gave no room for misunderstanding, and we verily believe that a much better feeling exists between them, than when first they landed. The time has now come when they will be compelled to take up the line of march westward. With the fine teams they own, and the excellent water and grass that abound in this vicinity, we predict for them a safe and prosperous trip to the land they claim to be the "promised." Following the Mormon emigration, will be a number of Salt Lake merchants. Their stock is now on our prairies, and their goods between this place and St. Louis. The total number of emigrants starting from Atchison this Spring, must be in the neighborhood of five thousand.—[Squatter Sovereign.

"I cannot bear children," said Mrs. Prim disdainfully. Mrs. Partington looked over her spectacles mildly—"Perhaps if you could you would like them better."

To say little, and perform much, is noble.

Arrival of the Steamer Africa.

Halifax, May 5, P. M.—The Royal Mail steamship Africa arrived this P. M., with one week's later intelligence. She was off the harbor yesterday, but was unable to enter on account of the weather. Her news is of a highly interesting character, and commercially highly important.

Austria has proposed that the conference meet again at Vienna. The English and French Ambassadors had not given a reply. The meeting is with a view to arrange the third point. Austria also insists that the German States shall specify distinctly the course each one intends to take.

General Pelisser is popular. It is surmised he will make a bold attempt to cut off Liprandi's army. Omer Pacha has offered to take and hold Simpheropol if the French will support his advances.

The allied forces in the Crimen are now 200,000, viz: 120,000 French, 30,000 British, 40,000 Turks and 10,000 Sardinians. The army is now well supplied with luxuries as well as necessaries, but some fever as well as cholera prevailed.

On Monday, May 10th, a severe contest took place during the night.

The affair lasted one hour and a half, when the Russians returned under cover of their guns. Loss considerable on both sides. Night attacks were also made on the nights of the 11th and 12th by the Russians, but they were gallantly repulsed on both occasions.

The attacks of the Russians were spiritedly continued up to the 22nd.

On the 25th the French occupied a large place between the central bastion and the sea shore, where the enemy would collect large forces. The English cruisers in the Baltic had brought several prizes to Elsinore.

The Russian government had ordered the ships of war at Cronstadt to be sunk with the exception of 8 liners.

All the fortified harbors in Finland are to be placed in a state of seige.

The mortality in the Austrian army in Gallatin continued great; 1500 had died.

FURTHER DETAILS BY THE PACIFIC.

Our private foreign advices convey to us among other important intelligence, the announcement of another new feature in siege warfare; and a most destructive one, as our information since received, has led us to believe. Lord Dundonald, as may be remembered, some time since proposed to the government of Great Britain a destructive engine of war to be used in sieges, and stated at the time that in his opinion there had never been anything invented in ancient or modern offensive warfare to equal the dreadful and destructive machine which he proposed selling to the English government. The idea being his own, and his desire being to make it of pecuniary advantage to himself, of course it was impossible to gain from him any specific information in regard to the nature of his invention. But our private and reliable correspondent has raised the veil from this mystery, and shown us the character of the awful agent, which ere this has reduced the proud walls of Modern Troy to crumbled ruins.

The means invented by his Lordship, and used on the occasion, were "Stink Pots." The heart of man revolts at such fearful means of destruction, and every human breast must throb with horror at the dire fate which is in store for the enemies of Dundonald's country. But on the other hand, the Britons cry, "What can we do?" No! To use the words of our esteemed correspondent, "The general opinion here is, that no other resource is left us, and that it is absolutely necessary; and the ancient war cry of "St. George and victory!" is changed by universal consent to "St. George and stink pots!"

Mormonism.—The counties of Leon and Madison, are still the scene of Mormon excitement, and we are sorry to say that the efforts of the Mormon preachers are not without success. We learn that several men and women have joined the new church and that they are fully impressed with the belief that the "strong in the faith" can cure diseases, heal the wounded, give sight to the blind, that they can speak in unknown tongues. They are very zealous, and swallw the plurality of wives, and every other monstrocity, as sound doctrine and good example to society. We would not be surprised to find some missionaries at Austin shortly.

FRANCE.

The universal exhibition was opened in Paris, May 15, with much form and ceremony, though the array was anything but complete. The Emperor and Empress were present with all the officers of state and some 8,000 persons.

Pionori, the would-be-assassin of the Emperor was executed at 5 o'clock in the morning in prison He admitted his guilt, but refused to make any developments, exclaiming vive la Republic just as the knife fell.

An extraordinary story is rumored that the pretended attack on the Emperor was a sham, the real Pionori a police agent, now sent out of the country and a lay figure executed in his stead.

The Emperor is said to be about to issue a manifesto to the army in the east, stating the reasons of his not proceeding to the seat of war.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

SUMMER HATS.
STAW'S, LEGHORN'S, AND PANAMA'S!
YOU ARE INVITED TO THE CORINTHIAN HALL---BIG HAT:
297 BROADWAY.
THE BEST, CHEAP, ST. LOUIS MADE,
☞ FASHIONABLE DRESS HATS! ! ☜
☞ CASH PRICE, - $4. ☜
Soft Felt Hats, all kinds and colors.—Call and see.

MISSOURI SAIL AND BAGGING LOFT,
South-west corner of Chesnut st. and the Levee, St. Louis.
Salt Lake, California, Oregon, Kansas, and Nebraska EMIGRANTS
CAN be supplied with the following articles as advertised: Tents, Tarpaulins, Wagon Covers, Mule Covers, Trunk Covers, Saddle and Clother Bags, Awnings, and all kinds of Canvas or Rope work on hand, or made to order at the shortest notice. Flags of all descriptions made to order on short notice.
We have on hand, and for hire, 50 full sized, water proof Tarpaulins.
☞ Old work repaired and warranted by GEO. R. LITTLE & CO.
N. B. Those emigrants having perfect knowledge of the business, will do any of the above work will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor them with their patronage, as we warrant all our articles to be perfect. [June 9 29 3m

Poetical Department.

ON A PICTURE OF VENICE.

BY MARIE J. EWEN.

'Tis she, the fairy city gay, "built on the flowing tide."
The throne of merchant princes proud—the Adriatic's bride;
E'en as in beauty's bloom she stood, in sunlit days of yore,
When myriad streamers fluttered bright her marble mansions o'er.

When evening rays of burnished gold lay sleeping on her halls,
And the music of a thousand songs re-echoed from her walls,
While glory crowned her palaces, and freedom's flag was there,
And perfumes from the Orient came through the summer air.

Fair Venice in her palmy days, bright, beautiful and free,
Oh! then to view that pageantry, her bridal with the sea,
To mark the graceful gondolas, the flowing streets along,
While the plashing of the boatman's oar kept time with Tasso's song.

O, marble in the starshine! O, mansions gleaming white!
How dazzlingly your columned roofs reflected back the light;
The ans'ring chime of voices sweet, came fluting down the breeze,
Like tones of fairy minstrelsy amid the forest trees.

Still, Venice, still the deep blue wave is trembling at thy feet,
And echoes of departed songs the list'ning spirit greet;
O, glory's fading splendors! your requiem comes to me
Like music sweeping mournfully athwart the azure sea.

Thou wert not wise in days of yore, O, Venice! passing fair,
While flinging back with regal pride the sparkles from thy hair;
Thy sons were fettered to thy throne—in name alone the free;
O flashing eyes, superbly proud! for, who was like to thee?

How couldst thou hope for durance long—an everlasting name?
Thou, that to others didst deny what thou thyself didst claim!
'Twere well had all remembered this, all powers that e'er have reigned,
Who makes another's fetters strong, himself shall be enchained.

O, fragile beauty, fleeting fast! O, lovliness supreme!
Gleaming across the sunlit waves—the city of a dream;
I mourn, but yet I lowly bend, and own the just decree
That made thy sceptre pass away from the empire of the sea.

Thine alabaster palaces are crumbling to the shore,
For their glory hath departed and their music is no more;
An under-tone comes heaving up amid the waters blue,
"So perish all who dare enslave the many for the few."

THE MORMON IMMIGRATION.

The Valley of the Salt Lake is being rapidly peopled with Mormon immigrants from all quarters of the habitable globe, and the work of propagating the principles of this singular sect is now systematically carried on by Elders and missionaries in almost every civilized as well as semi-savage country. These men labor with a zeal untiring, a devotion that knows no limit, suffering hunger and thirst, privation, insult and contempt, for the advancement of the faith they preach and profess. The great object sought to be attained by the Mormons is the establishment of a mighty theocracy, in the valley of the Salt Lake, where they may enjoy, without fear of molestation, the free exercise of their religious and social opinions. To this end the most strenuous efforts have been made to promote immigration to Utah, not only from the United States and Europe, but even from remote Asia and Africa. In every seaport of any consequence in this country and in Europe, emigration agents are located to give information to the inquiring, and to aid those who desire to go to Utah, and arrange for their safe and speedy transportation to that distant country. All along the line of travel, too, other agents are in waiting with the necessary supplies for the journey, and under the auspices of Mormonism the great land voyage across the plains is now almost as safe as a journey from New York to Albany.

The faithful of the fold of Latter-day Saints whose poverty prevents their undertaking the journey, are forwarded at the expense of the "Perpetual Emigration Fund." Wealthy men among the sect support this fund by their contributions, and those who are sent out at its expense mortage a certain portion of the proceeds of their labor after arriving in the happy valley to repay the cost—thus the fund is made perpetual. The season for emigrating is between November and April; this season the Liverpool agency have sent off over 3,600 immigrants, of whom above 1,100 were sent at the expense of the fund. Heretofore these immigrants have usually entered this country through the Southern ports, avoiding New York altogether; but it would seem that the aversion is wearing off. Yesterday the packet ship S. Curling brought to New York 570 of these immigrants, and the ship William Stetson is on the way hither with 293 more. We believe there are still other vessels now due here laden with Mormons.

From a visit to the S. Curling we are enabled to lay some interesting facts before the readers of the Tribune respecting the order and management of the voyage. A large majority of the passengers are of the poorer classes of British peasantry, Ireland contributing but a small proportion, who are sent out to Utah at the expense of the Emigration Fund. They are mainly in families, only a few single men and women were on board. The married people were of all ages from tender 18 to hale 80, and appeared to enjoy good health and spirits. The vessel was the cleanest emigrant ship we have ever seen; notwithstanding the large number of her passengers, order, cleanliness and comfort prevailed on all hands, the between decks were as sweet and well ventilated as the cabin, and the orlop deck was as white as scrubbing brush and holystone could make it. It would be well if the packet-ships that ply between this port and Liverpool were to imitate the system of management that prevailed on board this ship. The passengers were under the presidency of Elder Israel Barlow and two Councilors, Elders Perry and Robinson. The company was divided into seven wards, each superintended by a President and two Councilors, who together attended to the affairs of the ward, such as cooking, drawing water, morning and evening worship, looking after the sick, setting the watch, and in short directing the affairs, temporal and spiritual, of the people committed to their care.

These sub-Presidents and Councilors received their orders from the executive head of the expedition, President Barlow and his Councilors. The routine of daily duty was somewhat as follows: At 4 A. M. the men told off in rotation, the night previous commenced cleaning the wards, at 5 o'clock morning worship, at 5 1-2 cooking commenced, the stewards of each ward being allowed the use of the galley for half an hour and priority of use being assigned to the wards in rotation every day. At another stated time water was served out. Dinner cooking commenced at 11, and tea at 5. At 8 o'clock evening worship was celebrated, and then the lights were put out and the night watch set. The duty of the latter was to guard against visits from the sailors, or indiscretions of any kind among the brethren.—All of these duties were discharged with military precision at the summons of the bugle; for instance, the call to prayers was "Rosa May," and the night watch was set to the tune of "The Soldier's Tear." As far as we could learn, comfort, cleanliness, good humor, and good health prevailed throughout the voyage. The Saints will set out for Utah by way of St. Louis as soon as possible. Wagons, teams, and tents are now waiting for them on the Missouri River, and they expect to reach the Promised Land in September or October next.

In conversation with the Secretary of the expedition, Mr. William Willis, we learned that he was by profession a schoolmaster, and he had been a member of the Church of England. This is his first visit to America—his wife and family are already in Utah, where he will join them. In 1851 he went to India as a Mormon Missionary. From Calcutta he travelled from station to station to the Himalayas, 700 miles of the distance on foot, teaching and preaching the Mormon doctrines, to Europeans. Up and down the Ganges he wandered preaching with variable success. Next he journeyed through Burmah, tarrying at Rangoon about six months, where he made the acquaintance of some of the American Missionaries, among them Messrs. Kincaid and Vinton. During his Missionary tour he visited Penang and Singapore, and was the pioneer Missionary of his faith on the Island of St. Helena. He said that about 200 Mormons are now waiting for an opportunity to embark from India for Utah, and the efforts of the Mormon Missionaries are very successful, more especially among the natives, whose language they have learned.

We asked him for little light on the alleged plurality of wives among the Mormons. He said it was part of their faith to have as many wives as they desired, only when a man took a new wife he must first obtain the consent of the presiding Elder. Women are not permitted to enjoy a plurality of husbands but only a moiety of one. The slightest violation of the (Mormon) marriage relation on the part of either sex is punished with excommunication from the church. We asked why Mormons did not practice their peculiar views in this respect in Europe and the United States. He replied the Church always respected the laws under which they lived; any attempt by a Saint to carry the plurality principle into practice in Europe or here would be visited with instant expulsion from the Church. In Utah where Mormon law is paramount they lived up to their principles to the fullest extent. We did not ask him how the women liked polygamy but in the course of an argument by him in its favor the Mormon estimate of the sex was indirectly shown. He said woman was created as a help-meet for man to bear him children.—[New York Tribune.

A NEW INVENTION.

A Mr. Campbell, of Columbus, Ohio, has recently invented and patented a method of affecting an union between iron and glass, by which he expects to bring about a most valuable revolution in the use of the fragile article. He thinks by lining boxes, and other metalic supports, where friction is an impediment, with glass, combined in his specified manner, he can much reduce the friction as well as the wear of the parts.

The National Intelligencer, in speaking of the invention says:

"The test to which the specimen we have seen has been subjected, at once convinces that glass thus embedded in iron could sustain extraordinary pressure and the most powerful blows; but a doubt arose in relation to the inequally in the contraction and expansion of the two materials, by sudden changes in their temperature. Iron however, expands and contracts by heat far more than glass, and the cast-iron box being expanded to its utmost when the glass congeals all its after tendency by this means must necessarily be to embrace the glass within it; and this glass being in the form of an arch, with its bases and apex both embraced by the iron, it can yield to no power that is not capable of literally crushing it to powder."

An ingenious chemist has sent a bottle of London fog to the Paris Exhibition, as a specimen of raw material.

NOTICE.

We have received and have on sale the following books and pamphlets.

Book of Mormon,	$1 00
Book of Doctrine and Covenants,	95
Voice of Warning,	50
Spencer's Letters,	50
Hymn Books, Morocco gilt, ext.,	1 25
" " Calf "	80
" " Roan "	50
Government of God, by J. Taylor,	50
New Jerusalem, or the Fulfilment of Modern Prophecy,	15
Divine Authority of Joseph Smith,	10
Remarkable Visions,	10
Only Way to be Saved,	5
Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, by O. Pratt, 6 parts, 10cts. ea., or per sett,	40
Polygamy, by a Lady in Utah,	5
The Seer, by O. Pratt, vol. 1, to which is added 6 parts of Divine Authenticity of the book of Mormon, and Polygamy, by a Lady of Utah, elegantly bound, in one vol.	2 25
Orson Pratt's works, bound,	1 50
Times and Seasons, vols. 4, 5, and 6, well bound, ea.	1 50
Portraits of the First Presidency,	1 25

Route from England to Salt Lake may be expected in a few weeks.

We have a few numbers of the Millenial Star of vol. 17 on sale.

Those wishing any of the above books, or wishing to subscribe regularly for the Millenial Star, can apply to me every Sunday at the Church, or by post.

Apr, 14 21.] JAS. S. CANTWELL.

STEPHEN HOYT. G. C. GREEN.

STEPHEN HOYT & CO.,
WHOLESALE DEALERS IN GROCERIES,
IMPORTERS OF
Wines, Fruits, and Nuts,

Calls the attention of Emigrants, to Salt Lake, California and Oregon, to No. 47 SECOND SRREET,
Between Olive and Pine Streets, St. Louis,

WHERE there always will be found an excellent assortment of goods adapted to the wants of Emigrants crossing the plains, viz:
Green and Black Teas, Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Fish, Spices, Tobacco, Dried Fruits, Starch, Saleratus, Powder, Lead, Window-glass, Nails, Rope, Olive Oil, Pickles, Tar, &c., &c., &c.
June 2 28 3m] STEPHEN HOYT & Co.

OUTFITS FOR CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE AND OREGON.
WM. C. WILSON,
DEALER IN
Groceries, Wines, Liquors, and Provisions,; Pilot Bread and Crackers,
No. 195 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.

☞Is prepared to furnish everything in his line, at the lowest rates, and from past experience in the trade, feels assured, that parties intending to cross the plains, will find it to their interest to give him a call, and compare prices before purchasing elsewhere.
ON HAND AND FOR SALE LOW THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES:

TEAS—A choice assortment o Imperia Gun Powder, Young Hyson and Black.
COFFEE—Rio, Havana, Laguayra and Java—burnt and ground.
SUGAR—Crushed, Lump, Powdered, Clarified, New Orleans and Brown —all grades.
MOLASSES—Golden Syrup, Sugar House and Plantation.
LIQUORS—Best brands of Pure French Brandy, Holland Gin, Jamaica Rum, Irish, Scotch, Monongahela and Bourbon Whiskey, and all kinds of Domestic Liquors.
WINES—Pure Port, Maderia, Malaga, Sherry, Muscat, Champagne, Claret and White, Cordials, &c., &c.
BACON—Ham, Sides and Shoulders, Dried Beef and Beef Tongue.
FRUIT—Raisins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, Citron, Dried Apples and Peaches, &c., &c.
SUNDRIES—All kinds of Pickles, Sauce, Ketchups, Spice, Fancy Soaps, Candles, Oil, Gas, Fish, Mats, Cords, Buckets, Baskets, Brooms, Tubs, Lobsters, Oysters, Sardines, Cooking Extracts, Essences, Arrow Root, Farina, Sago, Corn Starch, Oat Meal, Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Maccaroni, Vermicelli, Honey, &c., &c. [apr 7 20 2m

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. 23. [5 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.

EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their Interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.

FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.

THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
50 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 pockets old government Java;
130 hf. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERE.
Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Labeaume Steert,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

MC'LEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.
One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.
Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.
Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.
Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. MCLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.
Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.
We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.
☞For sale by J. H. MCLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.

I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.
☞Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.
T. W. HOIT.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PARER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.
A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,

CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.
A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.
They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.
They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.
Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.
Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.
WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.
☞Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.
N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 tf.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 3 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 160 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.

☞Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

ALEXANDER DOW,

MANUFACTURER of all kinds of COPPER, TIN, AND SHEET IRON WARE, DOW'S MINERS' LAMPS, WARRANTED AIR TIGHT No. 9 Wire, Nails, Axes, Ox-Chains, &c., &c.
COOKING STOVES kept constantly on hand. Cooking and light traveling Stoves also other out-fittings adapted to the use of Emigrants to Salt Lake, California, and Oregon, may be found at No. 133 Market St. between 5th and 6th, St. Louis, Mo.
Window Glass 8x10 and 10x12.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.

BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set, Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tinners' Sheats, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.
☞Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.
☞The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54.

NOTICE.

THE LITHOGRAPHIC ENGRAVING of the Great Salt Lake City, can had of the publisher ROBERT C. WILLIAMS, or of JAMES B. HART, Agent. Price 50 cents per copy. Accompanying pamphlet ten cents. They can be sent to any part of the United States. Address "Luminary Office." may 27 27 3m

SCHEER & HACKMAN'S
WAGON MANUFACTORY,
Corner of Sixteenth and Market streets.

KEEP constantly on hand a large assortment of Wagons suitable for Traders and Travellers to Santa Fe, California, Oregon, etc., etc.; also, for Farmer's use. Persons in want of Wagons are requested to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere, as promise a first-rate article at reasonable prices. S. & H. [may 5 24 6m*

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,

HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!
PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES,
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch,
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.

Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAM'S their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.
JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.
Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.
N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

W. H. HUISH,

MACHINIST, Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERALY.
mar 24] [18 3m

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Yaugers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.
Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!

Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.
It has cured more cases of
RHEUMATISM
than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.
G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,
J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.
MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.
MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:
Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.
I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out.
I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.
Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Park & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.
I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Groton, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE RACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can equal in effect, the
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS
have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:
Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Harness Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Flim, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.
The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.
G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.
Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST.
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.
Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 3, 1855. [113m*

TO EMIGRANTS.
C. B. HUBBELL, Jr., 102 4th st., St. Louis
Informs persons travelling towards
SALT LAKE OR CALIFORNIA,
That they will find at his store, the largest stock of DRY GOODS in the city, comprising every variety of kinds adapted to their wants, which he will sell at prices fully TWENTY-FIVE per cent. lower than any other house in the trade, to which your attention is invited.
N. B. One price only ever asked, and no deviation. [apr 14 21 2m

GREAT ATTRACTION
AT
WILSON & COOPER'S NEW STORE!
The attention of Emigrant starting for
UTAH, CALIFORNIA, AND OREGON,
Is respectfully called to our IMMENSE STOCK of
FASHIONBLE DRY GOODS!
Comprising every article in the trade, from the plain substantial articles of every-day use, to the finest and most elegant fabrics of first class Dry Goods and LINEN DRAPERY.
Our goods are all marked in PLAIN FIGURES, from which no abatement is allowed under any circumstances.
N. B. A discount of FIVE per cent. will be allowed to parties going west, on all bills over $100. WILSON & COOPER, apr 14 21] Cor. 4th and Locust sts., St. Louis.

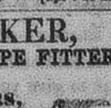
REMOVAL.

MRS. G. VINCENT, MIDWIFE, WASHINGTON AVENUE, between Fifth and Sixth streets, St. Louis, Mo.
Mrs. J. Vincent wishes to inform her friends and the public, that she has removed from between 8th and 9th, on Market street, to the above place, and hopes by strict attention to her duties, to merit a further continuance of their patronage. [apr 14 21 3m

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.
CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
HAS REMOVED TO NO. 94 MARKET STREET,
South side between Third and Fourth.



CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.
N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.
96 Market Street,
may 26, 27 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MAIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutter, Hughes' Atmospheric Trip Hammers, Forgings and Castings, Steamboat and Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.
N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.
Feb. 24, 14 1y

U. S. SAIL LOFT.

TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by
ALFRED PERSEY,
St. Louis, Mo.
The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m

CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE and OREGON.
EMIGRANTS
Can be supplied with every variety of
PILOT BREAD & CRACKERS
Baked expressly for the overland Emigration, and WARRANTED to KEEP, at
J. B. WILSON'S BAKERY,
No. 186 Morgan St., between 7th and 8th, St. Louis, Mo.
☞The trade supplied at the LOWEST RATES. [apr 7 20 2m

GOODIN & TOOKER,
GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,
No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.

HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.
We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfilment.
Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand. Lamps repaired, regilded and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 19 6m

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.
UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory.

EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. Mormon please copy, and send bill to L. K. & Co.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
UTAH TERRITORY.
HOOPER & WILLIAMS,

ARE transporting to Utah, this season, one of the largest and best assorted stock of GOODS ever taken to that region.
The purchases being made from the best houses in New York, Baltimore and St. Louis, and the long experience they have had in the trade, enables them to offer inducements in prices, style and kind, which will insure satisfaction.
Emigrants passing over the plains to California, will find it to their advantage to refit at Great Salt Lake, as produce can always be had for less than transportation from the States.
Persons wishing to remit or intend taking money with them, can avoid risk and pay money by depositing with Messrs. ROBERTSON, and HOOPER & WILLIAMS, No. 29 Murray st., New York, or WATERMAN & Ryan, St. Louis, who are authorized to draw on us. Interest will be allowed at the rate of 7 per cent. from date of draft till payment.
HOOPER & WILLIAMS,
may 19 98 3m] Great Salt Lake City, 1855.

WESTON, MO.
D. G. TUTT. J. F. BAKER.
TUTT & BAKER,
WHOLESALE GROCERS,
FORWARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.
WESTON, MO.,
Dealers in Provisions, Bacon and Meal.
March 3, 1855. 15 3m

J. B. EVANS. J. S. MITCHELL.
EVANS & MITCHELL,
MERCHANTS,
At Weston, Missouri,

HAVE a large stock of Groceries, Staple Dry Goods; Boots and Shoes, and a general stock of outfitting goods, which they offer to the public at the fairest rates. We are also prepared to receive, store, and forward goods. [mar 3, 15 tf.

TO EMIGRANTS.
J D HARPER, T J HARPER.

AT the firm of J D H & Co, Weston, Mo, can be found every variety of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, together with Boots and Shoes, Cutlery, Hardware, Mechanics' Tools, &c. We would call the attention especialy of Emigrants to our lot of Groceries and Provisions of every description; which we willl sell as low as we can afford; Call on us as you please, as we never 'gas' with our customers.
mar 10 16 3m J D HARPER & Co.

NOTICE.

I AM Manufacturing a large quantity of Tin and Sheet Iron Ware and will furnish Emigrants with their Outfits in my line, at
ST. LOUIS PRICES.
mar 10 16 3m] W. S. BRIGGS, Weston, Mo.

LEAVENWORTH, K. T.
G. M. & A. FISHER,
Leavenworth City, Kansas Territory,

ARE dealing in Dry Goods of all kinds, consisting of Prints, Calicoes, Domestics, Gentlemen and Ladies heavy wearing apparel, Hats, Caps, Boots and shoes, also a large lot of ready made Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Vests, Drawers, Flannel shirts, over shirts, net shirts, hickory shirts, and every article in that line. Also, Hardware, consisting of Broadaxes, Axes, Tools, Table Cutlery, Pocket Knives, Razors, scissors, &c. Castings, such as And-Irons, Ovens, skillets, Frying Pans, &c. Groceries, consisting of Liquors of all kinds, sugar, Coffee, Tea, Pepper, Allspice, Yeast, and every article of that sort. Queensware and all sorts of Crockery Ware.
They have a large Warehouse just completed, and are prepared to store all kinds of goods upon reasonable terms. They also have a dray on hand to remove goods from the levee to the Warehouse. Their store and Warehouse are situated on Water street, in a stones throw of the steamboat landing. Emigrants will do well to give us a call before purchasing goods or counts elsewhere. [mar 3 15 3m

NOTICE TO EMIGRANTS.
STORAGE AND OUTFITS.
LEWIS N. REES,
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory,

IS receiving this spring a full and complete assortment of Goods, consisting of Dry Goods of every variety, Clothing of all kinds, and Gum-Elastic Goods, Blankets, &c.; Boots and shoes, Hardware Tools, Castings, Hollow-Ware, and every variety of camp equipage. Guns, Pirtols, Bucy-Knives, &c., Hats, Caps, Comforts, Bonnets and Shawls, Fancy Goods of all kinds, saddles, Bridles, Halters and all things in that line.
Groceries and Provisions.
Bacon, Meal, Flour and Salt, Queensware and Glassware. He is also opening a large and commodious Warehouse, the largest in the place, which is just at the foot of Delaware street, and opposite the point of the bluff, where is now the best steamboat landing.
He will receive and store at the very lowest rates, and being enabled to purchase goods on the most favorable terms, he offers great inducements to purchasers, and especially to emigrants crossing the Plains. He would refer the public to Messrs. Heningcamp, Gilpin & Co., Brownlee, Homer & Co., St. Louis. [mar 3, 15 3m

BLACKSMITHING.

T. SALBURY takes this method of saying to the emigration for Great Salt Lake City, California and Oregon, that he is prepared to do Blacksmith work upon shortest notice. He deems the quality of his work sufficient recommendation.
Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, Feb. 1855. [mar 3, 15 3m.

KANSAS, MO.
PHIL. ROCHILD & CO.,

HAVE constantly on hand in Kansas, Mo., a full supply of Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Groceries, Gutta Percha Goods, Provisions, Tinware, &c., which they will sell on as liberal terms as they can be bought for in Upper Missouri. [mar 3, 15 3m.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, JUNE 16, 1855. VOLUME I--NUMBER XXX.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.
Mailed to Subscribers in the U. States at $2 per annum.
To Foreign Subscribers, (American Postage prepaid,) at $3 per annum.
To contiguous British Provinces, at $2.50 per annum.
No Subscription received without the money, though a specimen copy will be sent when required.
Any person forwarding us nine new Subscribers and remitting any current money in payment, will be entitled to the tenth copy gratis.
To avoid mistakes, particular pains must be taken, to send us all names of Subscribers, Post-offices and States, plainly written.
United States postage on the Luminary to British American Provinces, is one cent each—to Foreign countries two cents—within the U. States, one-half cent; provided, each subscriber notifies his Post-master, and pays the postage quarterly in advance, otherwise it will be two cts.
All letters requiring an answer, should, to ensure attention, enclose a Postage Stamp.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

One square (eight lines or less,) one insertion,		$ 50
do.	do. each additional insertion,	25
One square one month without alteration		1.00
do.	two months	2.00
do.	three months,	2.75
do.	six months,	5.00
no.	one year without alteration,	8.00
For each alteration,		25

Extensive advertisements as per contract.
Quarterly and yearly advertisements to be paid at the end of each quarter.
Prepayment required for any term less than a quarter.

From the Deseret News.

Lecture on the Science of Grammar,

Delivered by Orson Hyde at the opening of his School in the Council Chamber, January 22nd, 1855.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—The subject that has called us together this evening, to me, is a very interesting and an important one; and I trust that it will be no less so to you, after you shall have understood its import and nature. It is the Science of the English Language.

As this language has been more highly honored in our day, by the Supreme Ruler above, than any other—in that he hath chosen it as the most beautifully grand and impressive medium through which his mandates could be conveyed to mortal beings here on Earth; can we be justified if we remain in a state of indifference with regard to its beauty, its richness, and its strength?

The English Language is chiefly derived from the Saxon, Danish, Celtic, and Gothic; but in the progressive stages of its refinement, it has been greatly enriched by accessions from the Greek, Latin, French, Spanish, Italian and German Languages. The number of words which it, at present, consists of, after deducting proper names, and words formed by the inflections of verbs, nouns and adjectives, may be estimated at over FORTY THOUSAND.

This heterogeneous mass of words, as found in the English vocabulary, when drawn out in line of discourse according to the laws of Syntax, and embellished by the force of rhetorical Elocution, has made Nations to tremble and Empires to quake. More glorious conquests have been achieved and victories won by the force and power of language, than by all the armed legions that ever marched into the battle field to meet the foe in deadly conflict. No widow's tear nor orphan's sigh detracts from the splendour of the former; no aching heart is left to curse the brutal policy that bereft it of its dearest earthly object. No plaintive notes from the death-bed of thousands of brave and generous warriors to wrap a nation in garments of deeper mourning; and it remains to be disproven that our future destiny, for weel or for woe, is suspended upon our VERY language. "By thy words thou shalt be justified; and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."

It is too true that this science has been lightly spoken of by men of years and experience; and I must say that it is never pleasing to me to hear anything by way of jest, or in sober earnest, that may be calculated to beget in the rising generation a dislike for this most important branch of Education. Should such an influence prevail among our youth, it needs not a prophetic eye to foretell the results. When the present actors have played their parts, and retired from the stage, our successors, in the persons of our children, will not be able to keep a proper journal of the events of their time—to speak or write correctly, or to manage and conduct a periodical for the diffusion of that knowledge which it has pleased an all-wise Creator to shed forth from the heavens in our day for the benefit and salvation of man, without foreign aid.

You have undoubtedly heard the drunkard speak against drunkness—the thief against theft; and the profane and profligate person against his course of life, because he has weltered under the smart and sting of his own immoral and criminal acts.

But you never heard the enlightened grammarian speak of the Science in terms of the slightest disrespect, and I here predict that you never will, while language remains the agent for the transmission of thought.

The person unacquainted with the science of Music—who has no taste or ear for it, might indulge in many slight and ludicrous remarks on hearing a class exercise in some of the first rudiments and rules of the science. But to the skilful musician, his remarks prove no inconsistancy or impropriety in the science; but on the contrary, that he himself is ignorant of it; and also of the path that leads to its attainment. The charms of music consist in the union and harmony of its parts; and when executed by sciened performers, it swells into a melody that holds in spell-bound admiration all the finer and more elevated feelings of the soul. But the path that leads to the summit where the flowery charms of this science are wafted on the breath of our most skilful performers, and fall on your ears with such pleasing accents, is winding, steep and rugged; and it requires patience, perseverance and industry to gain the eminence.

The music of language consists in the union and harmony of the various parts of speech of which it is composed; and when tastefully selected to clothe a useful thought, or valuable idea; and that thought or idea borne to your ear in that dress, awakens emotions almost as vividly pleasing as the maid of your choice when presented, entwined with the bridal wreathe to receive your most sacred vow.

We are met this evening, ladies and gentlemen, to consider our inclination, strength and ability to commence or re-commence our journey up the rugged steeps of the "Hill of Science."

The child from five to ten years of age has litle or no use for scientific knowledge, from the fact, that his childhood bars him against those responsibilities which he is destined to inherit in the progressive periods and stages of his life. But as his mind becomes stronger and more developed by the force of unavoidable circumstances, he is the better qualified to acquire those principles of science which will enable him, more successfully to stem the current of opposition in his upward course to moral and spiritual excelence.

Were I now to refer you to our highly esteemed Governor and President, whose ear for music and language is, perhaps, more accutely discerning than that of any other gentleman present, and ask him if he has not more use for scientific knowledge now, since the increased cares and responsibilities of both Church and State are resting upon him, together with the planning of public works, machinery, and fortifications against Indians, &c., than when he first embraced this gospel, some 25 years ago, and went preaching without "purse or scrip;" and what do you imagine, would be his answer? Apply then, this same principle and course of reasoning to the church, and what do we discover? When she was in her infancy, she did not attract the attention and gaze of the world. She had little use for scientific knowledge, and little or no time to acquire it; but having become stronger in her intellectual and physical organization by the force of unavoidable circumstances, such as mobacracy by Earth's degenerate sons, and the bounteous blessings of a generous providence upon the loyal subjects of His Eternal laws, she begins to have greater use for science, and is more eligibly situated to acquire it in these peaceful valleys, than when buffeted in the states upon the waves of political strife, and religious intolerance, where, perhaps the first house erected for educational purposes was lighted up by the torch of the incendiary whose lurid flames cast a sickly glare upon our prospects for scientific pursuits in that country.

We are fast growing into importance; and the eyes of our Nation are upon us. Our words and our acts are duly scanned by her officials in private; but if this were all, we should have little to fear. There is, however, a power above, high over all, that scrutinizes all our acts and doings with an eye that never sleeps. We are not only watched over with fatherly care at home but other nations cast an occasional glance at us. Their kings and their queens dream of us; and God showeth them some things as they are, and as they will be. There will be Daniels and Mordecais in their courts and no doubt Haymans too.

The political world is about to fall and crumble in pieces, in consequence of the great amount of repulsion which its parts possess. The religious world also, like Babel's mighty empire, or like the millstone which the angel cast into the sea, will sink in the whirlpools of conflicting interests and sentiments, and her remains be "like the gleaning of grapes when the vintage is done." As saviors on Mount Zion, and as restorers of every just and holy law, whether emenating from Heaven, from nature, or from the legislative councils of earth, let us become qualified to act well our part in the great and eventful scenes that will open to our view, and not sacrifice our birthright at the shrine of an unpardonable indifference in relation to qualifications that come within our grasp.

The rising generation are destined to act a more important part in this drama before us. I, therefore, call upon them to awake and prepare to do honor to their station, whatever or wherever it may hereafter be, while we yet remain in the chambers of the Almighty, with the ensign of peace gently waving over our heads, and plenty in our garners, and our storehouses full.

Think not, my young friends, that you can spend the prime and vigor of your days in the vanities and pleasures of life, and in your more advanced years, store your minds with wisdom and knowledge; but let your youthful energies now be devoted to the acquisition of literary and scientific knowledge, that when you arrive to manly strength, dignity, and wisdom, you may call into immediate requisition the fruits of your youthful labors and toil.

Suffer not a sluggardly or indolent mind to induce you to postpone the period for the commencement of scientific pursuits, with the vain and delusive hope that, by and by, the principles of education will become so simplified that you can pick them up with as little labor and trouble as you can pick up the cobble stones of the street. All the education you can acquire in this easy way, will not be as valuable to you even as the cobble stones; for the latter, when collected and laid up into a fence, form a secure and impenetrable fortress, as is clearly proven by reference to the wall in progress of erection around President Kimball's dwelling. But the former will prove too flimzy and spurious to safely fortify your minds against a thousand evils that will beset you on all sides. The value of an object is often (and not improperly) estimated by the amount of labor and toil required to obtain it. The precious metals are not often found in the streets or highways; but in bye and sequestered places, deeply imbedded in the crevices and subterraneous caverns of the earth. If you will have them, you must dig for them. They will cost you much time and labor; but when obtained, they will richly reward you for all your toil. The gems of the ocean are not found floating upon the flood or ebb tides, but in the bed of the deep blue sea. They are hid from the vulgar gaze of the multitude, and only sought by the few who know their value; and who have courage and resolution enough to embark in the enterprize.—Scientific knowledge is hid up in the elements—in the caverns and storehouses of nature; and is only found by those who seek it with all their heart.

The man who neglects to discipline and train his mind in the science of Religion, knows but little about God or angels, or the glory of the sanctified. What little he does understand, he has borrowed from the labors and toils of others.

The presidency of this Church are the lovers of learning; and in my opinion, you, who need it, can take no step in education to please them more than to engage in the study of your own native language. It is the joy and pride of their hearts to see the attention of the people being turned to education.—They do not want you to trust to it, however, as to God; but through it they want you to be able to present those truths that Heaven reveals, in that interesting and engaging light, that will reflect honor upon you as the agent—upon God as the author, and upon the Church as the body to be exalted.—Lay hold, then, upon education! If you can get it easily, I have no objections. If, upon any principle, you can acquire it in a more easy manner than has been generally adopted in times gone by, you are doubly guilty if you do not attend to it forthwith. Show me one person that ever did jump into a brilliant education without labor and toil in self-application, and then I may be converted to the easy method of obtaining it. But lest I may be wrong in some of my views, I would say—If you can get education easily, get it, and be thankful to God for it; if it should prove a laborious task for you, do not be discouraged or relinquish your exertions.

Language, being the science through which the knowledge of all other sciences is communicated, demands our first and most candid consideration; and as the English language combines, in its genius and construction, both strength and beauty to an extent far surpassing that of any other language now in use, we ought, as students of that language, to apply ourselves with a zeal and perseverance commensurate with the superior powers which it possesses.

There are few persons in the world who care not for the appearance of their dress. They generally want their garments of a good material, and to fit them in a becoming manner. Our ideas and thoughts are also entitled to a becoming dress; and it should be our pride to clothe them with the most chaste and beautiful language, that they may hang around our person as jewels of unfading beauty, even as "apples of gold in pictures of silver." We, however, may know the meaning of thousands of the most beautiful words in our language; yet if we cannot discover the legitimate relation they bear to one another, and arrange them in a sentence according to the laws of syntax that govern them, we come as far short of the knowledge of the science of language, as the architect of the knowledge of his profession, if he understand not where to place his timbers in a building after they are furnished at his hand.

Grammar, well understood, enables us to express our thoughts fully and clearly; and also in a manner that will defy the ingenuity of man to give our words any other meaning than that which we ourselves intended them to convey.

In justification of a neglect to acquire a grammatical knowledge of the English language, some have argued that the best grammarians differ in their views of the science; and if the most enlightened upon that subject cannot agree, what evidence can be shown that there is any particular good in it? It is true, that our best grammarians may differ in their views touching some immaterial or technical points in the science. But this cannot disturb or interrupt the great channel or laws of language. Allow me to prove this to you right here.—The Utah Library perhaps contains the productions of some hundreds of the best authors of which many countries can boast. These authors all wrote under different circumstances, at different times—in different countries; and upon different subjects; and very probably no two of them could have been brought to a perfect agreement upon every point and principle of grammar. But will the most learned gentleman in this city go into that library, and point out one grammatical error in the writings of any of them? He may, perchance, do it; yet I seriously doubt it. There may be typographical errors found, which may have produced indirect grammatical ones; but a manifest grammatical error can hardly be found. This argument ought to silence every cavil on the subject, in my opinion.

There is no science so universally applicable to practicable purposes, as that of grammar. Arithmetic, geography, astronomy, botany, penmanship, chemistry, and philosophy, are highly profitable in their respective places. But there is no condition or circumstance in life, in which grammatical knowledge is not essential wherein mental action may be involved. We cannot think, write, or speak correctly upon any subject, without a knowledge of the laws of language.

Some persons who possess not this knowledge, are vain and confident enough to think that they can detect and correct any error in language by the ear. It is true that persons of a naturally refined taste, may, by carefully reading the productions of good authors; and by conversing with the learned, acquire that knowledge of language which will enable them to avoid those glaring errors that are particularly offensive to the ear; but there are other errors, equally gross, that have not so harsh a sound, and cannot be detected without a knowledge of the laws that are violated.

I can hold out no reasons or inducements for you to believe, that you can acquire a knowledge of this science, by giving it only a casual thought, or by looking carelessly over your lessons. But I tell you, and tell you plainly, that unless you can resolve to make it a steady and laborious occupation, and carry that resolution into effect, you never can understand the merits of this science. Yet, if you will cast parties out of your minds, with all the gossip about fashions, trash, and other nonsense, that too often check the progress of the most laudable and beneficial pursuits, and allow me to have full control of your minds for thirty evenings, from 6 'till 9 o'clock; and faithfully and truly comply with my instructions touching your duties between schools, I will insure that you will have progressed far enough to enable you to prosecute your studies in this branch successfully, to any extent you may desire, without a teacher; even if you know not one part of speech from another at this time, provided you possess that degree of intellect and susceptibility for improvement which are common in society.

Remember, my friends, that you may now obtain, in thirty evenings' time, for a very few dollars, what you would not sell for as many thousands, after you have once obtained it. Remember, also, that you live in a progressive age, an age in which the inspiration of the Almighty is resting upon the world to disclose the principles of science, and bring them into requisition to fulfil his purposes, and they know it not! Remember that to us is committed a more sacred charge, a charge to disclose and proclaim to the perishing nations the principles of eternal life and exaltations, and to gather the ripened sheaves preparatory to the "feast of the Harvest Home." Remember that knowledge is power, and that you now have a little time to acquire it. Forget not that "God helps those who help themselves!" Secure learning and virtue, and you will be great; love God and honor him, and you will be happy.

Spirits After the Tobacco Chewers.

A Massachusetts medium says the following incidents occurred at a house in Newton, Conn.:

While I was at Br. Wetmore's house, many came in to investigate the subject of Spiritualism. I was entranced, and the spirit addressed Br. Wetmore, saying:

"I wish you to leave off chewing tobacco; it is very injurious to your health, and hinders us from approaching you. Please deny yourself and follow our instructions."

At the close of this brief communication, the spirit requested that the cellar door should be opened. Mrs. Wetmore opened the door, and instantly a paper of tobacco was seen floating in the atmosphere, above our heads. It passed around the room two or three times, and then rested upon the top of a clock that stood in the corner of the room.

Soon after this another paper was seen in like manner, passing around in the dining-room. Soon it came into the parlor and fell down by the sofa, where there were a number of persons sitting. Soon a third paper was seen passing around in the dining-room in like manner with the first one, and rested upon the clock. Br. Wetmore identified the tobacco as his, and said that he had six papers in the cellar on a shelf. He went into the cellar and found that three papers were missing. The spirits said that they had brought them up to convince him of their presence, and again they requsted him to chew no more. He said he would not, and emptied his tobacco-box.

As soon as this interesting scene had closed another quite as interesting and remarkable occurred. Music was heard by all in the house, more or less, for five or ten minutes. It resembled that of an accordeon, though no musical instrument was in or about the house, I believe.

The next day after the above manifestations took place Br. Wetmore, myself and another gentleman, started for Sandy Hook, which was about two and a half miles. We had gone but a few rods before I became entranced, and said there was something in the air looked like a short bar of silver. It was soon discovered, to be a pair of candle moulds which Br. Wetmore had put in his pocket when he started from home to carry to a friend of his at Sandy Hook. The spirits said that they took them out of his pocket and would carry them to Sandy Hook for him. When he got there, they were found on the top of a clock in a neighbors house—I have forgotten their names.

THAT's what I call "Spiritual Wrapping," as our devil said when he saw a grocer tie up a bottle of whisky in a handkerchief.

ADULTERATIONS OF FOOD.

The people of Britain boast loudly and arrogantly of the improved morality of Britons. Such is this improved morality of Protestant Britain that no man's life is safe, and certainly every man's life is more or less undermined by the deadly adulteration of human food in Britain. Yet the condiments of food are, it seems, more diabolically "doctored" than food itself. The virtues of Protestant traders may be tested by the contents of an ordinary cruet stand. The cayenne pepper is poisoned with large quantities of red lead. "Out of twenty-eight samples of cayenne, red lead, and often in poisonous quantities," says the Lancet, "was present in thirteen." In ages of ignorance a scanty band of satanic villains decocted drugs, and pursued in fear and darkness the black business of secret poisoning, but in this enlightened age whole classes pursue, boldly and busily, the lucrative profession of slow assassination. Vinegar is carefully prepared by a double process—first it is weakened by water, and then to remedy its weakness, sulphuric acid sharpens it to pungency. It is consoling to learn that the cheats who defraud us with adulterated food are in return defrauded by cheats who adulterate poisons, the vermin are themselves devoured by other vermin. To such a pitch of refinement has the art of falsification of alimentary substances reached, that the very articles used to adulterate are adulterated, and while one tradesman is picking the pockets of his customers, a still more cunning rogue is deep in his own. The eighteenth edition of the "English Housekeeper" gives instructions in plain English for the manufacture of poisons, viz: "To make pickles look green," says the "Housekeeper," "boil them with halfpence." Another book, entitled "Modern Cookery, or the English Housewife," says seriously—"Take a bit of verdigris, the size of a hazel-nut, finely powdered, half a pint of distilled vinegar, &c., put a small teaspoonful into codlings or whatever you wish to green." We might find a difficulty in believing that the Bible-reading English are a moral people were we not a thousand times assured by themselves that nothing can surpass their morality. Yet one is sometimes puzzled to understand that morality which acquires riches by selling such poisons for food. Whether English Protestants are moral or otherwise they certainly acquire what they value more highly, great opulence. The "liver-bakers" sweep together vast fortunes. These men take the livers of oxen and horses, bake them and grind them into a powder which they sell to coffee shops at from fourpence to sixpence a pound, "horse's liver coffee" being the highest price. It goes father than ordinary coffee, and is generally mixed with chicory and other vegetable imitations of coffee. Tea is subject to a restorative process in eight manufactories which flourish in London; old tea leaves come out of these establishments, warranted "as good as any imported." This is a singularly lucrative branch of industry. The old leaves are bought from hotels, clubs, and coffee-houses for three pence a pound, and sold at least for as many shillings. Gum, blacklead, and Dutch pink are amongst the ingredients which assist in improving the appearance of second-hand tea. Could the gastly train of maladies be summoned into our presence which originate in the prolonged use of adulterated food, we should be appalled by their number and variety. No one serves the doctor more ably than the adulterator. But even this refuge fails us, for, in order to get rid of the effects of adulterated food, we can only have recourse to medicines which are themselves adulterated. The best skill of the medical practitioner and the languishing hopes of the patient are alike baffled by the cunning and dishonesty of the adulterator of medicines. Through the admixture of belladonna, gentian is converted into poison, while mercury is blended and debased by tin, and bismuth. It is a melancholy blunder to seek health from such drugs. Thus, if scammony were prescribed by a physician, the patient would swallow, generally speaking, fifty per cent. of chalk, starch, or plaster of Paris. In many samples the resin of scammony might be represented by less than ten, the adulteration by more than ninety.

"There are," we are told, "three insurance offices in London in which graziers can insure their beasts from disease. Cattle, sheep, &c., are insured against all kind of diseases, and one of the conditions is, that the diseased animal when dead becomes the property of the insurance company. The larger quantities are sold to persons who manufacture the diseased flesh into soup, pies, sausages, &c." "I am certain," says Mr. Harper, "that if one hundred carcasses of cows were lying dead in the neighborhood of London, I could get them all sold within twenty-four hours; it don't matter what they died of."

As every one knows, Napoleon I., owing to an attack of indigestion, was routed at the battle of Leipsic. Had his stomach labored under a load of asses' flesh, like that of many Englishmen who eat sausages, his cerebral organization must have been still more fatally deranged and obfuscated. It has been seriously maintained that many of the crimes and outrages which afflict and disgrace society in Britain may be traced to adulterated and poisonous aliments, which, by disordering the stomach, irritate and madden the brain.

If moral crime do originate in this source, doctrinal heresies may have a similar origin. It is, no doubt, owing to heresy, that men are so dead to justice as to seek to grow rich by half-poisoning their neighbors.

SWEET water can never flow from a foul spring.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,
SATURDAY, JUNE 16, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer, address box 488.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor, 102 Nassau st., cor. of Ann.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.
Wm. Cazier, Nephi City.
S. B. Hoyt, Fillmore City, U. Territory.

SALT LAKE MAIL.

We have not yet heard anything definite concerning the Salt Lake Mail that should leave Utah on the 1st of May. Fears are entertained by the merchants of this city, that the Mail party has fallen into the hands of the hostile Indians. A gentleman from Independence, a few days ago, reported that the Mail was intercepted and the Mail party killed; but we have heard nothing that we can rely upon. The following is from the Republican of the 11th:

Later from the Plains.

A mail was received on Saturday from Fort Laramie and Fort Kearney. Several letters have been placed at our disposal from each of these posts, from which we gather some interesting items of news. The feeling of the Sioux Indians is decidedly hostile to the United States.

One letter from Fort Laramie, dated on the 9th of May, says: "The Snake Indians were not concerned in the recent robberies at the Platte Bridge. It is known that the Minecajoux Sioux are guilty of all the late robberies. This week they stole four of Major Johnson's escort mules, not far from the Fort, on the Salt Lake side. Some squaws have brought in a report that two war parties, one hundred strong each, are coming down on Laramie to steal. All the traders agree that the Government ought to whip the Sioux—in fact, that it is absolutely necessary."

"The trial at Salt Lake of the Indians surrendered as the murderers of Capt. Gunnison and his party—a blind old man, a woman and a child, with one warrior, was a most disgraceful affair. They were sentenced to six years' imprisonment, and got out of jail the second night."

Another letter of the 18th, says: The Indians are stealing horses and mules at the Platte Bridge and the Devils Gate. John Reichard has lost eighty head, and Archambault all he had. From all that I can see and hear, I apprehend that there will be no war with the Sioux. It is astonishing that the Government will see depredations and murders committed repeatedly, and yet take no steps to protect the people. We, who are here in the midst of these occurrences, and know the Indians, have good cause of complaint, that the Government will not pursue a proper course towards them."

A letter from Platte Bridge, dated April 27th, says: "Only eight days ago, Sioux Indians came here and stole seventy-five head of horses. They have robbed traders who have lived with them for years. They look for war with the whites, and say they are ready for it."

From Fort Kearney, in a letter of the 27th May, we are told, "The escort arrived from above to-day. The Salt Lake Mail had not arrived at Laramie on the 18th inst. Some emigrants on the road between this and Laramie have lost all their stock by the Sioux Indians."

THE VALLEY FARMER.

The Valley Farmer for July is enlarged to forty pages, and contains much good and useful information. To the Farmer and gardner it will be found a valuable auxilliary, and cannot fail to improve the judgment of those who digest its contents.

Many of our readers are probably unacquainted with the science of farming, who might by the aid of books obtain a theoretical knowledge, that in future years would prove highly beneficial. We recommend to our readers the study of agriculture, horticulture, and every other science that can in any way cultivate the mind and benefit the human family.

We recommend the following challenge to the consideration of our agricultural friends:

Missouri Challenges the United States.

The undersigned, believing that their Farm, situated seven miles south of St. Louis, Mo., is unequalled in point of variety, production, and extent, by any other in the United States, (though it has been in cultivation less than ten years,) challenge the whole Union to a competition for a grand Sweep Stake Premium on the following conditions:

Each person competing shall deposit Five Hundred Dollars, to be used as hereafter specified.

Entries of farms to be made prior to August 1st, 1855.

A committee to consist of one person from each State in which any farm or farms shall be entered shall be selected by the Governor of the respective States represented, whose duty, when so selected and notified by the Governor, shall be to proceed and visit each farm so entered during the months of September and October, and award the premium to the owner of the farm which shall excel in these particulars, viz:

Variety of Production;
Amount of Production; and Extent of Surface Cultivated.

The premium shall consist of a Service of Plate, to be purchased with the money deposited by all the competitors after the expenses of the committee have been paid.

We are anxious to let the world know what has been, and what can be done west of the Mississippi river, and make this offer in good faith, and with a full determination to carry it out.

All necessary preliminary arrangements will be made in a liberal manner. Who will enter the list?

Communications with reference to the above may be made directly to us at St. Louis, or to E. Abbott, Esq., Editor of the Valley Farmer, St. Louis, Mo.

JOHN SIGERSON & BRO.

St. Louis, June 1, 1855.

LITERARY NOTICE.

We have cursorily examined a pamphlet of forty pages, published by John S. Fullmer, written upon the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and the expulsion of the Saints from Nauvoo. It contains many interesting and important items that have not been heretofore published in any periodical or other work issued by the Church, which being collected by a gentleman who was himself intimately acquainted with the circumstances—an eye and ear witness of many of the scenes therein described. These considerations, together with the nature and character of the circumstances, and their bearing upon the destiny of the base perpetrators of those ruthless and bloody deeds and their posterity and their relation to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in its final triumph as the kingdom of God, and other important considerations conspire to invest this little work with more than ordinary interest. A copy should be procured and preserved by every Latter-day Saint, and all people who love truth and righteousness.

It may be had at this office, or of J. S. Cantwell. Price fifteen cents.

Notice of our Travelling Elders.

We are happy to learn by the correspondence of our brethren who are travelling through the States to proclaim the everlasting gospel, and to gather the scattered sheep of the House of Israel, that they are well and rejoicing in the spirit. We do not forget them in our prayers, but bear them up before the Lord continually, and pray that they may do a great work in the Lord's vineyard during the next twelve months, that when they go home to Zion they may take their sheaves with them.

Elder Preston Thomas is at Vine Grove, Washington county, Texas. His latest favor was dated May 29th, from which we learn that his health is good, and that he is anxious to learn something concerning the Elders travelling in Texas, We advise our brethren to correspond with each other as often as practicable, and counsel together for the best interests of the Conference; by so doing, you will gain wisdom, strength and influence, and be better prepared to run the race before you, and to build up the kingdom of God.

Elder H. W. Church writes us from Gordon's Ferry, Hickman county, Tennessee. He has been unwell for a few weeks, but is now considerably better—is laboring to promote the cause of truth, and is rejoicing in the God of his salvation.

Elder James Case writes us under date of June 11th, Brookfield, Clinton county, Iowa. He says, "I have been out into the country looking up the lost sheep, and have found some and got their faces set Zionward. The devil has found out that I have broken into his arrangements, and he is stiring up the people against me. I rejoice in the labors I am engaged in, though my progress is slow. My greatest anxiety is to save souls, and I try to keep humble that I may continually be directed by the spirit of the Lord. My tactics are, when I find an old Mormon, to go right at it, digging around them, to find whether they are worth resurrecting, if they are I stretch out my arm and hold them up. If they are not, I leave them to rot where they are.

"A tornado passed over the city of Jacksonville a few days ago, tearing up trees by the roots, upsetting wagons, &c.—the damage was not very great. The wheat crops look tolerably well, those that I have examined, I think, will average about fifteen bushels to the acre. The farmers are complaining because it is too wet and cold; a little while ago it was too dry, and so it goes."

We learn from brother Gale, a Priest from the Gravois branch, who has been working at Kingston, Peori county, Illinois, that he has baptized three persons into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We commend the zeal and faithfulness of our brother, and hope our brethren who are now scattering themselves around the country, will emulate each other in good works, and follow the foregoing example.

Obituary of Elder Andrew L. Lamoreaux.

It is our melancholy duty to record the death of another of the bold veterans of Zion, Andrew L. Lamoreaux, late President of the French Mission, who died in this city, on Wednesday, June 13th at half-five o'clock, A. M. of Asiatic Cholera.

Elder Lamoreaux was appointed to the Presidency of the French Mission, by Special Conference at Salt Lake City, on the 15th September, 1852, and arrived at the Island of Jersey in April 1853, and entered immediately upon the duties of his Mission; during the short period of his Presidency, he has labored indefatigably to promote the interests of the Mission. He has translated and published some very useful and valuable works in the French language assisted by Louis Alphonso Bertrand, who is now in this city enroute for the valleys' of the West. Among the works translated, are the "Voice of Warning," "The Book of Doctrines and Covenants," and that portion of the Seer written upon Celestial Marriage, the article on the Pre-existence of Spirits, from the Seer, has not been translated into the French. He has, selected, some two hundred hymns, which with other manuscript copy, and publications are now in the hands of the Presidency of the British Mission.

Elder Lamoreaux arrived in this city on Saturday evening June 2nd, with several hundred passengers of the ships Chimborazo and S. Curling, including a company from the French Mission numbering seventy-four souls of Saints, who were brought mostly through the faith, perseverence and indefatigable energy of our deceased brother, whose whole heart was devoted to the interests of the Kingdom of God.

An arriving here he took up his residence chez son vieul ami; Elder James H. Hart, his coadjutor and counsellor during the first twelve months of his Presidency of the French Mission. On Sunday June 10th Elder Lamoreaux spent most of the day at the camp instructing and counselling the Saints under his charge as their position and circumstances required. In the evening he addressed the congregation in our large church with considerable spirit and energy, and every soul appeared to rejoice under his spirited and excellent remarks. He dwelt with peculiar interest and pleasure upon an occasion when President Brigham Young was on his way to Europe, and paying him a visit at Dayton, Ohio, when apostates pointed at his old worn out clothing and derided him of his then humble and impoverished condition; he drew a comparison between his present position and that of the apostates who then mocked at and derided him, which produced feelings the most thrilling and joyous throughout the assembly.

Elder Lamoreax had been suffering for several days with the diarrhœa and remarked that what on all former occasions relieved him, appeared to have no effect upon him on this occasion. Returning home on Sunday night, he became gradually worse, and early on Monday morning he sent for Dr. White who attended him throughout his illness, who acted in unison with the Elders of the Church in their ministrations. On Monday evening the symptoms of his disorder indicated that the attack was one of no ordinary and trifling character. The prescribed ordinance of the Lord's House, was freely attended to, by the visiting Elders, but with very little effect. He continued to grow worse, sickness and cramps alternately seizing upon his robust frame, causing a gradual and certain decline.

Elder Jas. C. Sly, stayed with him nearly all day on Tuesday the 12th, inst., administering to and blessing him with all the powers of his body and spirit. He left between five and six o'clock, fully satisfied that he would not recover. And told us about six o'clock on Tuesday evening that Elder Lamoreax had finished his Mission, on the earth, and the Lord wanted him to act in another sphere, and he felt to resign him to the hands of the Lord, knowing that he had finished his course and kept the faith, and that there was laid up for him a crown of righteousness that would never fade away.

Elders Edwards, Harris, and Chard stayed with him until midnight. Elders Hart and Coombs remained with him and watched his last breath.—He said but very little during his illness, being asked by Elder Hart concerning his family, he replied with peculiar emphasis, "The Lord will take care of my family, but tell them I remembered them." He never spoke after two o'clock on Wednesday morning, when he asked Elder Hart if there remained any hope of his recovery, who replied all hope is in the Lord, if he will, you may yet be made whole. He then declined rapidly and about half-past five o'clock he expired without a struggle or a groan, it may be said he quietly fell asleep in Jesus, and now lies numbered with the honored dead, who have worn out their earthly tabernacles in the service of the Lord.

We would here mention Elder Lamoreaux's two neices, Elizabeth and Ann Hardey, who attended him throughout his illness, and watched over him with all the devotion and anxiety that his daughters could have felt, which coupled with his intimate acquaintance with brother Hart and his family, and the earnest solicitude and affection of those who attended him afforded much consolation during his illness, and may be a small satisfaction to his family in Utah, in whose bereavement we sincerely sympathise.

At 4 o'clock P. M. Wednesday 13th June, a hearse conveyed the mortal remains of our beloved brother, to their temporary resting place, for like the old Prophets and Patriarchs, he desired his body to be carried to Zion, that he might be buried with his family and his friends. The hearse was followed by three carriages which were occupied by his brethren, among whom were Elders Charles H. Bassett, James C. Sly, and Thos. Colburn from Utah, and Elders Charles Edwards, Thos. H. Harris, Jas. H. Hart, and John A. Jost of this city. and Louis A. Bertand, Francis St. George, and others from the French Mission.

Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, for so saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works follow them, our brother has only departed for a season, when Joseph and Hyrum return, he will come again with numerous Elders and Saints, who like him have fought the good fight, finished their course and kept the faith. Then will they be clothed with power and might, and with the blessings of eternal life and celestial glory, and will be entrusted with the keys of the resurrection; for not only will Joseph and Hyrum and the old Prophets be here but Jesus too the great King, who holds the keys of death and hell, and the resurrection likewise; which will be committed to Joseph, Hyram, Brigham and the apostles too, for the redemption of this generation, who will not be likely to forget their faithful brethren, who have fought and bled by their side, who like them have endured the cross and despised the shame. No, they will be clothed with immortality, and be exalted to thrones and dominions, principalities, and powers, and by their judgement and decision will the wicked be cast down into hell, and all people that forget God.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune writes to that journal from Leavenworth on the slavery question, as follows:

"I have only to say, in addition, that the people of the free States know but little of our condition here, and as little of the proper mode of securing the freedom of Kansas, which is to fight. A battle or two must be fought—a regular pitched general battle. Unless that is done, more death and misery will be the necessary consequence. If you want to help us who have exposed our lives and fortunes here for the cause of freedom, send us revolvers and other weapons."

The Tribune hopes, editorially, that the "friends of freedom" will take notice of this appeal, and prescribes the following as the way to make Kansas a free State:

"Meet the slavholders at the threshhold, and by an organized armed force in the Territory, repel their invasion, and repudiate the proceedings of the official scoundrels who will assemble and call themselves the Legislature of Kansas. Any recognition of the authority of this body by the residents of Kansas is as preposterous an idea as it would be pusilanimous in conduct. The citizens of the Teritory should bid defiance to their acts, and visit every attempt to enforce them with contemptuous resistance. The residents of the Territory should organize and combine for this purpose, and not suffer the gigantic villainy perpetrated by the Missouri mob to gain even a momentary foothold through the farce of pretended legislation. Let this proceeding be backed by volunteers from the North, who are determined that the cohorts of slavery shall not conquer free Territory, and the repulse and extinction of the Atchison crew would be effectual. The power exists in overwhelming force at the North, not only to free Kansas, but to free every inch of our Territories from slavery now and forever. And shall the shame and disgrace attach to this generation, that, having the power to do this, and being urged to its performance by the sting of usurpation and matchless audacity of outrage on the part of the Slave Oligarchy, it failed to discharge that duty? Kansas is the Crimea of freedom. Let the North take a lesson from the semi-barbarous Russ, and hold it at whatever cost or sacrifice."

Correspondence.

St. Louis, June 13, 1855.

President Snow,

Dear Brother:—In the absence of my President, Elder Andrus, I am desirous of addressing a few scattering thoughts to the Elders and Saints in this Stake of Zion; and feel to do so with your permission, through the columns of your excellent paper.

Beloved Brethren and Sisters, I have contemplated for some time past, your position and circumstances, and more particularly the circumstances of those newly arrived among us; and take this favorable occasion of writing you some of my cogitations, instructions, and counsels, which I trust will console your hearts and fortify your minds. If my remarks should reach your individual cases, and you should consider them pungent and severe upon you, let the feeling be immediately banished from your hearts, and understand that if my remarks touch your case that 'tis not I, but the Holy Spirit that is within me, even the spirit of truth, which the apostle of the Gentiles said was "sharper than a two-edged sword."

There are in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Apostles, Prophets, and various helps in government, these are they who are charged with the responsibility of directing and controling all the interests of the cause of Zion. Those who are not well posted up in matters of church government are very apt to overlook, or pass by the local authorities of the branch, ward, or Stake, where there lot may perchance be cast—for example, men come to this city, who have been Presidents of Districts, Branches or Conferences, they have faithfully and honorably magnified their position and calling, and on leaving England, the Presidency has blessed them with, "well done thou good and faithful servant." On arriving here they find themselves through some unforeseen circumstances, detained for a season. When in this position, instead of falling into the ranks immediately, as good soldiers of the cross, it is too frequently the case that they avoid the private ranks and stand aloof by themselves, or presuming upon some written license, or testimonial, given under another regime and administration, will occasionally figure among the officers like a regularly commissioned commander, but when they are wanted to fill their own places they are not there.

Every Elder, Priest, Teacher, and Deacon, on arriving in this or any other Stake of Zion, ought at once to fall into their proper places. The Elders and other officers have each their several quorums, unto which they should report and attach themselves as soon as possible. These quorums may be considered as so many reserve forces, to be drawn upon by the Presidency of the Stake or the Bishop of the Wards, as services may require. No matter how smart and intelligent a man may be, nor how much good he has done, if he is not found in his proper place following up his file leader, he in all probability, will be left behind disregarded, and considered quite unfit for any position of trust, and altogether uneligible for a leader or commander of the smallest division.

It is not an uncommon thing to meet with men who have preached faith, hope and charity for years who by the time they reach St. Louis, or the camping ground, have not sufficient of these important principles to save themselves from an apostate's grave. If a little disappointment should happen to stop their progress, and for a season blight their prospects, they stand dead still, loose their faith, begin to murmur and complain, and wish themselves back again to their Father-land; talk to them of faith and patience, they have none, they lost the former probably when the ship was reeling, and the latter at the ships gally; tell them that it is wisdom for them to remain in the States for a few months, and preach the gospel, and pay their tithing, and they are ready to deny the faith, and give up all hope of salvation and eternal life; and all this because their faith has failed, their hope withered, and their patience exhausted.

We have met with persons occasionally, so anxious to accumulate means for some favorite hobby that they make a point of robbing the Lord of his tithes and offerings, and then insult him to his face by calling themselves Saints. If these gentlemen are not thieves and robbers, we are at a loss to find a definition of their characters; and we warn the new comers against their pernicious example.

There are some persons we have been acquainted with, so impatient and inconsistant in their character that if they do not immediately obtain what they want, they are ready to curse God, angels, saints, and every one else, but if their feelings can but be but gratified, they are quite willing to hold out their hand both to the Saints and to the world; and for a picayune will cry good Lord or good Devil—from such turn away. Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all other things shall be added unto you, said Jesus. Give me all other things first says the head-strong impatient one, give me my patrimony now, and I will attend to my salvation and the kingdom of God hereafter.

There is probably no principle of greater importance to the Latter-day Saints than patience, for the lack of a sufficient supply of this principle; many a good man has fallen on the journey of life, when the golden prize was near enough even to be touched, and one step more would have secured the desired object. Impatience has dashed the cup of life away from many a thirsty soul, that has been compelled in after years to drink the very dregs of the cup of misery. Persons often plunge headlong into folly and iniquity, entirely for want of the due exercise of this simple principle. I therefore exhort you to be patient under all your sufferings, and in due season you shall reap if you faint not.

Your brother in the Gospel,
CHARLES EDWARDS.

From the Millennial Star.

Belfast—Baptisms—Cheering Prospect.

Belfast, April 26, 1855.

Dear President F. D. Richards—I feel to occupy a few moments this morning, for the purpose of addressing you, desiring this will find you well and prospering, as it leaves me at present.

Since my return from Scotland, where I rejoiced in company with the brethren in that land, I have been well in body and spirits, never better.

Our Conference was held last Sunday. We had with us our worthy Pastor, and Elders Croston and Kerr, our travelling Elders, feeling fine, and full of the spirit. The reports from these brethren are very favorable. We have added by baptism, seventeen the last quarter. We have been enabled to organize two more branches, and have called six to the Priesthood, two of whom had a portion of it before. The Priesthood are united, to a man, and all are desireous to forward the work with all their might. We had a heavenly time all day, no jarring, no feeling but that of love and union. The motions went off like clock work, and if the faith of the Saints is to be judged by the way the hands go up when the vote is taken, I can bear testimony we have lots of it, for the hands were up as high as the body would allow. We rejoiced exceedingly all day. Pastor Ferguson felt fine, and gave beautiful instruction—what I mean by beautiful is, that which is easy to be understood. The spirit of prophecy came upon us, and we felt so good that we had to prophesy good concerning Mormonism in this land. The strangers that were present partook of our spirit, and when the Conference closed, five gave me their names, and between the hours of 9 and 10, I admitted them into the kingdom. You see that is quite a start for the present quarter, and by this you can see the Lord accepts our labors by blessing us with good honest hearted men and women.

Brother Franklin, it is really cheering when I look around and see those that I can call my children in the gospel, and when they come forward and grasp my hand, and say they know I am a servant of God, and bless His name they ever saw my face, and heard the words of life and salvation flow from my lips, it more than pays for all the hardships endured in Erin. I thank God I was ever counted worthy to come, and I can truly say I have realized what you told me at 15 Wilton street, Liverpool—that I should go, and the blessings of God should attend me. I still feel as I did then. I am only plain Mac yet, and desire the prayers and blessings of God's authority. The way is opening for the work in Derry, and I believe we shall have quite an increase this summer. May it be so, is my prayer, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

On Monday, the day following our Conference, we went on a mountain called Cane Hill, you know the spot, and when we reached the summit, brother Ferguson led off three times three cheers for the advancement of Mormonism in Ireland. The brethren and sisters joined, and we made it echo again and again.

I feel about as well, aye, better in the work than ever I did, and now the good weather is come, I feel to be alive, and to trot around and open new places. Elders Ferguson, Croston, and the two brothers Kerr join in kind love to you and father Spencer, and the brethren in the office.

May God Almighty bless you, my dear Franklin, with all things needful, is the prayer of your humble servant. J. D, T. McALLISTER.

From the Deseret News.

G. S. L. City, March 31, 1855.

Dear Carrington:—On Thursday, the 22nd, I left this city in Mr. Daley's mail stage, which was heavily loaded. The U. S. Marshal, the Clerk of the Supreme and First District Courts, Mr. Bauvier, a merchant at Provo, and Mr. Lyman Wood, the Indian interpreter at Springville, were my fellow passengers. The roads were bad from the effect of the late storms. Mr. Booth, the driver, in compliance with the U. S. mail contract with Mr. Daley, having to stop at all the post-offices within five miles of the road, our progress was necessarily slow. It was laughable to see the persevering and untiring Booth packing the mail bags filled with newspapers and other mail matter on his back half a mile from the road to find a post office. Marshal Heywood's health being very poor, he was under the necessity of leaving our company at Pleasant Grove. We arrived at Provo 9 1-2, P. M.

It being court week, a grand jury had been in session since Monday, waiting the arrival of the Hon. Leonidas Shaver to administer their oath, and give them the solemn charge required by law and "time honored custom;" but learning that the Judge was sick, the jury dispersed as soon as Marshal Heywood arrived and settled their fees. I had like to have said it was lucky that the court was not much needed, only an appeal case that I have heard of, and it in no hurry; law must take its time. Next spring term will do as well, perhaps, if not better; in fact, the people had not time to attend court, unless there was something very exciting on hand, as the season is advanced, fences to repair, wheat fields to sow, new fields to enclose, city wall to build, streets to repair, water ditches to clean out and bridge; so much on hand that a court of two weeks would have been thousands of dollars damage by hindering the people from their work.

I set out in my garden some peach and apple trees, planted out current bushes and grape vines, and repaired the fence; and received calls from a couple of dozen of my friends who came for counsel.

Saturday, went down to examine the fence that encloses my meadow, direct the making of repairs thereon, the burning of old grass to prepare the ground for the new crop, and to make arrangements for the construction of another string of fence. In the afternoon, the mail arrived in Provo from California; in the evening I went to a play of the Dramatic Association, at the Music Hall, called "the Rent Day," and followed by a farce, the "Sketches in India;" the house crowded, stars shone bright. Messrs. P. M. Westwood, the two Nuttalls, and Wm. Allen, are hard to beat on a stage. In fact, the play showed a display of talent that was interesting, as was manifest in those who had little experience. Mrs. Kelting, Miss Clarkson, and the other ladies, did extremely well.

Sunday, sleepy in the morning, from being late at the play. Went to the meeting hall at 10 1-2 A. M., found it crowded, Elder J. Terry was preaching; when he closed, I followed with an address of one hour, on the necessity of union and perfect oneness among the Saints. In the afternoon a general council of the Seventies, composed of delegates from every settlement in the county, met in the meeting hall; they meet once a month to report the condition of the quorums and the branches, also the standing of the Seventies and other business. After their business was over, I addressed the Seventies on the subject of exerting themselves to enlarge the subscription list of the Deseret News, and upon the necessity of the young Elders observing "the Word of Wisdom;" recommended the Elders, as far as consistent, to dispense with the use of tea, coffee, tobacco, and spirituous liquors entirely. At 6 1-2 P. M. I addressed the Saints for an hour and a half on the subject of "celestial marriage." The meeting was crowded, and although the house would contain 400 people; as many went home as got in the room. The brethren in Provo will have to wake up and build their meeting-house, as the only chance to secure a comfortable seat to hear the instructions of the Elders.

Monday evening, attended a council with the Elders in the new council room at Lake City, 19 ft. by 22, comfortably finished, and neatly furnished. We dedicated the room to the Lord, as it had been recently built by the subscriptions of Bishop Harrington and a few of the Elders, and furnished by the sisters in good style for the purposes of a council and prayer room.

Tuesday, by the politeness of Mr. Robert Neslin, I rode with him in his carriage, and arrived in this city at a quarter after four. GEO. A. SMITH.

Miscellaneous.

INCIDENTS OF THE SIEGE.

CRAWLING AND FIRING.

SEBASTOPOL, May 12—A brisk sortie was made against the left attack last night. At one o'clock the weather seemed doing its worst—nothing could be seen for the rain and darkness—An alarm was given, the men were formed up in strict silence—the weapons were looked to, and each detachment, under the command of its officers, proceeded to its appointed post. Orders were issued that none were to fire until the general command was given. Col. L. Yea, of the 7th was field officer in command of the whole party. A brigadier general was in command in chief of all the troops in the trenches, but he was stationed with the reserve. In the meantime, the two sentries, who had remained in advance, waited quietly for some further indication of the enemy's presence. After about a quarter of an hour's anxious expectation, the head of a body of men, advancing quickly and cautiously, was distinctly heard. One of the sentries instantly returned to report it, the other remained at his post, until they were within forty yards of where he lay. He then began retreating, keeping close to the ground, neither going on too fast or suffering the enemy to overtake him. When within a stone's throw of our trenches the Russians stopped; our sentry quietly entered our works and pointed out their precise position.

All our troops preserved a strict silence, and so quiet were the enemy that it was impossible to say that they had not altered their plan, and proceeded in another direction. A few minutes passed in this manner, and then in an instant fifty shots were fired into our lines at a distance of sixty feet. It seems that when the Russians halted they lay down on their bellies, and crawled forward unobserved until within a musket's length of our trenches, when a number of them fired and sprang upon their feet. Our men were in no way taken by surprise. Their positions were already assigned, and they lay so close under cover that only two men were struck by the enemy's volley—one man killed on the spot, another dangerously wounded. The Russians who had first risen, made an attempt to rush into the work under cover of their fire, which they believed had taken us entirely by surprise; but nearly all who tried were shot or bayoneted. The rest of the party, which now seemed about 1,000 strong, commenced a heavy fire, but it was totally inefficient against our troops, who were sheltered by the breastwork.

Our fire, on the contrary, was cool and well sustained, and at the short distance told with murderous effect on the crowd of Russians. They fell on all sides, while we scarcely lost a man. After a few minutes the enemy became confused, and fell back in disorder. It appears, however, to have been only a momentary panic, as, after retreating a short distance, during the whole time of which they were skirmishing, they returned at the charge, and, with the utmost coolness and daring, moving more to the left, tried to storm the breastwork at another point. In this they were as unsuccessful as in their first attempt. The troops reserved their fire until the Russians closed, and giving one tremendous volley, prepared to receive those who might strive to cross the breastwork with the bayonet. But so severe was the effect of their volley, that the enemy seemed paralyzed. Their officers tried to lead them up, but the men, though they fired fast, seemed disinclined to follow. They were wavering fast, when a second force of Russians, about 500 strong, came upon the field. The reinforcement made no fresh effort to force our trenches, contenting themselves with skirmishing to cover the retreat of the attacking party. The English never quitted their breastwork, but fired with deadly accuracy into the enemy, who were trying to remove their killed and wounded.—While effecting this they suffered a severe loss from our fire, which from our very sheltered position, they were quite unable to return, at least with any effect. After about a quarter of an hour's skirmishing in this manner, the enemy fell back and got under cover of the Redan.

As usual, the instant the attack was repulsed and the Russians clear off, their batteries opened fire upon the portion of our lines on which the sortie had been made. They poured in regular volleys of round shot, grape, and shell. The heavy, dark sky which lowered over everything, seemed a perfect Aurora Borealis, with the incessant flashes of the guns.—This retaliation was fully expected, and all our troops lay down until the iron hail had passed. Only one man was killed by a round shot. None others were, even wounded. In about half an hour the cannonade ceased, and except an occasional gun from the enemy, or a large mortar from ourselves and the French, all Sebastopol and the allied trenches were wrapped in perfect silence. Our whole loss from this sortie was three men killed, and thirteen men wounded two of the latter very dangerously.

JUMPING INTO THE BATTERIES.

SEBASTOPOL, May 12—Last night, in the midst of an awful storm of rain and wind—so thick that no one could see a yard beyond him—a body of Russians came up on our left attack, but the sentries gave the alarm just in time; and Colonel Macbeath, of the 68th Regiment, got his men into order and received the first fire of the enemy as they came up to the trench with perfect steadiness. Some of the Russians leapt upon the parapet and jumped into the battery, where they at once met their fate. There was a desperate struggle between the Russians and the men of the 68th outside the lines, in which the bayonet was freely used on both sides; but the enemy were repulsed by our fellows, led by Col. Macbeth, Lieut. Hamilton, and a sergeant of the 68th. I regret to say that Captain Lloyd Edwards and six men of the 68th were killed, and twenty-two men of the same regiment were wounded. We took some wounded prisoners.

It is of course impossible, at this early hour, to ascertain the particulars of the attack, as the men have not come up from the works yet. Some of our men were wounded by stones flung by the Russians, whose guns would not go off, owing to the wet. The enemy lost heavily, and they were seen dragging off their dead during the night.

ARRIVAL OF THE ATLANTIC.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The Atlantic reached her dock at 8 1-2 this A. M., with Liverpool dates to noon of the 2nd inst., and 109 passengers.

Her news is of the utmost importance and exciting character, covering as it does three distinct successes by the allies. First. By the last arrival we had a brief announcement that the French had driven the Russians from a strong position of defence, or place d' arme, before Sebastopol. This occurred during the nights of the 22d and 23d, and was a most sanguinary affair, the place being defended by nearly the whole garrison. The total loss on both sides in killed and wounded is set down at 8,000 men. Gen. Pelissier says the Russian loss was enormous and that of his troops considerable, but much less. The French sustained their position.

Prince Gortschakoff's account of this rencontre says seventeen battalions of the enemy, with reserve, attacked our trench of counter-approach, in front of bastions Nos. 5 and 6. The combat was sanguinary and lasted during the whole night. Our twelve battalions lost nearly 2,500 men in driving back the attack.

Pelissier telegraphs under date 25th, 10, P. M.—"To-day we have occupied the line of the Tschernaya. The enemy who were not in force offered little resistance and retreated rapidly into the city.—We have definitely established ourselves in the works carried during the nights of the 22d and 23d. An armistice was agreed upon for burying the dead, and we were able to form an estimate of the enemy's loss; it must be about 5 or 6,000 killed and wounded."

MAY 26. The enemy has made no demonstrations either in front of the place, or against our lines on the Tchernaya, or the works of fortifications at Keemaizch. The condition of the army continues good.

MAY 20, 9 A. M.—The expedition to Kiertzch and Leninkale has been attended with complete success. The enemy fled at the approach of the Allies. They blew up their powder magazines, destroyed their batteries, and burned their stores. The sea of Azoff is occupied by the allied squadron.

It was rumored that Pelissier had attacked Liprandi.

Canrobert was reported wounded, and another General killed. The rumor was regarded as very doubtful.

Lord Raglan telegraphs as follows:

"MAY 27.—The sea of Azoff is occupied without any casualty. The troops landed at Kertzch, on her Majesty's birth day, the 24th, and the enemy fled, blowing up their fortifications on both sides of the straits, and destroying their steamers."

Some vessels, and fifty guns have fallen into the hands of the Allies. Raglan further telegraphs that, on the 20th, Gen. Sir Geo. Brown had reached Jeninkale, having, on the previous day, destroyed a foundry, near Kertzch, where shot, shells and Minnie balls were very numerous. In the advance, the French were on the right, the English on the left, and the Turks in reserve.

A dispatch from Raglan of the 30th says: "Letters from Gen. Brown and Admiral Lyons, of the 29th, announce the destruction of four Russian war steamers, and large depots of corn."

The Allies' ships have succeeded in blowing up a magazine at Osabot, and destroying about one hundred merchant vessels.

Only one Russian war steamer remained in the sea of Asoff.

The Very Latest!

NEW YORK, June 13.—Twenty thousand of the Allies, under Sir G. Brown, landed at Kertsch on the 24th. On the same day, 35,000 advanced on Ichevnaya, and occupied it. The Allies captured the Russian batteries on the coast of Kertsch and Yemski, and the Russians burned three of their steamers, thirty transports and trading vessels, and also their magazines at Kertsch, containing 160,000 sacks oats, 60,000 sacks corn, and 100,000 sacks flour.

The war news generally highly important. After two nights of sanguinary conflict, the French drove the Russians from their strong garrison position before Sebastopol, and occupied it. Loss on both sides 8,000. The Allies have fourteen steamers in the sea of Asoff, and are in possession of Kertzch, from which point the garrison of Sebastopol drew their principal supplies. This must exercise a speedy influence on the siege.

Rumors gather! Great battle at Inkermann reported, but the statements want confirmation. Diplomacy is particularly busy at the present moment. The resumption of the Vienna Conference had not taken place, the successes in the Crimea warranting the Allies to hold out for better terms. Austrian negotiations were more active than ever, with the view of obtaining for the Cabinet of Vienna supremacy in Germany.

From Spain we learn that the insurrection had been checked, but the Government was compelled to apply to the Cortes for additional powers.

FRANCE.

The exhibition was beginning to attract more attention, but still fell short of expectations. There were 30,000 visitors the first three days.

The King of Portugal was in Paris.

Marshall Harispe died at Bayonee.

HOLLAND.

A Convention of Reciprocity in the coasting trade between the Dutch Government and Prussia, had been confirmed.

The new Sardinian ministry has at length been recomposed.

The eruption of Mt. Vesuvius has subsided.

SPAIN.

The insurgents at Caspi and Olianty had been defeated. Two of the leaders were shot.

The Provinces were tranquil.

INDIA AND CHINA.

Details of the Oriental news have reached England. Intelligence from Burmah was encouraging for prospects of peace. Nothing of Persia.

Trade had undergone no material improvement.

At Shanghai, on the 9th of February, all was quiet, the troops having been withdrawn to Canton. In the interior, things had assumed an unfavorable aspect, and the insurgents were making such advances as led to the fear that they might stop the oxport trade at Shanghai.

The insurgents along the coast had been attacking foreign flags. A British expedition had consequently destroyed twenty junks, with most of their crews, and the remainder were killed on shore.

A famine threatened the people of Canton, and food riots were apprehended.

THE BALTIC.

Operations have commenced in the Baltic. Revel has been carefully reconnoitered, and will, it is said, be shortly bombarded. The Allied fleets were at Nargen, of which Island the following description is given in the London Times:

"Nargen is a small island about six miles to the north-west of Revel; it is oblong in shape, about 11 miles round, and completely covered with pine trees, except at its two extremities. On the south end there is a clear space of between 200 and 300 acres; this is divided into paddocks by rough fencing, in each of whch is built a house, generally containing two rooms, and heated by a brick stove, which serves the double purpose of stove and oven. These houses together form a village with about 200 inhabitants, who live during the summer principally by fishing and during the winter by wild fowl. A little to the north of the village is a pretty wooden church. It is just completed, and I believe the expesnse was borne chiefly by Swedes; the clergyman is also a Swede. Close to the church is the ruin of an old fort, called the Star Fort, from its shape. In days long gone it commanded the water between the island and Revel. A little further on, and approached by a narrow path through the trees is the graveyard. Here in a quiet corner by themselves sleep those who were left behind by the English fleets in 1808-9. Their names can still be traced on the painted headboards, which have fallen down through decay, but have been preserved and reared up against the palings by the people of the island. In another corner, under the shadow of a fine old pine tree, sleep the two brave fellows we lost last year. Several small firs have been planted around their graves.

"At the northern extremity there is a lighthouse, but the lamps and lantern have been taken away; however, it forms a capital signal tower, and one of our armed boat's crews is constantly kept there to look out. Nargen is a very healthy spot, and during the summer the people of Revel use it for picnicking and to take advantage of the beautiful walks which intersect the woods in all directions.

"From where the fleet is anchored, looking to the south, we can see the city of Revel, with its spires and minarets sparkling in the sun, and the people walking on the beach. We lie just opposite the famous Domberg, or Town-hall, built on a high rocky hill in the middle of a plain; to the left or, eastwardly stretches the city, and between it and the beach, built at intervals along a shore of about two miles, are the batteries which defend it; one is a formidable one mounting 200 guns in four tiers.—The furnaces which heat the shot are always lighted in this one; we can see the smoke rising from its hollow centre. Directly north of us across the gulf (here only eighteen miles broad) we can see the gilded domes of Helsingfors, as the setting sun throws its horizontal rays upon them; making them sparkle as he dips into the water. Nargen, then, is the best place in all the Baltic to be the general rendezvous for all our forces; it is healthy, there is good water, it is close to the principal point where it is supposed we shall act, and nothing could pass up or down the gulf without being seen from our anchorage.

THE BABY SHOW.

The N. Y. Tribune of Thursday says:

The attendance at the Baby Show was far greater yesterday than on the day of opening. From ground floor to the roof was crammed with living masses, all anxious to see Barnum's last. The antiquated celebrities, Albino, the Bearded Woman, the Dwarf and the Giantess were promoted to an outside berth on the top of the building, but the everlasting tide rose and rose until the press was greater there than anywhere else.

The prize Baby who took the $100 premium was the center of attraction. He and his delighted mother sat on an elevated platform under a crimson canopy. The little Charles Orlando Scott has very prominent cheeks and forehead, and brilliant black eyes. His mouth is a general subject of commendation, and his form is very well developed. He thinks it is nice to sit there, but does not like to kiss people much.

The weather was quite warm enough for jokes, and a young lady said to her gallant: "If I had thought I don't know that I would have come here with you." Previous conversation more easily imagined than described.

Two well developed ladies had a disagreement which they settled as well as they could with their feet, the crowd being too dense to allow of a sparring exhibition.

The first prize of $50 was given to Peter Alexander Blake of New Lots, Long Island, a young gentleman eleven months old yesterday. His mother Elizabeth has had five children before; she is thirty years old, while her husband Nicholas is sixty.—She lived on ordinary diet for the year previous to his birth; took moderate exercise out and indoors on level land; its birth was regular, and it has been washed moderately in cold water.

The second premium of $15 was decided by lot between Nos. 88 and 56. The fates, and not the judges, awarded it to Henry Clay Bolster Shannon, No. 23 West Forty-first street. He is ten months old to-day. His father is forty; his mother thirty-one. She has had one child before, and the scientific developments generally in her case are quite similar to those in the case of Mrs. Blake.

These poor children have to be submitted to the same brutalities to-day, and again to-morrow, to gratify the same curiosity in other twelve thousands. The very few who are beautiful will have to be touched by hands that touch only to pollute, and to be kissed by lips heavy with poison. The sacred mysteries of life must be laid bare to the gaze of the careless to gratify a morbid or an idle curiosity, and to put $2,500 a day into the pocket of the great Manager!

A Colored Minister Ejected from a Railroad Car.

The Rev. James W. C. Pennington, a colored minister, late of Prince street church, got into some difficulty yesterday in endeavoring to enforce what he deemed his right in one of the city railroad cars. It appears he entered car No. 16 of the Sixth Avenue Railroad Company, in order to proceed down town, where he had some business to transact. He had scarcely taken his seat before he was notified by the conductor that the company's rules prohibited colored people from riding in any cars but those designated as colored cars. Mr. Pennington declined leaving the car, as he said he had a legal right to ride in any conveyance chartered for public accommodation; whereupon, according to Mr. Pennington's statement, the conductor and driver forcibly ejected him from the car in so rough a manner that he lost his hat and cane. Highly incensed at what he deemed an unwarrantable outrage, he ran behind the car until he met a policeman, whom he requested to arrest the offending parties. This the officer refused to do, whereupon the parson got so violent that the "star" arrested him and took him before Justice Connolly, letting the car go. There an explanation was had, when the whole affair was dismissed.—[New York Herald.

LADIES BONNETS'

"Stella," in her "Suburban Letters," to the Worcester Palladium, makes some pertinent allusions to the present style of ladies' bonnets. She says:

"They are ruining the eye sight of all who wear them. The rays of the sun come directly upon the eye, and the victim squints, wrinkles up her forehead, sheds a few natural tears, and hurries on to the shade of the nearest building, to give her eyes a moment's rest. No gentleman wears a hat without a brim, a cap without a visor; but the ladies—toughened creatures that they are—can only seek shelter behind what may be supposed to be their motto, 'grin and bear it,' or, as it has been poetically rendered, 'suffer and be strong.' But how are these necessary evils held on; that is, when they are on? At first, the constant slipping off was counteracted by the shoulders, that very obligingly acted the part of an extra pair of hands; and, hunching themselves up, pushed on the offender. But this was found so ungraceful, such an exaggeration of the 'Grecian stoop," that it was vetoed. Necessity, 'the mother of invention," now called upon her daughter for a remedy. She suggested that the bonnet should be held on, and with tall, pointed combs. No sooner said than done; but a few dislike great combs, so Invention pointed to the smaller one of the toilette table. But secrets will out, and bonnets sometimes come off unexpectedly; and, although every lady likes to show a set of fine teeth, one set is quite enough for any head."

WESTERN NEWS.

Mr. T. S. Williams, of the firm of Hooper & Williams of Salt Lake City, arrived here last week, since which he has been seriously indisposed, and confined for several days to his room, but is now again able to be about. Mr. Williams has had a most severe journey in crossing the plains, having to travel nights, and but a limited opportunity for rest during the day, and the great distance necessary to travel to reach this city has been almost too much, even for his strong constitution and indomitable perseverance; but we are happy to say he is again up and doing. We are indebted to him for our last news from the Valley, and assured of the good health and prosperity enjoyed by the people. The Indians in the territory are quiet and well-disposed. The crops bid fair to be abundant, and all things moving on as well as could be desired. Mr. Williams has come on, in connection with Capt. Hooper, who was here a few days since, to purchase goods for that market, and we understand they have made a very large and fine selection of goods from this and other eastern cities, and we wish them every success which their highly honorable course, and indefatigable energy since they commenced business in Salt Lake entitle them to.

We were very much gratified to learn from so reliable a source, of the business, activity, and improvements going on through the territory, and he gave us some rich treats in relation to the doings of the "militaire," as well as some of the civil, the most piquant of which, however, consisted of a combination of both civil and military, which, as a friend of ours remarked, looked rather "squaw-ly." And by the way, we earnestly recommend some of the "special correspondents," "embryo lawyers," supplied by the U. S. with paper, etc. not to be over anxious to implicate Mormon juries, &c., for the tables may suddenly turn upon them, and on their return to the States, they bear the evidence upon them, which will confound them, and throw their falsehoods into their own teeth. A word to the wise, &c.—[N. Y. Mormon.

MECHANICS.

St. Paul was a mechanic—a maker of tents from goat's hair—and in the lecturer's opinion he was a model mechanic. He was not only a thorough workman at his trade, but was a scholar, a perfect master, not only of his native Hebrew but of three foreign tongues, a knowledge of which he obtained by close application to study during his leisure hours, while serving his apprenticeship. It was a custom among the Jews to teach their sons some trade—a custom not confined to the poorer classes, but was also practised by the wealthy; and it was a common proverb among them, that if a father did not teach his son a mechanical occupation, he taught him to steal. This custom was a wise one; and if the fathers of the present day would imitate their example, then wrinkled cheeks would not so often blush for the helplessness of and not unfrequently criminal conduct of their offspring. Even if a father intended his son for one of the professions, it would be an incalculable benefit to that son to instruct him in some branch of mechanicism. His education would not only be more complete and healthy, but he might at some future time, in case of failure in his profession, find his trade very convenient as a means of earning his bread, and he must necessarily be more competent in mechanical from his professional education. An educated mechanic was a model machine, while an uneducated mechanic was merely a mechanic working under the superintendence of another man's brain. Let the rich and the proud no longer look upon mechanicism as degrading to him who adopts a branch of it as his calling. It is a noble calling—as noble as the indolence of wealth is ignoble.—[Rev. Dr. Adams.

THE TRUE YANKEE.

In one of our American exchanges, we find the following admirable appreciation of the "True Yankee:"—"Physically, he is hatchet-faced, long, lank, and skinny; he is prone to talk a great deal, and that through his nose; he is temperate because he is too economical to pay for his liquor; he does not hate others, he only loves himself more; he is the concentrated essence of selfishness. He fled in old times from religious persecution, to the rocky shores of Plymouth, and there erected an altar to religious liberty, and consecrated it with the blood of skinny witches and heretic quakers. The parts of the Bible he loves most, treat of the sharp dealings of Jacob with Laban, and he laughs as he reads of the good bargain he made with Esau, and then goes south to find some Esau to play Jacob with, himself. His love of money predominates over everything else; he has no poetical sensibilities; all feeling in him is utilitarian; if he had the remodelling of creation, the clouds would lose their fantastic shapes and colors, and cease to rove in the heavens, except as they went straight to that tract of country that needed a shower, and then discharging their contents with the direction of a water-pot; the shells would all be of one color, and of the best quality for the manufacture of lime; the mountains would be levelled, and the vallies filled up, so that the earth would be one vast plain, which he would cover with two-story brick houses, all of one size and pattern, and their inmates would be forced on pain of death to subscribe for the N. Y. Tribune. He could about as soon compose an epic poem as could a steam engine. He can deliver a panegyric on the Star-Spangled Banner, and then tell you how much it cost a yard."

A BAD REPORT.

A Mormon sister, in a letter that has appeared in the New Haven Journal, defends the religion she has embraced, with much spirit, and while she admits the spiritual wife business, charges home upon our people that we are more corrupt than Mormons ever thought to. The following of the United States officers and troops in the Territory, is more likely to be true than not. She says, "No sooner did the officers arrive here, last fall, than they began to enquire for women; and because they were rebuked openly they took offence. It is all that mothers can do to keep them away from their daughters. They make dancing parties, and use all their influence to decoy young girls into their places. Instead of rearing up honorable families and blessing them, they scatter vice wherever they go." Our men must be bad enough when they are worse than Mormons, but probably they deserve the rebuke she gives them.

Julius—Know de reason Sebastopol hasn't been taken?

Sam—Not in dese boots.

Julius—They habn't got de right keys to open de gates.

Sam—What keys do dey want?

Julius—Yan-kees.

Sam—I know what key would suit you de best.

Julius—What is it?

Sam—Whis-key.

Julius—Yes, and all dis fuss made out ob Tur-key.

Poetical Department.

THE VIOLET AND THE ROSE.

"Awake, my sister!" the low words came
From a bed where a young rose grew—
"Awake thee, my sister violet,
And open thine eyes of blue;
Shake the lovely dew from thy lovely head,
And thy perfumed leaves unfold,
And rejoice like me in the blessed light
Of the morning's living gold.

All other fair buds are gazing out,
And wooing that shining sun,
And I hear the echo of sounding feet
By the passing breeze borne on;
Perchance some maiden may wander by,
And look on our place of rest;
And bear us away from our lowly home
To repose on her fair breast.

Oh! bliss, to repose on so lovely a couch,
And be gazed on by beauty's eye;
Oh! bliss, to be praised by her gentle voice,
And be fanned by her fragrant sigh.
How long must we dwell on the joyless earth?
How long must we linger here?
Say, dost thou not pine for a prouder lot?
Answer me, sister dear."

A faint, sweet sound, like a lute's last note,
On the morning's stillness broke,
And the air was stirred with an odorous breath,
As the meek young violet spoke.
"There's a quiet bliss in our own green vale,
And I love its calm beauty well;
There's a joy in each passing breeze—
'Tis a home where I love to dwell.

Our roof is the azure vault of heaven,
Our food is the dew-drops bright,
The sun throws its beams on our path by day,
And the stars are our lamps by night.
We sprung up 'mid odor and bloom and light.
We are wooed by the minstrel wind—
Here rest then, dear rose, in thine own sweet home,
For a fairer thou canst not find."

But the rose still pined for a prouder lot,
And it pined not long in vain,
For a maiden, with cheek like its own red leaf,
Came dancing o'er the plain;
She gazed on its hue with admiring eye,
And she praised it with getle voice,
And placed it in her bosom of spotless white,
Oh! then did the rose rejoice.

A few brief hours of light and joy,
And the flower was all forgot,
And it longed again for its quiet home,
For it saw it was heeded not;
It withered apace in its high abode,
Unnoticed by beauty's eye,
And when the dim shadows of twilight came,
'Twas cast on its home to die.

The violet still lived in its loneliness,
And the moon and the stars looked down,
And silvered the misty veil of dew,
That the even had over it thrown;
The zephyrs wooed it, and sportively strove
Its odorous breath to share,
Whilst they turned aside from the faded rose,
And left it to perish there.

Thus thou may'st learn from a simple flower,
A lesson thy course to guide:—
Then cling to the bliss of thy quiet home,
And dream not of wealth and pride;
And, oh! when ambition would taint thy soul,
Or thou sighest for pomp and state,
Think thou of the lowly violet's lot
And remember the rose's fate.

From the Manchester Examiner, May 19th.

The Great Reform Movement in England.

The movement for Administrative Reform, which is all at once receiving support from so many of the large constituencies in the kingdom, proves as aptly as any event of recent occurrence, the trite saying, that the English are eminently a matter-of-fact people. The whole system of administration is broken down. We know not where to look for alleviation to our wounded vanity, since every part of the business is equally bad. From Lord Palmerston down to poor Capt. Christie, our whole theory and practice has been full of rottenness. Cabinet ministers, admirals, generals, commissariat officers, have all been at fault. It would seem as if England were suddenly reft of every scrap of statesmanlike capacity and executive vigor, and the noble vessel, "whose flag has braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze," it is all but hopelessly stranded through the utter incompetency of those noble lords and right honorable personages who have command of her. There is no denying that the posture of affairs is provoking and annoying in the extreme. Well may the citizens of London bestir themselves. For our part, we earnestly wish them success; we are heartily glad they have been roused at last, and only wonder they have slept over the nuisance so long. To us the question is an old one. Years ago we pointed out the evil, and strove against it. Then, however, the patriots of the city, the very men who were foremost in the late meetings, shook their heads, folded their arms, sunned themselves in the radiance of Downing street, as reflected at Guildhall, blessed their stars that so many dukes and lords would take the trouble to govern them, and left the question of administrative reform to the vulgar radicalism of the North. The system was as bad then as it is now, but as no great pressure was put upon it, the crazy machine managed to get along. The acute, far-seeing busiuess men of the city declared that the old coach was the best upon the road, and only changed their opinion when it actually broke down, precipitating passengers, luggage, and everything into the mire.

We recall these circumstances by no means for the sake of recrimination, but to explain the peculiar pleasure with which we hail the present movement. It was begun in London, been repeated in Sheffield, Derby, Birmingham and Norwich, and will shortly be recognized in Bristol, Liverpool and Manchester. If the people of Manchester are among the last to announce their adhesion to the movement, it is because they have all along advocated the principles which justify and demand it. They did not wait till the system broke down before they proclaimed it faulty; they saw and proclaimed the fact long ago. We have a right, therefore, to regard ourselves as the old staff of the regiment, and in this capacity to give a cordial welcome to Messrs. Morley, Lindsey and M'Cullogh, as zealous recruits in the good old cause. If we find any fault with them it is that they do not go far enough; because they vent their newly acquired enthusiasm upon the manifestations of the evil, forgetting that these outward manifestations have a hidden support which requires annihilation; that the poisonous fruits must be destroyed by uprooting the Upas tree on which it grows.

Being thus at length fairly embarked in a common cause, let us clearly ascertain what we have to accomplish. It is no use beating about the bush; we must boldly go right in and assail the lion in his lair. The question divides itself practically into two branches: first, the occupants of the treasury bench; secondly, the filling up of the subordinate offices of the administration. In both of these departments we have to contend for the application of the same principle; in both we have to assert, not the abstract right of ability of the first class to official appointment, but the right of the people to have those persons selected as their servants whose ability gives the best promise that the duties of the particular appointment shall be well performed. It is some importance to bear in mind this distinction. Ability has no more abstract right to promotion in the service of the State than it has in any private firm; but it is the right of the State, as assuredly it is its interest, to make ability alone the test of promotion. The choice of the first minister is a thing sui generis. He is chosen on political grounds, and, since one man has to be selected, he is necessarily one of the first of his party, there is generally found in him sufficient personal ability to justify the choice. We are far from thinking that the mode of choosing the First Minister is faultless. It is too much hampered by party considerations, and is too much confined within the circle of aristocratic birth. If the House of Commons were truly a people's house, we do not see why the First Minister should always be a man of high aristocratic connections. But allowing this part of the machinery of the administration for the present to stand as it is, what we have to demand is that the First Minister should surround himself with the ablest men. We have a right to ask that he should not feel himself compelled by any family or party considerations to call my Lord this, or the most noble the Marquis of that, to office, but should go straight towards the highest efficiency. What, in all conscience is the State? Is it something to be leased and farmed out to men with big names? Is it a huge perquisite to be divided among the descendants of successful lawyers, heroes, or courtesans? Are the left handed sprigs of royalty—illustrious aristocrats whose noble line commenced with the dubious progeny which sported in the boudoirs of the Duches of Portsmouth or Nell Gwynn, entitled, by birth, to wax rich and great on of the taxes, the glory, and the blood of Englishmen?—This, without exageration, is the theory which has hitherto prevailed; it is our solemn duty—a duty too long deferred—to explode its shameless and hollow sophistries, and apply to the management of the State the maxims of political justice and honesty.

When each ministerial department has thus been supplied with the ablest chiefs, the next step is to carry an analogous reform into all the subordinate ranks. This is a difficult, but not an impossible task. Each department by itself is not more extensive and intricate than many of our larger commercial firms, where ability throughout is the only recognized test. The chief thing requisite is to abolish the existing system of patronage, by which the government virtually sells offices for votes, and leave the responsible parties to fill up vacancies in the same way, and on precisely the same conditions as a private firm. If this is a difficult matter for those susceptible and kind-hearted men who fill the various departments in Downine street, it would be well, just to hand the business over for a few months to Mr. Lindsay and his friends; we warrant they will be able to carry out the change.

Such is an outline of what we have a right to demand at the hands of the government. We know Lord Palmerston affects a disposition to concede it. Did he not ask Mr. Laing to take office? Yes, it is quite true; a clerk of the Ordnance Mr. Laing was to have become, or, when he scrupled to be appraised at so low a figure, a Vice-President of the Board of Trade, with a youthful lord to gag and fetter him. This is the homage that is paid to intellect and merit—to be rated at something less than the ineffable advantage of having sprung from the chivalrous lineage of the Stanleys, and to qualify its possessor to act as a lord's underling. The whole is sheer hypocrasy. It is worse than injustice—it is contempt and insult. Not thus will the people submit to be governed in "the good time coming."

THE CHINESE WAR.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune, sends to that paper additional particulars of the taking of Shanghai by the Imperial party:

After a siege of nearly a year and a half the city of Shanghai, by the assistance of the French, fell into the hands of the Imperial party. All supplies had been effectually cut off—some of the country people had starved, and dogs, cats and horses had been eaten. The rebels then concluded that it was time to leave and on the night of the 26th ult., took their departure. About eleven o'clock at night, the city was set on fire in different places—some say by the rebels and others say by the imperialists who entered soon after the rebels left. The fire raged till the afternoon of the next day, and a large part of the town reduced to ashes. Fortunately all the Missionary Churches escaped; though houses were burned adjoining some of them. Notwithstanding the city was closely besieged, the large majority of the rebels made their escape. Some sixty or seventy found their way to the American guard house, where they were kept till the next day, when Capt. Pope told them to look out for themselves. The Imperialists caught some three or four hundred, whom they beheaded. It is now generally believed that neither of the chiefs was caught.

The first day the city was given up to the pillaging of the soldiery, who took what little the former occupants had left. The second day the mandarins endeavored to restore order, and freely administered the bamboo to those who were caught stealing. I took a walk through the town, and could but feel sad at the desolation everywhere visible; whole streets were in ruins, and the beggars were picking and pilling at the fragments. Here and there was a crisped skeleton, while along the lanes and in the houses were headless bodies ripped up and cut in the most barbarous manner. The sick and wounded were all murdered wherever found. They even opened the coffins and cut the bodies of the dead to gratify their cowardly vengeance. As I returned I met seven or eight baskets full of heads, each containing ten, and men following with bamboo poles on which to stick them up in different parts of the city, as a warning to all future rebels. But I must forbear, lest your readers should sicken at the details of heathen cruelty. Notwithstanding their outward polish, the Chinese have proved in this war, that they have the hearts of savages.

POPULAR SIMILES.

Some ingenious rhymer has placed the following sayings in poetic order, the opposite in juxtaposition:—

As wet as a fish—as dry as a bone;
As live as a bird—as dead as a stone.
As plump as a patridge—as poor as a rat;
As strong as a horse—as weak as a cat.
As hard as a flint—as soft as a mole;
As white as a lilly—as black as a coal.
As plain as a pikestaff—as rough as a bear;
As tight as a drum—as free as the air.
As heavy as lead—as light as a feather;
As steady as time—as uncertain as weather.
As hot as an oven—as cold as a frog;
As gay as a lark—as sick as a dog.
As slow as a snail—as swift as the wind,
As true as the gospel—as false as mankind.
As thin as a herring—as fat as a pig;
As proud as a peacock—as blue as a grig.
As savage as tigers—as mild as a dove;
As stiff as a poker—as limp as a glove.
As blind as a bat—as deaf as a post;
As cool as a cucumber—as warm as a toast;
As red as a cherry—as pale as a ghost.

The reason why it succeeds.—The Mustang Liniment has attained its enormous popularity, and almost universal use, simply because it gives better satisfaction, accomplishes more good, relieves more pain, and heals more wounds and sores than any other preparation ever before offered to the afflicted. Every bottle that is used, speaks for itself—tells its own tale in the relief it gives, and the cure it effects. And then one who has suffered, pehaps, long years with pain, without hope of relief, and finds in this Liniment an almost instantaneous remedy, cannot help but speak in its praise, and recommend it in the best terms to all he sees suffering. It needs no other recommendation than a trial.

☞See advertisement in another columu. [may 19 26 3m.

NOTICE.

We have received and have on sale the following books and pamphlets.

Book of Mormon,	$1 00
Book of Doctrine and Covenants,	95
Voice of Warning,	50
Spencer's Letters,	50
Hymn Books, Morocco gilt, ext.,	1 25
" " Calf "	80
" " Roan "	50
Government of God, by J. Taylor,	50
New Jerusalem, or the Fulfilment of Modern Prophecy,	15
Divine Authority of Joseph Smith,	10
Remarkable Visions,	10
Only Way to be Saved,	5
Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, by O. Pratt, 6 parts, 10cts. ea., or per sett,	40
Polygamy, by a Lady in Utah,	5
The Seer, by O. Pratt, vol. 1, to which is added 6 parts of Divine Authenticity of the book of Mormon, and Polygamy, by a Lady of Utah, elegantly bound, in one vol.	2 25
Orson Pratt's works, bound,	1 50
Times and Seasons, vols. 4, 5, and 6, well bound, ea.	1 50
Portraits of the First Presidency,	1 25

Route from England to Salt Lake may be expected in a few weeks.

We have a few numbers of the Millenial Star of vol. 17 on sale.

Those wishing any of the above books, or wishing to subscribe regularly for the Millenial Star, can apply to me every Sunday at the Church, or by post.

Apr, 14 21.] JAS. S. CANTWELL.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

SUMMER HATS.
STAWS, LEGHORNS, AND PANAMAS!
YOU ARE INVITED TO THE CORINTHIAN HALL---BIG HAT:
297 BROADWAY.
THE BEST, CHEAP, ST. LOUIS MADE,
☞FASHIONABLE DRESS HATS!!☜
☞CASH PRICE, - $4.☜
Soft Felt Hats, all kinds and colors.—Call and see.

MISSOURI SAIL AND BAGGING LOFT,
South-west corner of Chesnut st. and the Levee, St. Louis.
Salt Lake, California, Oregon, Kansas, and Nebraska EMIGRANTS
CAN be supplied with the following articles as advertised: Tents, Tarpaulins, Wagon Covers, Mule Covers, Trunk Covers, Saddle and Clothes Bags, Awnings, and all kinds of Canvas or Rope work on hand, or made to order at the shortest notice. Flags of all descriptions made to order on short notice.
We have on hand, and for hire, 50 full sized, water proof Tarpaulins.
☞Old work repaired and warranted by GEO. R. LITTLE & CO.
N. B. The subscribers having perfect knowledge of the business, will do any of the above work will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor them with their patronage, as we warrant all our articles to be perfect. [June 9 29 3m

STEPHEN HOYT. O. C. GREEN.
STEPHEN HOYT & CO.,
WHOLESALE DEALERS IN GROCERIES,
IMPORTERS OF
Wines, Fruits, and Nuts,
Calls the attention of Emigrants, to Salt Lake, California and Oregon, to No. 47 Second Sreet,
Between Olive and Pine Streets, St. Louis,
WHERE there always will be found an excellent assortment of goods adapted to the wants of Emigrants crossing the plains, viz:
Green and Black Teas, Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Fish, Spices, Tobacco, Dried Fruits, Starch, Saleratus, Powder, Lead, Window-glass, Nails, Rope, Olive Oil, Pickles, Tar, &c., &c., &c.
June 2 28 3m] STEPHEN HOYT & Co.

REMOVAL.
MRS. G. VINCENT, MIDWIFE, WASHINGTON AVENUE, between Fifth and Sixth streets, St. Louis, Mo.
Mrs. G. Vincent wishes to inform her friends and the public, that she has removed from between 8th and 9th, on Market street, to the above place, and hopes by strict attention to her duties, to merit a further continuance of their patronage. [apr 14 21 3m

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.
CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.
J. M'GREGOR,
WATCH MAKER AND JEWELER,
HAS REMOVED TO NO. 94 MARKET STREET,
South side between Third and Fourth.
CALLS the attention of his friends and the public to his stock in trade, of which he is prepared to sell any article at as cheap a rate as any other house in the city. He will guarantee and be responsible for the same to those who may honor him with their patronage.
N. B. Being a practical workman, particular attention is paid to the Cleaning and Organizing of fine Watches, from the Chronometer down to the Vertical. All those who wish their Watches to keep correct time, bring them along, as he warrants all work done by him.
96 Market Street,
may 26, 27 3m* ST. LOUIS, MO.

GALLAGHER & CO.,
Practical Dyers and Scourers,
No. 112 North 3d st., 2 doors from Vine, South side, and No. 180 Morgan st. between 6th and 7th, St. Louis Mo.
☞Have opened their new and cheap Dying and Scouring establishment. Gentlemens Coats, Pantaloons, Vests, &c., Dyed, Scoured and neatly repaired.
Nov. 18, '54. [1tf.

S. J. LEES,
LOCKSMITH, CUTLER AND SAW-FILER,
No. 81 Morgan, st. St. Louis, Mo.
BUCK SAWS, Carpenters' Coopers' and Butchers' saws, filed and set, Blades put into Knives; Razors and Scissors ground, set and repaired, Tailors' and Tinners' Shears, Carpenters' and Coopers' Tools, Butchers' Knives and Choppers, ground.
☞Guns repaired and for sale. All kinds of Tools bought and sold.
☞The owners and agents of property, steamboat stewards, keepers of boarding houses and hotels will find their orders promptly attended to.
Nov. 18, '54.

R. TORR,
151 Washington Avenue, bet. 7th and 8th Streets,
ENGLISH BREAD BAKERY.
WARRANTED TO KEEP SWEET.
Families Supplied at their Residences.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 3m.

TEA! TEA!! TEA!!!
VAN, THE TEA MAN
RETAIL DEALER,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
Dec. 23. [5 6m*]

FOR THE WEST.
EMIGRANTS for the West will find it to their Interest to call on ALMA ROLLER between Tenth and Eleventh streets, on Franklin avenue, before engaging their wagons elsewhere, as he is prepared to furnish Wagons put up in the best style, and out of the best material. Wagons made at the same shop have been used for the past three years by the Western emigration and given general satisfaction.
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1854. [4 tf

REMOVAL.
FRANCIS LEPERE has removed his store from No. 81 Franklin avenue, to the premises formerly occupied by him, south-east corner of Seventh and Franklin avenue.

A CARD.
THE Subscriber, thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past year, would say to his patrons and the public generally, that he will spare no pains to render satisfaction in every particular article purchased at his establishment. With increased facilities for purchasing goods, and commodious store rooms, we are enabled to compete with any house in our line in the city.
Dec. 9, 3 2m FRANCIS LEPERE.

IN STORE and to arrive, the following articles, for sale low for cash:
60 bags prime Rio Coffee; 20 bags Laguyra;
50 pockets old government Java;
130 ht. chests and chests Imperial, Young Hyson and Black Teas;
20 bags whole Pepper; 5 bags Alspice;
3 cases Nutmegs; 3 bales Cloves;
30 boxes pure ground Spices; 25 do. Castile Soap;
5 casks dried Currants; 20 boxes Citron;
10 casks Myer's Tobacco; 25 barrels Languedoc Almonds;
5 cases Gillot's Sardines, 1-2s and 1-4s;
25 boxes Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate;
50 boxes MR. Raisins. FRANCIS LEPERE.
Dec. 9. [3 2m

CHILD, PRATT & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE AND CUTLERY
NO. 147 MAIN STREET,
Third Door North of the Bank of Missouri,
ST. LOUIS.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf*

LOUIS ESPENSCHIED,
WAGON MANUFACTURER,
Corner of Broadway and Labeaume Steert,
OPPOSITE EMPIRE MILLS.
NORTH ST. LOUIS, MO.
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DR. WHITE,
HOMŒOPATHIST.
Office, 121 Pine Street, between Fourth and Fifth,
ST. LOUIS, MO.
Office hours until 8 A. M. from 2 to 3 P. M., Sundays excepted.
Jan. 6, 1855. [7 tf.

ELLISON & APPLETON,
DEALERS IN
NEW AND SECOND-HAND FURNITURE,
CORNER OF FIFTH AND GREEN STS.
Mattresses and Comforts of our own make,
Wholesale and Retail.
MATRESSES CLEANED AND RENOVATED.
Furniture and Stoves Bought, Sold or Exchanged.
Feb. 3, 1855. [113m*

TO EMIGRANTS.
C. B. HUBBELL, Jr., 102 4th st., St. Louis
Informs persons travelling towards
SALT LAKE OR CALIFORNIA,
That they will find at his store, the largest stock of DRY GOODS in the city, comprising every variety of kinds adapted to their wants, which he will sell at prices fully TWENTY-FIVE per cent. lower than any other house in the trade, to which your attention is invited.
N. B. One price only ever asked, and no deviation. [apr 14 21 2m

GREAT ATTRACTION
AT
WILSON & COOPER'S NEW STORE!
The attention of Emigrant starting for
UTAH, CALIFORNIA, AND OREGON,
Is respectfully called to our IMMENSE STOCK of
FASHIONBLE DRY GOODS!
Comprising every article in the trade, from the plain substantial articles of every-day use, to the finest and most elegant fabrics of first class Dry Goods and LINEN DRAPERY.
Our goods are all marked in PLAIN FIGURES, from which no abatement is allowed under any circumstances.
N. B. A discount of FIVE per cent. will be allowed to parties going west, on all bills over $100. WILSON & COOPER, apr 14 21] Cor. 4th and Locust sts., St. Louis.

W. H. HUISH,
MACHINIST, Broadway, between Ashlep and O'Fallon, is prepared to do all kinds of Machine work such as PLANING, SAWING, SASH and MILL WORK GENERALY.
mar 24] [18 3m

GUNS, RIFLES AND PISTOLS.
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
NO. 27 MAIN STREET,
St. Louis, Mo.,

OFFERS for sale to Emigrants and Traders to California, Oregon, and Salt Lake City, an extensive assortment of U. S. Rifles, Augers and Muskets, Sharp's Breech Loading Rifles; Colt's and others Revolvers of all sizes; Double and Single Guns of every description.
Also, Water Proof Caps, Powder, Bullets, Bags, Flasks, and every article in the trade, together with a large lot of plain Swords of various sizes, all of which will be sold low, wholesale or retail, by
T. J. ALBRIGHT,
27 Main Street, East Side,
Sign of the Gilt Gun.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 6m

A. DAFT,
DEALER IN
NEW & SECOND-HAND FURNITURE.
159 Fourth Street, bet. Green and Morgan,
HAS constantly on hand a good supply of general Household Furniture. Old and New Furniture bought, sold and exchanged.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 6m*

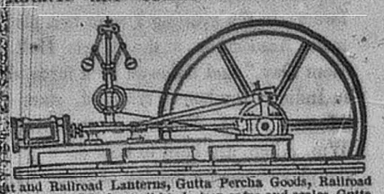
CALIFORNIA, SALT LAKE,
KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND OREGON!
PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES
AT WHOLESALE PRICES,
Put Up to Order with Neatness, Fidelity, and Dispatch
OF THE BEST QUALITY,
At Less Prices than can be Purchased in the City, at
NO. 37 LEVEE.
Californians, and those for Oregon bound, Salt Lake, or Deseret,
All flock to HAMS their supplies to get;
Whether by Isthmus, or o'er land route, its all the same,
His stock's complete—you can get just what you name.
JAMES HAM,
St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 27, 1855. [10 tf.

NICHOLSON'S
TEA, COFFEE, AND SUGAR WARE-HOUSE,
GENERAL GROCERY AND LIQUOR STORE,
NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOUTH AND MARKET STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.
AS WE sell entirely for cash, we are enabled to sell at prices greatly reduced.
Parties crossing the Plains or families laying in Provisions and purchasing wholesale, would find it to their interest to examine my stock and compare prices, before purchasing elsewhere.
N. B. Goods bought at this establishment are warranted to be in quantity and quality what they are sold for. D. NICHOLSON.
Feb. 10, 1855. 12 4m.

ST. LOUIS TYPE FOUNDRY
AND
PARER WAREHOUSE,
Established A. D. 1840.
A. P. LADEW & CO.,
TYPE FOUNDERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER,
31 and 33 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
PRESS DEPOT—SHARK ALLEY,
CALL the attention of Printers and Publishers to their establishment, where will be found every variety of TYPE, PAPER, INK, PRINTING PRESSES, RULE, BORDERS, FLOWERS, and every other article used in a Printing Office.
A. P. L. & Co., have lately made additions to their former assortment of BOOK and NEWSPAPER TYPE, of Matrices imported from Scotland, and have now a complete series. Also a new series of German faces.
They are also the authorized agents of the principal Type Foundries in the United States, and are prepared to fill orders selected from any specimen, at Eastern prices.
They keep always on hand a large supply of NEWS and BOOK PRINTING PAPER; also, CAP, LETTERED, COLORED, and MANILLA PAPERS, CARDS and CARD BOARDS, all of which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.
Orders for STEREOTYPING AND ENGRAVING will be promptly executed.
Editors or Printers wishing to establish a newspaper or Job Printing Office, will be furnished with an estimate in detail for the same, by stating the size of the paper, or the particular style and quantity of work to be executed.
WOOD TYPE—a large assortment always on hand.
☞Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.
N. B. Sorts supplied to all fonts cast at this establishment at specimen prices.
Nov. 29, '54. [1 tf.

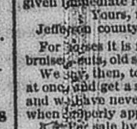
NOTICE.
THE LITHOGRAPHIC ENGRAVING of the Great Salt Lake City, can had of the publisher ROBERT C. WILLIAMS, or of JAMES H. HART, Agent. Price 50 cents per copy. Accompanying pamphlet ten cents. They can be sent to any part of the United States.
Address "Luminary Office." may 27 27 3m

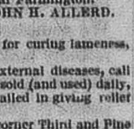
SCHEER & HACKMAN'S
WAGON MANUFACTORY,
Corner of Sixteenth and Market streets.
KEEP constantly on hand a large assortment of Wagons suitable for Traders and Travellers to Santa Fe, California, Oregon, etc., etc.; also, for Farmer's use. Persons in want of Wagons are requested to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere, as promise a first-rate article at reasonable prices. S. & H. [may 5 24 6m*

M. C. MOIES & CO.,
NO. 16 MAIN STREET,
GENERAL AGENTS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,


FOR the sale of all kinds of Machinery, Stationary and Portable Steam Engines; Machinists' Tools, Gates' Patent Screw Cutting, Hughes' Atmospheric Steam Hammers, Belting and Packings, Steam Gauges and Lanterns, Railroad Lanterns, Gutta Percha Goods, Railroad Materials and Contractors' Tools of all kinds, iron safes and scales, Gutta Percha and Oak Tanned Leather Belting, machine stretched and copper riveted, and warranted superior to any other.
N. B. All the above goods will be sold at manufacturers' prices.
Feb. 24, 1855

U. S. SAIL LOFT.
TENTS, TARPAULINS, WAGON COVERS and AWNINGS; also, Dray and Horse Covers, Trunk Covers, Car Covers, and all kinds of Canvas Work on hand or made to order at the shortest notice, and on as reasonable terms as can be had in this city, at No. 149 Washington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by
ALFRED PERSEY,
St. Louis, Mo.
The subscriber will do any of the above description of work, CHEAPER than it can be done in the city. Work always warranted. [mar 10 16 3m



GOODIN & TOOKER,
GAS AND STEAM PIPE FITTERS,
AND
BRASS FOUNDERS,
No. 125 North 3d street,
Between Washington av. & Vine st.


HAVING procured the services of the best workmen, and purchased the most superior of the Eastern patterns of machinery, we possess the most ample facilities for the quick and satisfactory completion of Gas and Steam Pipe work.
We keep constantly on hand Steam Whistles, Valves, Cocks, Oil globes and cups, and a stock of finished brass work generally. We are prepared to execute all kinds of brass castings and finishings at short notice. Those favoring us with their orders, may rely on their faithful fulfillment.
Solar, Camphene Hanging and Stand Lamps, Oil and Gas Chandeliers Lanterns, and all varieties of Lamp work kept constantly onhand. Lamps repaired, re-gilded and bronzed to look as well as new. All orders from the country promptly attended to. [mar 31 19 6m

M'CLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT is truly a celebrated remedy, and has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other remedy ever discovered.
One or two applications will relieve the most severe pain, bruise or sprain.
Two bottles will cleanse, purify, and heal the foulest ulcer or sore, and it will heal the most severe burn or scald without a scar.
Every family should have a supply constantly on hand, for use in time of need.
Read the following extract of a letter, which is incontestable proof of its wonderful efficacy:

A BLIND MAN RESTORED TO SIGHT.

J. H. McLEAN—Dear Sir: * * * I have been suffering for four years with rheumatic sore eyes, being at times altogether blind. I procured the advice of several physicians, but none of them could do me any good. By the advice of a friend I applied your "Volcanic Oil Liniment," according to the directions around the bottle, and it has cured me permanently. I have used it since for bruises, pains, &c., and it has always given immediate relief. I live on the main road near Farmington.
Yours, respectfully, JOHN H. ALLERD.
Jefferson county, Mo.

For horses it is far superior to any other remedy for curing lameness, bruises, cuts, old sores, swellings, &c.
We say, then, to all who may be suffering from external diseases, call at once, and get a supply. Thousands of bottles are sold (and used) daily, and we have never heard of a case where it has failed in giving relief when properly applied.
☞For sale by J. H. McLEAN, the proprietor, corner Third and Pine streets, St. Louis, and by all respectable dealers in Medicines everywhere
Dec. 2, '54. [2 tf.

DRY GOODS.
I WILL sell all my stock of goods from this date at prime cost, to close out the retail business, as I wish to turn all my means into the wholesale trade, which I have established on the the corner of Main and Washington Avenue.
☞Great Bargains may be looked for, in closing out my heavy stock. Call and examine now.
T. W. HOIT.
Nov. 22, '54. [1 2m.]

MEDICINE FOR THE BILLION!
A Certain Remedy for all Diseases of
MAN OR ANIMALS,
Requiring an External Application.
Warranted in every Case for which it is Recommended!
THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT!
Unlike all other popular medicines, it is used by many prominent members of the faculty, and many of the public Hospitals. Their prejudices have yielded to indisputable and incontrovertible demonstrations of cures performed where their remedies had failed.
It has cured more cases of
RHEUMATISM
than any other medicine ever used. Its efficacy in this terrible disease is acknowledged by all who have used it. It not only cures the complaint, but appears to give a vigor and elasticity to the limbs, before unknown, thus performing a double office.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

PATH FINDER OFFICE, May 11, 1854.
G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Please send me by the bearer three large bottles of your Mexican Mustang Liniment, as I wish to take it up to my place in Vermont, not thinking it advisable to do without it. I have used it in my family and on my horses, and have found it invaluable. Yours,
J. T. WHITNEY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, TENN., May 25, 1855.
MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:—
Dear Sir—It affords me much pleasure in saying to you that the Mexican Mustang Liniment outsells any medicine that I have ever had for sale, and comes nearer doing what it promises to do. Send me another supply, as I am nearly out. Yours respectfully,
JOHN SINGLETRAY, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11, 1854.
MR. G. W. WESTBROOK:
Sir—My son was afflicted with a swelling upon the knee joint, which confined him to the house. I had a doctor attending him for some time, but he did not do him any good. One of my neighbors told me to use the Mustang Liniment. I asked the doctor if I could do so, and he told me he thought I could not do better.
I procured one bottle, and in about a week he was able to go out. I can safely recommend it to the afflicted.
Respectfully yours, MRS. BENNETT.

W. S. Ladd & Co., of Portland, Oregon, writes that there is an immense demand for the Mexican Mustang Liniment in that country, and orders forty gross to be shipped by Golden Gate, that sails in a few days from New York.

Clark & White of San Francisco, California, order 100 gross, to be forwarded by first clipper for that port.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI, Jan. 16th, 1854.
I had the pleasure to receive invoice and boxes Mexican Mustang Liniment per Orion, and have no doubt it will have a brisk sale on the island.
GEORGE BACKSTER.

To give health, strength and elacity to the limbs, there is nothing can excel in effect, the
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FARMERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS
have need it for the following diseases with extraordinary success, certifying invariably to the efficacy of the Liniment, and the truthfulness of our assertions in its behalf:
Spavin, Splint, Ring-bone, Fistula, Wind Galls, Big Head, Bruises, Strains, String-halt, Scratches, Cracked Heels, Sweney, Saddle, Collar, or Partiess Galls, Hard Lumps or Tumor, Film, or other diseases of the Eye, Poll-Evil, &c.
The small sizes retail for 25 cents per bottle;
The medium size retail for 50 cents per bottle;
The large sizes retail for one dollar per bottle.
The medium holds three times as much as the small;
The Large holds nearly three times as much as the medium,
Therefore the large bottles are the cheapest.
G. W. WESTBROOK,
(Successor to A. G. BRAGG CO.,)
Originator and Sole Proprietor.
Principal Offices, 304 Broadway, New York; and Third and Market sts., St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 13, '55.

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.
UTAH TERRITORY.
Livingston, Kinkead & Co.,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL, AND ASSORTED MERCHANDISE,
Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.
EMIGRANTS to Utah and California, will at all times find at our establishment an assortment in all the various branches of Merchandise. march 10 16 tf

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
UTAH TERRITORY.
HOOPER & WILLIAMS,
ARE transporting to Utah, this season, one of the largest and best assorted stock of GOODS ever taken to that region.
The purchases being made from the best houses in New York, Baltimore and St. Louis, and the long experience they have had in the trade, enables them to offer inducements in prices, style and kind, which will insure satisfaction.
Emigrants passing over the plains to California, will find it to their advantage to rent at Great Salt Lake, as produce can always be had for less than transportation from the States.
Persons wishing to remit or intend taking money with them, can avoid risk and save money by depositing with Messrs. ROBERTSON, and HOOPER & WILLIAMS, No. 29 Murray st., New York, or WATERMAN & RYAN, St. Louis, who are authorized to draw on us. Interest will be allowed at the rate of 7 per cent. from date of draft till payment.
HOOPER & WILLIAMS,
may 19 26 3m] Great Salt Lake City, 1855.

St. Louis Luminary.

LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMPREHENDETH IT NOT. JESUS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. ST. LOUIS, SATURDAY, JUNE 23, 1855. VOLUME 1--NUMBER XXXI.

The St. Louis Luminary,

Devoted to Science, Religion, General Intelligence and News of the Day.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

ERASTUS SNOW.

OFFICE: BASEMENT OF CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH STREET AND WASHINGTON AVENUE.

TERMS.

Delivered to City Subscribers at sixty cents per quarter.
Mailed to Subscribers in the U. States at $2 per annum.
To Foreign Subscribers, (American Postage prepaid,) at $3 per annum.
To contiguous British Provinces, at $2.50 per annum.
No Subscription received without the money, though a specimen copy will be sent when required.
Any person forwarding us nine new Subscribers and remitting any current money in payment, will be entitled to the tenth copy gratis.
To avoid mistakes, particular pains must be taken, to send us all names of Subscribers, Post-offices and States, plainly written.
United States postage on the Luminary to British American Provinces, is one cent each—to Foreign countries two cents—within the U. States, one-half cent; provided, each subscriber notifies his Post-master, and pays the postage quarterly in advance, otherwise it will be two cts.
All letters requiring an answer, should, to ensure attention, enclose a Postage Stamp.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

One square (eight lines or less,) one insertion,	$ 50
do. do. each additional insertion,	25
One square one month without alteration - -	1.00
do. two months - - - - - -	2.00
do. three months, - - - - - -	2.75
do. six months, - - - - - -	5.00
no. one year without alteration, - -	8.00
For each alteration, - - - - -	25

Extensive advertisements as per contract.
Quarterly and yearly advertisements to be paid at the end of each quarter.
Prepayment required for any term less than a quarter.

From the Deseret News.

Inconsistent Conduct of the United States towards her Territories.

In a Republican Government so liberal, and professedly enlightened, as that of the United States, a person might reasonably expect to see the principle of "popular sovereignty," the basis upon which the whole political machinery is alleged to rest, carried out to the fullest extent, and not only each state but also each territory be left to operate untrammeled so long as they kept within the bounds of the Constitution. Again, it is not strange that our Revolutionary fathers were more or less influenced by the precedents of the government whose yoke of "taxation without representation" they had so recently thrown off, but it actually is strange that, in this boasted age of progression, the very principle against which our fathers so manfully struggled should be carried out towards our territories, almost as extensively as it was by Great Britain towards the Colonies. This is as entirely opposed to reason, justice, and the profesed principles of freedom and "popular sovereignty," as it was in the days of the Revolution, and the perpetuity of so glaring an inconsistency can only be accounted for upon the principle of traditionary influences, human weaknesses, delight in oppression, and love of power though unjustly obtained and exercised.

Such will continue to be the practice so long as placemen, office-seekers, and demagogues can manage to hoodwink, and lead or divide the masses of the people.

The revenue of the United States is raised from duties and land sales, for at present the mail carrying is reported not to pay expenses. This is taxation so far as duties are concerned, and is revenue in every sense of the word, and "all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives."

Now, it is well known that residents in territories pay revenue, in common with residents in states, on all the imported articles they consume, in the purchase of public lands, and in the payment of postage, and for all this how many votes have they in bills of such vital interest and importance? Not one, no more than the Colonies had in the British Parliament.

The Colonies could draw up a petition and forward it to the home government for their consideration, and a territory can only send a delegate to Congress, a mode but little more than tantamount with the privilege of petition, as the delegate has no right to vote on any question, no matter of how much importance to his constituents. The inhabitants of territories, in addition to paying their proportion of revenue, are proportionally interested in the administration of the affairs of the General Government as managed by the President and Congress, and rightly so, since they are members of the same body politic, and hence, in a free government, should also most unlimitedly be members of the same body corporate.

It may be asked, are they not? No. Are they taxed, and are they liable to have their legislative proceedings and internal policy scanned by those who are in power without their voice? Yes; though, fortunately for the development of freedom, "popular sovereignty" is beginning to be better understood, and many of the most intelligent and influential of our statesmen and writers are battling for territorial rights to self-government, but this has to be one in the midst of much violent opposition from the partisans of hoary headed superstitions and false traditions through which craft they have their place and living.

But how taxed, and subject to be controlled in the acts of their Legislative Assemblies, without any election in the matter? By having no vote, as we have shown, in the body where all revenue bills must originate, nor for the appropriation of that revenue, and by the wording of Acts establishing territorial governments, viz.:

"All laws passed by the Legislative Assembly and Governor shall be submitted to the Congress of the United States, and if disapproved shall be null and of no effect."

You can now clearly comprehend that all the territories of our boasted Republic, although contributing their full quota to swell the public revenue, are entirely at the mercy of men for whom they are denied the right of casting one vote for or against. So far as mere dollars are concerned, this tyrannical relic of monarchical usage is not so particularly odious, but when it threatens to interfere with the internal or home policy of freemen, of the descendants of those patriotic sires who fought to achieve "popular sovereignty," it behooves every lover of liberty and equal rights in our Union to take a bold and unequivocal stand against the further prevalence of practices so rankly savoring of despotism.

There is still another incongruous feature that should not be overlooked, and that is the mode in which the appointing power is exercised, thus keeping open an overflowing and increasing fountain of corruption, bitterness, and oppression. To more clearly elucidate this inconsistent practice, we quote Noah Webster's definition of a Republic, "a state in which the exercise of the sovereign power is lodged in representatives chosen by the people." It has been shown that a territory in the matter of "taxation without representation," is held almost precisely in the same relationship to our parent government that a colony is to a monarchy; and by the definition just given it is obvious that the appointing power, as exercised, is another link from the same chain of barbarous usages. Why so? Simply from the fact that the Governor of a territory is the executive or "sovereign" power thereof, and is appointed by the President and Senate, men in whose elevation to power the people to whom the officers are appointed have not the echo of a voice. This usage is another case in the similarity before alluded to, and is precisely such as Great Britain exercised towards the revolutionary colonies. All this is but cold shouldered treatment, and left handed kindness to those enterprising persons who go forth to redeem the unsettled wilds of our country; whereas a nation so wealthy, with such an extent of unoccupied domain, and withal so boastful of republicanism, should extend every possible encouragement to the permanent occupancy and improvement of new regions, and, in lieu of fettering and discouraging by the arbitrary and tyrannical exercise of high-handed power, should break off every shackle, and guarantee the broadest exercise of the freedom that is consistent with the Constitution.

Who are the men who settle our territories, who make the first roads and bridges, open the first farms, build the first houses, and make the barren waste rejoice? They are the most energetic and enterprising of your citizens, and have been raised side by side with the residents of your states, to whom you vouchsafe the full and free rights of self-government, and a voice in your highest councils. And does the enterprise necessary to found a new settlement disqualify them for knowing their own wants, making their own laws, and choosing their own officers? Shame on such an absurdity, and a double shame on all who would put the weight of a feather upon the elastic step, and buoyant fortitude of those most loyal and intelligent pioneers who go forth amid hardships and privation to multiply upon American soil the happy firesides of American sons and daughters. What should be done by the parent government to foster the extending of the area of unalloyed freedom? Knock off the shackles which now bind the expansion of the full force of her territories, and to do this effectually and consistently, whenever they petition for it, and present a proper state constitution, admit them into the Union as states, with the privilege of sending at least one representative, and this too regardless of the number of their population.

But if this is too long a stride for the short steps of "old usage," and for the square rule of old Say-so," begin by allowing their delegate a vote as well as a voice, expunge the usurped authority to "disapprove" their legislative enactments, and permit them to elect all of their own officers, except such as are also appointed in states to carry out the policy and laws of the general government, and a person to look after the proper disbursement of such funds as Congress should appropriate to assist the creeping child to speedily attain full stature.

If this is still requiring too sudden and great an expansion of the parchment skin of old "Tradition," it does seem that the smallest amount of consistency would compel the appointing power to gratify the wishes of the people, by appointing officers of their own choice.

A few personal items, and we will leave the subject for the present.

Where was uncultivated Utah? In the tops of the mountains, begirt by still loftier alpine heights, and clad in robes of desolation until a noble people, fleeing from the red hand of persecution solely on account of their religious faith, came and began to decorate her sombre garments with the bright hues of civilization.

Thanks to Ex-President Millard Filmore, who, through his republican consistency, and an ardent desire to extend all the even-handed justice in his power, appointed Brigham Young to be Governor of Utah, a man who was unanimously the choice of every resident in our Territory. And honor too to President Franklin Pierce, who so long withstood the howlings, and the scratchings, and whinings at the door of the "White House," of the hungry hunters of office who wished to fatten upon the spoils, to spy out the liberties of an innocent, moral, and industrious people, and reap in fields which they had used no effort to make or sow. But the pressure was too great even for his resistance, though when compelled to give way he acted with all possible magnanimity by appointing the gallant Lieut. Col. Steptoe to be our Governor—an appointment that could not have been more acceptably made, outside the ranks of our own population.

We speak understandingly upon this subject, for we have the honor of a personal acquaintance with the Colonel, and so far as our observation and judgment extend, we have found him to be in every particular an intelligent, honorable and upright officer, citizen and gentleman. It was this fact, coupled with his knowledge of the unanimous wishes of our population for the re-appointment of Governor Young, with his having signed a petition to the President and Congress to that effect, with his familiarity with the illiberality of such appointments, and with the certainty of having to resign an elevated and highly honorable position in the army to serve but two years as a Governor where the united voice preferred Govenor Young to all others, which doubtless moved him to refuse to accept the appointment.

This refusal is stated upon report, which, if true, substantiates the correctness of our estimate of the Colonel, and corroborates our idea that President Pierce made the best appointment for us that our enemies would let him.

If any free born American citizen will successfully combat the correctness of the main principles so briefly set forth beneath the caption of this article, we will examine his reasoning, and see whether by its light we can detect any error in what is above advanced.

From the Millennial Star.

TO THE ELDERS.

This is a day of darkness. It is the beginning of that time referred to by the Prophet Joseph, when in vision he "saw men hunting the lives of their own sons, and brother murdering brother, women killing their own daughters, and daughters seeking the lives of their mothers;" when he "saw armies arrayed against armies," and "blood, desolation, fires," &c. This is peculiarly a time when it is the privilege of the Elders to feel with renewed power the spirit of revelation, without which salvation cannot be administered.

Now is the time for the Elders to testify to the world in all boldness that the latter-day work has begun, and that the predictions of modern as well as ancient Prophets and Apostles are being fulfilled before their eyes. In these times of perplexity, when men's minds are filled with the spirit of war and commotion, their ears may be closed and their hearts steeled against the truth, but it is the duty of those who have received it, to declare it to others, that the blood of souls may not be found in their garments in the day of the Lord Jesus.

The Elders should launch out from the old and stereotyped methods of preaching, into the fulness and freedom of the spirit of testimony of the leading principles of the latter-day work, and of the judgments with which the Almighty is visiting the earth. Always be ready to give a reason for the hope that is within you, and endeavor to be well armed with every weapon of defence with which to meet the enemies of truth, but put your chief dependence on the sword of the Spirit, for that only will convince the honest in heart of the truth of your testimony, and no others are of any use in the kingdom of God.

Whenever salvation has been administered, it has been by testimony. Therefore we say to the Elders, testify, TESTIFY! that the channel of communication is again opened between man and the heavens; that the Book of Mormon is of Divine origin; that Joseph, Brigham, and those who preside in the Church are holy men, guided by the spirit of revelation.—Testify that baptism and laying on of hands bring forgiveness of sins and the Gift of the Holy Ghost; and that this is a day of Apostles and Prophets, of healings, and the ministrations of angels, a day of warning and of judgment, a day when the reward of evil follows close on the heels of the transgressor, a day of rejoicing for the righteous, for they verily know that the day of their redemption is near, if they keep faithfully the commandments given them. Let the Saints be continually reminded, that one of the most important of these commandments is to gather to the place appointed. Brother Joseph prophesied, over fifteen years ago, "that that man who tarries after he has an opportunity of going, will be afflicted by the devil," and every year has witnessed many cases of the fulfilment of this prophecy. There are many of the Saints who have been long in the Church, and have neglected to gather when they might have done so, who absolutely stand in the way, and are a hindrance to the work. They no longer enjoy the lively influences of the Spirit, but have become withered and stale, and are so many dead weights for those who are faithful to carry along. The Elders should dig about such, and ascertain whether the root of the matter is in them; if so, they should endeavor to infuse the spirit of life in them, by having them again begin at first principles, and get their first love renewed in their bosoms, and then, while the blessings of the Lord are resting upon them, get them to show their faith by their works, in making every effort to gather to Zion. Should any who are called Saints prove to be so near dead as to be past a resurrection to newness of life, they should be cut off, that the tree may not be encumbered with dead branches.

Many of the Saints are borne down by poverty, sickness, and affliction; such need counsel, consolation, and comfort, and the Elders should so live in the spirit of their calling as ever to have a timely word for all, and a portion of the spirit and power of life to administer to each in due season.

This is a day of great manifestations of spirit, both false and true, and these are rapidly increasing in a great variety of forms, and in intensity of power, and unless the Elders have much of the spirit of revelation, which will give the power of discernment, the Saints may sometimes be led astray by evil spirits, and go into darkness. Therefore be prayerful and watchful, and think not that because a manifestation is wonderful or marvellous, it must of necessity be produced by a good spirit, for "every spirit, or vision, or singing is not of God." "The gift of discerning of spirits will be given to the Presiding Elder," and the Saints should pray that it may rest upon him. Speak not in the gift of tongues without understanding it, or without interpretation, for the devil can speak in tongues. He can also manifest himself in a great variety of ways in afflictions and contortions of the body, by luminous appearances, by spirit rappings, table turnings, mesmeric influences, and miracles. There is nothing done among the Saints by the power of God, that the devil cannot produce a case sufficiently similar to deceive those who have not the Spirit by which to discern between good and evil influences. The Elders should be dignified in all their deportment, and not given to levity. They should not trifle or meddle with those higher principles pertaining to the celestial law, which belong exclusively to Zion. On these subjects they should maintain a dignified reserve, that the feelings and affections of none may be led astray. And finally we would exhort you to be humble, be prayerful, be vigilant, seeking wisdom daily at the fountain of all light and intelligence, that your hearts may be pure, that your head may not err, that your feet may not slip, and that you may not go astray and lead others into darkness.

THE NATIONS OF EUROPE.

The following pungent comment upon European affairs are from Kossuth's last letter to the N. Y. Independent:

The political complications of Europe just now present a very appropriate theme for meditation. The Christian potentates of Europe are just engaged, what by arms, what by the corrupt practices of diplomacy, to "regenerate Turkey," in the interest of what they are bold enough to call Christianity.—Amongst these champions of Christianity there is, on the other hand, the Czar of all the Russians, who entices his people by inscribing on his banner, and bearing on his lips, "the sacred cause of the most holy Orthodox Religion." Now, I ask, is that religion Christian? Why, the moral portion of its tenets is so much overgrown with the grossest superstition and formalized lip-worship, that, I have no hesitation to say, the followers of Simon Magus, who first associated Christ and Belial, the temple of God and idols—or the sect of Brasilides of Alexandria, with their three hundred and sixty-five heavens, and their Abreaxis—or Valentine of Cyprus, with his endless impersonations of Divinity, with his Eons, his plenoma, and his Achamoth—had not less a right to the name of Christians than this "Most Holy Orthodox Church" has.

There is, on the other hand, L. N. Bonaparte, the second champion of Christianity in the East, the most "beloved son" of the infallible Vicar of Christ, who keeps his bloody seat at Rome on the ruins of liberty, propped by the bayonets of his most beloved son in Christ. Now, is not L. N. Bonaparte that same man whom the world a few years ago heard swear a solemn oath, in these words: "In the presence of God and before the French people, I swear to remain faithful to the Democratic Republic, and to fulfil all the duties which the constitution imposes on me?" Is he not the same man who, on the President of the National Assembly exclaiming, "We beseech God and men to witness that oath," solemnly added, "The oath I came to take will command my future. My duty is fixed. I shall fulfil it as a man of honor. I shall only see the enemies of the country in all those who attempt to change by illegal modes what France has established?" And is not Bonaparte the same man who, having thus sworn in the presence of God, raised himself to unlimited power by perjury and wholesale assassination, and who still not only claims the title of a Christian monarch, but having these days escaped the bullet of Pianori, has the blasphemous arrogance to associate the God of Christianity to his own crimes, and to boast of himself as a chosen instrument of Divine Providence? Why, the madman Caius Caligula proclaimed himself a god, built himself a temple, and sat upon a throne apparelled like Jupiter. Seeing a Gaul staring at him, Caligula asked, "What thinkest thou of me?" The Gaul answered, "I think thou art a great fool." What should the world say to these Christian Caligulas, if the Christian world were really Christian?

Then there is even England! Protestant England, sir; the sovereign of which is certainly what you would call a good lady. She is an exception in her purpled class with regard to private character. Well, that mild, gracious, virtuous, and Christian sovereign thinks it absolutely consonant with her Christian character to honor and to flatter that other Christian Emperor; shakes him honorably by that hand which is red with the blood of the 2d of December, while with just aversion of crime she sends Burenelli to the gallows for one single murder; nay, takes that same Christian Emperor to the bosom of Protestant England, which in her turn hails him and cheers him, and calls him admirable and great! And there is Austria, besides, in the ranks of the champions of Christianity; that Austria which—— but let me have done with her. The name tells all. If these be Christians; if the Christian world admits them to the honor of that title; if such characters agree with Christianity in the estimation of the Christian world, then I say the days of Christianity must be numbered, if a bountiful Providence does not set up either a man or a nation to regenerate the religion of Christ.

From the St. Louis Sentinel.

Bible Examples of Secret Signs.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I see in a late religious paper of the South, that some minister with strange words, asks for Bible examples for secret signs. He is replied to by one who proves himself adequate to the task and worthy of the comic signature he gives himself. I saved it for your use, from rubbish destined for the fire. Please publish it.

Yours, &c. L. S.

"Now we ask some of those who are passionately fond of secret associations to show us an example in the bible where secret signs have been used for good purposes. We know that signs are used in the Bible but they public, open to all, such for example as the rainbow, the receding of the shadow on the dial of Ahaz, together with many of a similar nature." S.

The above comes from a Minister of the gospel. He must therefore be honest in asking for information; and I take pleasure in coming to his aid. It must be understood however that I do not own myself "passionately fond of secret associations." I say nothing more on this subject. My object is to furnish an example—yea, four "examples," because they are found very much together, "where secret signs have been used for good purposes."

When the angel of the Lord came, and sat under an oak, and appeared unto Gideon, and addressed him, Gideon said: "If now I have found grace in thy sight, then show me a sign that thou talkest with me." Gideon having prepared a kid and unleavened cakes, as a meal or oblation, brought them forth to the Lord. The Lord commanded Gideon to lay the flesh and cakes upon a rock, and to pour out the broth. "There rose up fire out of the rock and consumed the flesh and the unleavened cakes." There is no authority for any other conclusion than that this was a secret between the Lord and Gideon. It was not "public," nor "open to all." If S. asserts that it was, let him name the persons present, or the authority for supposing that any one creature was present except Gideon. It will not do to say, if any had been present, and had heard all that passed between the Lord and Gideon the signs would have been understood, if properly explained; and are public if promulgated. But was not this sign a secret between the Lord and Gideon, and "used for a good purpose?" See Judges 6. 11 to 34.

In the same book and Chapter, there are found two more secret signs, given on different nights by the Lord to Gideon. They refer to the fleece of wool on the floor—the dew on one occasion being on the fleece, and dry upon the earth, and on the other, dry only upon the fleece and upon all the ground dew. The Bible warrants us in believing, that no mortal knew of these signs but Gideon alone. They concerned no one at this time but Gideon.—Their object was to satisfy Gideon; and they were given for a good purpose."

The other secret sign, given for a good purpose can be found in the chapter of Judges, following that above. "The Lord said unto Gideon, every one that lappeth of the water with his tongue" &c., &c.

This sign, it is most obvious was a secret between the Lord and Gideon. The army knew nothing of it. Had the sign been known by the people, each soldier would have judged and determined for himself, whether he would go into battle. But the Lord said to Gideon, "I will try them for thee there; and it shall be, that of whom I say unto thee, this shall not go with thee, the same shall not go."

Had every mortal on earth been present when Gideon's army took water by lapping or bowing down on their knees, is it probable that a single being would have recognized the sign of the Lord, unless the same had been specially and particularly communicated. This example is conclusive. It was a secret sign for a good purpose.

Having asked for only one example of a secret sign for a good purpose, and having received four, I hope S. will feel himself satisfied, and acknowledge the question settled. PEACE B. STILL.

THE LATE DUEL.

On Monbay afternoon four young gentlemen well known in the faster circles of New York society, left this city for the purpose of fighting a duel.—The provocation which had brought the two principles to this point of deadly hostility was of a quite a frivolous character. One of them told the other he was not rightfully a member of a club frequented by both; the lie was retorted; and a flip of a glove across the face constituted the final insult which only blood could expiate. As we learn from our reporter in another column, the duel finally took place on Wednesday morning, near Niagara Falls, its result being that both parties were wounded. The challenger, Mr. F. Leavenworth, was shot in both legs, the ball penetrating one and lodging in the thigh bone of the other. Mr. J. B. Breckenridge was hit in one leg only, the ball passing clear through the calf. Both men are said to be excellent shots and the wonder is that at the murderous distance at which they fought—eight paces—both were not killed.—[New York Tribune, 8th.

RELIGIOUS contention is Satan's harvest.

The St. Louis Luminary.

ST. LOUIS,
SATURDAY, JUNE 23, 1855.

LIST OF AGENTS FOR THE LUMINARY.

Ala. and Tenn., H. W. Church.
Harrison county, Texas, William Martindale.
Milan county, Texas, S. M. Blair.
Preston Thomas, Traveling Agent for the South.
Cincinnati, O., Hon. Orson Spencer, address box 488.
Springfield, O., A. R. Wright.
Georgetown, Ky., J. M. Barlow.
Keokuk, Iowa, Charles Clark.
Philadelphia, Samuel Harrison, 584 Poplar, St.
New York, John Taylor, 102 Nassau st., cor. of Ann.
Helena, Ark., Alfred Gay.
Pecan Point, Ark., L. J. DeLopair.
Bluff City, Iowa, Wm. H. Folson, and L. O. Littlefield.
Maquaketa, Iowa, J. Dalrymple.
Gravois, Mo., Charles Maxwell.
Fairfield, Ind., John Wickel.
Alquina, Ind., Stephen Golding.
Alton, Ill., Henry J. Hudson.
Centreville, Ill., James Kinney.
Lowell, Mass., Eliakim S. Davis.
F. D. Richards, 36 Islington, Liverpool.
Alexander Robbins, Boston, Mass.
General Agent for Massachusetts, N. H. Felt.
San Jose, Cal., J. M. Horner.
San Barnidino, Cal., C. C. Rich.
General Agent for Utah, Hon. Z. Snow.
Cedar City, Utah, Hon. I. C. Haight.
Traveling Elders generally will please act as agents.
A. L. Siler, Traveling Agent through the West.
Wm. Cazier, Nephi City.
S. B. Hoyt, Fillmore City, U. Territory.

THE SLAVERY QUESTION.

The question of slavery is being stretched to its utmost limits, and is assuming a more threatening aspect than it has ever assumed before as it regards the interests and prosperity of the federal Union. There are not wanting, men, who in our public journals, are because of this question, unblushingly and unreservedly advocating the disolution of the confederation, and still call themselves Americans—the sons of the noble Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. We regard such men as traitors to the Constitution bequeathed us by our fathers, and open enemies to the cause of freedom—the only principle that guarantees unto us superiority over the inhabitants of other nations. And who are these daring advocates of the abolition or disolution principle? They are Christian bigots, fanatical sectarians, disappointed office seekers, reckless adventurers and pseudo republicans, who hope to improve their condition by any change that may be effected in matters of government; men who will not hesitate to cut assunder the only bond of our national existence and thus destroy the sacred treasure entrusted to us by our fathers, and draw down upon our heads their disaprobation and anathemas, and the well merited contempt of our transatlantic neighbors. But shall we disgrace ouselves and bring dishonor upon our institions by flagrantly violating the constitution of our government? May heaven forbid!

The New York Herald in commenting upon the views of his correspondent, whose letter will be found in our columns this week, concludes thus:

"American citizens are not in the habit of canvassing the prospects of a dissolution of the Union, because they are taught from childhood to regard it as a sacred legacy from their forefathers, which it is sacreligious and paricidal to touch. But if government is impossible until the slavery question is settled, and no settlement can be arrived at short of a dissolution, why allow a mere feeling of reverence for the past to stand in the way of an inevitable consummation? Our national interests are opposed to anything of the kind; dissolution would destroy our national power, put an end to the career of the stars and stripes, lessen our name, destroy our trade, in short, reduce us to the condition of the States of Germany. But if we cannot get on without a final solution of the slavery problem, and a destruction of the Union is the only solution, we must come to it, sooner or later; and why postpone the evil day?"

This kind of Pat-riot-ism perfectly harmonizes with the Herald's sentiments concerning the inhabitants of Utah. "We must put them down, or they will put us down; we must make a corpse of them, or they will make a corpse of us;" and "if we cannot get on without a final solution of the slavery problem, and a destruction of the Union is the only solution, we must come to it sooner or later; and why postpone the evil day?" Such is the language of our very patriotic contemporary—Mr. Bennett—of long boasted anti-Mormon proclivities, which being interpreted, signify, unconstitutional principles, which are fully substantiated and demonstrated by his own testimony. The time is not far distant when the naked face of every imposter and traitor will be likewise disclosed to view. The true friends of our Constitutional rights and priveleges will then be known and appreciated as the saviors of the nations, whilst pseudo patriots, such as Bennett, Mitchell & Co. will be consumed upon the fire they have lighted, or executed upon the gallows they themselves have erected.

There is no safety for the nation, but through a faithful adherance to the laws of righteousness revealed unto us through our revolutionary fathers by the inspiration of heaven. If those laws be once desecrated and trampled under foot to gratify party spirits and subserve party purposes, no matter whether it be done to abolish slavery, or to destroy Mormonism, the effect will be the same. It will be a nation fighting against itself, which event it cannot stand; but its destruction will be sure, unless an unexpected hand be raised, and an almighty power be exerted for its salvation.

The St. Louis Republican of the 18th inst., in its comments upon the resolutions of a mass meeting, held for the purpose of electing delegates for a State Convention, to be held on the 3rd of July, concerning the all-absorbing subject of slavery, concludes as follows:

"We very much question the practicability or wisdom of counties making any arrangements by which conscript settlers shall be, in a formal way, sent to Kansas, or for States to raise troops for this border warfare. It would be sure to produce counter-action in Missouri and other Southern States, and thus we might be embroiled in a civil war. The true course is the prudent constitutional course. The cause of the Free States, in this vexed question, is to be fought in Congress by speech and vote, not by powder and ball on the prairies of Kansas. We should show to the Indians, from whom the lands have been purchased, many of whom still linger among the hunting grounds and burial places of their tribes, that the civilzation of the white race is superior to their own, and is govered in all things by a regard for law and Christian principle. One hundred thousand majority for the American Republican ticket in Ohio, this fall, would do more to restore order in Kansas, and the law of freedom to the Territories, than all the powder and ball that was ever made."

We feel assured that there is sufficient patriotism and devoted zeal in the nation to protect and save it, even though all the fire-brands of the nether regions should turn editors, and all, with one accord, should advocate the disslution of the Union. The country that gave birth to Washington, Franklin, Webster and Jefferson, has also given birth to men of the same stamp in this age, and should the conflicting circumstances now pending, demand the exercise of their valor, heroism, and patriotism, they would prove themselves equal to the emergency, and establish their fame as chieftains, diplomatists and warriors of the highest order, and rank with the best and noblest of the sons of men—such are Brigham, Heber, Jedediah and other heroes of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

To use the language of the Morning Herald of this city, "Let all the knaves, and fools, and all the fire-brands in the country combine for the destruction of our Union and its institutions, we still cherish an abiding faith, that their plots will be defeated and they brought to all the shame which they are capable of feeling."

Visit of the Editor to the Camps at Atchison.

